You will notice the name "Mary Sanford" on the copy sent you. That name is not the original but Mary Sanford it was who drew it. She was a young girl living in Peterborough from 1830 to 1833, of a U.E. Loyalist family. She, impressed with the romantic and historic associations of the place, as well as the surrounding natural beauty, made the original pencil sketch, and her girlish hand did its work beautifully, accurately and well. In 1833 she married James Frederick Smith, for fifty years a well known business man of Toronto. Mary Sanford Smith died in 1846 leaving a son of tender years, now James Frederick Smith, K.C., long one of the most eminent commercial lawyers of Canada. He was for many years the editor of the Ontario Law Reports succeeding in that capacity the distinguished Christopher Robinson, K.C., of "Beverly House," Toronto, son of Sir John Beverly referred to and nephew of the founder of Peterborough. Mr. Smith is the owner of the sketch made eighty-three years ago by his mother and she herself has been now dead seventy years. To Mr. Smith of course the picture is priceless, the handwork of his young mother of so many years ago. Thirty years ago now, the writer was a student in Mr. Smith's office when a life long friendship was formed and where, on one side at least, the highest respect, admiration and affection instilled. Learning about his possession of this historic treasure, for so I deem it is, I asked and obtained the loan of it and am asking you to accept this copy for the people of Peterborough, a picture of the city's first public building. I intend also sending a copy to St. John's Church whose turret you see among the trees in the picture.

I trust you will consider this worthy a place in your library or museum, as you may prefer, not for its special intrinsic merit, but because of its supreme historic value, a momento and almost the only one, of the very inception of our city, its enterprising founder and its undaunted pioneers.

Also in memory of that sweet young girl resident of Peterborough nearly a century since, whose gentle hand, long since turned into dust, preserved for us the memory and appearance of the outstanding feature of earliest Peterborough. Truly she wrought more wisely and enduringly than she knew.

I remain, dear Mr. Delafosse,
Sincerely yours,
E. C. HUYCKE.

Benjamin Bunk.

At one time in England a Benjamin Bunk meant a deserter from the army. Forty—probably fifty—years ago there was a red nosed comedian, one Teddy Mosedale, who, dressed up in a burlesque uniform of the Tommy of the day, set the patrons of the old Mogul (now the New Middlesex and an opera house) into fits of laughter with the refrain:

I'm Benjamin Bunk, I'm Benjamin Bunk,
And the battle did alarm me;
I'm Benjamin Bunk, who got in a funk,
So they kicked me out of the army!

RAISED $37000

Belleville Campaign for the Patriotic Fund, a Winner

BELLEVILLE, March 2.—A two-day campaign inaugurated in the city for the purpose of raising $30,000 towards the Canadian Patriotic Fund was brought to a close last night. Not only was the amount aimed at secured, but $7000 additional was added to the fund. An interesting feature of the campaign was the donation of four pairs of pigeons by a lad, and these when sold at auction realized $30,000. The campaign committee was last evening banqueted by the ladies of the Women's Canadian Club.

WARNING IS DISREGARDED

Stoppage of Work at Docks May Evoke Drastic Measures

LONDON, March 27—Despite Lord Kitchener's warning and the agreement between the Government and the trades unions that strikes should cease, stoppages of work still continues. Though the number of men involved thus far is small, fears are expressed that the disaffection may spread and the Government driven to adopt the drastic measures which have been threatened in order to increase industrial production.

At Birkenhead yesterday afternoon the men loading three steamers quit work and announced that they would not resume their labors until Monday. Their ground was that they are not paid until the following week for work done Friday and Saturday.

On the Liverpool side of the Mersey a large number of dockers are threatening to strike for a similar reason and to lay off for an entire week.

At the Dowlais, Wales, steel works Government orders for materials needed in France and Belgium are being delayed by a strike of a comparatively small number of men.

PREMIER'S MOTHER ILL

OTTAWA, March 27.—Sir Robert Borden left Ottawa last evening to visit his mother, who is very ill, at Grand Pre. It is understood that Mrs. Borden took a turn for the worst yesterday, and the Premier is hastening to her bedside in response to a special message.

WITH THE BOYS AT THE BATTLE FRONT

Experiences Which the Peterboro' Soldiers Are Now Undergoing

TOUR OF THE TRENCHES

The writer of this article, a correspondent of the Westminster Gazette, was invited by the French War Office to visit the Front as one of a party of seven journalists—two English writers, two photographers, an English war artist, a Russian, and a Japanese.

He actually got to the Front, and made a sixty-mile tour of the French trenches, so that he writes of actualities as he has experienced them in company with the active fighting force.

The war, even in its present phase, is not one entirely of entrenchments, varied at very rare intervals by bayonet attacks. There are places at which the armies are close together, but see nothing whatever of each other. There are wooded slopes and broken country in which nothing ever seems to happen, but in which each side knows that it may be surprised at any time. And there are, stranger still, the artillerymen whose work is almost unceasing, but who never see the enemy they are shelling or even his positions.

From the fine old feudal farm of Attiches, that I have mentioned previously—it was hopelessly broken by the German gunners last September, and has been shelled by them almost daily ever since—the lines of the enemy are well in view; and he can do little that escapes observation. A German who, greatly daring, tried to approach the French position one night has been lying for many days in the outer entanglements. As he fell a cape, or perhaps a soft head-covering of the smoke-grey colour of his uniform, fell forward over his head, so that he is only a huddled grey heap, with neither his face nor his distinguishing badges visible. He was probably a man of the first line regiment of whom I saw some thirty sleek and well-fed prisoners who had just been brought into Ressons-sur-Matz, a few miles away, days after he had played his last part in the war. From the farm, however, there are communicating trenches—little more than "boyaux"—that lead away to miles of wooded slopes in which war is waged quite differently. They pass through orchards in which the fruit trees have been stripped of their bark and despoiled of their branches by a hail of bullets and of shrapnel that has been almost incessant—and that has proved to be a terrible waste of ammunition!

The War in the Woodlands.

In these woodland stretches, where the trees grow thickly and the undergrowth is dense, there are no continuous trenches. Here and there are strong positions where paths converge, or, for some reason or other, the ground has a particular strategic value. They are connected and protected by entanglements, in the construction of which the natural conditions have been utilised to the utmost. The undergrowth is piled with cuttings and branches, and often interwoven with barbed wire, until it becomes practically impenetrable. The entrenched positions are kept in touch with one another by sentries, who are posted behind trees and in little mud-huts of their own construction, not very far apart, and by patrols who are constantly moving through the woods. At night these patrols take "war-dogs" with them, which have as good a nose for anything that does not wear a French uniform as a well-trained pointer has for game. Some of those that I saw were smooth-coated collies, fairly well-bred; but others, and the most ferocious, were obvious mongrels, showing something of the half-bred mastiff type that is so common in Belgium. In the Vosges we hear of woods being taken and re-taken; but in these woods of Picardy, all of them on steep hill-sides, no attack ever seems to be contemplated. At one point I was able to watch through a natural clearing the Germans moving about against the white background of a quarry that they occupied, on a slope a thousand yards away; but to them the French lines must be quite invisible. They know, roughly, where these lines are situated; but their rifle-fire is of a highly speculative description.

Another of these quarries, much resembling those on the Marne of which the Germans made such good defensive use, is situated in this district, a short distance behind the French lines. Long ago it was hewn out into vast caverns 50 ft. or 60 ft. in height, supported by pillars of stone 20 ft. square, that have been left for the purpose. Its vast spaces and strange lights and shadows make it resemble some prehistoric temple; and, as it is not in the actual fighting line, it serves admirably as a field-hospital and a place of rest for the troops in the neighborhood. It has its own little cemetery—there is not a square mile of country in the region without one—its giant kitchens and dormitories, its rough stone carvings, usually humorous and seldom polite, made by the soldiers. It has, too, one of its caverns set apart for a chapel, in which an altar has been roughly carved with a great cross, surmounting it, and niches in the shape of shells at either side. A soldier who is also a priest says Mass here; and in the woods a mile away another soldier-priest officiates at a rustic altar built up of wood and rushes, and turf. I asked an officer how these priests, whose presence in the French Army is a novelty, acquitted themselves. "Very well indeed," he said. "We make the older ones infirmiers, but the younger men fight well, and are good soldiers." I had seen, on the previous afternoon, a young lieutenant decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honour for a daring exploit in taking, with a handful of volunteers, a section of a German trench. "That lieutenant who was decorated yesterday," the officer went on, "began the war as a sergeant. And before he became a sergeant he was a seminarist."

The Work of Blind Batteries.

There is fighting against an invisible enemy too—to return from this side-track—in much of the work that the splendid French artillery is called upon to do during this period of trench warfare. I came upon one battery — "somewhere in Picardy," let us say—quite unexpectedly, although I was actually looking for it at the time. A man suddenly emerged, apparently from the earth, in the middle of a ploughed field; and then another, and another. They took me to the burrow from which they had come, with underground galleries, and rooms, and passages. The guns and their caissons were hidden in deep hollows, with turf and branches arranged over them, so that, from above—and it is only the aeroplane observer that the hidden battery fears—they seem like nothing but clumps of bushes. One of the underground shelters has been made bomb-proof and carefully tested. It has an exit from either end, in case of accidents; and when an aeroplane appears a bugle sounds the danger signal, and the twenty men of the battery literally "go to ground."

The commandant of this battery was a happy, middle-aged Territorial officer who had been living a placid and comfortable life in Nice before the war. I asked him what, in such a position, the battery could do. "We are shelling the German positions over the hill there," he explained. "I have never seen them, but I know they are there. The colonel, from the observation post behind our lines, gives me my range and my direction by telephone—we have a system of signalling by rockets in case the telephone wires are cut—and I can make the necessary corrections from what the observer tells me of the effect of each shot."

"And the Germans are unable to find your position?"

"They have not quite succeeded yet, although they know, of course, that we are somewhere hereabouts. I had the guns on the other side of that road you see there for three months; but at last they began to make it too warm for us there, and for two months we have been here, and have had no trouble. We are cutting a boyan to the village, a mile in our rear, so that we can come into the battery without being seen at all; but I don't know that we really need it. When we came here and had made our positions, I had the ground over our shelters and galleries ploughed, and, as you see, we are simply a ploughed field out of which shells come. What can you expect the aeroplanes to find out about us?"

BOUGHT TICKET AT JANETVILLE

Special Men Are Engaged in Search for Missing Express Driver

LINDSAY, March 27. — Howard Coneybeare, head driver for the Canadian Express Company, who is alleged to have absconded with $3000 of the company's money, is still numbered among the missing. Special men have been working on the case since Wednesday last, but with very result beyond clearing up rumors and following up bogus clues. These special men are working in various directions, and it is thought that it will not be many more hours before some definite clue is trailed with good results.

The authorities learned that Coneybeare entered the C. P. R. station at Janetville on Tuesday, and after shaking hands with the agent, Russell McGill, with whom he was well acquainted, purchased a single ticket for Toronto. No questions were asked and Coneybeare boarded the afternoon train for the Queen City. He had apparently walked to Janetville on the tracks to avoid suspicion.

Looked Suspicious.

Station Agent McGill tells the story of meeting Coneybeare as follows:

"I was busy when Coneybeare arrived, but when I recognized him we shook hands. I worked with Mr. Matchett in Lindsay for a year and knew Coneybeare. I was surprised that he would buy a ticket at Janetville instead of at Lindsay, and was also a little suspicious of his actions when he went to pay me for the ticket (a single one to Toronto). He took some money out of his pocket, apparently bills, but held them down below the wicket and a little to one side, as if he did not wish me or any person to see his money or what he was doing. I would have talked longer, but some ladies arrived with suitcases, and I busied myself for a few minutes brushing the mud off the suitcases."

Chief Short received word from Toronto police that a passenger had got off the evening C. P. R. train at Agincourt, and that he was later on seen in North Parkdale, and it is surmised that this person was Coneybeare. As yet no further trace of the missing young man has been found.

FIX VOTING ZONES

Hon. I. B. Lucas Brings in Hydro Radial Amendment.

New Measure Will Guard Against One Township Holding up Scheme in Which Others Are Interested---Big Deputation Waits on Premier---Subsidies Must Wait Until War is Over.

TORONTO, March 27.—Yesterday was Hydro-Radial day in legislative circles, following upon the visit of the delegates during the afternoon, Hon. I. B. Lucas introduced a measure designed to clear the way for the establishment of the publicly-owned systems. The measure is an amendment to the Hydro-Radial bill of 1914 fixing zones for voting on radial schemes.

Hon. Mr. Lucas, explaining his Hydro-radial measure, said one part of a township might be very much interested in one of the railways and the other part indifferent or otherwise, with the result that a bylaw might very well be submitted in the township for radial railway purposes and yet meet with defeat by reason of the carelessness or opposition of those in a section who were really not interested in it at all. Under the new law the township would fix the zone which would vote whether or not they were going to enter into the radial scheme. If there was a majority in the zone the scheme would go on, despite the actual vote in a township.

The bill also provides for the taking over of existing roads.

In his reply to over a thousand delegates from the Hydro-Electric Association of the province yesterday morning Premier Hearst stated that the resources of the province were at present taxed to the limit by present obligations as a result of the war, and in order to grant the subsidy of $3,500 a mile to the Hydro Radial system it would be necessary to tap new sources of revenue. "I am glad that Sir Adam does not insist on immediate action this year," said Premier Hearst. "I cannot promise anything definite, until 1916, but the Government has not refused anything the Hydro asked in the past and you may rely on me to see that your needs are looked after."

He assured the deputation that he would give their request the most careful consideration and that it would not be shelved.

Once the Government's hands were free, after the present crisis was passed the matter would be taken up and some decision reached.

Lieut. Gallaugher Chose Firing Line

Preferred to Take His Chance With His Comrades

A very interesting incident in connection with the death of the late Lieut. William N. Gallaugher has come to light which illustrates in a very striking manner the noble nature of the man and his unselfish devotion to duty. It is told by Capt. Coltart, who was Lieut. Gallaugher's superior officer in the 24th Regiment.

When the First Canadian Contingent was stationed at Salisbury Plain Lieut. Gallaugher's ability was soon recognized by his superior officers. His intelligence and aptness for the military life brought him almost instant promotion and he was selected as paymaster for the divisional headquarters. Indeed, he acted for a short time in this capacity. When it came time for the contingent to go to the front, Lieut. Gallaugher conferred with Capt. George Smith and Lieut. Douglas to decide whether he would remain in his advanced position or return to the boys of his company.

The result was that the brave lieutenant gave up his position to which he had been promoted and chose to return to the boys of his company.

"If he had remained as paymaster he would have served miles away from the firing line, and he would have been alive today. He knew this when he relinquished his position, but he felt that it was his duty to remain with the boys in the trenches, and he did his duty as he saw it."

Just Like a Woman.

"What did your wife say she wanted for a birthday present?"

"Guess."

"Oh, I can't."

"Just one of those expensive little trifles."

"What was it?"

"A slice of ham."

GERMAN FLEET

Since Loss of Gazelle it Does Not go Far From Base

COPENHAGEN, March 27.—Since the German cruiser Gazelle was torpedoed by a hostile submarine near the Island of Rugen, the German fleet almost entirely disappeared from the Baltic, except from the waters just near Kiel and the South Danish Islands. The general impression in German naval circles was that a considerable number, both of Russian and British submarines, was operating in the Baltic, and the Germans were afraid to jeopardize their cruisers in sailing over the Baltic and the Gulf of Bothnia. No doubt the Germans intend at the first opportunity to attack the fortified Russian naval yard at Aland Islands. On account of this new German naval activity all ships loaded in Finnish harbors are being held back. Yesterday private Swedish messages announced renewed German activity in the Baltic. Strong German squadrons were observed yesterday, both south of the Island of Oeland, and north of Gothland, steering northward.

BAD OPERATION AVOIDED

By Timely Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Sowers' Own Statement.

Hodgdon, Maine.—"I feel it a duty I owe to all suffering women to tell what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. One year ago I found myself a terrible sufferer. I had pains in both sides and such a soreness I could scarcely straighten up at times. My back ached, I had no appetite and was so nervous I could not sleep, then I would be so tired mornings that I could scarcely get around. It seemed almost impossible to move or do a bit of work and I thought I never would be any better until I submitted to an operation. I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and soon felt like a new woman. I had no pains, slept well, had good appetite and could do almost all my own work for a family of four. I shall always feel that I owe my good health to your medicine."—Mrs. HAYWARD SOWERS, Hodgdon, Maine.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

MAY RISE NEXT WEEK

House Getting Through Business at Express Speed

OTTAWA, March 27.—The House transacted business yesterday at high speed and to-day there is a general impression that prorogation may occur next week. Two factors make for delay. One is the investigation into Militia Department contracts now being conducted by the public accounts committee, and the other is the proposed enfranchisement of the men at the front. Negotiations are reported to be in progress to relieve the public account committee from their labors by having the cases before them referred to a royal commission upon which both political parties would be represented.

The bill enfranchising the soldiers and sailors of Canada is still before the special committee, which is to hold its final meeting this afternoon. The bill approved by the majority of the committee will be introduced on Monday.

Party differences did not disturb the rapid transaction of business in the House yesterday. Gen. Hughes finished with his estimates and Hon. Mr. White secured by unanimous vote the legislation confirming and validating his excess issue of $26,000,000 of Dominion notes and his loans to the Canadian Northern and G. T. P. Sir Wilfrid Laurier and A. K. McLean commended the action of the Minister, although the former suggested that it would have been better to have obtained the authorization of Parliament at the August session. When Parliament was here last August the railway companies had applied for loans, but Sir Robert Borden explained yesterday that it was then anticipated that the loans would be made through the banks by way of rediscount upon the Government guaranteed bonds of the companies as collateral. The banks, however, had refused to intervene, although he had earnestly urged them to do so.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Cured by Toning the Blood and Strengthening the Nerves

It is the opinion of the best medical authorities, after long observation, that nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. Vital changes in the system after long winter months may cause much more trouble than the familiar spring weakness and weariness from which most people suffer as the result of indoor life, in poorly ventilated and often overheated buildings. Official records prove that in April and May, neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and other forms of nerve trouble are at their worst, and that then, more than any other time, a blood-making, nerve-restoring tonic is needed.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives only gallop through the bowels, leaving you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are the best medicine for they actually make the new, rich, red blood that feeds the starved nerves, and thus cure the many forms of nervous disorders. They cure also such other forms of spring troubles as headaches, poor appetite, weakness in the limbs, as well as remove unsightly pimples and eruptions. In fact, they unfailingly bring new health and strength to weak, tired and depressed, men, women and children.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Albania In Turmoil.

ROME, March 27.—The situation at Durazzo in Albania would again appear to be serious according to despatches coming to Rome. The insurgents are bombarding the port and threatening to destroy it, if the consul representatives are not successful in persuading Essad Pasha, the Turkish provisional president, to leave the country.

Several cannon shot during the bombardment struck the residence of Essad Pasha. Docks and public buildings also suffered.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

GARDEN CULTIVATION

The time is at hand when the housewife, or the man who is interested in his garden, can be seen flopping over the pages of spring seed catalogues, and picking up new ideas as to what seed to sow and how, where to buy, etc. There will be more work done in the back yard patch this year than in the past seasons, and for a good reason. "Back to the land" will be the slogan practiced in towns and cities as well as in rural districts.

Residents of cities, towns and municipalities going in for vegetable culture should send to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, for one or more of these publications.

No. 49—The potato and its culture, by W. T. Macoun.

No. 5.—The asparagus, celery and onion culture, by W. T. Macoun.

No. 10.—Tomato culture, by W. T. Macoun.

No. 11.—Cabbage and cauliflower varieties, by F. G. Brown.

Nos. 7 and 8.—Profitable field root culture, by W. T. Macoun.

Also the bulletin entitled:

"The Vegetable Garden."

This deals with the cultivation of tomatoes, onions, cabbage, cauliflower, celery, melons, watermelons, cucumbers, beets, squash, pumpkins, carrots, parsnips, turnips, salsify (or other plant), radishes, peas, beans, corn, eggplant, peppers, spinach, lettuce, parsley, sweet herbs, asparagus and rhubarb.

The woman who daily makes allowances for her husband should be rewarded at least once a week by receiving one from him.

Our consciences are not apt to be overfatigued by the way we work them in forgiving our enemies.

"Never Again,"

Said the housewife, "will I waste money on cake soap when, by cutting up a bar of N.P. SOAP, I get more and better soap than by buying other kinds in cakes. One bar of N.P. SOAP at 15¢ contains more by weight than four or five 5¢ cakes of any other kind— It's Made in Canada too."

MRS. WISENEIGHBOUR says:

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibrewear Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:

"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

ORGANIZED BASEBALL HAS GLAD HAND FOR SOME STARS

Come Back From the Federal Despite Ban Johnson's Decree of "Mix"

New York, Match 27. — Quite a number of our best known citizens are wondering what has become of that baseball blacklist? You remembeb it, don't you—the one that Ban Johnson brought into being?

Something like a year ago—mebbe a trifle longer—Ban, who was horribly provoked because some of his star athletes were jumping — said, majestically, thunderously:

"Any player in organized baseball who jumps to the Federal League never again will be permitted to play in organized baseball."

Them there were the words that Bancroft spoke to the multitude—the very same words.

Johnson Loops Loop.

Since then—

Well, Walt Johnson, a pitching person connected with Ban's organization, looped the loop, and Clarke Griffith, his boss, nearly busted his collar bone diving after Walt and trying to save him for the American league. Did Ban say to Griffith: "Nix on taking back Walter Johnson. He's blacklisted?"

No. Ban didn't. Ban just said "brave" when Grif brought back Johnson.

"Slim Ray" Caldwell, pitcher for the Yankees, jumped to the Feds. The new Yankee owners jumped him back and Ban, instead of ordering the blacklist applied to Caldwell, welcomed Caldwell's return.

Pitchers Kahler and Beanding jumped from the Naps last spring. Then they experienced a change of heart. They wanted to go back to organized baseball. Did Ban say, "naye, naye?" No. Ban said, "Welcome home, fellers—welcome home."

Change of Mind.

Ban probably was sincere when he first uttered that threat. But later events caused a change of mind. Ban figured at first that only a few players would jump and that the bars could be put up against these fellows and that organized baseball could get along very nicely without the deserters.

But the wholesale "sniping" of the Federal sharpshooters caused Ban to change front. The Feds grabbed so many organized baseball stars that it left a big gap in the ranks of organized baseball. There was just one way to plug up the gaps, and that was to get back as many of the deserters as possible.

And so, Ban now is sanctioning the action that he ruled against just a year ago.

Many Players Jump.

The cases mentioned above of those who jumped from and then back again to organized baseball are a few of the many.

Other American league players who quit and went to the Feds were welcomed back. Many National leaguers were greeted the same way when they decided to return to organized baseball. The same is true concerning the minor leaguers.

Stis Comes Back.

Not only will organized baseball permit a prodigal player in its ranks, but it also will let him come back and manage a ball club, if he wants to. Take the case of Charles Stis. He managed the Regina club in the Western Canada league in 1913. He jumped to the St. Louis Feds in 1914. He was tried out by them and found wanting. So they "canned" him, whereupon Stis hustled back to the Northwestern league and harpooned a job as manager of a club in that league in 1915.

The blacklist? Oh, piffle!

THE GUN CLUB

Arrangements Made for Shooting This Season

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Gun Club was held last evening at the Empress Hotel and was well attended. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

Hon. Pres., Mr. O. E. McGaw, Toronto.

President, L. Hall.

Vice-President, Dr. Gowan.

Captain, C. Graham.

Secretary-Treasurer, E. Wood.

The secretary's report showed a substantial balance to the credit of the club after a heavy expenditure last year in building a very comfortable club house. All arrangements were made for the shooting during the coming season. Several prizes will be competed for, including the two silver cups presented by Mr. O. E. McGaw of Toronto, a prize from the Peterborough Hardware Co., the Kingan Hardware Co., the Morgan Hardware Co., and the club, and probably others. These prizes will be competed for under the same conditions as last year. Members competing must shoot at two hundred birds during the season. The regular shoots will be held on the first, third and fourth Fridays of the months of May, June, July and August. Members competing for the prizes must shoot at fifty birds each month, 25 on the first and 25 on the third Friday. However, should a member be unable to attend on one of these days, his score on the fourth Friday may be recorded. The first practice shoot will be held in the near future, when the members will be notified. The club is connected with the Trent Valley Trap Shooters' League, composed of the following clubs: Cobourg, Belleville, Stirling, Campbellford and Peterborough, and some friendly shoots are looked for with these clubs during the summer.

COMMENT As You Like it

THERE will be a number of familiar faces missing in the Canadian League this year, with Peterborough, Toronto and Erie out of the game, their players having been scattered. All the local players have been given their release. Catcher Walter Snell, late of the Toronto Beavers, has been turned over to Rochester. Lanky Hunt of the Beavers goes to Utica in the New York State League. Oskee Neale of London, who belonged to Cleveland, will play in the outfield of the Dayton club of the Central League. Ray Clement of St. Thomas is a free agent and wants to sign with the Senators, while George Ort, captain of the Toronto Beavers, also wants to join the Senators. Behan and Gygli of Erie will play with the Erie team in a new league.

VANCOUVER MADE IT THREE STRAIGHT

VANCOUVER, March 27. — The third and deciding game for the world's championship was played last night and at the end of the second period Vancouver led by 5 to 2.

The score by periods was: Vancouver 2, Ottawa 2; second, Vancouver 5, Ottawa 2. Final score, 7-2.

Unfair.

Jinkers — No use talking; there's something wrong with civilization. Things must be reformed. Patience has ceased to be a virtue.

Blinkers—What's happened?

Jinkers—Here I'm assessed $1 dog tax for a miserable little two cent cur that my boy picked up somewhere, while my rich neighbor with a $500 thoroughbred does not have to pay a penny more.—New York Weekly.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. E. Walton was in Lindsay yesterday.

The members of "The Quaker Girl" arrived in the city at noon.

Mrs. W. H. Hicks, of Tweed, has been visiting friends in the city.

The Vesper service will be held in the green room of the Y. W. C. A. at 4.30 Sunday afternoon.

Rev. F. A. Conners was called to the home of Mrs. Campbell, Nassau, last night, Mrs. Campbell being seriously ill.

Official announcement is made at Toronto of the apointment of Fred L. Squire of Norwood, as clerk of the fifth division, court of Peterborough.

Mr. Cyril H. Devey left for Port Hope yesterday to take charge of St. Paul's choir and organ for the next two Sundays.

Rev. Jonh Garbutt, of Cobourg, who will preach at St. James' anniversary services tomorrow, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilson, 241 Wescott street.

Mrs. Alexander Pratt of Cobourg announces the engagement of her eldest daughter, Mrs. Winfred N. Stewart, to Mr. Robert Morley Wade, of Port Hope. The marriage will take place early in April.

Twenty-five to thirty girl friends of Miss Margaret Fry again pleasantly surprised her last evening by giving her a china shower at the home of Mrs. Charles Barrie, Bolivar St. Many very beautiful gifts of china were showered upon her. Afterwards the evening was spent in games and music with refreshments doing their share in making things most sociable.

IN ZEPPELIN TIME.

"I can't understand it. A month ago you cut her dead, and now you can't make too much fuss over her."

"My dear, it's uite simple. She has the biggest cellar in the district."

LOOKING AFTER YOUNG GIRLS

Mrs. Burrington Ham Spoke on Immigration

Mrs. Burrington Ham, secretary of the immigration department of the Y. W. C. A., gave a very interesting talk on her work in the green room of the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon. She spoke chiefly on the work done for girls coming into Canada alone and without friends, to meet them on their arrival.

Notwithstanding the conditions caused by the war since January, 1915, to March, 1915, one hundred and fifty-one girls travelling alone from England have pasesd through her department and were materially assisted. Part of the work done by Mrs. Ham for these girls is the exchange of tickets, looking after their baggage, advice on the amount of food needed for the journey to their destination. Each girl, on her departure from Quebec, is given a small pamphlet with a list of the Y. W. C. A. boarding homes throughout Canada, so that in the event of her arrival at the station with no one to meet her, she may get in touch with the travellers' aid society worker, who undertakes to see that the girl reaches her destination in safety.

Although this branch of the work being done by the Y.W.C.A. is only in its infancy, the results have been so gratifying in the past that the Dominion Council of the Y. W. C. A. realizes there is a vast amount of work along these lines, and hope soon to be able to appoint more workers at the stations throughout Canada.

UNITED FARMERS

to the farmers' movement in western Canada with which the United Farmers of Ontario are affiliated. The United Farmers of Ontario is the same class of organization as the Grain Growers' Association in Western Canada and the United Farmers' Co-operative Co., Limited, is intended to fill the same position in Ontario as the Grain Growers' Grain Co. does in western Canada. Already some thousands of farmers in Ontario are organized in these companies and the movement is making great headway. Mr. Morrison is an exceptionally able speaker and deals with the economic difficulties farmers are struggling with and outlines what farmers must do if conditions are to be improved.

WHO WINS THE PONY OUTFIT

The Dunlap Pony Contest, being conducted by the various local merchants is to close on Wednesday, 31st March. The pony outfit is here and shown on the streets each day, and is a real handsome Shetland pony, young and sound. The public may rely on the contest being properly finished. The merchants who are giving pony votes have agreed to call in an auditor and have him go over their sales for the period of the contest and check up all votes given, and see that same corresponds. They have taken this added cost on themselves to insure to the public that no votes have been issued except those that correspond with their sales and are in keeping with the rules of the contest. Now go to it, boys, and hustle for your votes. Only three more days and it's: Who has won the pony?

TO MY MANY FRIENDS

I wish to thank my many friends who have given me their support and pony votes, and to remind you of the fact that there are only three more days to work, as the contest closes on Wednesday, March 31st. If you have any votes now or are about to make a purchase, please go to the pony stores and buy there if possible. As you know, I am anxious to win the pony, and do not mind working hard for it, and desire to assist the merchants who have been so kind to donate it to the boys who work. If you have not promised anyone your votes, kindly phone 530 or mark your ballots for me. Thanking you kindly for your votes and assistance,

Yours faithfully,

ROD CAMERON.

Another huge turkey will be offered to the person who knocks down the most rats in 15 consecutive shots. The above prizes are for the six days ending Saturday, 3rd April.

THE GUNS OF THE QUEEN ELIZABETH

Within the last few weeks much has been heard of Great Britain's most powerful superdreadnought, the Queen Elizabeth, which is at the head of the allied fleet bombarding the Turkish forts of the Dardanelles. Now a sister ship of the Queen Elizabeth, the Warspite, has, it is believed, joined the allied fleet there. These two are the latest word in naval fighting machines and, as was shown at the beginning of the war, they are two of the five which Great Britain had at that time under construction. The other three are due to be commissioned in 1915, and it is stated that they will be ready very shortly, and rumor has it that one of them at least will be armed with even heavier guns than the huge 15-inchers which form the main armament of the Queen Elizabeth and the Warspite.

Archibald Hurd in his book "The Fleets at War" gives much interesting information on the subject of dreadnoughts and armament. When war was declared Great Britain had in course of building these five enormous ships, each to be armed with eight 15-inchers and, of course, with a large number of guns of smaller calibre. In addition each ship has five torpedo tubes. Germany has two somewhat similar ships under construction, begun before the British ships and provided to be completed in 1916. They are, however, much slower than Britain's latest.

The British ships, in spite of their great tonnage of 27,500 tons, have a speed of 25 knots an hour (slightly over 29 miles) and have crews of 900 men. Each of the eight 15-inchers fire a shell weighing almost a ton—or to be correct 1,950 lbs.—the guns themselves being 56 feet long and weighing 96 tons each. Their inside diameter is 15 inches, and firing shells from a low trajectory have much more penetrating power than the much lauded 17 inch howitzers of the Germans.

The worth of the 15-inchers has yet to be proven, although the Queen Elizabeth has cleared away much of the doubt by her performance at the Dardanelles. The projectiles from a fifteen-inch gun will travel at least thirty miles before stopping, and good shooting can easily be done at a distance of twenty miles.

The question at once presents itself "what is the penetrating power of such an enormous prejectile?" Probably for various reasons this has not been given out by the admiralty, but it is known that the 13.5 in. guns with which the dreadnoughts of the Orion, King George and Iron Duke class are equipped, have a penetrating power at 2,000 yards of 50 inches of wrought iron. The shells of the 13.5 in. guns weigh only 1,250 lbs., while the gun itself weights 80 tons. The next gun in order is the 12-inch. It throws a shell weighing 850 lbs. and cannot be stopped at close quarters by less than 46 inches of wrought iron. It can therefore be fairly accurately surmised as to what damage the enormous new weapon can create.

Beautiful Building Lots

Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald is offering for sale some beautiful building lots on Benson, Geraldine and O'Carroll avenues. This property lies within two minutes' walk of the street railway and ten minutes' walk of the heart of the city. The city water, gas, light and sewer services are installed, the property being already completely surrounded by beautiful homes. The site is an ideal one, with a gentle southeasterly slope, and being considerably elevated above the city and not in the immediate vicinity of any manufacturing industries, the air is always pure, healthy and invigorating. Nearly all the lots are already beautifully wooded with foreign and domestic shade trees. Two handsome residences are already under construction on this property, and several more will be erected this season, and for anyone contemplating the erection of a home there are certainly not lots in the city that offer equal advantages.

Copies of registered plan No. 149, which covers this property, may be seen, and all other information may be had, at the offices of Mr. R. J. Kidd, J. T. O'Connell & Co., C. J. Carroll & Co., also at the office of the owner, Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, Ontario Land Surveyor, 435 George street. 'Phone 885.

MUSICAL COMEDY "THE DRUM MAJOR"

After weeks of hard work, the Orpheus Society announce that they will present to the public, Easter Monday and Tuesday, one of the most popular musical comedies on the boards, "The Drum Major," a military spirit pervading the atmosphere, and full of catchy and musical numbers and dances, etc. The operetta is adapted from the French and portrays the martial spirit and recruiting days of Napoleonic wars, and is very appropriate to the stirring times of the present day. The principals of the caste are as follows:—"Clarice," Miss Lettie Drope; "Babette," Mrs. A. A. Perrin; "Sergeant Leroux," Mr. Harold Lee; "Jean," Mr. Ed. Hanrahan; "Julien," Mr. F. Hartshorn; "Gaspard," Mr. P. Naish; "Pierre," Mr. N. Laing; "Antoinette," Mrs. J. Lock; "Suzanne," Miss Ruby Quartermain; "Jacqueline," Miss Clara Overend. The other members recruits, villagers. Musical director, J. Edward Fisher.

Ernie Marks Stock Company, supporting Miss Kittie Marks.

Commencing Thursday night, April 1st, the theatregoers of Peterborough are to have with them again the ever popular Ernie Marks Stock Company supporting the clever actress Miss Kittie Marks in a repertoire of high class plays and wonderful singing, dancing, and musical vaudeville acts. As the name Marks is so well known to all they need no introduction to what they are, as we all know they believe in entertaining the public when at the theatre and this season Mr. Marks has added to his regular show an all-star great feature vaudeville acts, making a complete change from start to finish. He also wishes to call your special attention to the play picked for the opener at the Grand Opera House, "The Girl from Tennessee," as this is one of the greatest successes of the history of the theatrical world, the story of "The Girl from Tennessee" is one of the deepest heart to heart stories and easily proves a very interesting plot, with a clean clever comedy all the way through. Send the children as they will enjoy it to the limit. An excellent attraction at popular prices. The company will offer a complete change each and every evening and on Good Friday. Afternoons special matinees at 2.30 p.m. Seats on sale for all shows at box office, Tuesday morning at 9 a.m.

FRENCH MAINTAIN THEIR GAINS
ITALY TO ESTABLISH CENSORSHIP

Berlin Claims Minor Engagements in Argonne and Lorraine Were Successful --- Von Kluck is Wounded by Shrapnel

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 29. — The French war office today gave out a report on the fighting of yesterday as follows: "In the region of Ypres a German observation post was blown up by the French with a mine.

"At Eparges, Germans attempted to regain trenches lost by them on March 27th. After a violent struggle French gains were on the whole maintained. Germans obtained a footing in a few sections of their old trenches, but on the other hand the French made progress at other points."

BERLIN, March 29. — (Official Announcement.) — "On the west front, yesterday passed rather quietly. Only in the Argonne and in Lorraine were there minor engagements, and these were successful for the Germans.

"General Von Kluck was slightly wounded by a shrapnel while inspecting advanced positions of the army. His condition is satisfactory.

"German troops have stormed Tauroggen, across the Russian frontier northeast of Tilsit and have taken 300 Russian prisoners.

"A Russian attack on a railroad from Wirballen to Kovno, at a point near Pilwiszki, broke down.

"Russians suffered heavy losses in the Krasenopol district, where over 1,000 were taken prisoners."

SINK TRANSPORTS WITH STORES.

PETROGRAD, March 29. — A semi-official review of the naval operations in the Baltic since the beginning of the war made public last night says: "The Russian fleet has developed intense activity along the enemy's coast. German submarines have suffered considerably, and a number of the enemy's transports loaded with stores have been destroyed."

FOOD SCARCITY DEPRESSES AUSTRIAN CAPITAL.

VENICE, March 29. — Scarcity and dearness of food in the Austrian capital is increasing general apprehensiveness and depression there. The Venia Arbeiter Zeitung says: "The grim earnestness of war now begins to be felt. High prices have extended to every necessity. The poor must now limit themeslves to the bare nourishment of body."

The paper complains that the government's measures affect the poor, but that the iron grip of the law reaches when it comes to touching the comforts and luxuries of the rich.

AUSTRIA OFFERS TO CEDE PART OF TRENT.

PARIS, March 29. — A newspaper despatch from Rome says Austria has made a definite offer to cede to Italy part of the Province of Trent at the close of the war, and that the Italiau Government has deferred replying.

WAR TAX ON LETTERS AND POST CARDS

Statement From the Post Office Department at Ottawa

The post office department at Ottawa has given out the following information regarding the war tax on letters and post cards:—

A war tax of one cent has been imposed on each letter and postcard mailed in Canada for delivery in Canada, the United States and Mexico, and on each letter mailed in Canada for delivery in the United Kingdom and British possessions generally, and wherever the two cent rate applies, to become effective on and after the 15th April, 1915.

This War Tax is to be prepaid by the senders by means of a War Stamp for sale by postmasters and other postage stamp vendors.

Wherever possible, stamps on which the word "War Tax" have been printed should be used for prepayment of the War Tax, but should ordinary postage stamps be used for this purpose, they will be accepted.

This War Stamp or additional Stamp for war purposes should be affixed to the upper right hand portion of the address side of the envelope or post card, close to the regular postage so that it may be readily cancelled at the same time as the postage.

In the event of failure on the part of the sender through over-sight or negligence to prepay the war tax on each letter or postcard above specified, such a letter or postcard will be sent, immediately to the nearest Branch Dead Letter Office.

It is essential that postage on all classes of mail matter should be prepaid by means of ordinary postage stamps. The War Tax stamp will not be accepted in any case for the prepayment of postage.

DISASTER FOR BOTH SAYS MR. JOHN RIDDELL

Tries to Dissuade Factories From Organizing Cheese Board at Norwood

While no definite action was taken at the meeting on Saturday indications point to there being a division in the Peterborough Cheese Board this season and some ten or twelve factories in the vicinity of Norwood have a cheese board in that village. The possibility of much saving in time, railway fare and cheese by having the cheese boarded every week so impressed the representatives of the factories to the east that they began laying plans to the organization of a board. Mr. Barton, of Daisy L. it is understood was one of the most prominent agitators. On Saturday afternoon a meeting of all the representatives of factories in that vicinity was held in the office of the Department of Agriculture at Norwood. Mr. John Riddell of the Peterborough Cheese Board was present and pointed out how the presence of a cheese board in Norwood would be disastrous to both it and Peterborough. The amount of cheese offered on both boards would be very small, hence the number of buyers would decrease and the competition among the buyers would not be as brisk. Some years ago the amount boarded on the Peterborough Board every two weeks was in the neighborhood of 4000. By some dropping off, others going out of existence and others selling off the board, the amount boarded every two weeks has dropped to some 2500 boxes. When the amount was 4000 boxes some eight or ten buyers would be present, this past season the usual number was five. At the Victoria Board where they board but 1500 only two buyers are present each meeting.

The meeting heard Mr. Riddell and then discussed the proposition from their point of view. The result was that they decided to hold on arganization meeting on April 10th at which all the factories of the vicinity are expected to be present.

MENINGITIS WAS FATAL

Joseph Cupoli, the thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Cupoli, of 529 Elm street, died Saturday night at his home from an attack of meningitis. He was a bright young boy, popular with his companions, and a general favorite.

The funeral took place at nine o'clock this morning to St. Peter's Cemetery from the family residence, 529 Elm street.

FIRE IN NEW ELEVATOR

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Montreal, March 29.—Fire broke oue this afternoon in the new million dollar elevator on the waterfront belonging to the Harbor Commissioners. It contained hay which it is said was ignited by a spark from a passing locomotive. The hay was being prepared for shipment to Europe and was the property of the Canadian government. The building and contents were extensively damaged.

Ottawa, March 29.—The railways have granted members of the second and third contingents two cents a mile rate when visiting their homes.

CANADIANS DID NOBLY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, March 29.—Gen. Hughes told the House today he had just been informed by the Imperial authorities that the Canadians had just been relieved in the trenches and the commander of the forces stated they had done nobly.

The Minister told the House that the Dominion's military expenditure for the coming financial year would be $94,475,000. Hon. Mr. Hazen adds to this three millions on the naval account.

SINKING IS CONFIRMED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, March 29.—The sinking of the British steamer Falaba of three thousand net tons off Milford Haven, Wales, by a German submarine, is confirmed. The loss among the crew is supposed to be large.

PASSENGERS ABOARD STEAMER SUNK BY ENEMY'S SUBMARINE

Torpedo Struck Vessel Before Life Boats Were Launched ---Raider Offered no Assistance to Persons Struggling in Water

STEAMER'S CAPTAIN PICKED UP DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 29. — The British steamer Falaba was sunk by a Germn submarine off Bishop's Rock this morning. The crew escaped.

The Falaba from Liverpool, with a crew of 120 and 140 passengers, was bound for the west coast of Africa. When the German submarine appeared it whistled thrice as a signal for the steamer to prepare her lifeboats, but before this could be done the torpedo struck the ship near the engine room.

Three of the lifeboats were swamped. Many persons aboard the vessel were thrown into the sea, where they struggled, while the submarine circled about, offering, according to the Fabala's survivors, no assistance.

A fishing boat appeared on the scene and saved 140 of the passengers and crew. Captain Davis of the liner was picked up dead. Eight other bodies were recovered. Survivors were landde at Milford Haven.

HAS SOWN OATS.

BELLEVILLE, March 29.—Mr. P. Shannon of Thurlow perhaps holds the record for early sowing of oats. Few imagined the spring was so far advanced as to warrant seeding, but Thurlow land was in shape for sowing. Not only has Mr. Shannon sown the oats but he is cultivating other fields.

FUNERAL OF LATE SISTER FAUSTINA

The funeral of the late Sister Faustina took place this morning from Mount St. Joseph to St. Peter's Cemetery. His Lordship Bishop O'Brien celebrated the Requiem Mass, assisted by Rev. C. J. Phelan, deacon, and Rev. J. J. O'Brien, sub-deacon. Rev. Dean McColl, Rev. Father McCarthy and Rev. Father McAuley were also present in the sanctuary. A touching and very appropriate sermon was preached by Bishop O'Brien, D.D.

PREMIER BORDEN'S MOTHER IS DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Halifax, March 29.—Mrs. Andrew Borden, mother of Sir Robt. Borden, died this morning at three o'clock at her home at Grand Pre, aged ninety. Death was the gradual result of a paralytic stroke suffered two years ago. The Prime Minister was at her deathbed.

VALEDICTORY OF ALD. JOHNSTON

In a card of thanks to the citizens today, ex-Ald. W. J. Johnston thanks the citizens for confidence reposed in him during his term of office as a representative of the people in the City Council. There are many citizens who regret that Ald. Johnston resigned from the Council. He has been identified with important undertakings, and it was when he was chairman of the fire, water and light committee that the present efficient fire department was born and passed through the stages of infancy. His efforts to give the city municipal ownership of utilities, principally power and light, are well known to the ratepayers. Altogether, he has done a lot of good work, and had he remained in the Council would have been a worthy candidate for the office of chief magistrate.

LAD IS INJURED

Palm of Right Hand Was Severely Lacerated

Roland Clancy, the 16-year-old son of Mr. Simon Clancy, East City, met with a very painful accident yesterday. While playing around the tressle works near McAllister's mill he fell and severely cut his right hand. The palm of the hand was lacerated to such an extent that it required medical attendance. Dr. McPherson was called and the lad was removed to St. Joseph's Hospital, where the wound was closed.

Secure Funds for New Sunday School

Campaign of Four Days by Young People of Salvation Army

Starting this week, the Salvation Army are to commence a four-day campaign to raise about $2000, required to construct a new Sunday school building at Brownton for the accommodation of the scholars who reside in that section of the cty. The site has been picked out and a good sum paid down on it. The building will be a one-storey structure, brick veneer, and will be built along commodious lines and thoroughly fitted up. The Temple Sunday school has outgrown the accommodation and building operations have been urgent for some time.

The campaign will close on Good Friday.

Houses and Shops Prey to Flames

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, March 29.—Fire supposed to have started in J. H. Mack's store from a charcoal burner at Humber Bay this morning destroyed nine small houses and nine shops. The loss is thirty thousand dollars and the insurance thirteen thousand.

MADE FIERCE ATTACK ON OPPOSITION

Mr. Burnhan Scores Opposition for Demanding Increased Naval Expenditure

(Special to The Review.)

Ottawa, March 29. — When the Minister of Marine's estimates were under consideration this morning, Burnham of West Peterborough fiercely attacked the opposition for demanding increased naval expenditure and the establishment of a Canadian navy. Sir Wilfrid Laurier in reply said, "Canada must have a navy."

ASSISTANCE FOR POOR OF FRANCE

Ladies of St. Peter's Guild Are Helping

It can easily be understood, with the hundreds of thousands of wounded French soldiers to attend and care for, that the poor and homeless women and children fare badly. With all the fabric mills in the north of France either in the hands of the Germans or destroyed, there is no material left in the country to make clothes for the unfortunate ones. To help these poor people, a society called the Secours Nationale has been formed, of which there is a branch in Toronto. Fifty-four boxes were shipped from the Toronto branch last week to France. The ladies of St. Peter's Guild kindly offered to make up a large consignment last week, which was forwarded to the Toronto branch. The ladies of the Toronto branch sent a letter to the St. Peter's Guild thanking them for their kindness in making up this material. At the request of the guild, another consignment of materials to be made up has been sent from Toronto. We are sure that the unfortunate women and little children will be very grateful for these kindnesses.

An Acknowledgment From Shorncliffe

A letter acknowledging the receipt of two bales of hospital supplies at Shorncliffe hospital, Eng., has been received by Miss Pearse of the Peterborough Progressive Club.

The letter reads as follows:—

My dear Miss Pearse,

It is difficult for me to find words to express adequately to the members of the Peterborough Progressive Club my warm appreciation of their generous contribution to our hospital supplies contained in the two boxes and sack received this week. I can assure them that the contents will prove of the very greatest service and go far to add to the comfort of our brave soldiers when under our care.

Will you convey to your associates my very warm thanks for their kind efforts on our behalf in our work at the hospital.

Sincerely yours,
DONALD ARMOUR.

Mothers' Club.

The Mothers' Club of King George School will hold a meeting tomorrow afternoon at 4.15 at the school. All mothers and others interested in the movement are cordially invited to be present. A record attendance is hoped for.

CHANGE MAY BE MADE IN FEDERAL ELECTION LAW

Keep Polls Open Till Eight O'clock in the Evenings

Ottawa, March 29.—The Commons committee on the revision of the electoral laws has decided to recommend legislation calling for the keeping of polls in cities open until 8 o'clock on election day and also requiring employers to give their men an extra hour at noon so as to enable them to vote.

The question of making provision for the vote of soldiers, while on active service, was discussed again but no decision was reached by the committee.

It is probable, however, that a majority on the committee will recommend that in the draft bill a clause be inserted to allow of balloting by soldiers under the supervision of their commanding officers. The committee will hold another meeting before finally deciding on its report to Parliament.

THE NEW ROAD SCHEME.

WHILE THE DETAILS have not been announced as yet, and apparently not yet worked out, the proposal of the Ontario Government to inaugurate a scheme of road development involving an expenditure of $30,000,000 will meet with the approval of the people of Ontario. A good system of roads is essential to the proper development of Ontario, and, while some countries have done much towards the building of good roads, others have done very little. A comprehensive scheme, such as the Ontario Government intends to bring in, will insure a general plan of road-building throughout the province and the building of a main highway.

France and England are already famous for their roads. They built a fine system so that travel can be maintained expeditiously and easily in all seasons. The United States has in recent years done much in road development and has built the famous Lincoln highway that reaches from the Atlantic to the Pacific. In time, other trunk roads will be built connecting with this great road. If Ontario is to grow as it should, it must have a system of permanent highways.

The increasing use of automobiles is another reason why good roads are more and more necessary. Not only in the cities are they being used in increasing numbers, but they are also being utilized by farmers for pleasure and profit. With a good system of permanent roads around a city like Peterborough, the radius of farmers' trade is enlarged, because, when the farmer comes to the city or market in an automobile, he can come from a greater distance than he could with a horse and waggon. He comes faster and easier and saves time. At present, a distance of sixteen or twenty miles consumes considerable time, whereas made in an automobile it takes very much less and is pleasanter.

The establishment of rural mail delivery has made the daily newspaper possible to many farming and village communities that formerly received only a weekly. By means of advertising, the city merchant appeals thus to a larger field, and by the building of good roads and the use of automobiles, trade is increased. Farm life is made pleasanter, it loses much of that isolation that has in the past been an important factor in the movement of people from the farm to the city.

The county of Wentworth has become famous for its fine roads, while Hamilton is equally famous for its farmers' market. A great many farmers in that locality use automobiles in taking their produce to the Hamilton market. It does not take them long to go to market, and not long to return. They have more time in the city, and can get home early enough to look after whatever work has to be done. Progress has been greatly facilitated there, which it could not have been had there not been good roads. Now, the farmers say they do not know what they would do without their automobiles.

The new bill intends to have cities and towns co-operate with counties in proceeding with this new good roads programme. That is a good feature because the benefits derived are mutual. In this respect, the sooner the local city and county authorities arrive at an understanding according to the provisions of the new bill, the sooner will this locality receive the benefits to be conferred.

THE FRENCH QUESTION IN THE SENATE.

THE SENATE has been debating the French question again. This time Senator Mason made a very good speech in which he deprecated the motion of Senator David and held that this was a very inopportune time to raise such a question. He concluded by showing that the establishment of racial schools would impair the efficiency of the Separate Schools which have always received fair treatment from the Ontario Government.

Senator Power also made a speech to the same end, and claimed that the Government of Ontario was not likely to take advice from the Canadian Senate. He held that the Senate could not solve the problem, that interference by it would only intensify the feeling on the question, and, accordingly, introduced the following amending resolution:

> "This House, while it believes that it is in the interests of the Dominion at large that all questions as to which divisions exist among the people of any province should be considered on fair and patriotic lines, and settled in such a way as to promote peace and harmony between the different racial and religious elements of the population, is of the opinion that, inasmuch as the subject of education is one of those by the British North America Act of 1867 committed to the provinces any suggestion volunteered by the Senate as to the manner in which any province should exercise those powers would be contrary to the spirit of the constitution, and calculated to intensify and extend any divisions of feeling that now exist."

The spirit of this motion is commendable, and the Senate would do well to pass it and thus close a contentious subject over which it has no control and of which its consideration will likely lead only to discord.

VALUE OF PUBLICITY.

PUBLICITY is the strength of every movement. It is characteristic of the Patriotism and Production Campaign that the best is being done to shine in the glare of the big white light. All known means are being utilized to reach the people that they may be encouraged, not so much to extend as to improve production. It is unavoidable that prices should vary. This is not entirely owing to speculation, but also due considerably to conditions of the period. Of this one great fact not only agriculturists, but all classes may be assured, that, with a large section of Europe devastated, and even shipping channels closed, the great output of Russia effectually blocked, and production minimized by reason of the demands of war upon man and beast, there must be for things Canadian an upward and a permanently upward trend. Latterly, in some things there has been a rush to market, consequent upon money tightness, which, with the curtailment of facilities for shipment across the seas, has led to a drop in price. But that can only be temporary. Demand will, must and always does come to its own.

WAR LOSSES.

IT IS credibly stated that the German losses in the battle of Neuve Chapelle amounted to 18,000. The Montreal News says 18,000 dead, and the Ottawa Journal believes this incredible. Since the British lost so heavily and the Germans were defeated, it is reasonable that the Germans also lost very heavily, and this estimate has been placed on their losses in the despatches. We do not think this number were killed, although a large proportion must have been killed. Probably this number is a conservative estimate of the killed and wounded.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

FAILING to get a decent service from the traction company which operates the street railway connecting San Francisco with the Panama Exposition grounds, the authorities of that city have encouraged the establishment of a jitney 'bus service, with such success that the company's lines have been practically boycotted and the people are talking of forcing the company to tear up its tracks, says Beck's Weekly. Traction companies everywhere are difficult pupils, but a real competitor seldom fails to bring them to time.

REAR-ADMIRAL John M. De Robeck, who has succeeded Vice-Admiral Carden, in command of the fleet forcing the Dardanelles, is an Irishman by birth. He entered the navy as a cadet in 1875 and was made Rear-Admiral four years ago. Robeck comes of a fighting family, his great-grandfather, who was a Swede, having fought in the American Revolution on the side of the Colonists. At the end of the war he married an Irish girl and became a naturalized British subject. His son, the grandfather of the present Rear-Admiral, served under the Duke of Wellington in the Peninsular War. The Rear-Admiral has a brother, Baron De Robeck.

HON. DR. PUGSLEY, he of the bellicose name, made quite a lengthy effort to tangle the Minister of Militia and Defence, Major-General Sam Hughes, over the cost of army ammunition. But the minister was quite equal to the occasion and maintained his position unchallenged. Dr. Pugsley succeeded, however, in using considerable of the time of the House of Commons to no purpose whatever. That's what the Liberals are doing very frequently.

WHEN THE GUNS BEGIN TO SHOOT.

(Rudyard Kipling.)

I went into a public-'ouse to get a pint of beer,
The publican 'e up an' sez, 'We serve no red-coats here.'
The girls be'ind the bar they laughed an' giggled fit to die,
I outs into the street again an' to myself sez I:
O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that an' 'Tommy go away';
But it's 'Thank you, Mister Atkins', when the band begins to play.
O it's Tommy this, an' Tommy that, an' 'Chuck him out, the brute,'
But it's 'Saviour of his country' when the guns begin to shoot.

Potentate or Puppet.

(New York Times.)

Is the Kaiser a potentate or a puppet? If he is what the world has always taken him to be, the dominant figure in his empire, then, working against war like a man "filled with some great religious emotion," he could have found means to make his work effective. He could have bent his ministers and his generals to his imperial will. There would have been no war. If he is a mere puppet, mastered and overborne by the war party in Berlin, why, then, there is a case for another revolution.

A Comparison.

(Orillia Packet.)

Under the regime of Sir Wilfred Laurier the expenditure of this dominion grew from 44 to 123 million dollars a year, and the debt grew from 58 to 340 millions. This takes no account of the heritage of obligations left to their successors in connecton with the Grand Trunk Pacific and other enterprises, largely on the strength of which they now charge the Borden Government with extravagance.

BANDS AND GRANTS.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—After having read in your paper letters from Ratepayer and a Lover of Music also your editorial as well as the proceedings of the aldermen at their meeting, it seems there is quite a divergence in the different views. Ratepayer says the Salvation Army Band is mercenary, they do not know how to play music and that as an attraction at the park they were no good. I believe they were well patronized throughout the season. I am told by parties that I believe are well qualified to judge that their playing was equal to the 57th Band. As for being mercenary, if there is an organization in this city that the word mercenary does not fit or apply to it, it is the S. A. and their band. The advocates of the 57th want the same grant as they got last year. I should judge if they don't get what they are after they will not give any concerts in the park this year. The S. A. Adjutant asks that if a grant be given it be divided among all the bands but we will play money or no money. Which of these organizations would you call mercenary if you were going to apply the word to either of them. The matter of Berlin or any other town or city giving $1000 to their band should cut no ice with us; there may be special reasons for their so doing of which we know nothing. Plenty of people mind the time when there was but one band here and it was pay any old price they asked or do without our expensive music. Many societies did without their music. Some try to make us believe that the members of the 57th Band sit up nights and worry themselves how to be good to the public. My own impression is that the 57th got fairly well paid for all they ever did and if there was any short end the public got it. I think there should not be a grant made this year; many have to retrench on actual necessities and I think music is a luxury we can well do without for this year. There being no baseball club here this year is not a valid reason why the grant should be given. Those who went to the games paid their own way. There was no levy made on the city to support the team. Hundreds could not afford to go last year and many of them are in a worse position this year. It is employment that is wanted not brass bands. If the aldermen are really earnest in their desire to help the workingmen they seem so solicitous about, let them cut out this music grant. If they want to do some real good for the city take $100 of this $700 and send the fire chief to the convention. Alderman Duffus deserves better support than he is getting in his contention that the chief should be sent. It is a safe gamble that the city will get as big a return for the money as will be got for any $100 that will be spent this year, and I have no doubt they can find much useful work to do without the balance if they half try.

RUSSIANS AT WORK.

Black Sea Fleet Has Bombarded the Bosphorus on Both Sides.

PETROGRAD, March 29.—An official statement issued last night by the General Staff says:

"The Black Sea fleet on Sunday bombarded the outside forts and batteries on the Bosphorus on both sides of the straits. (The Bosphorus called also the Strait of Constantinople, is a narrow passage which connects the Black Sea with the Sea of Marmora. Constantinople stands on its west side at its outlet and partly on the Sea of Marmora. The strait is 18 miles long.)

"According to observations made from ships and hydroplanes, our shells fell with exactitude. Russian aviators flying above the Bosphorus batteries carried out reconnaissances and dropped bombs with success. A heavy artillery fire was directed at the aviators, without success.

"The enemy's torpedo boats, which tried to come out were driven back into the strait by the fire of our guns.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE BLUFF AND THE ACTUAL

THE haughty prince who struts the boards
And orders slaves about,
He makes the merchant princes fawn
And throws the villain out,
But when the tailor calls next day
With trouble in his eye
Then he appears to be a man Retiring, modest, shy.

Between the facts and the pretense
There yawns a gulf indeed.
The paper millions of the stage
Are not a friend in need.
The realistic drama may
Be true to life in fact,
But when the curtain falls begins
The real pathetic act.

The actor man upon the stage
Has everything his way.
It never troubles him to have
A bunch of bills to pay.
A million is the same to him
As twenty cents or less.
Financial worries are, indeed,
The least of his distress.

But when he comes to make his peace
With butchers and their kind
The play made money does not talk
To give him peace of mind.
A million of the stage's wealth
Won't bring to him a crumb
Or flag the milkman on his way
Or buy a stick of gum.

Liberal Education.

"Have you a diploma from a law school?" asked the examining judge.

"No, your honor," replied the candidate for admission to the bar.

"Ever study law?"

"Not exactly."

"Then on what grounds do you ask for admission to the bar?"

"It's just this way, judge. I was the only witness who knew anything about the case in a trial, and the lawyers read all of the lawbooks that were ever written before they would let me testify, and I concluded it would be a pity to let so much information go to waste."

"You pass."

Hardly Ideal.

"Do you have plenty to eat at your house?" asked the prospective farm hand.

"Enough to feed two men after we are through."

"And plenty of work, I suppose."

"Sure. That is what I want you for."

"There is always some drawback."

She Knew Him.

"He wants to marry his stenographer."

"And won't she have him?"

"On one condition."

"What is that?"

"That she shall pick his stenographers for him."

Heroic.

"I can only work under pressure."

"That is all foolishness."

"No; it is a fact."

"I suppose you have a steam roller back of you when you want to produce something very fine."

Fine Line of Lies.

"I always tell the truth."

"You do?"

"Yes."

"What do you tell?"

"Anything that enters my head."

Some Substitute.

"Do you use natural gas in your house?"

"Just what my wife furnishes."

"But you can't burn that?"

"No, but it keeps us warm."

Sure Winner.

He couldn't get her coddled
To give him her consent.
He had an ample fortune,
But all for naught it went.
He had an inspiration
That made his joy complete—
He bought an ice cream parlor
And laid it at her feet.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It is well that some people are self satisfied, because it often happens that they are the only ones in any state of satisfaction concerning themselves.

Being lazy looks easy, but a lazy man will assure you that it takes all of his time to keep the condition at its best.

You can't make the fellow who has to support the idler believe in the law of compensation.

The man who thinks it will be all right to neglect his wife has some hard jolts coming his way.

One man's money may be as good as another's, but it is not likely to be as good as that of two others.

Some persons are so crooked minded that nothing is more perplexing to them than a straight talk.

The difference is that some of us conceal our high regard for ourselves quite successfully.

Having more liberty and a wider range, men don't need to be as deceitful as women; that is all.

Try a Review Want Ad, It Pays.

Make a Little MAKE MUCH

HAVE YOU a hundred dollars to put into something good? Not a gold mine, not a hole in the ground, not a wild-cat scheme—but an honest fellow and an honest proposition; a clean, decent sure-enough little business that just needs that hundred to make it a winner? Have you? Will you hear us? Then put a quiet little ad in the Classified columns of THE DAILY REVIEW—three or six times—and get the cream of the best business chances in all this city, brought to you and offered you "on a gold plate;" yours to study over and choose from at your leisure; to investigate and digest; "the pick of the propositions" all laid before you, some good, some bad of course, but all there for your judgment. Worth a dollar? Why it's an education! And among them you'll find some little business, some little fellow that can make you money, make you glad that you helped save a success.

One of the best women in this city, left but a thousand or two insurance money, has made a comfortable living income—all from a want ad. That ad brought her in touch with a young business woman who was "making good," who needed just a little capital to "make it sure." The want ad introduced them—and saved them both—made them independent. $1 in a want ad has saved many a deserving man and woman from want. It is "the little door to big opportunity." Try it. Try it over "initials" and see the honest, truthful, sound Business Chances it will bring you.

THE HAND OF GOD

By M. QUAD.

All I have to tell you in connection with the accident that brought me to this hospital is this: My parents were drowned before I was a year old, and after being passed from one person to another I was at last sent to a paupers' home. At the age of ten I ran away from the institution, hoping to better my condition, but instead of that I fell into the hands of this and that farmer, and in every instance I was overworked and ground down. The name generally given me was "Pauper," and I was clothed in the cheapest and poorest garments and fed with the dogs. If I bore it patiently I was an object for further abuse; if I rebelled I was kicked out to find another place.

I used to wonder and speculate as to why I was treated in this manner—why there was never a kind word for me, why men, women and children desired to humiliate me and add to my burdens. I wasn't malformed, and I wasn't sulky or impudent. Had any human being interested himself in me I should have come up to give the world an honest fight in an honest way. I was sixteen years old as near as I can make it when I was last kicked out. I had worked for that farmer a year, and he had clothed me like a scarecrow and fed me like a dog. Simply because I broke the handle of a hoe by accident I was beaten until I fell unconscious. In the small hours of the night, groaning at every step, but fearful of my life, I took to the highway, and a carter gave me a lift which carried me many miles before light. I was determined to try the city this time. My rags, my ignorance and my general appearance had always frightened me away from the towns and kept me among the agriculturists. I had scarcely descended from the cart when I encountered an old man, who looked me over and then accosted me. He seemed to have a kind face, and he spoke pleasantly, and it was soon agreed that I should go with him.

As I was a pauper and a runaway, too, I could expect no more than clothes and board in exchange for my services. The man was named Sabin. He kept a secondhand furniture shop, and as he was all alone in the world he lived in a miserable way in a room over the shop. In a day or two he got me to sign a paper binding myself to him until of age, and the ink was hardly dry on the "X" mark before I found a change in him. He was by nature cruel, stingy and selfish. He worked me without stint, and during the two years I was with him I was always hungry and tired.

One night when I had been with Mr. Sabin about two years and just after he had beaten me for some trifle and laughed over his work a strange thought came to me. For the first time in my life a feeling of revenge crept into my heart, and it made me shake and tremble. I had stood insults and abuses beyond number and never thirsted for reparation. In a quarter of an hour there was more change in me than the last ten years had wrought. I called up all my wrongs. My heart filled with bitterness against the whole world. I wanted to strike men dead for what they had made me suffer. The old man found a change in me the next morning. I had spent the whole night thinking, and when he called me his dog and threw me a morsel of food I stood up and cursed him. When he laid his hands on me I threw him to the floor. He was dumfounded, but he shut his teeth together and looked at me with half shut eyes and said that he would have my life. We were both sullen and silent that day, but I reasoned it out that his plan was to come downstairs that night as I slept and bind me fast and then torture me to his heart's content. Yes, I reasoned it out that this would be his way, and while I was wondering how I could baffle him Satan came to my aid.

"Go and kill him!" whispered the tempter. "Go and kill him and take all his money and flee far away. He deserves killing for the way he has treated you, and all the money you can find should be yours by right!"

The more I thought it over the less murder and robbery seemed a crime, and by and by I had neither fear nor pity in my heart. At midnight, with an iron bar in my hand, I crept up stairs and softly pushed the old man's door open. He had just got out of bed. He had a candle in one hand and a rope in the other, and there was a devilish smile on his face as he thought how he would trap and get revenge on me. My face must have told him that I was there to do murder, for his jaw dropped, and I saw terror in his eyes. I had raised the bar and was about to spring forward, neither of us having uttered a word, when there was a crashing and a splintering, and a great heap of junk which was stored in the room above him came down.

It was morning before any one found us. He was dead—broken, tattered, bruised and crushed out of all semblance—while I was little better off. No man suspected that I was there to do murder. They called it an accident, though I tell you it was the hand of God.' God took the old man's life to prevent me from becoming a murderer, but at the same time dealt out my just punishment. Had I dyed my hand in blood there would have been no heaven for me. Tomorrow when they bear my corpse out of this maybe the angels will have pleaded my cause and secured forgiveness for me.

Young German Patriots Saluting Kaiser Wilhelm.

Young people, as a rule, are intensely patriotic. They believe—and it is natural they should—that no country equals their own native land. No other nation is so great and powerful and nowhere else are the soldiers so brave. It is entirely proper that one should cherish a love of country and home, for without patriotism to inspire it no nation would amount to much. The boys in the picture are German, and their picture was taken during a recent visit of the German emperor to Berlin. At the present time he does not spend much time at his capital, but more frequently is at the battle front. The boys, you will notice, are dressed in uniform.

Double Beheadings.

1.—Remove the first letter from a word which signifies durable and leave a piece of furniture; behead again and leave a word that implies skill.

2.—Remove the first letter from a building material and leave a musical sound; take away the next letter and leave a unit.

3.—Remove the first letter from a part of harness and leave a trial of speed; behead again and leave a single spot.

4.—Remove the first letter from a grain and create warmth; behead again and learn what to do with the first word.

5.—Remove the first letter from an edge and leave a place of amusement; remove the next letter and you can write with it.

6.—Remove the first letter from the cost and leave a grain; behead again and leave something very cold.

7.—Remove the first letter from a shallow dish and you will be behind time; take away the next letter and it will be eaten.

Answers.—1. Stable, table, able. 2. Stone, tone, one. 3. Trace, race, ace. 4. Wheat, heat, eat. 5. Brink, rink, ink. 6. Price, rice, ice. 7. Plate, late, ate.

The Game of Teapot.

An amusing game to be played by any number is called "teapot." Let one player choose a word. The others are to guess the word. In order to do this they all ask questions which the word chooser must answer. This sounds simple. The difficulty, however, is that the chosen word must have two meanings, "roll," for instance, which may mean either the variety we enjoy for breakfast, or to turn over and over. Or it may be words spelled differently, but pronounced alike, such as "night" and "knight."

In answering the questions the player must use the meanings alternately, substituting "teapot" for the chosen word. Thus, suppose the word is "roll," the beginner might ask, "Does it belong to the vegetable kingdom?" The answer would be, "Teapot does belong to the vegetable kingdom."

Suppose the next player asks, "How would you get to the top of a high mountain?" The answer might be, "I could not teapot there." The successful guesser has the privilege of choosing the next word.

Advice For Hiking Scouts.

There are several things for boy scouts to remember when going on hikes. An old woodman gives the advice, "Never walk over anything you can walk around; never step on anything that you can step over." H. W. Gibson, in an article on the subject of hikes, advises a pace of two or three miles an hour and warns against excessive water drinking on the part of the hikers. He also advises that the scout carry only the things absolutely needed, rolled in blankets, poncho army style.—Chicago Tribune.

Table Manners.

When I am eating bread and cake
 I never smack my lips;
And milk I always try to take
 In quiet little sips.

At breakfast, luncheon and at tea
 I hold my fork just right,
For little folks should always be Exceedingly polite.

SCARCITY OF FOREIGN LACES

Embroidered Garments Much in Vogue and Soft and Silky Fabrics Favored in the Making of Expensive Pieces for Fashionable Folk.

Lingerie is, if possible, more charming than ever. For the smart trousseau it is ribbon trimmed and adorned with garlands and buckles of tiny ribbon flowers. Chiffon and silk, lace, tulle and crepe de chine are lavishly and effectively manipulated in lingerie and negligees, and the limit of daintiness seems to have been reached.

All the usual fabrics for lingerie are still employed. As far as fabrics go, there is not much that is new. One thing is noticeable about present day lingerie, especially when it is made at home—lace is not so lavishly used as it was once upon a time. The war has stopped the importation—even the manufacture—of many kinds of lace. In the lingerie one buys in the shops the difference is hardly noticeable, for probably the manufacturers had made much of the lingerie now shown before the trouble was pronounced.

Even if lace becomes scarcer and scarcer we may still have lovely lingerie, for embroidery can easily be substituted as a decoration, and net and tulle and other filmy fabrics can be used to give the desired daintiness to the garments.

Taffeta is much used for underwear, and that is not trimmed with lace. There are new pussy willow taffeta nightgowns made in the simplest manner, with a little picot finish at neck and arms. They are sleeveless Grecian in their simplicity of There are two long slits for the arm and the gown hangs in folds and lines of great beauty.

Camisoles are as attractive as they have been ever since the use of chiffon and crepe de chine for underwear began. The camisole proper has two bands of ribbon or strips of lace over the shoulders. And as this has been found wanting for some uses, a camisole with two tiny lace sleeves just at the shoulders and tops of the arms has been devised. This little garment is decidedly useful to wear under transparent blouses.

Colored lingerie is more and more worn, especially with negligees. Some in yellow crepe de chine and chiffon, with ribbons of pale violet, has lately been shown, and soft green lingerie is another novelty.

Some new combination garments are made of pink lawn. The lawn is rather bright in shade, but its brightness will doubtless fade after the first washing.

The brassiere and corset cover pictured here is of white pussy willow taffeta, boned in the front and with the side gore shaped to insure a perfect fit. It is trimmed with torchon lace with a narrow beading of pink ribbon.

KITCHEN UTENSILS.

Aluminium Vessels Usually Are Good Investments.

The sorting and examining of pots and pans should not be left to the judgment of a maid. The housewife herself should make out an intelligent list of those articles which must be replaced and add as many others as her purse will allow. Every large store has tabulated lists and suggestions for kitchen outfits, which is often of assistance, but the interested housekeeper will take pleasure in seeing for herself what new things are put upon the market.

Aluminium ware looks so bright and attractive that every one covets it for her own. It is about twice as expensive as enameled ware, but has many times the wearing qualities and neither cracks nor burns, so a good suggestion is to buy one or several pieces at a time, if economy so demands, and thus gradually get together an assortment.

It looks attractive, gleaming upon the shelves, as did the lovely pewter of olden days. Aluminium does not easily become discolored, but when the alkali in water does turn it dark a few crystals of oxalic acid dropped into boiling water, will soon make it as bright as ever.

The Height of Delight for a Mite!

Not What It Was For.

When Miss Julia Bryant, daughter of William Cullen Bryant, was a little child, an aged lady, who was for a time a neighbor of the poet and his family, had been shown into the parlor of the house, where she was making her first call. She found the small Julia seated on the floor with an illustrated volume of Milton in her lap. Although she knew, of course, that it must be the artist, not the author, in whom at that early age the child was interested, she asked genially by way of beginning an acquaintance.

"Reading poetry already, little girl?"

Julia looked up and regarded her gravely. Then she explained, with an air of politely correcting inexcusable ignorance:

"People don't read poetry. Papas write poetry, and mammas sing poetry, and little girls learn to say poetry, but nobody reads poetry. That isn't what it's for."

Legal English.

The circumlocution of legal documents is the penalty of having a bilingual language and descends to us from those countries when the English and the Normans were slowly amalgamating into one people. So the two races, in the market place or in social converse, to make their meaning clearer, joined a French word to an English or vice versa. That is why in the prayer book words so often run in couples: "Humble and lowly," "acknowledge and confess," "assemble and meet together." The English was for the English, the Norman-French for the French. Chaucer is a great user of such bilingual phrases: "Hunting and venereye," "wright and carpenter," "care and heed." And that is whence lawyers get such talk as "aid and abet," "will and testament" and "use and wont."—London Opinion.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST EXPOSITION

The Wonders of the Universe, Displayed in Their Natural State Are Interestingly Described by The Review's Special Correspondent --- Canada's Part

San Francisco, March 29.—It was a happy inspiration that led General Fremont to name the entrance to San Francisco bay "Golden Gate," for it has made it famous all over the world, and it is quite appropriate that our magic Exposition City—so like an Arabian Night's dream — should spring to life within sight of its matchless beauty. Thus it lies on the southern shore of San Francisco Bay, just inside the Gate, covering 635 acres of ground, its area two and one-half miles in length by an average of one half mile in width. On each flank are Government fortifications, Fort Mason to the east, the Presidis to the west. Across the sweep of water rise the foothills of fair Marin County, with the majestic peek of Mt. Tamalpais piercing the clouds. Out in the bay lie the islands of Alcatraz and Yerba Buena, the former used as a military prison, the latter as a base of the Naval School. A more beautiful site could not have been selected, nor one more convenient, a twenty-minute car-ride taking one to the centre of the business district.

The basic color of the buildings is a warm ivory, a substitute for the lovely Teavertine stone made famous by the Roman Forum. Paul Danivelle, who built the Pennsylvania Railroad station in New York of this composition, is the originator of it, and has just been presented with a bronze plaque commemorative of his achievement. He came from the East to personally superintend the work. Upon this foundation the American colorist, Jules Guerin, built up his wonderful color scheme that, with the imitation Travertine, distinguishes this Exposition from all others. Eight shades were selected, ranging from the tender green of the dimpling hills to the rosy glow of the sun that sets so gorgeously over the Golden Gate. Not painted on are these colors but mixed with composition so that rain cannot wash them off nor time destroy them.

It has been a colossal undertaking. Over four hundred homes, stores and other structures were purchased outright and razed to make the site. Hundreds of acres of land toward the bay were filled in, a sea-wall built and a yacht harbor formed for the aquatic events of the International competitions. San Francisco contributed $12,500,000 of the $50,000,000 cost of the Exposition, and the sum total does not include the amount expended by the 80,000 individual exhibitors.

Exhibit Palaces.

There are eleven exhibit palaces, viz.: Fine Arts, Food Products, Horticulture, Social Economy and Education, Liberal Arts, Agriculture, Transportation, Manufactures, Varied Industries, Mines and Metallurgy and Machinery. In addition to these there are twenty-two foreign pavilions of twenty-eight buildings representing the States and territories of the United States. For music there is Festival Hall which architecturally resembles the Theatre Beaux Arts in Paris. Its auditorium seats three thousand people and its $60,000 organ, the second largest in America, and the seventh largest in the world, will be manipulated by the finest organists throughout the Exposition, notably the great Lemare of London, Clarence Eddy and others of international renown. In this hall will also be held symphony and vocal concerts of the first rank.

The eleven exhibit palaces cover a total floor area of one hundred and ten acres, and to see the whole of the exhibits it would be necessary to walk forty-seven miles of aisles. The Machinery Palace is the largest frame building in the world, having a measurement of 968 feet by 368. More than 8,000,000 board feet of lumber were used in this building and in it the only indoor aeroplane flight that has ever been made was successfully accomplished. Half of the space is used by foreign and half by domestic exhibitors.

Like the Machinery Hall, the Palace of Agriculture covers eight acres, and as Canada is an agricultural country we will give some interesting facts concerning this building. In the first place never before in the history of expositions has there been so much space allowed for this particular subject and the structure was built at a cost of $625,610. In addition to the area mentioned three acres are devoted outside the building to the display of the heavier articles or agriculture, sixty-five acres to the live-stock section, and four acres of floor space to food products, an allied industry, in the beautiful Palace of Food Products.

A Canadian Farm.

One of the exhibits is a panoramic booth with a revolving dome showing an American farm during each of the four seasons, its miniature buildings and operating machinery blending perfectly with the painted background after the method used in the Canadian building. In fact the painted panoramic background allied to the reproduction in miniature of houses and lands is used very largely throughout the Exposition. At one time the idea was used exclusively for battle cycloramas but in its development it has proven useful for general exhibition purposes.

In this particular exhibit the spring scene shows an oil tractor hauling a power plough. By an electrical device the light fades and a little headlight on the tractor illuminates the course to show that plowing can be done day or night. An irrigation system is also shown at work. In the summer scene a tractor hauls grain binders through a field and an engine raises water from a creek sending it through pipes to an orchard. The orchard itself reveals a spraying outfit with two men operating compressed air. The autumn is the prettiest scene of all, quite homey in fact, for the farmer's wife is rocking the baby on the porch, the boys are playing tennis, the milk cans are starting for town and the vegetable wagon following on behind. Winter shows different devices for lightening the labor of the farm and the whole exhibit is instructive and delightful.

The State of Washington also has a miniature farm and besides has a shingle mill, and everything pertaining to the lumber industry of Puget Sound. Missouri has a fifty-foot corn tower and pictorial decorations in cereals.

China, Argentina and New Zealand occupy much space and Japan shows her beautiflu silks. It is safe to say that no branch of agriculture has been neglected, from economic phases of experimental stations to the presentation of the most advanced and up-to-date implements.

The Live Stock Exhibit at the west end of the grounds, is housed in barns surrounding a stadium so that they may pass directly to it when necessary. Seven enormous silos are provided for the care of the animals. Model drinking troughs are also installed and the barns themselves form a working exhibit. Near by is the Poultry Exhibit, and an international egg-laying contest is to take place. There will also be Polo Tournaments, cavalry events, field trials for dogs, sheep-shearing contests, and harness meets, prize money being provided for each and all.

Palace of Horticulture.

The Palace of Horticulture is the most ornate of the palaces and has the biggest glass dome in the world —185 feet in height with a diameter of 152 feet. Two hundred tons of steel were used in the construction of this wonderful hemisphere, which is a duplicate (enlarged) of the Mosque of Ahmed I. in Constantinople. It has eight smaller domes or half domes, and contains the choicest flowers and palms that the world can produce.

The Palace of Transportation has four great divisions, navigation, auto transportation, air-craft and railway equipment from its earliest stages to its latest developments. Every method of locomotion is on display. It is an immense building. Forty-five hundred piles, which if placed end to end would be forty miles long, were used under it and to study the aerial chart—placed in the rotunda—is an education in itself.

The Palace of Manufactures has exhibit space allotted to four thousand exhibitors and all these palaces alike have their streets and avenues indicated by signs as in towns or cities. The Palace of Varied Industries has a very beautiful main entrance it being an adaptation of the great portal of the hospice of Santa Cruz, at Toledo, Spain. Within are displays of cutlery, jewellery, metal work, glass, porcelain, wood, leather, paper, marble, bronze and multitudinous other things. One very interesting feature, calculated to bring down the price of furniture, is an exhibit of handsome packing-case furniture, showing what may be evolved from common wooden boxes.

The Palace of Food Products is always crowded by interesting housewives, and a small fortune—or shall we say a large one—is given away in samples day by day. Here may be seen a ninety-barrel mill in operation, producing the finest wheat flour. There are also laboratories to show the character of wheat and its best use. The Viticultural Association has a booth to show the development of its industry and foreign nations have assembled their delicacies to tempt the passer-by. Everything, in fact, pertaining to food may be studied here with profit.

The Palace of Liberal Arts is another place of absorbing interest to the average individual. Here may be seen all that relates to books and the various printing processes; the manufacture of paper, photography, a wonderful display of musical instruments and surgical appliances, a Chinese exhibit of telescopic and astronomical instruments, and best of all, priceless costumes in the theatrical section, many of them of great age or with associations of great people in the theatrical profession that make them very valuable to lovers of antiquity.

The Palace of Education and Social Economy is splendidly arranged. Each State has specialized its distinctive feature. Thus New York demonstrates the worth of centralized control. Wisconsin the value of motion pictures in teaching certain branches. It is the first State to incorporate them in its course of study. Oregon emphasizes rural schools and California points to its university extention work. The child welfare or child labor displays are also in this building. Motion pictures play an important part in the Exposition there being seventy-seven theatres showing them in connection with the various buildings.

Model Post Office.

The Palace of Mines and Metallurgy contains the U. S. Government exhibits. Here may be seen the operations of the mint, and a model post office; where one may write a letter, drop it in a mail chute and stand on a little balcony to watch it go through all the operations of collection, stamping, sacking, and the final consignment into a waiting automobile which takes it to the train. One may also receive mail there by having it addressed to the model post office, P. P. T. Exposition. If located at the Inside Inn on the grounds it will be delivered by carrier, or one can rent a lock-box or get it at the general delivery window. Fifty clerks and attendants are employed and it is a very practical exhibit. Everything possible is of steel, and electricity is the motive power for the handling of the mail. Parcels also are delivered to one on the grounds by an automobile truck. Nothing seems to have been forgotten.

One company in this building — a piano concern — houses its exhibit in a booth which is a replica of the beautiful Taj Mahal in India. A pipe organ is also shown with cut-away sections to permit study of its inferior workings. But the greatest novelty is a model mine, or rather, an aggregation of various parts from ten mines, located in Nevada, Dakota, Idaho, Arizona, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Washington, Kentucky and Wyoming, radium also being part of the exhibit. One sees the miner at work digging coal or gold, or copper in a very realistic manner. The tunnels and drifts extend over an area two hundred by three hundred feet, the crude material being hauled by electric railway cars. There is also a demonstration twice a day of the mine rescue work. An explosion takes place, a seemingly-wounded man is brought out, and first aid given so seriously that many have supposed they were seeing the real thing.

With regard to Government displays the Palace of Machinery has those which portrays the manufacture of arms and armament, and all of the mechanical and technical side of army and navy operations. It has also an exhibit of the lighthouse department and a miniature model of a naval drydock. We found a crowd of people around a demonstration of mine-laying. In a big tank of water the mines were placed and over them sailed a supposed battleship. Then came an explosion, the little vessel turned over on its side and one got a very fair idea—aided by the demonstrator's lecture — of the serious facts connected with this harrowing feature of modern warfare.

Largest Color Press.

In the machinery building is also the largest color press ever made, known as the Pancoast Universal-Unit Press. Its length is forty-eight feet, its height twelve feet two inches and its breadth nine feet. An electrical motor of 80 horse-power is necessary to operate it. It has an hourly capacity of 40,000 copies of a 48-page paper. A total of three and a half tons of paper is loaded on the press at one time. The San Francisco Examiner's mammoth Sunday edition is printed by it, and it is expected that the copies throughout the Exposition will run up to 250,000. Those in charge point out that an edition of 250,000 copies of the ordinary size of 80 pages, requires more than 3,400 miles of paper, one page wide. This strip of paper, or "web," as it is known, printed on both sides, would reach from the Pacific to the Atlantic. Set up the weight of the press is 130 tons, and it is the joint exhibit of the San Francisco Examiner and the press builders, R. Hoe & Co., of New York and London. The Palaces of Machinery and Mines are of absorbing interest. To refer once more to the latter we would mention that we saw there a column of bituminous fuel thirty feet in height and weighing 26,265 lbs. Several coal seams in Utah approximately in thickness the height of this column.

Palace of Fine Arts.

The Palace of Fine Arts is rated the finest piece of architecture on the grounds, and San Francisco claims its architect, Bernard H. Maybeck, for her own although we understand he is English by birth. The building is curved in shape with colonnaded swings extending east and west a great domed rotunda in the centre and close to the water's edge an altar with an attendance goddess guarding the flame of inspiration. It faces a beautiful lagoon in which its graceful columns are reflected making, either by day or by night, the most wondrous picture of all.

In this magnificent building are one hundred and two steel-walled exhibit galleries. Twenty-five of these have been allotted to foreign nations and fifteen to individual artists of renown of different nationalities. Whistler will have a room—the National Gallery, London, is being denuded of his best pictures for this purpose—and the British exhibit in its entirety is already on its way, coming on the "Jason," the collier that carried the Christmas gifts to the children of war-stricken Europe. Two collections intended for foreign exhibits will be special features. Those pictures gathered for the triennial fine arts' exhibit at Venice, which had to be postponed because of the war, and the collection in the galleries of the White City Exposition in London which was closed and turned into barracks for the colonial troops. All the exhibits of the belligerent nations are due on the "Janon," other countries sending their's by their own vessels.

ROLLING UP AUSTRIANS

Russians Now Sweeping Across the Carpathians

LONDON, March 29. — The Russians are sweeping across the Carpathians, the Austrians in full retreat. In Bukowina the fighting is more furious, many of the enemy being swept away in the swift waters of the flooded Pruth.

An unofficial despatch from Petrograd says:

The Russian armies are well over the Galician line into Hungary.

Reinforced and stimulated by the prestige of victory, the forces of the Czar have swept the Austrians ahead of them since March 23, until they have advanced 28 miles south and east of the Dukla Pass into the Hungarian county of Saros, and south of a line between Lupkow Pass and Uszok they have gained sixteen miles.

The London Daily Telegraph's Petrograd correspondent says:

In the passage through the Carpathian hills substantial progress has been made by the Russians in the direction of Bartfeld and Czernowitz, also in the region of Baligrod and Lutowiska.

It is obvious from the number of captives made during the past fortnight that the Austrian army is rapidly wearing away, and that the process is now one of disintegration rather than of attrition. During the last two weeks captures of Austrians, apart from those taken upon the capitulation of Permysl, have averaged at least 3,000 daily.

The Morning Post correspondent at Petrograd cables:

The Russian advance in the Carpathians is along a sixty-mile front, between the region of Bartfeld and Baligrod. The Austrians are in retreat, wasting the country as they retire. The village of Zboro, which before leaving they set afire, is only six miles north of Bartfeld, the railhead of a single line, which twenty-five miles farther south joins the main line for Budapest.

The Morning Post correspondent at Bucharest cables:

The battles in Bukowina are assuming a more violent character

WAS CHARGED WITH ASSAULTING WIFE

A family row was aired in Police Court today, in which Richard Parnell was charged with assaulting his wife. He said he was guilty in a sense, but that he had not struck her. His wife said her husband was good to her except when drunk and then he abused her and called her names. Two or three drinks seemed to have a very evil effect upon him.

Magistrate Dumble, gave the accused the worst tongue threshing he probably ever received, and suspended judgment for one month in which to redeem his past conduct. If he acted decently and proved himself a man he would impose as light a fine as consistent with justice.

From 10 o'clock yesterday morning to one o'clock an artillery duel raged over the plains of Mahala and Racancea, between Ostritza and Bojan. The waters of the Pruth are carrying away the bodies of soldiers who attempted to cross. The Russians will wait for the Pruth to subside before initiating operations against Czernowitz. The population of Bukowina suffers so much from hunger and continual change of regime that a revolution is feared.

Gen. Kusmanek, the captured Austrian commander of Permysl, has arrived at Kieff. His relations with his captors are courteous, and he converses with them in French.

The activity of the Russian Grodno army prevents Von Hindenburg from developing definite action. His forces in the north, his eighth, ninth and tenth armies, have been replenished, but the quality of the new infantry is a great disappointment to the German staff. According to the disposition of his troops, he evidently intends to undertake shock tactics from the North Poland frontier, but days pass without any serious battle. Possibly the Germans will content themselves with attempting to protect East Prussia while the grain crops are being sowed.

According to information from Sebastopol, the Turkish cruiser Breslau has been irreparably damaged by a mine in the Black Sea at the entrance to the Bosphorus. Her wireless installation has been transferred to the Hamidiah.

FRENCH TOOK KEY POSITION

Latest Capture Was an Important Victory

LONDON, March 29. — The most important news from the western front during the week end has been the announcement of the capture by the French of the German positions at Hartsmnans-Weilerkopf after long and desperate fighting.

Owing to the great length of front and the dominating interest of the military situation on the extreme left it is likely that importance of the victory obtained during the last few days in Haute Alsace will be overlooked in England. The capture of the height of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, which was definitely established yesterday, is extremely valuable. For many months this strategical position has been the scene of desperate fighting. Commanding the whole district of Thann, Cernay and Steinbach, the French and German troops have struggled repeatedly for its possession and the tide of battle has ebbed and flowed upon its spurs and crests leaving in its wake awful tolls of dead and wounded. It is here that many of the most heroic exploits of French soldiers have been achieved, for the character of fighting it allowed more scope for individual gallantry and personal craft of war than the siege work of the entrenched positions. It is to the Alpine Chasseurs, the blue devils of France as they are called, because of their blue bonnets and hunters' dress, that the success of the final attack last week is due.

Last Tuesday, after a tremendous artillery fire, they assaulted and took the first line of the enemy's position in a splendid rush, regardless of their own losses. On the following day they secured the second line and climbed higher towards the summit in spite of a stubborn defence of the enemy, who fought with great courage and swept the hillside with devastating fire. Hand-to-hand fighting took place for several hours, but the "blue devils" had the best of it and made many prisoners.

The great assault, however, was still to come. On the crest of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, 1,125 metres above the plain, a great body of German troops belonging to the famous Fifteenth Corps, held ground with a formidable number of guns, and every method of German warfare was used to thrust back those blue bonnets surging up the ridges. Hand grenades were hurled down from the heights, and burning liquid came in streams from trenches dug in the hillsides. Many Chasseurs were badly burned, though they continued to fight with charred clothes. The order had been given to take the hill at all costs, and they behaved during these last three days with splendid devotion, which, I am told, will be fully recognized in the official despatch narrating one of the most heroic chapters in this war.

The French tri-color now floats on the summit of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf and Saturday the Alpines swarmed forward to the flank of the hill on the northeast and southeast, dislodging the enemy from its last grip on the stronghold which is the natural keep of the broad plain below. It is a victory which gives the French army a secure position in this part of the front, and proves the spirit of the French offensive, which soon will be revealed all along the line.

Eleven thousand German dead have been taken from the trenches won by the French during 24 days of fighting in the Champagne country. The German losses in killed, in prisoners, and in wounded are estimated by the French military authorities at 50,000. The German wastage, they say, has been two to one compared with the French losses, because the Germans would try to regain lost ground by counter-attacks, repeated again and again, with obstinate courage.

For nearly a month now the French, their officers declare, by the superiority of their artillery, of both large and small calibre, and by a certain irresistible spirit, have, day by day, gained ground sometimes a few hundred yards of trenches; on other days a mile of frontage of from three to 500 yards deeps.

REGENERATE CONDITIONS AT HOME BEFORE ASKING PEOPLE TO COME HERE

With the Dominion House in committee of supply, Mr. J. H. Burnham followed Mr. W. M. Martin, who said in part:

I think there is no question that our great success in the future will depend upon whether we have or have not a successful body of farmers and proper conditions surrounding those farmers. It is the duty not only of the Dominion Government but of the Provincial Government and of our municipal institutions to attempt to make conditions on the farm more pleasing to the people and thereby increase the production on our farms. If the Department of Immigration should not attempt to bring in any but agriculturists, it would be well advised and its policy would be in the interests of the country.

MR. BURNHAM: We took evidence for two years upon this very question before the Old Age Pension Committee. We had people there from all over Canada, people in every walk of life. They were sworn and they gave their evidence absolutely without prejudice. I think that if the hon. gentleman will peruse that testimony he will find out largely why it is that the times seem so out of joint. It is true there is a degree of glamour about life in the city — not in Montreal, I should judge by what is stated by the hon. member for Bonaventure (Mr. Marcil)——

MR. MARCIL: In Peterborough.

MR. BURNHAM—But people like to be together where they can enjoy the moving picture shows, the advantage of the churches, the schools, and so on. But the fact of the matter is that life in the country—so the testimony shows—is such a disjointed, unorganized, unreliable sort of affair that the people do not really know what to make of it. The consequence is that when an attempt is made to move from the city to the country the people find they are up against hostile conditions. There is a chilly reception on the part of the people of the country for the urban settler. A man is easily swallowed up when he goes into the city from the country, but it is very hard for him to be swallowed up when he goes from the city to the country. The upshot of it all undoubtedly will be that strenuous conditions such as are spoken of by the hon. member for Bonaventure as existing in Montreal will compel the Government to devise some means of distributing the population of the country with advantage to themselves and advantage to the state. To my mind it is an absolutely senseless proposition to keep on asking people to come in here from outside when we are making no attempt to regulate conditions at home. I cannot understand — no doubt it is largely due to my limited understanding — why we should allow these conditions to continue. This country shows the extraordinary condition of tens of thousands of people in the bread line, roaming you may say through the purlieus of the cities in quest of work or food, and in a terrible condition of both body and mind and with no prospect for the future. These conditions, of course, may be said to have been brought about by fifteen years of misrule. They are not the product of a day; all must admit that.

As one of those who sat on the Old Age Pensions Committee, I deem it my duty to express the opinion that something ought to be done; that it is entirely improper to ignore the conditions revealed by the evidence taken before that committee at considerable expense. I must protest against any attempt to bring people in from outside until such time as we reconstruct the conditions within our country. Perhaps it is due to the fact that a momentous war is taking place, but conditions are rapidly becoming very serious in Canada. I do not think we are humane; I do not think we display that loving kindness which we certainly ought to display. Economic considerations are our daily care, but solicitude for the people is not; we are prepared to let them go to the flock. I wish in my humble way to call attention to this fact. The situation must be dealt with; the people cannot and must not be ignored. This movement from the city to the country must be carried on with some degree of skill and promptitude. The continuance of the present system of calling people from all over the world to come to our country, at considerable expense to ourselves, while at the same time not extending a brass farthing for the benefit of our own people in that respect, is something that is quite beyond me.

COL. FARQUHAR IS BURIED BY PRINCESS PATS.

Funeral of Late Commander Was Shelled by the Germans

LONDON, March 29.—Col. Farquhar was buried in a little churchyard just a short distance behind the battlefront. The entire Princess Pats Regiment was relieved from duty in the trenches to attend the funeral, which took place under heavy shell fire. Col. Farquhar's body was placed beside that of Captain Newton and other Patricia officers. Five officers of the headquarters staff and the officer commanding the division paid tribute to the honored dead. A memorial service was held Saturday in St. Mary's Church, Barrington road. Six wounded officers, just out of the hospital, and thirty men of the Patricias attended.

Col. Farquahar was shot in the chest by a stray bullet while getting through barbed wire entanglements. He suffered much pain and lived three hours. No successor has yet been appointed.

U.S. SUBMARINE NOW LOCATED

HONOLULU, March 29.—The submerged submarine F-4 has been located outside the harbor, it was announced yesterday. Portions of the superstructure have been brought to the surface. The dredge California will shift moorings, tugs will criss-cross in all directions, and an attempt will be made to lift the submarine.

HEAVY BOMBARDMENT IS CONTINUED BY WARSHIPS

German Officers Are Rushing Long Range Guns to Smyrna —Constantinople is Resigned to its Fate and Turkish Government is Taking Steps to Prevent Massacres.

LONDON, March 29. — A cable from Tenedos says: "Operations have been recommenced in the Dardanelles by the allied fleets, and heavy firing is now proceeding in the straits. Judging by the firing heard yesterday morning, Gallipoli Peninsula is being heavily bombarded. The weather is perfect. British seaplanes have been making daily reconnaissances when the ships have not been engaged, and occasionally German aeroplanes are also seen.

"Trawlers continued their mine sweeping operations in the straits of the Dardanelles, protected by battleships," says Reuter's Tenedos correspondent, telegraphing Sunday.

"The Turks at Kilid Bahr opened fire on them but were bombarded and promptly silenced. Between 8 and 12 o'clock yesterday morning heavy firing was heard from the direction of Saros. The result of the fire is not known. Allied aeroplanes were scouting again yesterday."

The Athens' correspondent of the Havas Agency, of Paris, in a despatch dated Saturday says:

"Mine dragging in the Dardanelles continued yesterday. In fact, it was announced that the mine zone had been cleared as far as the city of Dardanelles. The weather is now clear.

"A despatch from Vourlah, Asia Minor, says that long range cannon, manned by German officers, have been sent from Constantinople to Smyrna."

Upon the success of these operations depends not only the fate of Turkey, but probably the future policy of the Balkan States, and Italy. In Italy big demonstrations were held yesterday calling upon the Government to take action to realize the ambitions of the country; while in the Balkan capitals the diplomats of the allied nations are busily engaged in an endeavor to reorganize the Balkan League and insure the simultaneous intervention of the Balkan States on the side of the allies. Before this can be done, Serbia must be induced to make concessions to Bulgaria in that part of Macedonia which fell to her after the last Balkan war.

The Germans are also active in Sofia and are trying to induce Bulgaria, by the cession of part of European Turkey, to remain neutral.

A special courier arrived at Constanza yesterday bringing news from Constantinople up to Wednesday afternoon. The city is calm, expectant and resigned to the inevitable. The Government is preparing the inhabitants for the arrival of the allied fleet. With this end in view, proclamations have been posted in various parts of Pera and in the mosques of Stamboul announcing that the warships of France and Britain may shortly arrive in the Bosphorus.

The proclamation continues:

"It is simply a question of opening up the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus to the free passage for foreign warships, which the Sultan had hitherto refused and has no national or political significance."

The population is urged to remain calm, not to resort to any acts of violence and is assured that after a stay of three or four weeks the allied fleet will sail away, being content with a simple naval demonstration.

The phrasing of the proclamation would almost make it appear that the forthcoming visit of the allied fleet is something in the nature of a friendly call, to which the Turkish Government looks forward to with the keenest delight. The riff-raff of the capital has been rounded up and dumped into concentration camps in Anatolia to prevent undesirable elements running amuck and looting when the shadow of the sword creeps closer to Stamboul. The large Greek population in the Phanar district, washed by the waters of the Golden Horn, is in a state bordering on terror.

The Turkish fleet is practically immobilized and in want of coal. The Breslau, however, is active, and returned to the Bosphorus on Saturday night after a cruise in the Black Sea. The captain declared he was unable to continue the cruise owing to the poor steaming quality of the coal in his bunkers. A desperate effort is being made to patch up the Goeben, and the Germans are working night and day on the injured vessel, which is now in the bay near the Bosphorus, and close to Therapia.

The Goeben is as good as lost, for it is considered impossible to effect repairs in time for the vessel to help dispute the passage of the allied fleet through the Sea of Marmora. Two submarines, brought overland in sections, are now in the arsenal at the Gold Horn, being put together by German engineers, but are unable to put to sea owing to the lack of torpedoes and other essential parts.

THREE GERMAN SHIPS SUNK

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 29. —(Via London.)—The loss in the Baltic of three German steamers, the Bavaria, the Germania and the Koenigsberg, all laden with iron ore, is announced in the newspaper Social Demokraten.

The Bavaria went down March 15 with her entire crew. The cause of her sinking is not revealed. No details of the destruction of the other vessels are given.

SERVICES FOR HOLY WEEK IN ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCHES

The present week, known in the Catholic Church as Holy Week, is one of the most solemn periods in the year. In all the Catholic Churches of the city the various Holy Week services will be held. This year the first Friday of the month is Good Friday and Holy Communion cannot be received. Those who are in the habit of receiving Communion on the first Friday of each month for nine consecutive Fridays will not have to begin again in May as theologians of the Catholic Church are of the opinion that when Good Friday comes on a first Good Friday it will not be considered a break in the receiving of Communion on nine first Fridays. Thus if one has received Communion on four first Fridays up to the present, the one in May will count as the fifth.

The bells in the three churches will be rung at the Gloria of the Mass on Thursday and not again until the Gloria of the Mass on Saturday. Wednesday, Friday and Saturday will be days of fast and abstinence.

The following is a complete list of the various ceremonies in all of the three churches:

St. Peter's Cathedral.

Monday—Masses 7 and 8 a.m.

Tuesday—Masses 7 and 8 a.m.

Wednesday—Masses 7 and 8 a.m. Confessions 2 to 5 p.m. and from 7 p.m. till all are heard. Devotions 7.30 p.m.

Thursday—Pontificial High Mass celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Brien at 8 o'clock during which the holy oils to be used in the administration of the Sacraments and other solemn ceremonies of the Catholic Church during the year will be blessed. The Host for the Mass of the Pre-Sanctified on Good Friday will be consecrated and after the High Mass will be borne in procession to the repository where it will remain exposed all day. Holy Hour 7.30 to 8.30 p.m.

Friday—Aderation of the Cross at 9 a.m. followed by the procession carrying the Sacred Host from the repository to the altar. Mass of the Pre-Sanctified. Way of the Cross 3 p.m. Way of the Cross and sermon on the Passion of Christ at 7.30 p.m.

Saturday—Blessing of Easter and baptismal water also the paschal candle commences at 7 a.m. Mass at 8 a.m., followed by the distribution of Easter water. Confessions 2 to 5 and from 7 to 10 p.m.

Sunday—Masses at 8 and 10.30 a.m. Vespers 7 p.m. The Pope's blessing and plenary indulgence will be given by Bishop O'Brien after the 8 o'clock Mass.

AGED FARMER LOSES HIS LIFE

TORONTO, March 29. — William Maginn, one of the oldest settlers on the east side of York Township, on the town line between York and Scarboro, early Saturday morning was burned to death. The neighbors noticed the house on fire at 6 o'clock, but it was not until after 8 o'clock that the flames were got under control, or, rather, until they had practically burned themselves out. A search was made all over for Mr. Maginn, and about noon his body was found in his bedroom, where he had been suffocated by the smoke, but not very badly burnt by the flames. He was over 80 years of age, and occupied the front part of the house, the rear portion being occupied by the family of his nephew, who worked the farm.

Mr. Maginn had been in failing health for some time and had a stroke not long ago. He retired Friday night and it is believed started a fire in the stove in his chamber,

FOUR MILLIONS

Supplementary Estimates Submitted by Finance Minister

OTTAWA, March 29.—The supplementary estimates submitted to the House by the Finance Minister Saturday call for an expenditure of $4,364,541. A further appropriation of $129,190 is asked for militia and defence, $350,000 for the Hudson Bay Railway, $50,000 for motor service to patrol the northern waters of Canada, and $10,000 additional to fight a smallpox epidemic among the Indians.

The House considered a minor amendment to the War Revenue Bill to prevent vexatious prosecutions by eliminating the portion under which any person might take proceedings to impose the penalties provided by the act. In reference to the placing of an additional stamp on international letters on which the maximum charge under the convention was five cents, Mr. White stated the Postoffice Department had communicated with the International Bureau at Berne, and ascertained that such letters could not be subject to an additional charge. The bill passed as amended.

MRS. WISENEIGHBOUR says:

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibreware Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:

"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

MANY DEATHS ARE RECORDED

Casualties Show Large Number of "Killed in Action"

OTTAWA, March 29.—The casualties issued by the Militia Department early last evening are as follows:

American Ships Released.

CHICAGO, March 28. — A special cablegram to The Chicago Daily News from London, Eng., Saturday says: "An understanding has been reached between the British and American Governments by which the ships Ruby and Raven, detained at the Downs, off the southeast coast of England, will be released and permitted to proceed with their cargoes of packing house products to Rotterdam to-day.

Lady Paget's Death Denied.

WASHINGTON, March 29. — The British embassy here received a message from the Foreign Office in London denying the report that Lady Paget had died at Uskub, Serbia, where she was serving with a red cross hospital unit. "No truth whatever in the report," the message said. Latest news from her was good.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 27.—Notwithstanding indications that considerable export business was being done under cover, bears ruled wheat today the greater part of the time. Intervention by Italy and other heretofore neutral powers seemed to have approached a little closer, and the market finished nervous at 1-8c to 1 1-8c decline. Other staples, too, all showed losses, corn 3-8c to 1-2c, oats a shade to 1 1-8c and provisions 5c to 15c.

Some complaints of Hessian fly damage to wheat were received from Illinois, Missouri and Indiana, but the trade on the whole was in no mood to take kindly to crop damage reports. The outlook for a good-sized decrease in the visible supply on Monday was also to a great extent ignored.

Corn showed heaviness thruout the session. Commission houses were persistent sellers, influenced by the fine weather and large stocks and by the weakness of cables.

Oats were unloaded quite freely. Seeding conditions had improved and demand for shippers slackened.

Liberal estimates of hog arrivals next week made provisions sag, despite steadiness at the start. Sympathy with the course of grain seemed also to cut a figure.

MUCH TO DO YET.

Government Will Not Prorogue House Till Inquiries End.

OTTAWA, March 29.—Uncertainty and contradictory reports characterize the Parliamentary situation. The Government has given formal notice of a motion for the usual Easter adjournment, but there is still talk of prorogation on Wednesday. It is authoritatively announced, however, that the House will not be prorogued until the investigations now under way are concluded. The boots committee have still 17 witnesses to examine, and the public accounts commission has subpoenaed witnesses to appear on Tuesday, including T. A. Russell, of Toronto.

The testimony taken before the public accounts committee Saturday showed that efforts had been made to influence Col. Hurdman of the Militia Department for the benefit of an Ottawa jeweler who had binoculars to sell, and for a Milwaukee motor company that desired to sell trucks to the Government. No testimony, however, directly incriminated any official of the Militia Department.

Austrian Blockade Planned.

ATHENS, March 29.—In the Austrian naval yards all the usual work is being suspended. Men are working on about twenty up-to-date submarines, with which it is intended to blockade the Mediterranean.

THE WORLD'S

embroideries—needle-paintings they are called—on which artists have worked for years with colored threads. The entire and priceless collection of the European Matsuhits—father of Japan's present ruler—has been sent, a great privilege, as these treasures have never before been exhibited to strangers.

Tower of Jewels.

The dominating feature of the Exposition is the Tower of Jewels, 435 feet in height with 135,000 specially cut prisms (Austrian workmanship), in the colors of the ruby, emerald, topay, diamond, and other precious stones. The tower has seven levels of diminishing area with sculptured embellishments, and magnificent as it is beneath the rays of the sun, it is far more resplendent by night when 200 concealed searchlights focus their rays upon it.

The many conventions to be held during the Exposition year will be housed outside the grounds in the new civic auditorium built for the purpose at the cost of $1,200,000. Its main hall seats 77,000 people and the great organ in Festival Hall will be installed there when the Exposition is over.

There is an up-to-date hotel within the grounds called "The Inside Inn," a building 350 feet square, of imitation Travertine like the Exposition palaces and containing 1,100 rooms. Its main front has recessed loggies like those of the Chateau Blois in France. Its roof is of Spanish tiles and it occupies the highest point in the grounds whence an entrancing view may be seen. Twenty-two universities are represented in the ranks of the Exposition guides, among whom are the speakers of seven different languages, including Chinese. These men do not accept tips. There is a fixed tariff and anything above is declined—a most exemplary rule.

Of the foreign and state buildings, the glorious courts and wonderful lighting we will write in our next article. 'Ere closing this, however, we must refer to the shadow that has fallen upon us in the terrible death of America's "King of the Air," Lincoln Beachey.

Beachey's Death.

The intrepid bird-man had been engaged by the management for a period of ten weeks. Hitherto he had used a biplane, but, desirous of emulating the daring Frenchman, Pegoud, he ventured this time in a monoplane. His first flight accomplished, he went up again. Once more he went through his spectacular 'looping the loop" and then, as he straightened out for the perpendicular dive to the green, the single wing of the Taube was unable to bear the pressure and he plunged to his death. It was his tenth anniversary as a birdman and a gold medal would have been presented to him that day—the 14th—only that it was not ready. His mother is to have it. Alas, poor mother! In place of her boy—he was but twenty-eight—she will have a lifeless bit of gold.

Only the week before we had seen him fly. Ten times he looped the loop, so that we saw his name—printed on the uppermost wing of his biplane—repeatedly in the sky. Like a bird he soared, starting with his hands off the steering gear, and alighting like a bit of thistle-down, so easily and gracefully did he move. We mourned the danger of it and wished he would confine himself to the straight flying. Down the garden he walked afterwards, so modestly, so free from self-consciousness that he won—as he ever did—the hearts as well as the plaudits of the people, and there were 50,000 present. Never can we look at that green again without thinking of the gallant, compact little figure and the pleasant, smiling face.

The Mayor of San Francisco and President Moore were among the honorary pall-bearers at poor Beachey's funeral and the Legislature passed resolutions of appreciation of his valuable services in developing the heavier-than-air machine. There is a growing sentiment, however, that aviators should be reserved for government service on salary or not be compelled to fly for the entertainment of the public. Nine have gone to their death imitating Beachey in his aerial evolutions, one only this week and it is deplorable. The great aviator was so wholly admirable in his life and character that he is mourned throughout the country. A monument to his memory will be erected in Golden Gate Park.

Beachey was the first man to circle the Capitol in Washington, but he stated himself that his most exciting adventure was in flying over Niagara Falls in June, 1911. He went over the lower Niagara, it is said, and then over the American Falls. Circling back from Canada, he dipped into the gorge and sailed under the giant arch of the lower ridge. He then continued almost to the whirlpool rapids, clearing the water by not more than thirty feet.

Word of another death has come to use that of Jean Louis Bourgeois, one of the designers of the Horticultural Building. He rallied to his country in her hour of need and gave up his life for her. A grave in far-off France received his body, but his spirit surely finds a fitting expression in the lovely palace which was so largely his creation, and which he has bequeathed to the world through our international Exposition.

Truly "in the midst of life we are in death," and these things remind us "so to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." God grant that we do so!

Italy Mobilizing.

ROME, March 29.—Reports that a general mobilization order had been drafted and awaited only the signature of King Victor Emanuel were circulated in official circles of Rome Saturday. The reports were accepted as true by the interventionist press, which predicted that Italy and Roumania would enter the war simultaneously on the side of the allies.

"This will be the final phase of the war," says one newspaper. "Germany and Austria will be unable to stand against the pressure of Italian and Roumanian interference. Italy will come into her own."

Russia's Strength Untouched.

AMSTERDAM, March 29. — Prof. Vogt, a well-known German authority on Russian affairs, warns Germany in The Vorwaerts that "it will take a long time, great energy and patience and many victories to gain headway against this new Russia."

Answering the frequently heard questions as to how long Russia can fight, Prof. Vogt says: "Russia's offensive powers have hardly been touched. Her staying powers are enormous. Her army has done magnificent work, while the Russian financial and economic position has seldom been better."

SPORTING NEWS

COLLEGIATE AND MAPLE LEAFS WERE VICTORS

Before the largest crowd of the season the Collegiate basketball team succeeded in beating the Hustlers, while the Maple Leafs handed the same pill to the Beavers.

Both games were featured by low scores, neither of the teams seeming to have their eyes on the basket. In the Collegiate-Hustler game the two teams were tied for firt place in B division, so that both teams were nervous as to the outcome. This probably accounted for the low scores. Every one was watching his man through cat's eyes to see that he didn't score. For the first half the Collegiates only scored one point, while the Hustlers got six. But in the second half the Collegiate started on an ascent, both Jobbitt and Canniff getting the point column working, and crawled up on Capt. Heaslip's quintet, but it was only in the last thirty seconds of play that they caged the winning basket, making the final score Collegiate 11, Hustlers 10.

In the Maple Leaf-Beaver game the Maple Leafs, who in the past games have failed to get really started until the second half, got off to a flying start right with the whistle and didn't slacken their stride; in fact, they set a pace that Capt. Dobbin's Beavers couldn't catch up with at any stage in the game. Horsfield was the star performer of the game, scoring 12 out of the 14 points scored by his team. The first half ended 8-4 in favor of the Maple Leafs, while the final score was Maple Leafs 14, Beavers 6.

The teams:—

Maple Leafs — Dunsford, Cowan, Ellis, Horsfield, Richardson.

Beavers — Lees, Thackeray, Flowers, Gilchrist, Dobbin.

Referee, Best. Timer, Carruthers. Scorer, Lang.

Collegiate — Stuart, Jobbitt, Canniff, Eastwood, Lewis.

Hustlers — Laing, Carruthers, Jones, Lewis, Heaslip

Referee, Dobbin. Scorer, Thackeray. Timer, Lees.

PRIZE-WINNERS IN SHOOTING CONTESTS

All the prizes for the week at the Allies Rifle Parlors were keenly contested for and resulted in some very high scores being made. In the smokers' cabinet contest, John Gillespie won out with a possible score of 75 points, while Alex. Miller was a close second with 74. B. Dench of Lakefield scored 73. Messrs. Miller and E. Symes tied with 14 rats out of 15 shots and Miller won the turkey in the shoot-off with 11, while Symes made a score of 9. Miller also won the pipe with 12 birds out of 15, off hand shooting.

COMMENT — As You Like it

CHARLIE QUERRIE, writing in the Toronto News, pays the following tribute to "Nick" Carter, the famous lacrosse player who passed away last week in England:

"The death of 'Nick' Carter, the well-known lacrosse player, who died in England yesterday, a victim of the dread disease, spinal meningitis, which he contracted at Salisbury Plain while in training with the First Canadian Contingent, came as a distinct shock to his many friends in Toronto. Carter came from Elora to join 'Jimmy' Murphy's squad at Rosedale in 1906, and soon proved himself to be one of the gamest and hardest working home players who ever handled a stick. Big and strong, he was the man always selected to make the openings, and while his style may not have been spectacular, it was very effective. Carter always took a gruelling in every match, but he never displayed the 'white feather.' He never was known to hit back, and took his bumps with a smile at all times.

'Carter went to the Coast when Con. Jones made his famous raid for lacrosse talent in 1909, and he figured on the Vancouver and Westminster champion teams during the last four years.

'One of the gamest and best lacrose players I have ever had the pleasure of coming in contact with,' is 'Jimmy' Murphy's tribute to the Elora boy.

"VIC" FOWLER says he is going to have a team in the City League this summer; not a lacrosse team, but a baseball team. The outfit will be known as the Classics, and the silver-tongued orator will pilot them from the bench. We have known "Vic" to perform in various roles, but the John McGraw one is something new.

FRANK DOYLE, the well-known energetic secretary-treasurer of the O. A. L. A., has again been elected to his office by acclamation. Doyle is a Newmarket boy and one of the six brothers who have long been identified with the national game. He has been Joe Lally's right-hand man in the campaign to boom lacrosse throughout the province and will likely be elected to his present office as long as he desires to stay in the field.

LACROSSE will surely have a big season in Peterborough. The intermediate O. A. L. A. team may not be a winner, but the proposed city league will certainly educate the fans to the grand old game and will undoubtedly be instrumental in placing Peterborough prominently before the spotlight of lacrosse in a year or so.

BASEBALL entertainment will likely be in the form of a city league. Rumors state that several teams are out digging up material; and, in our mind, an organization meeting would be quite in order.

WEDNESDAY sees the opening of the Indoor Baseball League at the Armouries. The games scheduled are A vs. B and C vs. D.

IT WOULD sound like an echo of the past to hear folks speak of the T. A. S. Lacrosse Club.

Quakes In Perugia.

ROME, March 29. — Slight earth shocks were recorded in the Province of Perugia Saturday. No damage was done. Nevertheless, the whole population is camping in the open air. The people are in an extraordinary condition of nervousness because of the fatal earthquakes a few months ago in the Abruzzi Provinces.

LEFTY DORBECK PURCHASED BY GUELPH CLUB

New Management Promises Team to Stay With the Best of Them

Guelph, March 29.—James B. Reynolds of the King Edward Hotel has closed a deal with George O'Neil, the London hotel man, for the purchase of the Erie franchise in the Canadian League. Mr. Reynolds, who is an ardent sportsman, and an enthusiastic baseball fan, will place a team in Guelph that will make the other clubs in the league hustle all the time.

He has engaged "Knotty" Lee, who managed the Hamilton team in 1913 and the Toronto Canadian League team in 1914.

Lee is a pretty good outfielder himself, and can jump into the game when necessary to help out. He knows a good ball player when he sees one, can handle men and knows where to secure players.

He received orders to get busy at once and sign up a team, good enough to stay with the best. The price paid by Mr. Reynolds for the franchise is stated to be $1,500, none of the players going with the franchise.

The only man who was with the Guelph team in 1913, who will be on the Guelph roster this year will be "Lefty" Dorbeck, the efficient little southpaw, who played great ball for the Leafs under Owner Mahoney's regime. Mr. Reynolds has bought Dorbeck outright from O'Neil. There are no strings on him. Dorbeck liked Guelph when he was here before, and is glad to get back in the fold.

ORGANIZED BALL FORM OF SLAVERY

The points that the Feds make to break up organized baseball are as follows:

1. Players must spend March in the south, whether they like it or not.

2. Their manhood is stultified because the clubs will not permit them to pay their own railroad fares and hotel bills.

3. Before each game they are actually coerced to change their street clothes for baseball uniforms.

4. Should no result be attained in nine innings the players are forced to stay on the ball field until a decision is reached or it is too dark to see the ball.

5. Should a body of persons decide to give a player an automobile, the owner refuses to interfere, and the player is compelled to humble his pride and take it.

6. Worst of all, after the regular season is finished, should it happen that a player is on a pennant-winning club, he cannot go to his home for a much-needed rest, but must fool around in a world's series that takes a week or ten days more to play.

Villa Besieging Matamoros.

BROWNSVILLE, Texas, March 29. —The Villa siege of Matamoros, the Mexican town opposite here, began about noon Saturday. Cavalrymen opened heavy rifle fire on the breastworks west of Matamoros, near the Rio Grande. Simultaneously the cavalry, totaling 5,500 men, began spreading to surround the city on the west and south."

ATHLETES FOR WAR.

Toronto, March 29. — Jack Tait, Jack Tressider and Hector Phillips, three members of the Canadian relay team which has competed several times with running teams from across the line, have volunteered for service overseas with the University artillery force and leave for Kingston on Tuesday. Mel. Brock, the fourth member of the team, has not yet been heard from but it is possible the whole quartette may go to the front together.

U21 JOINS THE BRITISH NAVY

German Submarine Has Been Raised and Refitted for Sea

LONDON, March 29. — It now transpires that the famous submarine U-21, the officers of which were personally decorated with iron crosses by the Kaiser, has become part of the British navy.

Sunk off the west coast somewhere near Fleetwood, about the middle of February, the U-21 was raised and taken into Barrow-in-Furness.

She was very slightly damaged, although the cause of disablement cannot be ascertained. In fact, the whole affair is shrouded in mystery, and has been one of the most closely guarded of naval secrets.

Slight repairs were made, and in a very short time the U-21 was again at sea, headed for home waters, but manned by a British crew. Little credence was given to the stories circulated regarding her fate, but in the absence of all news regarding her whereabouts she just dropped from notice and her exploits were forgotten.

Had it been possible to effect the repairs before her loss could be learned by the German authorities a hare-brained venture was actually contemplated by some junior British officers. It was nothing less than a plan to sail the U-21 straight into Cuxhaven or some equally important German base, and before being discovered as an enemy craft to torpedo every German war vessel within range.

The time elapsing between her last report to the German Admiralty and her readiness for departure after being raised and repaired made this plan impracticable, and the German authorities are now preparing to admit her loss.

A despatch from Rotterdam says: "The mail packet Brussels reports that she sank a large German submarine off the Holland coast yesterday afternoon."

Plans are being laid for a grand gathering of the Trinity College School Old Boys on May 24, at Port Hope, to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the school.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

George Street Methodist Church
TICKETS 25c

In honor of Miss Lilian Fisher of Water St. whose wedding takes place shortly a number of her friends met at the home of Miss Belle Elliott, Manning Ave. and presented her with a kitchen shower. The numerous articles suitable to the occasion was ample proof of the high esteem in which Miss Fisher is held. Miss Fisher responded in a pleasing and appreciative manner after which the evening was pleasantly spent. The friends were most enthusiastic in wishing the guest of the evening a most happy journey in life she is about to commence.

Stainer's Crucifixion Rehearsed at St. John's

The final rehearsal of Stainer's Crucifixion was held in St. John's Church last night after Evensong, directed by Mr. R. J. Devey. Many members of All Saints' choir are assisting at this presentation on Good Friday next. It may be of interest to recall that this will be the tenth production in St. John's, but the work has been given three times in All Saints, and once each in Norwood and Lakefield, making fifteen in all. Of the choristers who took part in the first presentation those remaining in the choir are Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Devey, Mr. W. H. Morphet and Mr. George Brown. The soloists then were Mr. Morphet, Mrs. Fred Clarke and Mr. J. Halpany.

Presentations are to be given in Toronto all this week by different choirs, some of which are: St. James' Cathedral, St. Pauls', Bloor Street, Bond Street, St. Mary's Magdalene, and many others. Dr. Ham holds the record for Toronto churches for number of productions, which are usually held on Monday, Thursday. Admission by ticket only.

LETTER OF THANKS

To the ratepayers of the North Ward,

Ladies and Gentlemen,—It would be very unworthy of me at this time if I did not in some way convey to you my sincere appreciation of your confidence during the past number of years that I have had the honor of being your representative on the Board of Aldermen. No representation of that Board could have been more honorably dealt with by the mandate of the people than myself and for this honor I wish to most humbly thank you upon retiring from office. Speaking honestly and frankly it was my desire that after serving some ten years as the people's representative I would like to have wound up my municipal career by being Mayor of my old home town that I was born in and have lived in all my life, that is if the people so ruled, but unfortunately fate has ordained otherwise for me.

I trust that a more worthy successor will be selected in my place and that the motto and slogan of all our citizens be Onward for a Greater Peterborough.

Yours very respectfully,
W. J. JOHNSTON.

Foresters at Church.

The Catholic Order of Foresters were present at the 8.30 Mass at the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday and received Holy Communion in a body. Rev. Dean McColl preached.

Next Council Meeting.

The City Council meets a week from tonight, thus a Finance Committee meeting will be held sometime this week. The day of meeting is generally Friday but on account of the holiday, Ald. Stratton and his associates will likely convene Thursday. Accounts will be passed and the question of the band grants taken up again. This matter was referred back to the committee by the last council meeting.

The Central Charity Boards meets tonight at seven forty-five.

ST. JAMES' ANNIVERSARY.

The seventh anniversary of the opening of St. James' Methodist Church was observed yesterday. Rev. John Garbutt of Cobourg was present and preached at both the morning and evening services, also at an open session of the Sunday School in the afternoon. The thank offering for the building fund amounted to $100.

Mrs. T. F. Matthews has brought honor to the Ladies' Curling Club of this city by winning the points competition in which the ladies' curling clubs of Ontario took part during the season just closed. Mrs. Matthews made a score of 31 points and won a silver spoon donated by Miss Dalton of Kingston.

PROROGUE THIS WEEK

Ottawa, March 29.—Sir George E. Foster told the leader of the opposition today that the Government still hoped to prorogue either Thursday or Saturday.

PATRIOTIC PROGRAM AT SUNDAY SCHOOL SESSION

Patriotic songs, choruses, and addresses took the place of the regular lessons at Charlotte Street Church Sunday School yesterday afternoon. His Honor Judge Huycke and R. F. Downey, B.A., were the principal speakers and gave the school meeting something to think over.

The opening hymn was "A Soldier's Prayer." This was followed by a chorus "The Maple Leaf Forever." Mr. P. Naish then contributed a solo entitled "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall."

Mr. R. F. Downey's address was along the lines of patriotism to the land in which we dwell. He related interesting events in connection with establishment of the Dominion of Canada and its past governors.

Miss L. Logan contributed a violin solo "Legende," by Bohm.

The address of Judge Huycke also dealt with Canada and was decidedly instructive besides being interesting to young and old alike.

A unique idea was introduced just before the school was dismissed consisting of the representation by six young ladies of the six allies. As each young lady walked on to the platform swathed in a flag of one of the allied nations, the pianist rendered that countrys national anthem. Britain came last and took up a position above the other five, waving a Union Jack.

Every one heartily sang Rule Britannia as the school was dismissed.

W.C.T.U. MEMBERS ENTHUSIASTIC

The Women's Christian Temperance Union held a large and very enthusiastic meeting last Friday afternoon at the Y. W. C. A.

The president, Mrs. Whalley, was in the chair.

Mrs. Kennet, superintendent of "Little White Ribboners," reported a membership of twelve since last meeting.

The petitions sent by the W.C.T.U. of Canada to do away with the wet canteen among our Canadian soldiers at the front will be presented this week to the wives and mothers of Peterborough to sign.

Mrs. Shield, superintendent of women's enfranchisement, took charge of the educational program. She gave a very interesting paper on "Franchise." One of the most encouraging things about life for women is the increase in the women's organizations throughout the country. This speaks of a new and broader life for women, for when women organize there is always something doing that is going to make life better for the community. Besides the church organizations and the W. C. T. U. there are the National Council of Women, Daughters of the Empire, Liberal and Conservative Women's Clubs, and many others. Then we have Political Equality Leagues and Women's Suffrage Associations that are working solely for the franchise for women. A great number of the States have women suffrage, and largely due to women's votes, many have gone dry. As yet not one province in the Dominion of Canada has passed parliamentary franchise for women. This, perhaps, is due to the fact that our women have not been very anxious or at least have not shown that they desire the franchise. It may be that some are afraid that if women were enfranchised the homes would be broken up, the children neglected, that there would be political quarrels between husband and wife, and that women would become unwomanly, but we have not learned that any disastrous thing has taken place in those States and countries where women have voted for years. It has been frequently said that woman's place is in the home, and so it is, and out of the home wherever she is called as wife and mother to guard those she loves and to improve conditions for them. The ballot puts power in woman's hand so that she may make her influence felt. Then, too, power brings respect. Responsibility develops character. If women are given the responsibility of citizenship they will measure up to it and fit themselves for it.

A hearty vote of thanks was given Mrs. Shield for her able paper. It was decided to have a parlor meeting at the home of Mrs. Whalley, Engleburn avenue, on Thursday afternoon, April 8th, to hear the reports of the Dominion Alliance convention.

OBITUARY

MRS. ALBERT FRANKS.

Early Sunday morning there passed away in St. Joseph's Hospital Mamie Sullivan, aged thirty-two, wife of Mr. Albert Franks of Emily township.

The late Mrs. Franks was born in the township of Emily and resided there most of her life, where she was widely known. The news of her death was a distinct blow to the whole township and deep sympathy to her bereaved husband has been extended. A two weeks' old child is also left.

The funeral will be held Tuesday from the family residence in Emily to Omemee cemetery, service at 1.30; the cortege leaving for the cemetery at two o'clock. Rev. Mr. James will officiate.

PARENTS BEREAVED.

Simon Joseph Perdue, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Perdue, Ennismore, died this morning. The funeral was held this afternoon to St. Martin's cemetery.

TEMPERANCE LEAGUE IS DISAPPOINTED

At a meeting of the City Temperance League, a resolution was passed, expressing disappointment at the temperance proposals of the government. Another resolution expressed appreciation of the action taken by the government of Saskatchewan in regard to the liquor traffic.

The Quarterly Official Board of Charlotte Street Methodist Church convened after the morning service yesterday and brought in a resolution expressive of disappointment at the meagre temperance legislation obtained, in view of what other provinces have obtained and the promises of the Conservative party at the time of the last election. The resolution was unanimous and will be forwarded to Hon. Mr. Hearst.

MARIE CORELLI'S BOOK DISCUSSED

By Rev. C. G. Smith at Murray Street Baptist Church

Y.M.C.A. BOYS PRESENT

A very large congregation was on hand Sunday evening in Murray St. Baptist Church to hear Rev. C. G. Smith of Belleville speak on Marie Corelli's latest book, "Innocence." The pastor, Rev. J. R. Webb, conducted the service. Mr. C. N. Meserve, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was present and offered prayer, and Mr. Webb gave a brief address to the boys of the Y. M. C. A., who were present in a body.

Mr. Smith took Acts 8: 37 as his text: "And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

This lets us into the secret of the Apostolic Church in regard to the right of baptism. The one question is Do you believe in the Lord Jesus Christ? Christ did not speak for mature years—only for faith. In this respect most Protestant churches are agreed that baptism is not essential to salvation. It is the blood of Jesus Christ.

It was not his custom to preach on novels, but when the novelist wrote about religious subjects he was justified in considering them. While the preacher speaks to thousands, the novelist speaks to tens of thousands and thus exerts a great influence on the people.

Marie Corelli receives twenty-five thousand dollars for each novel she writes plus royalties on their sales. For twenty years she has been turning out novels which are criticisms on various subjects or phases of life. She is feared in her sphere. She criticized Andrew Carnegie, was sued by him, and the court awarded him one farthing damages. She is a believer in the idea of transmutation of souls, though not of the kind of the Hindoos. The trend is upward of a Single Personality. God is everywhere and life is independent of our material conditions. She denies she is a Christian Scientist. She is a charming personality, but has never married. Asked as to this, she said she had three things under her roof that gave her all the masculine company she required. She has a dog that growls all morning, a parrot that swears all afternoon, and a cat that stays out all night.

"Innocence," as a friendless babe, has been taken in by a kindly old man. Many think she is the natural child of the farmer, and so scandal goes about. No effort is made to prove or disprove anything, and Innocence grows up to be a very clever student of French literature, and unbaptized.

In time her protector dies, and the estate, entailed, goes to the rightful heir, and the mother of Innocence offers to adopt her. Innocence refuses adoption. She goes to London and becomes famous. She meets her mother there at a reception, but does not disclose her secret. She also meets a man, the villain of the story, who wins her love and then kills her soul by his indifference. Not her body, but her soul is outraged. She later becomes baptized, merely to register her name and to please her motherly friend whom she calls Granny. Later she returns to her study and is found dead over her desk.

The speaker read passages to show the criticism of baptism and her descriptive power, and closed by saying, "Let us put away ceremony and sacerdotalism and the truth shall make us free."

The musical part of the service deserves special mention. The choir sang the anthem, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," in which the solo parts were taken by Mr. Asa Huycke and Miss Clara Kidd, and was very pleasing to the congregation. Miss Adams sang a solo in splendid style entitled "Sun of My Soul," by Carey, while Kipling's Recessional was well rendered by Mr. Weller and formed a pleasing and fitting conclusion to the service.

TO MY MANY FRIENDS

I wish to thank my many friends who have given me their support and pony votes, and to remind you of the fact that there are only three more days to work, as the contest closes on Wednesday, March 31st. If you have any votes now or are about to make a purchase, please go to the pony stores and buy there if possible. As you know, I am anxious to win the pony, and do not mind working hard for it, and desire to assist the merchants who have been so kind to donate it to the boys who work. If you have not promised anyone your votes, kindly phone 530 or mark your ballots for me. Thanking you kindly for your votes and assistance,

Yours faithfully,
ROD CAMERON.

TAIT OPTICAL CO.
410 GEORGE STREET

THEATRICAL

"The Quaker Girl," the title of the musical comedy which was presented at the Grand Opera House on Saturday was a fine performance and thoroughly enjoyed by the large audiences present. Katherine Murray as the Queker Girl Prudence, was a charming character and captivated the house, while Charles Clear as Tony Chute was equally in favor, receiving several curtain calls, especially in the dancing scene which was gracefully and cleverly performed. Miss Murray has a very sweet voice which was very becoming in the character of Prudence. Mlle. Andre Corday as Madame Blum made an admirable talkative French woman and Madeline Dailey as Phoebe and Harry Mehlonough, Jr., as Jeremiah made a decided hit. In fact the latter were with a section of the audience too much in favor and were informed that enough was enough.

The humor was good and the choruses were very pleasing particularly the valse song Come to the Ball. The singing of Tipperary by Miss Hoyt, Harry Coombs and chorus was a pleasing variation, and altogether the play was much enjoyed.

THE HOLY CITY

"The Holy City," which is to be rendered by the combined choirs of George Street Methodist and St. Paul's Presbyterian Churches tomorrow (Tuesday) evening in George St. Church, will undoubtedly be one of the finest choral efforts ever put forward in this city. Both choirs have been holding two practices a week ever since December, and the result of this long and faithful work will be evident to all in the splendid rendering which may be confidently looked for of the various choruses. The fine pianissimos in the unaccompanied chorus, 'For God so Loved the World" and "The Fining Pot Is for Silver," form a striking contrast to the massive and majestic effects obtained in such choruses as "Thine Is the Kingdom" and the "Amen Chorus." The solos, duets, quartettes, etc., are all in most capable hands, and from beginning to end this fine work will receive a magnificent rendering by this choir of 85 voices. The work is being given under the direction of Mr. John Allan and Mr. J. H. Renwick, with Miss Pearl McKee at the piano. Will ticket-holders endeavor to be seated by 7.45 in order to be sure of securing a seat? Late comers will not be allowed to enter during the progress of any number.

ST. ANDREWS BY-THE SEA

Few of the visitors to St. Andrews realize that the district has a historic association.

Champlain landed near the present site of St. Andrews in 1604, when he came from France with a patent royal of all the territory in America between the 40 and 46 degrees of latitude.

When the independence of the United States was established, the U. E. L. came across the border and settled at St. Andrews, and there are still houses standing in the town which were brought by them from Maine.

There is quite a contrast between the latter and the spacious new Algonquin, which has just been rebuilt by the C. P. R.

HAVING LIVELY TIME WRITES PTE. TAYLOR

His Company Was Well up on the Firing Line

"We are having a lively time and doing our daily routine of wallowing in the mud of the trenches," writes Pte. Odely Taylor in a letter to a member of the Review staff. "Only a few of the men have been knocked over and our company have had no casualties. We are well up on the line and have a good position to hold."

The letter was dated March 9.

A despatch to The Review yesterday quoted the Minister of Militia as stating that the Canadians have been relieved in the trenches.

AMPUTATE ONE FINGER.

Lindsay, March 30.—James Hutton, of Ops, was the victim of a painful accident while operating his wood cutting machine on the farm of John McCabe, South Ops. His right hand came in contact with the saw, with the result that several fingers were badly lacerated. He was removed to the Ross Memorial Hospital, where Dr. Blanchard is attending his injuries. It is understood one of his fingers will have to be amputated.

Mr. Nelson Hay, a former mayor of Listowel, died at Battle Creek Sanitarium. He had been in poor health since June last.

A week ago today in Brandon the thermometer registered 52 degrees in the shade, which is a record of the past five years.

ARTILLERY FIRE STOPS GERMANS

Foe Retired in Disorder From the Village of Jeudicourt

BOMBS THROWN ON RHEIMS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 30. — This afternoon's official statement: "In the Champagne district a German aviator yesterday threw bombs on the city of Rheims and wounded two persons. One projectile fell on the cathedral.

"Well-directed artillery fire from a French battery forced the Germans to retire in disorder from the village of Jeudicourt, to the northeast of St. Mihiel.

"At all other points in the war zone the day passed quietly. No infantry engagements took place."

BERLIN, March 30. — A war office statement this afternoon says: "In the fighting which led to the occupation of Tauroggen, Prussian Landstrum took one thousand prisoners near Krasnopol.

"Russians lost two thousand killed, and up to last night three thousand prisoners.

"In an unsuccessful attack on Skwa, near Klimki, the Russians lost six hundred prisoners."

GEN. VON KLUCK WAS RECKLESS.

LONDON, March 30. — An Amsterdam despatch to the Express says the wounding of Gen. Von Kluck occurred while he was recklessly inspecting trenches at a most dangerous point after a stormy interview with Emperor William. The opinion is expressed in Berlin that his command will be handed over to Prince Eitel Frederich.

BOOTS SATISFACTORY TO TROOPS IN SOUTH AFRICA

Were Similar to Those Served Out for Present War

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, March 30.—General Otter before the boot enquiry commission this morning said boots worn by Canadian soldiers in South Africa, similar to those served out for this war, gave good satisfaction, but that the South African weather was hot and dry.

The men preferred them to British boots because they were lighter but he preferred the British boot for its better wearing qualities.

Ottawa, March 30.—That the boots supplied to the Canadian expeditionary force when they finally gave out at Salisbury had "served their time" and that on this account Gen. Alderson's condemnation of them was not a matter for surprise, was a statement made to the Parliamentary Boot Committee yesterday afternoon by Gen. Eugene Fiset, Deputy Minister of Militia.

Gen. Fiset told the committee that the boots ordered at the outbreak of war had been exactly the same as approved by the Militia Department board in 1910, when Sir Frederick Borden was Minister of Militia, and which had given satisfaction when worn by the permanent force since. He told of the efforts made by the Militia Department to obtain a new boot when it was found that the Canadian pattern was light for active service, the Acting Minister of Militia even having been willing to purchase in England and supply to Canadian manufacturers the machinery which would have been necessary for the manufacture of the British boot in this country. Interesting evidence was also heard from a corporal who has returned from Salisbury Plain, and who produced a pair of boots he had worn there and ever since. They were in very good condition and fit to last another three months.

Gen. Fiset said that the first complaint as to the boots brought to his attention was that of Gen. Alderson.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

Active Life is Closed by Passing of Wm. Fair

At the venerable age of 89 years there passed peacefully away this morning one of the city's grandest old men and one of the country's pioneer residents in the person of Mr. William Fair, father of Mr. Robert Fair, the George street merchant.

The end was not altogether unexpected, and Mr. Fair's extreme age militated against his recovery. No citizen enjoyed a greater degree of the respect of the citizens, who will lament the passing of one whose character and life was a perfect example of integrity and right principles. Although of a retiring disposition, the late Mr. Fair was always a public-spirited citizen and to the last displayed a lively interest in civic affairs and current events.

Born in Port Hope in the year 1826, the late Mr. Fair was of Irish descent, his family having been natives of County Cavan, Ireland. Up till a year ago he lived in Millbrook for a period of twenty-five years, and previous to that resided on the old family homestead at Centreville. He was married to Anne McCamus, who predeceased him some thirteen years.

Upon the death of his daughter, Mrs. Allin, of Millbrook, he came to Peterborough, making his home with his son, Mr. Robert Fair, 505 Dickson street, and lived there for the past year. The latter is the only son. Mr. Fair leaves one brother, George, of Blaine, Mich.

In the affairs of his country he always manifested a keen and hearty interest and staunchly supported the Conservative interests. In religion he was an Anglican.

His body will be forwarded to Millbrook on the 8:10 train Thursday morning. The funeral will leave St. Thomas Church, Millbrook, the same afternoon at two o'clock, interment to take place in the family plot in St. Paul's Church cemetery, Cavan.

CAMPAIGN FOR FUNDS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOL

The campaign of the Salvation Army for their new Sunday School goes on with very marked success. R. C. Braund who is superintendent is much pleased and by Good Friday they expect to have the desired amount. The children who are collecting will be given some hot cross buns and maple syrup when they bring in their boxes on Good Friday.

The flour mill at Brussels, owned by Messrs. W. and R. A. Pryne, was burned to the ground. The loss is heavy.

FIFTEEN SURVIVORS OF AQUILA HAVE LANDED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 30. — A missing boat from the British steamer Aguila, sunk by a German submarine off the Pembrokeshire coast, containing fifteen members of the steamer's crew and two passengers, has reached land safely. This is the fourth boat that put off from the Aguila after the submarine attack. The number of men now supposed to have lost their lives with the sinking of the Aguila is nine.

GERMAN KULTUR AT IT'S MERIDIAN

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

NEW YORK, March 30. — Commenting editorially on the German submarining of the British steamer Falaba and the heartless conduct of the submarine's crew, laughing at passengers struggling in the water, the Herald calls it "Kultur at its meridian," and says: "Great joy in the halls of Kultur; one hundred and eighteen non-combatants, some of them women, all ruthlessly murdered on the high seas. It is 'the day.'"

The World declares: "It is not war, but murder."

DROPPED BOMBS ON BRITISH SHIP

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Constantinople, March 30.— An official statement issued today says:— "One of our seaplanes has dropped bombs on a British warship cruising outside the Dardanelles.

Rev. Canon John Downie, B. D., rector of Christ Church, Port Stanley, died at his home in St. Thomas after a long illness. The remains will be sent to Toronto for interment.

The Canadian Blower and Forge Co., Limited, at Berlin, Ont., has been incorporated with $500,000 capital.

UNITED KINGDOM FACES PROHIBITION

Employers Promise to Seal Their Own Wine Cellars and Prohibit Use of Intoxicants in Clubs

AS DRASTIC AS THAT IN RUSSIA

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 30. — Prohibition as drastic as that prevailing in Russia today faces the United Kingdom. Press discussions of a letter sent by David Lloyd George to the Ship Owners' Federation competes successfully in point of interest with the news of the sinking of the British steamer Falaba by a German submarine with the loss of more than one hundred lives.

Employers are backing what Mr. George terms "root and branch action," even to the extent of promising to seal their own wine cellars and prohibit the use of intoxicants at their clubs, while Labor leaders are equally anxious for the institution of some prohibitory measure.

Great Britain is smouldering in anger over the torpedoing by a German submarine of the steamships Falaba and Aguilla, but confidence is expressed that the latest outbursts of under-sea activity will have no effect on the movements of British ships.

THIEVES VISIT GEORGE STREET CLOTHING STORE

Carry off Suits, Coats and Raincoats From Zacks Bros. Premises

Figuring that Zacks Bros., at 423 George Street had pretty nifty suits in stock, burglars last night or early this morning visited the premises, entered from the rear and carried off an unknown quantity of high priced suits, coats and raincoats. Exactly what the loss amounts to the owners were unable to state this morning, but they told a reporter that $200 would not cover it as far as they were able to roughly estimate.

The burglars made a nice haul judging from the empty hooks left on the racks in the store. They left no traces which would help the police other than some finger prints upon broken glass in the window at the rear through which they apparently entered. This window contains four panes of glass and looks out into the little yard at the back. The upper left hand pane was partly cut and then broken according to the pro-

Philadelphia, March 30.—Henry B. Cohen of Scotland, killed his grandmother Matilda Cohen, aged eighty-five, as she lay in bed and then shot himself dying in the hospital. Cohen is supposed to have been insane.

WHEN CANUCK MET CANUCK

Gunner McGill Tells of Meeting Member of Infantry

A letter was received today by Mr. Benj. McGill from his son Mordie with the battery division of the first contingent now fighting in France. Gunner McGill tells of a German sharpshooter being captured by Canadians. The sharpshooter had been keeping account of the men he had "picked off" and the list totalled 56. According to Gunner McGill's letter the Canadian battery is backing up the Canuck Infantry. Sections of the two divisions met one day and he was talking to "Jimmie" English and other Peterborough boys.

A letter has been received at Harriston from Capt. Pick, at at front, giving particulars of the death of Pte. James Corcoran on March 5th. Pte. Corcoran was given a military funeral, at which all the officers and mem of his home regiment at the front were present.

CONGRATULATIONS FROM BRITISH COMMANDER

Canadians Have Made the Best Impression on All of Us Says Sir John French

OTTAWA, March 30. — The Duke of Connaught made public yesterday a letter which he had received from Sir John French. The original has been sent to the Archives. The letter is as follows:

"The Canadian trops having arrived at the front, I am anxious to tell you that they have made the best impression on all of us.

"I made a careful inspection of the division a week after they came to the country and I was very much struck by the excellent physique which was apparent throughout the ranks. The soldierly bearing and the steadiness with which the men stood in the ranks on a bleak, cold, snowy day was most remarkable.

"After two or three weeks' preliminary education in the trenches, attached by unit to the third corps, they have now taken over their own line on the right of that corps—as a complete division — and I have the utmost confidence in their capability to do valuable and efficient service.

"The Princess Patricia's Regiment arrived with the 27th division a month earlier and since then they have performed splendid service in the trenches.

"When I inspected them, also in the pouring rain, it seemed to me I had never seen a more magnificent-looking battalion — guards or otherwise.

"Two or three days ago they captured a German trench with great dash and energy and excellent results.

"I am writing these few lines because I know how deeply we are all indebted to the untiring and devoted efforts your Royal Highness has made to ensure the despatch of the most efficient conditions of this valuable contingent."

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, MARCH 30, 1915

IS THERE TO BE AN ELECTION?

IT SEEMS to be generally accepted by all parties that Canada will see a general election before long. The first question asked is: "What is the need of it?" The need of it is found in the speeches of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and of many of those who sit behind him. First of all, Sir Wilfrid charges Sir Robert with raising his war-taxes by means of an increase in protection. That is true. The increase in tariff from taxes or otherwise has that effect. Sir Wilfrid demands direct taxation and no tariff (for protective purposes). As the taxes and the war loans amount to a larger sum than Canada ever raised before, the issue is correspondingly huge, and beyond all doubt the people should be consulted, if possible. It IS possible. An election would not hurt business, and, if brought on by and with the consent of the Government, it must be supposed that no harm can be done to Canada's share in the war.

Then we have the navy to consider. Sir Wilfrid is determined to put Canada to the expense of a complete Canadian naval outfit, which the Conservatives think unnecessary, and in view of Canada's huge expenditure, highly improper. The Liberal chieftain's attack on the Minister of Marine for not providing more than a million for Canada's navy came as a rude shock to economists.

Then we have the language question. If this question becomes more serious, it will be a serious thing for both parties, and neither cares to face the consequences, the Conservatives in Quebec and the Liberals in Ontario. The Senate is another bone of contention. It has shown itself autocratic in the highest degree. It vetoed no less than seven money measures, notwithstanding the fact that money bills are the business of the Commons only. It has defied popular government. A large part of the Senate is French, so that it is easy to see what the result would be if the language question depended upon the Senate. This question transcends all others in the eyes of the French. There need be no doubt of that.

Then, if the war continues, there will have to be another great vote of money, making Canada's war expenditure for the future a matter for the people to think over.

If at all possible, the time is ripe for the consideration of these many problems. In fact, it is better to have the election now than when busines revives and when it should not be disturbed.

GUESSING ON THE COST OF THE WAR.

THE MONETARY TIMES gives the figures of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, Washington, as to the cost of the war per day to all participants combined at fifty million dollars. We doubt these figures very much. No information is given as to how the figures are arrived at, but, at any rate, some of them are suspicious on the face of them. How Russia's expenditure of $12,500,000 per day could be so much more than that of France or Britain is neither obvious nor probable, and it is also placed as the same as Germany's. As a matter of fact, these figures can only be the wildest guess because no estimate can as yet be placed on the devastation in Belgium, and parts of Russia, Austria, and Germany. Moreover, there has been no official report of the number of men Russia has in the field, while contradictory statements have been published of the number France and Britain have in the field, and these must be considered in estimating the expenditure for armies and navies. Servia does not figure in the estimate, but is mentioned in the cost up to January 1st. Turkey only figures in revenue statistics, and Japan is not even mentioned. Besides, the nations are providing lines of credit for the future which may not be wholly used if the war should end sooner than expected. Such estimates, we believe, are misleading, and cannot be even an approximation of accuracy.

A ROYAL COMMISSION.

THE binocular purchases for the Militia Department were up before the Public Accounts Committee recently, and, according to the newspapers, revealed a curious state of affairs. Lt.-Col. Hindman and his brother, a Liberal member of the Toronto House for Ottawa, seem to have set to work to stick the country for a handsome rake-off on the purchase of binoculars. The advent of a Liberal member shocked the Liberals, but it gives no relief to those who see how deeply self-seeking has eaten into the heart of Canadian life. Canada is in danger of becoming a by-word amongst nations. No government can protect itself and the country against such work as has been disclosed at this inquiry. Are we in Canada a corrupt and unworthy people? It is a sad ending to the hopes of a young nation that deserves a better fate. Let us have a royal commission and let the punishment be swift and sure.

WHY, SIR WILFRID?

THE MINISTER OF MARINE (Hon. J. D. Hazen) had his estimates up on Saturday before Parliament, for the coming year. Sir Wilfrid Laurier took advantage of the occasion to urge increased expenditure on the Canadian navy idea. Colleges, training ships, preparatory works for a full and complete Canadian naval force were urged upon the attention of the Government. Sir Wilfrid seemed in his element when dilating upon the desirability of Canada's making extensive and expensive preparations for her own navy. In all kindness, and with due respect for the leader of the Opposition, let us ask, in the name of a long-suffering Canadian people, "What do we want with a navy or an army such as Belgium has?" It has been her undoing, not her preservation, yet Canada need not be defenceless. She has prepared in six months 100,000 as good fighting men as the world can show. What need is there for, and what need was there for, any great system of preparation for what we are now doing? What we are doing and what we have done are a standing rebuke to Sir Wilfrid and to those from down by the sea who want inland Canada to spend enormous sums for their advantage and the launching of a national war policy that will some day meet with the rebuke it deserves. Civilized people do not prepare for life by training like Jack Johnson or even by laying in a stock of clubs and rifles. Nor do they train for temperance by laying in a stock of whiskey. People train for peace by laying in a stock of high principles and good practices, by endeavouring to carry out the principles of civilization, not the practices of war. It is better to die peacefully than to commit suicide. Greatness is not necessarily bloodiness. It is said that it is the unexpected that always happens. We confess that Sir Wilfrid's conduct on Saturday both surprises and grieves us. But the people of this country will never stand for it. If there is not some cheaper way, such as Sir Robert Borden proposes, then let us have none of it.

THE FARMERS SHOULD PROFIT BY IT.

WE HAVE just received the Report on Dominion Experimental Farms. The Dominion Government is doing a great work for the farmers in this way, and they should take advantage of the opportunities offered, not only by securing the literature published, but by visiting these farms, where they can see a practical application of the latest advances in the field of scientific agriculture.

The work and scope of the Experimental Farms and Stations have developed to such an extent that it has been found necessary, for the sake of convenience, to devote two volumes of nearly five hundred pages each to the main or aggregate report for the year ending March 31, 1914. In the first volume is presented the reports of the director and the divisions of chemistry, field husbandry and animal husbandry. It is by a study of these chronicles that an idea can be obtained of the vast amount of work that is being done and an appreciation arrived at of a resultant good.

In the first few pages are given the usual comparative tables of grain yields and prices and of livestock for the five years extending from 1909 to 1913, each of which, excepting horses and swine, show a decrease in the Eastern Provinces since 1910. In the Western Provinces there was a deficiency of upwards of 300,000 cattle between the same year and 1913, but an increase of nearly half a million horses and only a slight disparity in sheep, which, however, are showing a tendency to improvement. Swine increased by upwards of 500,000 In British Columbia the numerical changes were comparatively light. Naturally much space is given to reports of experiments at the different farms and stations. These experiments, it is hardly necessary to say, cover every variety of grain, fruit and vegetable production, as well as soil development, crop management, cultivation of forage plants and grasses, livestock breeding and dairying. It would be impossible to overestimate the importance of the information thus furnished.

Of course, at this time, when the value of increase by improvement of production is being strenuously urged, the reports are of special interest. It is not alone with what may be termed activities of the farm proper that they deal, but also with building, with clearing, with road-making, with ornamental gardening. In short, the reports constitute virtually an encyclopedia of farming and its branches brought up to date.

While, as has been said, Volume One is devoted to the review of the director and reports of the divisions of chemistry, field husbandry and animal husbandry, Volume Two presents the reports of the divisions of horticulture, cereals, botany, entomology, forage plants, poultry and tobacco. All that has been said of the completeness in its contents of the first volume can be repeated of the second. It, too, is a useful compilation and a sample in detail of the benefits to be derived from scientific and painstaking research.

As in the preceding years, the matters dealt with in this volume are divided into sections: (a) Giving precise information of the work at the experimental farms in the divisions referred to, and, (b) Treating of the various lines of experimental work under way throughout the system. It is explained that the latter section is devised and designed with a view to aiding the farmer more directly in the details of his vocation. It is worthy of wide distribution. One thing certain is that the nature of the reports makes them deserving of the closest attention. Copies may be obtained by making application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

A Question for Single Taxers.

A PASTORAL PLAYHOUSE

Wonderful Open Air Theatre in the Heart of the Alps

What is probably the most perfect pastoral theater in Europe is situated in the heart of the Alps—at Interlaken, in Switzerland. This unique "playhouse" is open to all the winds that blow, and its roof is formed—in the most favorable circumstances—by the blue canopy of the sky. It is not always thus, however, and it has not infrequently happened that the hue of the canopy has been less inviting and that players and spectators alike have experienced the interlude of a heavy downpour which was not in the program.

The open air theater at Interlaken is used for performances of Schiller's great drama, "William Tell," for which it is by nature admirably adapted. The stage is a rising meadow framed on three sides by dense woods of beech and pine, with a "backcloth" of grim, gray rock towering toward the sky beyond. Away to the right stretches a huge semicircle of mountain peaks, 9,000 and 10,000 feet high, and behind the spectator tower the great peaks of the Bernese Oberland—the Jungfrau, Monch and Eiger, with their burden of eternal snows.

Nature in accommodating mood has provided the entrances and exits of this unique theater—passages in the woods through which gallop with thundering of hoofs on hard ground the mail clad troopers of the tyrannical governor. The cattle, goats and sheep which appear in the first scene—the return of the flocks and herds from the Alpine pastures—approach down the steep path in the woods on the right and are heard long before they are visible, the tinkling and clanging of their bells mingling harmoniously with the long drawn notes of the huge wooden Alpine horn, seven feet in length, and forming an appropriate overture.—Wide World Magazine.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW.

Who Had the Happier Lot, the Lady or the Laborer?

A Fashionable Woman, coming from the Opera in the rosy nest of a Limousine, passed a group of Laborers at midnight. Machines, like terrible Animals, were burrowing into the Earth. Steam was hissing as if from the mouths of a million Serpents. Rocks flew in every direction. Torchlights flamed. There was the thunder of Labor. The Night Shift was in full swing.

And the Woman, glancing from the window at a certain Workman, for an instant thought:

"How I wish I had that brawny Laborer's strength and Joy of Life! How I envy him his Power, his physical perfection, the wonder of his Manhood, his freedom from the Shackles that bind me. He is his own master, while I am a slave—the slave of a Man I despise!"

At that moment the Laborer paused long enough by the deep Chasm where his Engine rocked to glance into the Motor as it sped by him. And he thought:

"Oh, to be like her! To know Leisure and Wealth and Rest! To be free from Drudgery and Toil, to come and go as I pleased! To throw off the chains of Debt and Worry and have the days and nights stretch ahead of me like a Field of Flowers!"

But in another instant the Motor was gone. The Torchlights flared brighter than ever. And each had forgotten the other.—Charles Hanson Towne, in Judge.

Curious Oversight.

"What do you think, Magda—shall I deliver my address on 'The Ideal Wife' just as I've written it?"

"Certainly not. You must rewrite it. I can't see that it fits me at all."—Meggendorfer Blatter.

LOCATING THE DRAWBACKS.

THERE'S Jones; he only sits around
Or takes an evening nap.
He doesn't have to work at all
To hold his little snap.
I envy him; but, then, to trade
I fear would hardly suit.
He'd want to, I am much afraid,
Throw in his wife to boot.

Brown has a very pleasant place
To labor, and his pay
Is quite enough to keep a man
In luxury, they say.
I'd like to have his job; but, then,
Again, I wouldn't trade
If in the bargain I must take
His family ready made.

With acres broad and wide.
To get across it, so I hear,
A man a day must ride.
It would be very fine to own
A prospect such as his,
But still I wouldn't want his health,
His grouch and rheumatiz.

In looking at the other men
To whom the fates were kind
Some drawbacks to their pleasant lots
Along the line I find.
I think that, on the whole, perhaps
I wouldn't swap my place
With them; I'll plug along and keep
My family and my face.

Mitigating Circumstances.

"Judge," said the complaining witness, "I was just walking along the street peacefully and stopped by where he was fixing his auto to pass the time of day when he up and yanked off a piece of the machinery and hit me over the head with it."

"What have you to say in defense?" asked the judge.

"Nothing," said the prisoner. "I hit him, all right. What is the fine?"

"But was there no provocation?"

"You can judge for yourself. It was a hot day, and he was the four hundred and forty-fourth man who came offering me advice as to how to fix the thing."

"Discharged," said the judge. "I fine the complaining witness $2."

Not Alone.

"She is such a gossip."

"Well?"

"Well, I don't think that is nice, do you?"

"I should hate to say so."

"Why?"

"It would seem like such a severe criticism on our best families."

Slight Mistake.

For five minutes they had not spoken.

"Mary," he said at last, "I can hear the beating of your heart."

"Pshaw! That is a man on the floor above beating a rug."

Shut Out From the Sources.

"No wonder Jones is such an ignoramus."

"What is the reason?"

"He shaves himself, has his wife cut his hair and doesn't read the sporting page."

Keeping Employed.

"He seems to be very busy."

"He always is."

"What does he do?"

"Tries to make people believe that he is of some importance."

Modern.

"Is this house for sale?"

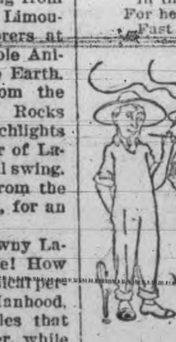
"Yes."

"Plumbing in good order?"

"I should say so. Plumber looks after it every week."

Fine String.

Simple Simon went a-fishing
In his mother's water pail
And, as you have doubtless heard it,
Didn't catch a single whale,
But the sequel wasn't printed
In the little story book,
For he got a string of microbes
Fast as he could bait his hook.



Taking No Chances.

"I forgot to ask you one thing," said the prospective city boarder.

"What is that?" asked the farmer.

"Do your hens lay strictly fresh eggs?"

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

Any one who tries to cut some new capers with common sense is certain to lose out, for style in the article never changes.

The people are most wearisome who get busy just for the sake of creating bustle around them.

The man who drinks just because he thinks it is smart is due to smart for it sooner or later.

Nothing is more perky and assuming than a man who has happened to make a good guess.

If you know of any get-rich-quick schemes pay yourself a gratuity for keeping clear of them.

Sometimes a man swears because he is mad and sometimes because you are.

There are a bunch of old saws that don't cut much ice nowadays.

The way to make some temperaments go and do a thing is to put a strict prohibition upon it.

Try a Review Want Ad. It Pays.

Make a Little MAKE MUCH

HAVE YOU a hundred dollars to put into something good? Not a gold mine, not a hole in the ground, not a wild-cat scheme—but an honest fellow and an honest proposition; a clean, decent sure-enough little business that just needs that hundred to make it a winner? Have you? Will you hear us? Then put a quiet little ad in the Classified columns of THE DAILY REVIEW—three or six times—and get the cream of the best business chances in all this city, brought to you and offered you "on a gold plate;" yours to study over and choose from at your leisure; to investigate and digest; "the pick of the propositions" all laid before you, some good, some bad of course, but all there for your judgment. Worth a dollar? Why it's an education! And among them you'll find some little business, some little fellow that can make you money, make you glad that you helped save a success.

One of the best women in this city, left but a thousand or two insurance money, has made a comfortable living income—all from a want ad. That ad brought her in touch with a young businesss woman who was "making good," who needed just a little capital to "make it sure." The want ad introduced them—and saved them both—made them independent. $1 in a want ad has saved many a deserving man and woman from want. It is "the little door to big opportunity." Try it. Try it over "initials" and see the honest, truthful, sound Business Chances it will bring you.

FEMININE BEAUTY

Maturity Has a Charm Greater Than That of "Sweet Sixteen"

There is a beauty quite apart from youth—the beauty of the mature woman. Some there are who maintain that beauty does not reach the zenith under the age of thirty-five or forty. In a measure this is borne out by the events of the antique past, which may likewise be parallel with instances of our own day.

Helen of Troy appeared on the scene at the age of forty. Cleopatra was past thirty when she met Antony. Aspasia, married to Pericles when she was thirty-six, was a figure brilliant in her world for thirty years after. When Diane de Poitiers was past thirty-six she won the heart of Henry II., and he was but half her age.

Anne of Austria was thirty-eight when described as the most beautiful woman of Europe. Mlle. Mar was heralded as the greatest of beauties at forty-five, and Mme. Recamier was at her best between the ages of thirty-five and fifty. Mme. de Maintenon was forty-three when united to Louis, and Catherine of Russia was thirty-three when she took her seat on the throne which she occupied for thirty-five years.

All these women were world famed for their beauty and gave the lie direct to that toothless old saw that buzzes the power of "sweet sixteen." The dew of youth and complexion of roses, it must be admitted, sometimes combine in a face that is unmoving, irresponsive, utterly lacking in the expression which goes to the making of a perfectly molded visage.—Bohemian.

Within the Truth.

Victim—Look here! You said the house was only a stone's throw from the station. It's fully half a mile.

WITH THE LATEST IMPROVEMENTS

And a Pair of Loving Hearts To Enjoy Them All

By NELLIE P. RANSOM.

Dorothy Allen sat on the broad, white pillared porch watching the road that wound between the trees to the village. She had watched the road a great deal during the last few days, at first with happy anticipation, but now with helpless longing.

It was bad enough in the daytime, but it was worse when it grew too dark to see who was coming along the road, for then the footsteps grew louder and louder until she was certain that they were going to turn toward the white pillared porch, only to die away again, leaving her sick with fresh disappointment.

On the previous Sunday evening the vague, beautiful something which had enveloped the whole summer, making it different from any other summer of Dorothy's life, had suddenly taken definite form. A look, a touch, a word or two, and she had found herself without a doubt that John Porter loved her and that she loved him, but he had gone away without any open declaration, and, though Dorothy had watched the road till her eyes ached, he had not returned.

"I might have known it," she said to herself disconsolately. "He is too proud and independent to ask the daughter of a rich man to marry him. Now that his work on the new electric road is finished he will go away, and I shall never see him again."

Dorothy's neighbor, twelve-year-old Gladys, came skipping across the lawn, a very perky pink bow topping her yellow tresses. She perched herself on the broad arm of Dorothy's chair.

"I've been reading such a lovely story!" she exclaimed.

"What was it about?" queried Dorothy, with languid interest.

"Oh, it was about a brave knight in shining armor," said Gladys, "and he loved a fair and noble lady, who loved him in return. But she had gold and jewels and all that sort of thing, you know, and he hadn't a thing but his charger and his good sword, and so he could never, never ask her to marry him."

"Well," asked Dorothy as Gladys paused for breath, "what happened then?"

"Oh," replied Gladys, "there was nothing for the knight to do but to ride away to the wars, and the princess just sat in her tower and pined and pined till at last she died. Oh, it was perfectly lovely—so sad and sweet!"

"It seems to me," said Dorothy almost crossly, "that it would have been much more sensible for the knight to stay and marry the lady instead of leaving her to pine and die."

"Why," cried Gladys in disgust, "that would have spoiled the whole story."

She jumped from her perch and was dancing down the steps, but turned to call back:

"Oh, say, that Mr. Porter has gone away, hasn't he? I saw him at the station Monday with a suit case in his hand. Aren't his eyes just too handsome for anything? I'm sorry he has left, aren't you?"

Then, having unwittingly destroyed Dorothy's last vestige of hope, Gladys cheerfully departed.

A gray haired man with a keen but kindly face came and stood in the doorway behind Dorothy, noting with an anxious look her drooping figure. He moved uneasily once or twice and then came out to where she was sitting.

"You ought to be playing golf this fine weather," he suggested.

"I'm rather tired of golf, father," replied Dorothy.

Mr. Allen took a turn up and down the porch.

"Has that young Porter left? I haven't seen him for several days," he asked, with a carefully careless air.

"I really don't know. Probably he has," replied the girl, sitting very straight and assuming an air even more carefully careless than that of her father.

Mr. Allen after a few more turns and anxious sidelong glances betook himself again to the house. Since the death of Dorothy's mother ten years before the bond of sympathy and understanding between him and his only child had grown unusually strong, but here was a situation which he felt in nowise competent to handle.

Left to herself, Dorothy's sprightly indifference suddenly vanished. Her hands fell listlessly into her lap, and she leaned her head wearily against the back of her chair. So he had gone without even coming to say goodby! Well, there was no use watching the road any longer.

"It's just like Gladys' story," she sighed. "The knight has gone to fight his battles, leaving the poor princess in the castle to pine alone, only, being a twentieth century princess instead of a medieval one, I'm afraid I can't die of love. Girls never do nowadays. I suppose that's one of the modern improvements," she continued whimsically.

An endless procession of dreary years seemed to stretch out before her. She shut her eyes, and two large tears glistened on the long dark lashes.

Some one was coming across the lawn, but the footsteps made no sound on the thick turf. When they began to ascend the steps Dorothy opened her eyes with a start, and John Porter stood before her.

There was a wonderfully tender light in his eyes and a determined expression about his mouth. How handsome he looked! How tall and strong he was! Dorothy caught her breath.

"I thought you had gone away," she managed to say.

"Only down to the junction to meet the chief engineer. He wanted to talk over my next job with me. It's a little bigger than anything I've ever undertaken before. But you didn't think I'd go without seeing you again, did you, Dorothy, after Sunday night?"

"I didn't know," murmured Dorothy, her eyes on the big buckles of her colonial slippers.

John Porter seated himself on the porch rail and looked straight at Dorothy's face.

"Dorothy," he said, "I know it's the general opinion that a man has no right to ask a girl with a rich father to marry him until he can provide for her the things she has been accustomed to having, but it seems to me that if a girl really cared for a man she could be happy with him even if she had to do without some of the things she'd been used to."

"I wonder," thought Dorothy, "if it can be possible that the hero has modern improvements too."

But she kept her eyes on the big silver buckles, and John Porter continued speaking with deliberate conviction. "And that is why I dare to tell you that you can afford to give up some of the things that money can buy and come and share with me the things that can't be bought. Will you come, Dorothy?"

"Yes," said Dorothy, meeting his look squarely at last, "I will come."

Half an hour later they remembered Dorothy's father.

"He will never allow you to marry me," cried John Porter, "a common builder of roads!"

"A rising young engineer," corrected Dorothy. "Come on. I'll manage papa."

"Papa," she announced, pushing aside the portiere with one hand and drawing her lover after her with the other, "I'm going to marry Mr. Porter."

Mr. Allen roused himself from the depths of a leather chair where he had been taking an afternoon nap, started a little at the sight of the young man and looked quizzically at his daughter.

"Your prospects for doing so certainly look a little brighter than they have for the past few days," he remarked. "Where have you been keeping yourself, Mr. Porter? Dorothy and I had about concluded that you were too busy 'doing things' to give us any attention. But if Dorothy has made up her mind to marry you you may as well submit first as last. Do you think you can support her?"

"Not in the style to which she has been accustomed," said John Porter. "But she is willing to dispense with luxuries."

"When I married Dorothy's mother," said Mr. Allen, "she had a little money, which I invested, and after her death I put the investment in Dorothy's name without saying anything to her about it. It's really surprising how that little sum has grown. The income from it is now quite considerable." He named a sum more than twice John Porter's salary. "I should think this, added to your present income, might provide for love in a cottage"—

"With all the modern improvements!" said Dorothy softly, with shining eyes.

SPRING GARMENTS.

Fuller Skirts Characteristic of the New Season's Styles.

The fuller skirt is the notable feature of the new season styles. It is accompanied by simple bodices, with high neck, narrow shoulders and long sleeves. The waist line is either normal or raised, says the Dry Goods Economist, speaking of spring fashions.

Suit coats include tailored and demi-tailored effects, with preference for the tailored. Tailored coats with belts placed at a high or slightly raised waist line are particularly strong at present. Flare effects are also emphasized.

Separate coats have considerable flare at the bottom edge and are being shown in three-quarter length or slightly shorter. High waist line effects are very prominent, and belts are being freely used.

Skirts of dresses and suits and also separate skirts include the circular and gathered forms, together with box and side plaited effects. Dress skirts include the ruffled and tiered designs, together with a limited number of voluminous tunics accompanying narrow underskirts. Yokes are used on many of the new skirts.

Bandeau For the Hair.

A hair ornament that is very attractive and one that would make an acceptable gift is of rhinestones mounted on blue velvet. There is a narrow bandeau to go about the head and two curved ends that stand upright. They are all formed of a string of rhinestones held on a wired twist of sapphire blue velvet.

HOW TO LOOK TALL.

There are a great many things a girl may do which will add inches to her appearance.

The first rule should be to keep the chin up.

Dress the neck either low or with a very high, tight collar.

The second rule should be to wear the hair dressed high on the head. Never wear a wide pompadour.

Wear gowns with long lines. Short girls should effect long gowns whenever the opportunity presents itself.

The short girl should avoid round trimmings, shoulder draperies and plaits. Her wraps should be long and narrow.

Hair ornaments should be worn high and never large. Hats should be narrow, with some smart feather trimming—narrow and straight up in the air.

Tennis will narrow the hips and strengthen the waist of a short girl.

Standing a great deal—well poised, not leaning against anything—will make one appear taller than one naturally is.

Some women believe that stripes add the appearance of height to a short, stout figure. This is not true.

Save Your Heart

Heart strain may be brought on by many common, thoughtless actions of everyday life, as, for instance, running to catch a train. In an actual experiment made on a person with a healthy heart before the run the heart rate was seventy-six per minute and the heart was doing 152 foot pounds of work a minute; after the run the heart rate was 180 and the heart was doing 360 foot pounds a minute, an increase of 228 foot pounds. Great strain may also be imposed upon the heart by ascending stairs hurriedly.

Not only physical exertion, but emotions, affect the heart. "Keep your temper" is good medical advice, for when a person is angry the work his heart does may be increased as much as seventy-two foot pounds a minute. Even after the emotion or exertion has ceased the heart continues to do extra work for some time before it gets back to its normal rate.

The amount of extra work the heart can do is surprising. Tests have shown that in riding a bicycle at a rapid pace up a 10 per cent grade for half a mile the extra work imposed on the heart would be sufficient to lift one and one-eighth tons one foot.

There are various ways by which we might save the heart work. As the heart beats less rapidly when we are at rest we could save it 870,000 foot pounds of work a year by going to bed two hours earlier every night. Lying down half an hour daily would mean an annual saving of 219,000 foot pounds; an hour's rest every Sunday would save 62,400 foot pounds, and by staying in bed all day Sunday the annual saving would be nearly a million foot pounds.—Detroit Free Press.

Life In the Falklands.

The inhabitants of the Falkland Islands are a prosperous race, noted for their hospitality. Living is cheap in the islands, and all kinds of English fruits and vegetables abound there. There are, however, two great drawbacks to life in the Falklands. The climate is never really warm and fires have to be kept up all the year round. Servants are procured with difficulty. Most people import them from England, but as English girls are frequently snapped up and married as soon as they land they have to sign an agreement to remain in service three years. If they break it in order to marry the husband has to pay the passage out from England of another servant to replace his wife.—London Chronicle.

Illiteracy Among Children.

Illiteracy in the United States is doomed. Statistics compiled by the United States bureau of education show that of children from ten to fourteen years of age there were in 1910 only twenty-two out of every thousand who could neither read nor write. In 1900 there were of the same class forty-two per thousand. If reduction in illiteracy is still proceeding at even the same rate the illiterate children in this country between the ages of ten and fourteen inclusive now number not more than fifteen out of every thousand.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

ENEMY MURDERS ON THE HIGH SEA

Germans Send Innocent Passengers to Their Death.

British Passenger Steamers Aguila and Falaba Are Sunk Off the English Coast---Are Destroyed Before Non-combatants Are Transferred to Boats, and Heavy Loss of Life Occurs---Several Were Women.

LONDON, March 30.—Upwards of 150 lives were lost in the sinking by German submarines of the African liner Falaba and the British steamer Aguila, bound from Liverpool for Lisbon.

The Falaba, which was torpedoed in St. George's Channel Sunday afternoon, carried a crew of 90 and about 160 passengers, and of this total only 140 were rescued. Of those rescued eight died later from exposure.

The Aguila had a crew of 42, and three passengers, and of these 23 of the crew and all the passengers were lost.

In both cases, on sighting the submarine the captains tried to escape by putting on all speed possible, but the underwater craft overtook the steamers, showing that Germany now has some of her most modern submarines engaged in the blockade operations against Great Britain.

The captain of the Falaba, who was one of those lost, was given five minutes to get his passengers and crew into the boats, but, according to survivors, before this was possible, a torpedo was fired, striking the engine-room and causing a terrible explosion. Many persons were killed and the steamer sank in ten minutes.

Trawlers which happened to be in the vicinity rescued most of those who were saved; others got away in the boats which were ready for launching, and which were quickly lowered when the order was given to abandon the ship.

The Aguila was attacked off the Pembroke coast. The submarine, which in this case was the U-28, opened fire with her gun shells, which killed a woman passenger, the chief engineer and two of the crew. Even after the crew had commenced to lower the boats, according to the story of the survivors, the Germans kept up their fire and some of the boats were riddled with bullets.

The captain of the trawler Ottillie, whom the commander of the submarine told of the sinking of the Aguila, went to the rescue and picked up three boats, containing 19 of the crew. The fourth boat, which contained the other members of the crew, could not be found, and it is presumed that she foundered. On their arrival at Fishguard several of the crew wore bandages, having been wounded by the fire from the submarine.

Another Dutch steamer, the Amstel, of 853 tons, has been blown up by a mine off Flamboro Head, but her crew were rescued.

The Admiralty last night issued the following statement:

"Twenty-three members of the crew and three passengers are missing from the steamer Aguila.

"The steamer Falaba, which also sank, carried a crew of about 90 persons and about 160 passengers. About 140 survivors have been picked up, eight of whom, including the captain, died afterwards. It is feared that many persons on the steamer were killed by the explosion of the torpedo.

"The Dutch steamer Amstel, a vessel of 850 tons, belonging to P. A. Van Es & Co., of Rotterdam, when on a passage from Rotterdam to Coole, England, struck a mine at 4 a.m. the 29th of March, in a German mine field off Flamborough Head, Yorkshire, Eng. The crew had been landed in the Humber by the Grimsby trawler Pinewold."

Unofficial reports received from members of the crew of the Aguila were to the effect that only 13 members of the crew of the steamer had been lost when she was sunk by the German submarine U-28 last Saturday night.

An official list supplied at the offices of the Elder-Dempster Steamship Co. shows that so far as is known at present, 52 first-class passengers, 34 second-class passengers and 49 of the crew of the Falaba were saved.

Four of the passengers and four of the crew are reported killed and 61 passengers and 43 of the crew are missing.

A despatch from Cardiff, Wales, at midnight, says that one of the Falaba's passengers, in telling of their experiences, said that when the submarine ordered the passengers to take to the boats, the boats were lowered immediately and the passengers were served with lifebelts, but no one was allowed to take any personal effects.

"Then followed a horrible scene," said the passenger. "Some of the boats were swamped and the occupants were thrown into the sea. Several were drowned almost immediately.

"Barely ten minutes after we received the order to leave the ship I heard a report and saw the vessel heel over. The Germans had actually fired a torpedo at her at a range of about 100 yards when a large number of passengers, the captain and other officers were still distinctly to be seen aboard."

All the passengers and officers say that the submarine fired a torpedo before all the boats were lowered and while many persons were still aboard the steamer. One officer said:

"I was sitting on a boat which was suspended from the davits and was waiting for two women passengers when another officer shouted, 'Look out,' and then I saw the bubbles marking the track of a torpedo.

"There was a tremendous crash and the boat fell from the davits and turned over, throwing the passengers and crew into the icy water. The water was frightfully cold, and there were many who died from exposure."

OSHKIGMONG

(Special Correspondence.)

OSHKIMONG, March 30. — The snow is fast disappearing here and the old Papockewjs have lain down to rest. The crows and the early summer birds are returning from their winter quarters, and once more the Indians of Chemong are having the muskrat fever, which indicates that spring is nigh. Some of the Indians have already stationed themselves in their happy hunting grounds ready to set their steels to capture the little animals which frequent the marshes as soon as the ice has disappeared. The Indians of Chemong [illegible] lived exceedingly well during the hard winter.

Chief D. E. Whetung was in Toronto last week to attend the good road progress convention, which was held there.

We are pleased to learn that Mr. H. C. Buffam is recovering from an illness which confined him for several days, and we hope he will be fully restored again, to open school after Easter.

The young chief met with a very funny episode the other day in one of the streets of Peterborough which resulted almost in a fracas and looked more like a theatrical drama than a quiet peaceful pedestrian on the public street. As the young chief was walking along the street with a bundle under his arm, which indicated him as being a member of a bombardier corps, he was accosted by a man who wanted to arrest him. The young chief, who was not looking for trouble, resisted, and with a clear conscience walked off, but was closely followed by the man, who seemed to think the chief looked too suspicious to lose sight of. He was not satisfied until he saw that it was only a coat the chief had under his arm.

INCREASE IN COMMISSION

Firm Gave Charles E. Slater 50 Cents a Pair on Boots

OTTAWA, March 30.—Before the Parliamentary Boot Committee last night, Charles E. Slater, who acted as agent for the Gauthier Shoe Co in securing orders for 17,000 pairs of army boots from the Government, stated that he had received a commission of 50 cents per pair, making a total of $8,500. The Gauthier price for the boots was $3.82 1-2 per pair, made up of $3.32 1-2 which the company got and 50 cents commission, which Mr. Slater got. Before the war his commission was 10 per cent. for getting orders from the Militia Department.

"Why was your commission increased for the war orders?" asked Mr. Macdonald.

"I offered to take over the business and handle it," was the reply of the witness.

During his evidence the witness was reminded that refusal to testify would be dealt with as it had in the celebrated "state prisoner" affair of two years ago.

Still Chasing Victory.

AMSTERDAM, March 30.—During his visit to the western war theatre King Ludwig of Bavaria delivered a patriotic address to the Bavarian troops, concluding thus:

"The war has inflicted heavy losses upon us but we remain so. Victory will be ours."

FALSE REPORTS

Canadian Agent not Paying Excessive Prices

OTTAWA, March 30. — Although Sir George Foster, who is leading the House in the absence of the Prime Minister, announced yesterday morning that he hoped for prorogation by Thursday and at the latest by the end of the week, the House discussed in a somewhat leisurely manner the war credit vote of $100,000,000. The bill was finally passed after a passage between Hon. Wm. Pugsley and Maj.-Gen. Hughes. Mr. Pugsley repeated his statement that it was common talk among Canadians in New York that the allies were paying excessive prices for the ammunition purchased by Major J. Wesley Allison, the accredited representative of the Canadian Government.

Gen. Hughes demanded the names of any person giving currency to the report, which he denounced as "entirely false." He informed the House that the allies had placed orders for shells with Canadian manufacturers aggregating $57,000,000.

PROTECTS UNITED STATES INTERESTS

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 30.—The Grand Vizier yesterday promised Ambassador Morgenthau that the Turkish Government would do everything in its power to protect American interests and missions in northwestern Persia.

The Grand Vizier said he doubted the accuracy of the reports as to the Turkish regulars having made the attack, but immediately gave orders that proper protection be given to American interests.

A brave soul is a thing which all things serve.—Alexander Smith.

...A... CAREER

By DONALD CHAMBERLIN

Edward Wilkins was a farmer boy who when he was but seven years old showed signs of a towering ambition. Even at that tender age he discerned that, while there were a number of sources of power, the one that covered the widest field was wealth. At any rate, he saw persons living in fine houses and driving about in style, and he not only envied them, but resolved that as soon as he was able to accumulate money it should be the object of his life.

When Edward was fourteen he said goodby to his father and mother and went to the city to begin a career. Being bright and ready at all times for work, he found a situation and not only kept it, but advanced rapidly. As he grew older there was no desire in him for money in itself, but for the power and prominence it would give him. Except for the first few years he spent in the city, he did not accumulate by saving. The fortune that came to him was the result rather of daring operations, for which he seemed to have a genius.

After awhile Edward Wilkins had accumulated so much money that it seemed impossible he should ever be poor. His safety lay in having so much capital that he could carry through any scheme he undertook. If he wished to buy all the corn in the country and hold it at his own price he was able to do so. Did he choose to buy a railway he could first depress the stock, then purchase it and hold it at his own valuation.

Wilkins had no desire to exercise the power his wealth gave him. He was content with knowing that he possessed it. He did not care for political preferment; he took no interest in influencing the course of the government.

When the great financier was forty years of age he had reached the summit of his ambition. He had acquired enormous power through his wealth, but since the exercise of that power would give him no enjoyment he had come to the end of his desire. He was like Alexander, who complained because there were no more kingdoms to conquer.

When an active brain tires of what has occupied and fed it there comes a craving for something to take its place. One such person will spend years building a sumptuous residence, which is more likely to be a sepulcher than a home. Another will turn author, taking comfort in giving to the world theories for which it has no use. Wilkins, now that he had reached his goal in half a lifetime, began to wonder what would be the end of the other half. After a continued rise to the summit would he descend again to end his career in the valley?

One thing he had lived long enough to recognize. Life appeared to him a constant shifting. Nothing seemed to endure unless it was inanimate, and even that, though slowly, was continually changing its form. There were mountains where there had been valleys and valleys where there had been mountains. Cities had been buried for centuries, forgotten, then uncovered to serve as curiosities. Whole sections of land had slid down into the sea and passed out of sight.

What would become of his great fortune? He knew that after his death it would pass back into the great ocean of wealth. But would he retain it for the rest of his life? Now that he had achieved it he no longer valued it and cared not so much what was to become of it as what was to become of him. Enough to give him the ordinary comforts essential to old age was all he desired. But that much was of great moment to him.

One night he dreamed a vivid dream. He dreamed that he returned to the farm and was a boy again. Yet he possessed all the experience he had acquired. His ambition was gone. He said to himself: "Here I am, and here I wish to remain. My body is not as it was, full of life. It is tired. All I desire is rest."

It was a strange dream, this old spirit in a young body. It made a marked impression on him at the time, but gradually passed out of his mind with other forgotten things.

When Wilkins found that he had attained his desire he bethought himself what he could do to replace the object he had lost. Like many other rich men under similar circumstances, he decided to build himself a magnificent residence. He had long owned the farm on which he had been born. His father and mother had died there, and he had no use for the place. So the house was shut up and the land left untilled, though he gave orders that the house and fences should be kept in repair. The farm marked his beginning; the palace he was about to build would mark his end.

He spent a year on designs for his residence, then began to build. Four years passed, and it was not finished. Indeed, he did not wish it finished. He clung to building it for something to occupy him. When it was complete and he moved in he seemed lost in it. It was big enough for a hundred families, and there was only himself to use it.

One day when he felt ill and tired and lonely he concluded to go to the farm. He had not been there in many years. The view in front of the house he had always loved, and he sat down on the little porch to look at it.

Then he remembered his dream.

He never left this place of his birth. In a few weeks he died.

Boots Satisfactory to Troops in S. Africa

Why Overshoes Were Bought.

Gen. Fiset said in reference to the forwarding of 40,000 pairs of overshoes to the Canadians as Salisbury that this had been recommended to the Militia Council by Quartermaster-General Macdonald and agreed to. When word was received from Gen. Alderson that the overshoes did not compensate for the inferior character of the boots, the General had been authorized to buy new boots, the English army pattern being purchased. A departmental board of enquiry into the footwear was then constituted, and after its report a board had been appointed to prepare a new boot pattern. This was now being tested, but so far the Militia Council had not officially adopted a new specification.

Gen. Fiset stated that after the report of the departmental board the Militia department had considered the adoption of the English boot, but had found it would be impossible with present manufacturing equipment to manufacture it in Canada. Acting Minister Hazen had, however, instructed the Quartermaster-General, if necessary, to obtain the new machinery required for the manufacture of the English boot and supply it to the manufacturers.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald said he had been informed that the new boot was objected to by Canadian manufacturers because it did not embody the Goodyear welt. The witness did not know anything as to this.

General Fiset testified that he had worn a pair of ordnance militia boots himself at different times since September and had found them satisfactory. He told Mr. Pringle that the boots ordered after this war broke out were the same as those approved in 1910 by a departmental board. The department had every reason to believe the boots would stand the wear as well as they had for the permanent force. The department had had reports of regimental boards in regard to the boots, but found that these must always be taken with a grain of salt. As for the wear the boots served to the expeditionary forces had given, General Fiset said he was not surprised that General Alderson had made the report he did since by that time the boots had served their time. Many of the officers of the expeditionary forces were men without experience, who could not advise their men how to care for their boots. Boots not dubbed would wear out in 15 days.

"How do you account for the delay in getting a new type of boot?" asked Mr. E. M. MacDonald.

"It is a very serious matter. Some governments have taken six years," replied Gen. Fiset dryly.

Mr. F. B. McCurdy read a clipping telling of boots supplied to the Australian forces, whose soles "had melted away from the top parts in two days."

The witness said the Canadian boots used in the South African war had cost $6 per pair and were manufactured by the Slater Co.

After Col. Halleck, of the Militia Department, had given evidence as to the type of boot recommended by Mr. Wichett's board, a nail boot with standard screw, not Goodyear welt, Mr. T. B. Connolly, superintendent of the John MacPherson Company, Hamilton, was called. He was asked in regard to the statement of one of his own former employes at Salisubry that a piece had dropped out of the centre of the sole of his boot after three days' wear. Unless these boots had been burned, said the witness, the man was telling a deliberate lie.

The witness said the first shipment of 6000 MacPherson boots had been issued without government inspection. The boots had been manufactured almost at cost, the order being taken to keep their hands busy.

Corp. Edwards, Staff Orderly Service, said he had been at Salisbury Plain and was still wearing the boots he had worn there. He produced them for committee, and they proved to be Gauthier boots, in good condition, having had no repairs other than half-soling. The witness said he had heard no complaints from other men at Valcartier. He had been wearing Canadian militia boots for five years, and they had always given good satisfaction.

After having committal to the tower suggested to him as an alternative to replying to a request for information, Mr. Charles E. Slater, of Montreal, told the Parliamentary Boot Committee last night that he had made 50 cents per pair commission on every pair of boots supplied to the Militia Department by the Gauthier Shoe Co. of Quebec. He also admitted that since he had accepted the agency for the Gauthier firm he had suggested changes in the militia boot specifications of a kind to increase the price. He stated that paying commission on government orders was a common practice with shoe manufacturers, but could not name any case when pressed.

THE LADS IN RED

The following lines of an old recruiting song were set to music by "Molloy" and sung by Mr. Barrington Foote about thirty years ago, before "khaki" came into use for service uniforms. The song was entitled "The Lads in Red."

The sergeant met me on the road
Saye he, my lad, to me,
The war's begun, and now's the time
For lads of six foot three.
A smarter regiment you'll not find
Tho' you may travel far
Or truer comrades round the world
In friendship, love or war.

Chorus—
Here they come, fife and drum
Gaily led, the lads in red,
Not one eye will be dry
When the regiment marches by
Your fortune's made if you will come
With the lads in red and the fife and drum.

Says he we've just come from Japan,
It's yonder o'er the sea,
The language is not quite the same
As spoke by you and me.
But soldiers are the boys to learn
And when on shore we ran
We heard each little maiden whisper
Softly to her fan.

Chorus—

I took the sergeant by the hand
I served for thirty year
Till now, a worn out veteran, I
On one leg wander here.
But when the regiment marches by
I throw my crutch aside,
And murmur in the sergeant's ear
With all the old glad pride:
Here they come, fife and drum,
Gaily led, the lads in red,
Now I say, old and gray,
If this life had but one day
I'd give it twenty times to come,
To be back once more
With the fife and drum.

The song was very popular for years; until a vulgar parody appeared, and "Lads in Red" was banished.

RECORDING COW QUALITY.

In many dairy sections in Canada it is quite possible, judging from official figures, to find a herd of cows producing milk at a feed cost of only sixty-two cents, or less, per hundred pounds, while on a farm two miles away milk costs perhaps ninety cents or more per hundred for feed. And on that farm where milk costs more, may often be found some dairy requisites, such as a pure bred dairy sire, good ensilage, etc. Other requisites may be lacking, well rounded dairy judgment, cow quality.

Solid and lasting success is attained both easier and quicker by the intelligent use of dairy records, this is just common sense selection of paying cows, instead of the indiscriminate boarding of "just cows." The individual cow of good promise is quickly and unerringly spotted by the use of simple dairy records and fed for better production at less cost; while the antique souvenir, useless as a profit maker, is beefed because she lacks ability to milk at a reasonable cost for feed.

The man who raises his own calves can take quick strides in building up a good herd, for he keeps only his best cows and knows just what he has got. The man who sells, often sells his best cows for a song (this is the plain history of some world-champion sows) just because he does not know what good cow quality he has; dairy records would have informed him.

A matter of ten minutes per cow per month spent in recording will put surprising, most illuminating results before any herd owner, indicative of great possibilities at present dormant in his dairy cows. Write to the Dairy Division, Ottawa, for samples of record forms, and start to lower your cost of milk production through selecting better cow quality.

Captain R. J. Gardiner will succeed Lieut.-Col. H. R. Duff, at Kingston, as Director of Medical Services at No. 3 Divisional Area. Lieut.-Col. Duff goes overseas with the 21st Battalion.

TURNED BACK TO LINDSAY

Medical Examiner Displeased With the Slaughter at Belleville

Says the Lindsay Warder: Probably nothing aroused more comment around town since the first red coat received his billett which directed him to his proper quarters than the return of 27 soldiers on Friday night and 60 more on Saturday evening from Belleville, where they had been rejected by the examining physician there, who pronounced them physically unfit for the overseas campaign. It was apparently a careless examination made by the physician, and reflects in no small degree upon his skill and fitness for such a position. The men were ruthlessly cast aside and rejected according to reports for trivial defects.

Doctors McCulloch and McAlpine gave the returned soldiers a thorough examination yesterday and pronounced them physically fit. A number of those cast aside in Belleville were men who had seen service and wore badges and stripes that demonstrated their perfect manhood to cope with an adversary as becomingly today as in previous years.

An investigation will be held before a board of enquiry, composed of capable physicians, at the Armouries, when the matter will be fully dealt with. Colonel Duff, head of the medical staff, will, it is expected, arrive tonight to conduct the investigation.

FUTURE NAVAL DEVELOPMENTS IN DOMINION

Establishment of Canadian Navy at Present Time an Absurdity

Ottawa, March 30. — During the discussion of the War Appropriation Act in the Commons yesterday, Mr. J. H. Burnham, of West Peterborough, was responsible for some interesting observations in regard to the probable future naval developments in Canada. He severely criticised the government for allowing itself to be forced by the opposition to make increased naval expenditures, declaring that the sooner the government got to the country and knocked out the Canadian navy idea the better.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, touching lightly on the remarks of the member for Peterborough, said that the time was coming when a choice would have to be made between a Canadian navy and a policy of contribution.

Says It's Absurd.

Mr. Burnham, during the course of his remarks which followed an explanation by the minister of naval affairs on expenditures on the Niobe, Rainbow, etc., since the outbreak of the war, said that he was sorry to see Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his lieutenants egging the government on in the direction of the establishment of a Canadian navy. He was sorry to see the government allowing itself to be forced to take the steps it had taken in this direction. He said that it was absurd for a country like Canada to dream of establishing a navy at present. Eight million people propose to blow themselves up like the frog in the fable with an immense expenditure. The idea of a Canadian navy was popular on the two coasts of course but he was convinced that the people in the middle of Canada were against it.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier thanked the member for Peterborough for stating that the government had acted on the advice of the opposition. He evidently thinks he said, that the government is submitting to the views of those who sit on this side of the House. He said if they went to the country they might be knocked down for it.

"I believe so, too," remarked Mr. Burnham.

Sir Wilfrid added that Canada must choose one thing or the other.

Wants Three Million.

Mr. Hazen in the course of his statement which led up to the foregoing discussion said that since the war broke out naval expenditures had amounted to $3,791,608. He estimated an additional expenditure of $3,000,000 for the year commencing April 1st. The minister gave an extensive review of all the steps taken by the Naval Department since the outbreak of the war to defend the coast of Canada and paid tribute to the generosity of Canadians in offering yachts, etc., for the defence of their country.

An estimate of the military expenditure under the war vote was then presented to the House by General Hughes. It was proposed during the war to spend ninety-five millions, the chief items being as follows: Pay for 45,000 men, $45,000,000; rations, $7,000,000; transport, $18,000,000; rifles, etc., $3,000,000; stores and equipment, $15,000,000; artillery, $3,000,000; and remounts, $2,000,000.

Italian Regiments Move.

BASLE, Switzerland, March 30. — The sixty-seven Italian regiments of infantry departed suddenly from Como yesterday, says a press despatch. It was announced the troops were to take part in target practice, but it is reported they are really en route to the Austrian frontier.

RUSSIAN FLEET HAS MASTERY OF SEA

Turkish Defences on Both European and Asiatic Sides of Straits Are Subjected to a Heavy Bombardment---Cruiser Breslau is Disabled Beyond Repair---Turks Have Poor Equipment.

LONDON, March 30. — The Daily News has the following from Frederick Rennet at Petrograd:

"The absolute clearance of the enemy's ships from the Black Sea has been promptly followed by a close bombardment of the Turkish defences on the European and Asiatic shores at the mouth of the Bosphorus. The news of the sound of Russian cannon echoing through the streets of Constantinople on Palm Sunday has awakened great joy in Russia.

It is known the Black Sea fleet was recently engaged in vigorous preparatory work. The Asiatic coast has been searched for mine-layers and several sunk, while all the Turkish transports were either destroyed or captured. The Breslau in its flight back to the Bosphorus, struck a Turkish mine near the coast and was disabled beyond repair. The Hamidieh was the last fighting ship to venture into the open sea.

The Russians, at dawn yesterday, it is officially announced, began shelling the forts spread over a distance of four or five miles on each side of the Bosphorus, aviators registering the effect of fire and disposition of the Turkish batteries. Only a few torpedo boats attempted to emerge into the sea, but they were driven beyond range into the channel. Russian shells were dropped accurately over a wide radius, causing much destruction. The bombardment will continue.

It is known the Turks are poorly supplied at the northern end of the Bosphorus with engineering personnel and equipment. Besides, they are anxious as to the number of shells for the guns. It scarcely is likely the Germans can spare any effective talent from the Dardanelles.

RUSSIANS POURING IN, HUNGARY IS INVADED

Germans and Austrians in Desperate Effort to Stop Czar's Troops

LONDON, March 30. — Desperate efforts are being put forth by the Germans and Austrians to delay the vigorous advance of the Russian forces. In the passes of the Carpathians fierce engagements along a wide front are still going on. The western passes are in the hands of the Russians, who are pouring out on to the plains of northern Hungary. The eastern passes have not yet been forced, but the enemy in this region is hard pressed by the vigorous onslaught of the Russians. In East Galicia and Bukowina the situation is unchanged. In North Poland the Germans are attempting surprise attacks in the hope of checking the Russian advance, and Berlin reports the storming and capture of Taurogen and 300 prisoners.

Despatches to Budapest newspapers say that the battle is raging with undiminished violence in the Uszok Pass and the west.

Nieuport was bombarded yesterday by German artillery, but very little damage was done.

Saps and mines are the sole means of gaining ground in the Argonne, according to an official note given out in Paris yesterday. Night and day the sappers work hard, and perilous is their task. The man who allows himself to be surprised is lost. Indefatigably they use the pick and the shovel.

Between Four de Paris and the Aisne the Engineer Corps in the Argonne already has constructed 3,000 yards of sapping lines and exploded 52 mines, the latter necessitating about 16,000 pounds of explosives. Incidents such as the sudden meeting of French and German troops underground and a race to a mine to explode it are not infrequent.

MAKE OFFER TO EQUIP REGIMENT

One Hundred Thousand Dollars From Brockville Family

BROCKVILLE, March 30.—Speaking here last night before an immense audience at the launching of a two days' campaign to raise $25,000 towards the Canadian Patriotic Fund, Hon. Arthur Meighen, Solicitor-General, announced that a Brockville family had made an offer of $100,000 to the Dominion Government to meet the expenses of equipping a Canadian regiment for overseas service. He did not mention names, but it was later learend that the magnificent contribution came from Mrs. G. T. Fulford, widow of Senator Fulford, and her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Hardy, and it is understood that it will be accepted by the Government. Mr. Hardy presided at last night's meeting. Prof. L. W. ("Trooper") Milloy was one of the speakers.

Martial Law In Italy.

ROME, March 30. — Martial law will go into effect throughout Italy on April 1. While no formal proclamation may be issued, the military establishment will take over all the telegraph and telephone lines and the railroads. After midnight on March 31, no information relating to the movements of the Italian navy or army may be transmitted.

This is one of Italy's final steps in its war plans. Mobilization orders will be next. These are expected at any moment.

THERE WAS NO RESCUE BY GERMAN TROOPS

PETROGRAD, March 30.—A statement referring to the German official claim that in evacuating Memel the Russians took with them 3,000 residents who afterwards were rescued by German troops near Krominger was issued last night from the headquarters of the General Staff.

Headquarters says in its statement that after a careful investigation it has been established that an engagement against German troops attacking from Tilsit took place at Memel and also on the roads from Memel to Korcjany and Memel to Polangen.

The assertion is made that the residents of Memel escaped to intervening ground, where no fighting was in progress, and there awaited the issue of the battle.

THEY WANT THE WORD

Liberals Raised Outcry Because Bill Does not Specify Soldiers

TORONTO, March 30. — The fact that the word "soldier" does not appear in the Government temperance bill, as the Opposition had expected from the announcement of Hon. W. J. Hanna last week, occasioned a sharp interchange in the Legislature yesterday. Wm. Proudfoot, of Huron, remarked that in the first draft of the measure the word had appeared, but that all reference to men in uniform had disappeared, and he said it was wrong practice to make such a change after first reading had been given.

The Provincial Secretray explained that although the word did not appear power was taken to exclude any class of citizen the Government pleased. He had not specified that this particular reference would appear. The bill was the same in substance as he had described. He stated that the wording was not settled when the address was made, and that he had not seen the legal draft at the time. The Premier stated that the bill was given to the clerk of the House in blank, but the Opposition appealed to the Speaker for a ruling. The Speaker decided against the appeal.

During the evening sitting Sam Carter (Wellington) and other members of the Opposition entered a vigorous criticism of the personnel of the Workmen's Compensation Board. The charge was made that in one instance at least an officer had been elected on a partisan basis; that money could have been saved to Ontario and that the elements of population most concerned was not represented.

The Premier replied that the salaries had been fixed by the House and that manufacturers had urged an even greater remuneration. The chairman was a fully qualified and competent man. As for the vice-chairman, he, too, had exceptional qualifications. He had studied labor questions, and age lines were as out of place in commissions as in Parliamentary bodies. The board had proven very acceptable.

Zapatas Evacuate Mexico.

WASHINGTON, March 30. — Despatches received in diplomatic quarters here yesterday from diplomatists in Mexico City said it was understood there that Gen. Obregon with Carranza forces was returning to the capital and that Zapata forces were about to evacuate.

MUST ROOT OUT DRINK

It is Greatest of Britain's Enemies in the War

GROWING CONVICTION FOR DRASTIC ACTION

LONDON, March 30. — "We are fighting Germany, Austria and drink and so far as I can see the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink," said David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replying yesterday to a deputation of the Shipbuilding Employers' Federation, the members of which were unanimous in urging that in order to meet the requirements at the present time, there should be a total prohibition during the period of the war of the sale of intoxicating liquors. This should apply not only to public houses, but also to private clubs, so as to operate equally with all classes of the community.

It was stated that despite the fact that work was being carried on night and day, seven days in the week, the total working time on the average in nearly all the British shipyards was actually less than before the war and the average productiveness had decreased. There were many men doing splendid and strenuous work probably as good as the men in the trenches, but many did not even approximate full time, thus disastrously reducing the average.

Notwithstanding the curtailments of the hours they are allowed to keep open, the receipts of the public houses in the neighborhood of the shipyards had greatly increased, in some cases forty per cent. As an instance of one of many similar cases that of a battleship coming in for immediate repairs was cited. She was delayed a whole day through the absence of riveters, who were drinking and carousing.

In one yard the riveters have been working on the average only forty hours a week, and in another yard only 36 hours.

In conclusion, the deputation which included representatives of the leading shipbuilders of the country, drew attention to the example set by France and Russia, and urged upon the Chancellor the need of drastic and immediate action.

"I have a growing conviction, based on accumulating evidence," continued the Chancellor, "that nothing but root-and-branch methods would be of the slightest avail in dealing with the evil. I believe it is the general feeling that if we are to settle German militarism we must first of all settle with the drink."

Mr. Lloyd George intimated that Lord Kitchener, the Secretary for War, and Field Marshal French, in command of the British Expeditionary Forces on the continent were of the same opinion, and he promised to lay the statements of the deputation before the Cabinet. He said in conclusion:

"I had the privilege of an audience with his Majesty this morning, and I am permitted by him to say that he is very deeply concerned on this question, very deeply concerned, and the concern which is felt by him, I am certain, is shared by all his subjects in this country."

PROTEST BY FRUIT MEN

Increase in Freight Rates Would Ruin Industry

TORONTO, March 30.—Representatives from practically every fruit growers' association in Ontario appeared before the Dominion Railway Board at the City Hall yesterday to protest against the proposed increase in freight rates.

Many of them submitted figures and conclusive facts to prove that they actually lost money on shipments made to far eastern and western points, owing to the freight rates charged, and poor facilities provided by the railway companies in the way of refrigerator cars.

A grower stated that he shipped 70 baskets of plums to Winnipeg and only received $7.64 for them after paying freight charges, etc., an average of about 10c. per basket.

A number of apple growers also protested against an increase. One stated that he shipped 600 boxes of apples to Winnipeg and only received an average of 15c. per box of 80 pounds.

S. L. Squire, president of the Ontario Good Roads Association, protested against an increase of five cents a ton on sand, gravel and crushed stone. Such a step would deter road work.

Rev. A. A. Smith, of Verschoyle, has been called to Knox Presbyterian Church, Gravenhurst. The stipend is $1,100.

Mr. William Webster, a pioneer of Middlesex County, and formerly a member of the County Council, died in his 81st year.

CITIZENS OFFER VACANT LOTS

Three Cash Prizes Will be Offered for Competition

Good progress has been made in connection with the vacant lot garden scheme. Already a number of citizens have offered their vacant lots, and it is anticipated that many more will be secured. It has been decided to award three cash prizes for the best-kept lot. A public meeting under the auspices of the Horticultural Society is called for Wednesday evening, March 31st, at eight o'clock, in the City Council chambers, to which all who are interested in the scheme are invited.

Mr. Alfred Brown has been engaged as caretaker of Victoria and Central Parks this season, his duties to commence as soon as the parks are dry enough to clean up.

WOMAN COULD HARDLY STAND

Because of Terrible Backache. Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I suffered from displacement and inflammation, and had such pains in my sides, and terrible backache so that I could hardly stand. I took six bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I can do any amount of work, sleep good, eat good, and don't have a bit of trouble. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to every suffering woman."—Mrs. HARRY FISHER, 1642 Juniata Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Woman's Case.

Providence, R. I.—"I cannot speak too highly of your Vegetable Compound as it has done wonders for me and I would not be without it. I had a displacement, bearing down, and backache, until I could hardly stand and was thoroughly run down when I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helped me and I am in the best of health at present. I work in a factory all day long besides doing my housework so you can see what it has done for me. I give you permission to publish my name and I speak of your Vegetable Compound to many of my friends."—Mrs. ABBIL LAWSON, 126 Lippitt St., Providence, R. I.

Danger Signals to Women are what one physician called backache, headache, nervousness, and the blues. In many cases they are symptoms of some female derangement or an inflammatory, ulcerative condition, which may be overcome by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Thousands of American women willingly testify to its virtue.

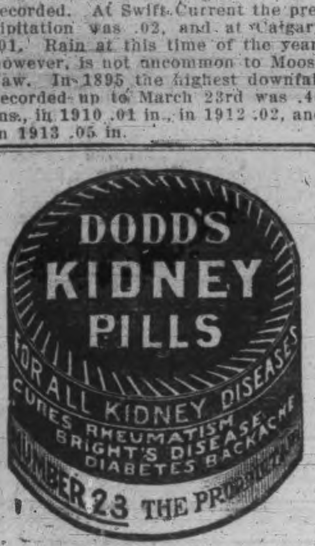
BRIGHT PROSPECTS FOR CANADIAN HORSE-BREEDERS.

In the course of an address to provincial stockmen, at a meeting held in Regina two days ago, Dr. Rutherford, of the Natural Resources Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company pointed out that the almost total destruction of the high class animals, especially Belgian and French Percherons, will cause breeders in these two countries to look to Western Canada for their pedigree stock. Dr. Rutherford also referred to the cornering of the market by the Canadian Government in reserving to themselves the right of purchase of Canadian horses for their own contingents, but was extremely optimistic of the future prospects for the horse business. This view is commonly held by the horsemen throughout the West, and from all indications, the more farsighted of them are arranging to considerably increase their activities, seeing that much higher prices are deemed inevitable.

The downfall of rain in Moose Jaw on Tuesday last was, according to the Moose Jaw Times most acceptable to everyone. To the farmers this significant sign of spring was welcome. The precipitation for Moose Jaw was .04. This was the largest downfall recorded. At Swift Current the precipitation was .02, and at Calgary .01. Rain at this time of the year, however, is not uncommon to Moose Jaw. In 1895 the highest downfall recorded up to March 23rd was .40 ins., in 1910 .01 in., in 1912 .02, and in 1913 .05 in.



CHARCOAL BURNING

Wood Now Destroyed Might be Profitably Converted Into Charcoal

In land clearing work, use may be made of wood taken therefrom for the production of charcoal. Canada has a constantly growing market for charcoal, and with good prices for the supply, it is advisable to increase the production. While the retort is, undoubtedly, the more economical means of producing charcoal, the advantage is offset by the fact that the wood which would be utilized in the production by pit burning would otherwise be waste material, and, consequently, the return from its use would offset the additional cost of production by the latter method.

For charcoal burning, it is essential to have a piece of land sheltered as much as possible from the wind. All kinds of hardwood not under two inches in diameter may be used. The wood should be sawn into two-foot lengths, and split, if required, into pieces not over four inches square. Sufficient wood should be provided for two pits; it is advisable to burn two pits at once, as during the charring process two pits can be attended to as readily as one, night and day attention being required.

Charcoal "pits" are usually built about twenty-one feet in diameter and about nine feet high. To commence the pile, a strong stake is driven into the ground, having about one foot exposed. Around this stake are placed upright small pieces of dry wood of equal length, and this is continued until a layer of wood is formed the size of the pit. A circle about one foot in diameter is built around the stake driven into the ground by placing the pieces of wood horizontally on the upright pieces, the end coming to the centre circle. This circle is thus built up to the required height, forming a chimney for the pit, by which it is fired. Outside this circular core the wood is piled on end and reclining inwards, layer upon layer, until the pit is of the size required. When the building is completed it is covered with newly-cut sod, the grassy side inwards, commencing at the base and working upwards, the sod overlapping a few inches, and the chimney being left open. Before covering the top part of the pit, all crevices between the wood should be packed with sod or sawdust to exclude the air. The pit is fired by dropping hot coals and small pieces of dry wood into the opening at the top; the opening is then covered with sod, which effectually closes in the pit, and the charring commences.

Constant attention is required day and night during the burning, especially during stormy weather, as the wind, by striking a particular part of the pit, causes that part of the pit to burn more rapidly and possibly fall in. Should this occur, the space should be at once filled in with rough logs and again covered with sod.

The time required for burning varies from seven to nine days, according to weather conditions, dry and mild weather requiring the longer period.

As the charring proceeds, the sod covering gradually disappears until only a slight covering of burnt earth remains. When the pits have burned out and become cool their size will be reduced to somewhat less than half of the original. The charcoal may be extracted by means of a fine-toothed rake, after which it should be stored in a dry place, care being taken to see that no live embers are left.—Conservation.

Atrocities In Canada.

Canadians will be interested in an article in the Cologne Gazette recently from an American correspondent, in which he describes the experience of a German-American writer, who has spent the greater part of his life in the States and is a man of education. In his opinion the position of the German-American in Canada is even worse than in the States. "One is horrified to learn that a Canadian mob has slaughtered Germans on the street for no other reason than that they were Germans. In Toronto the police pay daily domiciliary visits to houses of German-Canadians, and their mails are all opened. German newspapers, especially the New York Staats Zeitung, are prohibited, and any person found with a copy is liable to a penalty of five years' penal servitude. These enormities are not printed in the United States, but the correspondent of the Cologne Gazette knows all about them from other sources."

Lately, the correspondent adds, a meeting was dispersed by Canadian police, merely because some person recited a German poem, which happened to have some nasty verses about England.

A MODEST MILLIONAIRE

Sir Herbert S. Holt is Known to Very Few Canadians

Sir Herbert S. Holt, of Montreal, recently honored with a knighthood, is said to be the most modest and retiring of Canada's millionaires. He is one of the biggest power and transportation men in the Dominion, but he doesn't go in for social or club life of any kind, and is personally known to very few people.

Sir Herbert Holt came to Canada in 1875 as a nineteen-year-old immigrant from Ireland. He had been given a training in mathematics and engineering at Trinity College, Dublin, and he was given a job by James Ross, of Montreal, on the Victoria Railway, a crude little lumbering line extending north from Lindsay into the forests of Haliburton. Young Holt made himself very useful, and when Ross moved to Toronto as superintendent of the Credit Valley Railway, later absorbed by the C. P. R., he brought Holt with him. The young engineer had a good deal to do with the construction of its various extensions. In 1883 James Ross moved again — going to the West as superintendent of construction on the prairie division of the C. P. R. — and again he took young Holt with him.

About the same time William Mackenzie and D. D. Mann went West. Holt soon saw that there was more money in the contracting business than in working on salary as an engineer, and he spent seven years in that business, being all the time more or less in touch with Mackenzie, Mann, and Ross. Returning to Montreal, he directed his energies to getting control of that city's power and light facilities. He first bought out the old Montreal Gas Company. Then he acquired the Royal Electric Company, and by degrees buying out competing companies or crushing them, he evolved the present Montreal Light, Heat, & Power Co., with its seventeen million dollars capital and its almost absolute monopoly in the city and district of Montreal.

Montreal Power is the monument H. S. Holt has reared to his prowess as a financier. He knows all about that company and its equipment. He is the company's own resident engineer, and has traveled all over the world improving his knowledge of electrical engineering problems.

He is also a bank president, being head of the Royal Bank. By the way, he has the unique distinction of having been president of two banks, for he was the first president of the ill-fated Sovereign Bank, and held that office for three years. Sir Herbert is a director of the C. P. R. and is a liberal investor in stocks of any kind that have a basis of industrialism. He is one of the biggest of Montreal's financial magnates—one of the inner circle. Personally he is also a big man. He is rather better than six feet one in height, and his frame is powerful and well knit — that of a man who lived his early life outdoors and was very much at home there.

There is nothing of the mixer about this new Montreal knight. He spends most of his time between his house on Stanley street and his office in the Power Building on Craig street. Usually he makes a trip across the Atlantic once a year, but the rest of the time he lives quietly at home. He doesn't care for clubs and has few intimates.

The Armenians.

Armenia is a country of strong contrasts, of opposite extremes of heat and cold, light and shade, drought and moisture, and contains many mysteries awaiting solution. The ethnologist is still in doubt as to what branch of the great European family the Armenian people belong to. The philologist has not yet classified their language. The antiquarian knows next to nothing of their early history.

Just a Question.

"Well," said father impatiently, "what is it now?"

"There's something I want to know, father, before I read any more. Will you tell me, please, if a yawning chasm is the same thing exactly as a sleepy hollow?"—London Telegraph.

Hogs.

Selects weighed off cars were reported at $8.75 to $9, one firm selling 7 carloads at the latter price.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 29.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, west end market, receipts of live stock for the week ending March 27 were 1100 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 2600 hogs and 1500 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 900 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 500 calves.

On account of the continued small supplies of cattle coming forward, and the fact that a large percentage of them consisted of cows and heifers, a stronger feeling developed in the market for steers and prices as against a week ago show an advance of 25c per hundred pounds. This was Easter market day, but notwithstanding this fact there was no display of cattle, as in former years, but the average quality of the stock was good, and, as butchers' and packers' supplies on hand were small, there was an improved demand and an active trade was done. A few small lots of extra choice steers for the Easter trade were on the market, which were sold at $8.50, $8.75 and $9 per hundred pounds, while ordinary choice steers brought $8 to $8.25, but the principal demand was for good steers, at $7.50 to $7.75.

The feature of the small-meat trade was the increased offerings of calves, for which there was a good demand. A few extra choice veals brought forward for the Easter trade sold at 8c to 9c per pound, live weight, while the ordinary run of stock sold at unchanged prices. The market for sheep and lambs was quiet, but prices were firm on account of the limited supplies available, and sales of small lots of Ontario lambs were made at $8.50 to $9, and ewe sheep at $5.75 to $6 per hundred pounds. A few spring lambs were on the market, which brought from $7 to $10 each, as to size and quality. The tone of the market for hogs was strong under a good demand from packers, and an active trade was done in selected lots at $9, while sows sold at $7, and stags at $4.50 per hundred pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $8 to $8.25; butchers' cattle, medium, $7 to $7.75; butchers' cattle, common, $5 to $6.50; canners, $3.75 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.50 to $6.75; butchers' cattle, medium, $5.50 to $6.25; butchers' cattle, bulls, $5.25 to $7; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75; milkers, common and medium, each, $60 to $65; springers, $50 to $65; sheep, ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and culls, $5.25 to $5.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, off cars, $9; calves, $2.50 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Cattle—Receipts, 16,000; market unsettled. Beeves, $6 to $8.75; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.75; calves, $7 to $10.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 24,000; market higher; light, $6.65 to $6.90; mixed, $6.60 to $6.90; heavy, $6.40 to $6.90; rough, $6.40 to $6.55; pigs, $5.00 to $6.60; bulk of sales, $6.75 to $6.85.

CURLY BLOUNT SIGNS GEORGE NILL AND LOUIE SCHETTLER

Former Peterborough Pilot is Keen on Canadian Leaguers — Hamilton Players Suspended — Baseball Notes

Ottawa, March 30.—George Nill, the ex-big league infielder, who played third base so capably for Ottawa last year, and whose war club drove in many Senatorial runs, has signed with Youngstown this season in the Central League. Nill signed a non-reserve contract with Ottawa last spring and was free at the end of the season. He was a very high-priced man and there was little chance of Ottawa bringing him back this season. Nill hit .310 last summer for a total of 164 bases, scored 61 runs and stole twenty bases. Curly Blount, last year with Peterborough, is piloting Youngstown this season, and in addition to Nill has Louie Schettler, one of the best twirlers in the Canuck ring last year.

Chief Bill Garlow, the Carlisle Indian with Hamilton in 1912 and 1913 will pitch for the Elmira, N.Y., State League, club this year. Garlow was south with the Boston Red Sox the spring of 1914 and used the first two months of the season to pitch to the hitters in batting practice. Later he went to Lewiston in the New England League. He had a great battle with Joe McManus for pitching honors in the Canadian League in 1912, but in 1913 was hammered all over the circuit. Hamilton sold him to the Red Sox for $200.

Here is the result of Saturday's meeting of the Hamilton directors:—
Harry Corns, Billy Cunningham, Billy Donohue and Red Fisher suspended.
Jack White a free agent.
Lease of grounds held up pending close of deal for ownership by Controller W. H. Cooper.

Purchase of Tiffany, big first-baseman with a B class club last year, agreed to.

Providence has given Third Baseman Eddie Wright his release outright. Eddie was with St. Thomas in 1912 and 1913, but only played when he felt inclined. His folks are said to be well-to-do.

* * *

Catcher Jimmy McAvoy, with Berlin in 1913, is doing most of the backstopping for the Philadelphia Athletics this spring.

* * *

Fred Ostermeyer, with Ottawa part of the season 1913, won 16 and lost 19 for Asheville, tailenders of the North Carolina League, last year. Joe McManus, with Durnham in the same league, won 23 and lost 18. Durham finished third.

* * *

George Leclaire, a former Montreal pitcher, who couldn't make good in the Canadian League in 1913, was a first string moundman for the Pittsburg Feds last season. Some class to the Gilmore circuit.

BOMBARDIER WELLS TOOK COUNT IN TENTH ROUND

English Champion Showed Cleverness in Bout With Moran

London, March 30.—Frank Moran, the American heavyweight, who hails from Pittsburg, knocked out the English champion, Bombardier Wells, in the tenth round, before 4,500 spectators in the London Opera House last night. Moran sent a right to Wells' jaw and the English champion fell flat on his face in the ring as a dead man.

The crowd, which had watched Wells' clever boxing, enthusiastically seemed stunned; then cheers burst forth and Wells' seconds lifted his prostrated form and carried it over the ropes.

In the first round Moran outfought and outgeneralled the Englishman, but in the second Wells seemed to regain his nerve, and from then until the knockout fought a cleaner and more scientific battle, although Moran's blows seemed to do the greater damage.

The second round went to Wells on points; in the third honors were even, but Wells had the advantage in the fourth. Both men were now bleeding over the left eye.

Again in the fifth Wells' superiority was marked, but Moran shaded him in the sixth and before the eighth round was over Wells was bleeding profusely and appeared to be tired, while Moran was smiling and confident.

In the tenth, Wells slipped, and Moran put a vicious right to the jaw, which sent Wells sprawling on his back. He lay until the count of six and then rose unsteadily, while the crowd roared. As Wells got to his feet Moran sent another lightning right to the jaw and the Englishman took the count.

The bout was a twenty round match for a purse of $3,500.

NEW O.A.L.A. PRESIDENT.

Toronto, March 30.—There will be no contest for the presidency of the O.A.L.A. at the annual meeting Friday next. The office goes to Ed. Hinds of Orillia by acclamation, owing to Dr. McGibbon of Bracebridge having retired from the running. The latter in a letter states that he was nominated without his consent and he couldn't see his way clear this year owing to the fact that having enlisted with the Medical Corps he may be called to the front any time.

Mayor Church will open the O. A. L. A. convention Good Friday.

HONUS WAGNER, THAT'S ALL.

He never wrote stuff for the papers
Like players whose names were the rage;
He never cut up any capers
On any town's vaudeville stage.
He was tempted with many a shilling
And sometimes we thought he would fall,
But somehow he never was willing;
He was plain Honus Wagner, that's all.

When Evers was trying in writing
To prove Charlie Murphy a scamp,
When other Meyers was also inditing
And Mathewson had writer's cramp,
The old German boy kept on playing,
And playing the best kind of ball;
He never was gaited for straying—
He was just Honus Wagner, that's all.

The years that are crowding upon us
Should teach us as fast as they flow
To be like the hard-hitting Honus
And plug at the game that we know.
He never tried starring in fiction;
He never tried packing a hall;
But for this there is no contradiction:
He's a great Honus Wagner — that's all.

BASEBALL FOR CANADIANS WHO ARE AT CLIVEDON

Men Recovering From Wounds Will Play or Watch the Game

Ottawa, March 30.—There is to be baseball for the convalescent men of the Canadian contingent at the Duchess of Connaught Hospital at Clivedon. In a letter which has been received by Frank Shaughnessy from Lieutenant Colonel Gorrell, the officer in charge of the hospital, it is stated that Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Brooks have given a fine baseball outfit and as there are 120 Canadian fans in the company which Colonel Gorrell commands, he is endeavoring to form a league to play when the men are off duty and when, with the Canadians who are recovering from their wounds, there are sufficient to provide two good teams and sufficient fans to make the game interesting.

"As soon as the boys can get out of bed," says Colonel Gorrell, "I make them go out in chairs to the green where they can see the chaps who can walk, bowling, etc. The poor fellows who cannot get out of bed are moved in their beds into the fresh air and it will help a lot to amuse these chaps to see others knocking around. In the company are several boys who were in the city league so we may have some good games.

Wounded Crowd Hospitals.

"We are very busy here, and have quite a few of our own Canadian boys who were wounded. On Sunday we were so taxed for room I had eight men sleeping upon mattresses on the floor. We are trying to get on with our new buildings, and in about six weeks we hope to be able to take care of 550 of our boys, and from all appearances we will need them.

"The chaps come here direct from the trenches, with only first aid dressings on their wounds, all covered with mud and other things which it would not be polite to mention, their clothes so disfigured that we burn a lot of them. What a great difference a good hot bath, clean clothes, good bed, hot soup and good, kind care does make. But oh! for a good supply of tobacco, etc.

Like Home Made Jam.

"One cannot realize how a poor fellow's face brightens up when he is told that the jam and other things which he is eating came from home. We show him the bottle, which frequently has the name of the lady who sent it printed on the label, and often the remark is that the people of Canada have not forgotten their own boys.

"The other day some apples came from the Ontario Government. If the cabinet ministers could only have seen our boys eating those apples I know they would feel that they had not spent their money in vain."

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

FINAL GAME FOR ENGLISH CUP

Big Game Will be Played at Manchester

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, March 30.—Because of opposition displayed in London and South England generally to the continuance of professional football, the final tie for the English cup between Chelsea and Sheffield United will be played on Old Trafford grounds, Manchester, instead of at Crystal Palace.

Appointments for Golf Club

It was unanimously decided last night at the meeting of the golf club to permit the members who have enlisted for overseas duty to retain their membership without paying fees. The following appointments were made:—

Ladies captain — Miss Jean Harstone.

Men's captain—W. H. Denham.

House committee—Mrs. A. H. Stratton and Mrs. F. Roy.

The meeting was presided over by Mr. A. H. Stratton, president.

SOME CLASS TO THE CLASSICS

Manager Vic Fowler of the Classics has secured the John Henry of the following ball artists:—

Pitchers—J. Mahoney, A. Conlon, Gus Rose, F. Neary, L. Rose, W. O'Connell.

Catchers—B. Taylor, E. Vernon, D. McDonald, Roy Sullivan, J. Patterson.

Infielders—Ray Rose, Frank Barrie, Frank Nelson, Jack Lynch, C. Callaghan.

Outfielders—Cyril Sullivan, James Sharpe, Leo Picard, Gordon Martyn, Grover Halpin, Vic Scully.

Manager Fowler is busily engaged these days rehearsing some of Hugh Jennings' outbursts. "Vic" intends to pilot the team from the bench but in all probability he will be found on the coaching lines before the end of the first game. He is keeping the name of his first lieutenant dark but dope says it is "Tailor Made" Galvin.

SCOUT NEWS

At the regular weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts, at the Armouries there was a splendid attendance. The recruiting is still going on and any boy four feet six inches in height and twelve years of age is quite welcome to join. The boys are contemplating having some good times this year so it will be worth the boys while to join. The Scouts are also going to follow the example of the English Boy Scouts, which is the wearing of khaki caps, something similar to the cadets and soldiers.

On account of the holiday on Good Friday the Scouts will meet on Thursday night instead of Friday at 7.30 o'clock sharp, at the Armouries in full uniform and with staves. This is an important meeting so all are asked to attend. Any persons finding a brass bugle mouth piece will do a favor to the Boy Scouts by returning same to 249 Aylmer Street or this office. It was lost between Charlotte Street and the Armouries on Water Street or George Street about a week ago.

A GOOD FARM BRIDGE.

So as to have a bridge that will serve most farm purposes and will not be carried away by rising water, lay two logs across the ditch with ends resting on the banks, then spike on planks to form the bridge. Set stout posts on the inside of the logs that rest on the banks, at the point where they are crossed by the planks, let these posts reach above high water mark so that when water rises the bridge, being free, will rise with it and still be kept from going down stream by the posts. Extra logs may be used beneath the middle of bridge if more strength is needed. — G. A. M.

THIEVES VISIT GEORGE ST. STORE

prietors. It was amply large enough for a man's body to squeeze through.

Patches of snow which clung to their shoes were lying on the floor this morning at seven o'clock when Mr. Zacks discovered the burglary, which leads him to think that entrance was made about six or seven o'clock because the snow had not melted.

Taking the reporter to the clothes racks, Mr. Zacks pointed to where a number of suits and coats had been removed. All were $15 and $18 suits, while some were marked as high as $20. Going to another rack where the raincoats were stored he indicated that some had been taken from the hangers, but as to how many of each he could not tell.

Used a Ladder.

A ladder leaning against a low shed at the rear of Mrs. Byrne's premises which just adjoins Zacks' store, shows how the thieves must have got into the back yard. The supposition is that they secured this ladder from Fitzgerald's carriage factory, placed it against the shed and climbed over pulling the ladder after them and leaving it ready inside to climb back.

The ladder was left on the inside by the burglars after making their get away with the clothing. The foot prints lead direct to the window of Zacks' store from the foot of the ladder. The window opens into a little office in Zacks' store.

It is also learned that on Sunday night an attempt was made to burglarize the Peterborough Liquor Store. A ladder was placed against the back wall and entrance made on the second floor. After getting inside their further progress was blocked by a locked door which led downstairs to the main floor where the liquid stock is stored.

The police are working on the case.

GRAFTING SAVES TREES.

A valuable tree girdled by rabbits or mice can sometimes be saved by bridge-grafting. A tree girdled in the winter will frequently bloom and leaf out in the spring, even if the girdling is complete, but it is sure to die the succeeding fall.

In bridge-grafting, remember to use a sharp knife; continue to bring sufficient pressure to bear, by means of bandaging, to keep the cut faces close together; see that wounded parts are effectually protected from external air, so as to retain sufficient moisture, and also to exclude wet until the union is effected.

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. Samuel Cunningham, 169 Edinburgh St., wishes to thank the members of Otonabee Lodge No. 13 I.O.O.F. and their many friends for beautiful floral tributes and for the sympathy and kindness shown in her recent and sad bereavement.

Appeal is Enlarged.

Application was made before Mr. Justice Britton yesterday at Osgoode Hall by J. W. Pickup, acting on behalf of the City of Peterborough for enlargement of appeal from award in City of Peterborough and Peterborough Light and Power Co. A. R. Thompson was present for the company. The appeal was enlarged sine die.

TWO CANDIDATES FOR NORTH WARD

Ex-Ald. Kerneghan and W. S. Dodd Will Stand

The route to the empty seat in the city council is not to be straight ahead sailing, judging by the way things are shaping for the North Ward bye-election.

Four north ward residents are mentioned for the vacant chair, and two have definitely announced themselves as candidates. They are Mr. W. S. Dodd and ex-Ald. D. H. Kerneghan, both well known and both keenly interested in the welfare of the north ward.

Mr. Kerneghan is not a stranger to the city council. Mr. Dodd, whose official office is C.P.R. station agent, has never held public office for the city, but has always taken an interest in the welfare of the city as a whole. With two such men in the field to guage public feeling a lively little session round the polls would be bound to occur.

Mr. Kerneghan's words today were that he had definitely decided to stand for nomination while Mr. Dodd intimated to a reporter that he would be in the field as he had consented to come out upon the solicitation of many.

Mr. Langford, Jr., has intimated that unless he is returned unopposed he will not contest the seat. The fourth person mentioned is Mr. G. O. Cameron, who has not definitely made up his mind.

MILITARY NEWS

It is expected that within the next week or so the 8th Mounted Rifles will get their quota of horses and will start training with them immediately.

So far the work of the Mounted Rifles has consisted of squadron and musketry drill, including target practice, and the troops are pretty proficient in these lines. They are all anxious to get the horses. There will be a couple of weeks of real lively work when they commence breaking in the animals but, thanks to the cavalry provisional school held here during the winter, the regiment has numerous skilled horsemen in its ranks who will render invaluable aid.

When recruiting the regiment, only those men with a knowledge of horses were taken, so that it will not be long before the 8th is a real, high-class mounted regiment. — Ottawa Free Press.

Sergt. Hetherington of the 26th Overseas Battery returned to Kingston this morning accompanied by Gunners William Hawthorne, Charles Johnston and Gordon Hicks. Recruiting is still in progress at the Armouries. p M

Sergt. Edwards leaves on Thursday for Belleville to join the 39th Battalion. He will be accompanied by some ten recruits.

WHAT THE DAIRY DOES.

The streams of milk from a cow's udder as they touch the bottom of a milk pail start in motion lines of manufacture, trade and commerce in nearly all parts of the world. It is like the stone thrown into the lake, causing ripples and movements extending to the farthest shore. Manufactures of tin, iron and woodenware are concerned in maintaining a healthy dairy trade. Merchants of all descriptions are interested, as the money received for dairy goods keeps the wheels of commerce revolving. The transportation companies are very much concerned in order that they may maintain healthy traffic.

"An American railway man in one of the western grain states was asked why he took such an interest in dairying. He replied: 'If the farmers along our line persist in the raising of grain and selling it, it will be only a short time before they will have nothing to sell, and as a result there will be no freight to haul.'"—Prof. H. H. Dean.

REAR-ADMIRAL JOHN M DE ROBECK.

COMMANDS BRITISH FLEET IN DARDANELLES

Admiral de Robeck is a brother of the present Baron de Dobeck. The title is Swedish. He enterd the navy in 1875 and became Rear-Admiral in 1912, when a new post was created for him, that of Admiral of Patrols. His duty was to command four flotillas of destroyers of the Home Squadron. Rear-Admiral de Robeck was given the command in the Dardanelles when Admiral Carden was taken ill, and will probably see the venture through to its conclusion.

A Letter From Lieut. Matthews

Mr. T. F. Matthews received today the following letter from his son, Lt. Harold Matthews:

France, March 12, 1915.

My dear Father:

"As the communiques report, "There is nothing of importance which has happened." However, the other night, or rather for twenty-four hours, I had my second turn as forward observing officer; this time the post was at the top of a ruined house. In the bottom of it the infantry commander had his dug-out, and one which I was to make use of in case of necessity. As usual, I got down safely, and you can imagine my surprise to see Stuart Hayes on duty as sentry in front of the house. Of course, the infantry commander had a sentry near his dug-out. When I entered there were quite a number of infantry officers standing about, and who should I meet but Colonel Rogers, whom you probably know, Major Bennett, C. Arkerman, Capt. O'Connor, Capt. Gordon, an ex-cadet, and so on. I knew most of the men, and certainly enjoyed meeting them.

Art Ackerman was promoted to sergeant the other day, I believe for showing great spunk while under fire. At present the colonel and I are living in great style with the left section. Quaker oats, bacon, and eggs for breakfast; steak, potatoes, peas, cake and jam in the afternoon, and a four-course dinner at night. Mr. Sparrow has sent over a great array of food and it certainly is fine. Well I must close, with love.

Affectionately,
HAROLD.

Stuart Hayes referred to is the son of Judge L. M. Hayes.

MAKING SHELLS

Canada has at least one new industry as a result of the war. Thousands of shrapnel shells are being turned out daily by the big factories throughout the Dominion, but few Canadians know how the deadly munitions of war are made.

Shells have their beginnings in oblong ingots of steel, which are delivered in that form ready for molding. First of all they are taken to the hydraulic shops and heated in furnaces, which are just square brick boxes about the height of a man, and capable of a temperature of 2,000 Fahrenheit. You cannot linger long in their vicinity, even on a cold day.

When the ingots are heated sufficiently they are lifted out with long tongs and dropped into a mold under one of the huge hydraulic presses. A die shaped to the form of the shell's interior is swung over them. The operator turns a handle and down comes the press—mighty, irresistible. There is no noise, no apparent effort. It just descends and rises again, and what was a solid block of steel is a bottomed cylinder spurting flame as it is carried across to a horizontal press, where it is pushed through another mold and drawn out to the required length, shape and thickness.

Copper bands are affixed to the base of the shells by hydraulic pressure to engage the rifling of the guns, so as to obtain the necessary spin when fired. Then the gun-metal conical head, pierced to receive the exploding fuse, is affixed, and the shell is ready for delivery to the Government.

Shell-making is a matter of rigid accuracy and scrupulous care. Gauges are used of the most exacting nature, and no latitude is allowed in the matter of weight or dimensions. Admiralty and War Office officials are permanently on the premises who apply their own tests, and a shell is only accepted and paid for when the official approval is permanently stamped upon it by means of a die.

Shells, of course, differ according to the service they have to perform. Some, for instance, have hardened steel heads for armor-piercing purposes, others are intended to burst and spread death by bullets, as well as jagged fragments.

It is essential that there should be no roughness within the shell, and they are as smooth and polished inside as out; and to keep them from rust and corrosion the inside is varnished before they are sent away to Woolwich to be filled with lyddite—which, by the way, is poured in in a liquid state and allowed to harden—and then to the front, or "somewhere in the North Sea," a little present from Canada by way of a gentle reminder to the German bully that the way of the transgressor is as hard and painful to-day as our enemies have always found it in the past.

Countess Zeppelin a Canadian.

A fact not generally known is that Countess Zeppelin, wife of the inventor of the German aircraft, is a Canadian girl. Countess Zeppelin was the daughter of the late W. H. Mesgarvey, formerly of Petrolea, who died recently in Austria, where he had become one of the leading oil magnates of the country. She was born in the village of Wyoming, Lambton County, in 1875, going to Europe with her father at an early age.

THEATRICAL

THE DRUM MAJOR.

The presentation of the charming and popular musical comedy to be given by the Orpheus Society, promises to be a splendid treat for the people of Peterborough. The operetta is full of catchy solos and choruses, dances, and the libretto deals with the stirring times of recruiting in the early days of the French Empire under Napoleon, and the martial atmosphere pervading the whole making it most appropriate for the present time. The cast is as follows:—"Clarice," Miss Lettie Drope, the prettiest girl in Paris; Sergeant Leroux, of the French Army, Mr. E. Hanrahan; "Jean," a musical genius; "Babette," Mr. Harold Lee; Mrs. A. A. Perrin, his adoring sweetheart; "Julien," "Gaspard," "Pierre," recruits, Messrs. F. Hartshorn, P. Naish and Norman Laing; "Antoinette," "Suzanne," "Jacqueline," village beauties; Mrs. J. Lock, Miss Helen Lytle and Ruby Quartermain, in "Marcel," a prominent orator of the day, Mr. Donald Shook. The dances under the direction of Miss Bickersteth and the operetta by permission of J. Fischer & Bros., New York, under the direction of J. Edward Fisher.

"WHERE THE TRAIL DIVIDES."

"Where the Trail Divides," a five-act motion picture in which Robert Edeson is starring has just been released by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, through the Paramount Picture Corporation.

Mr. Edeson played the part of "How" Lander in "Where the Trail Divides" for several years as a stage play, and when his success in "The Call of the North" was so pronounced and he was re-engaged by the Lasky company for other film productions he selected "Where the Trail Divides" as the most attractive.

"Where the Trail Divides" is in five parts, possesses over three hundred scenes and is one of the most vividly dramatic of the Lasky productions to date.

Robert Edeson in "Where the Trail Divides" will be the attraction at the Empire Theatre today and Wednesday.

FERTILIZING CITY LOTS.

The amount of fertilizer to be used for the growing of different crops is usually given in quantities necessary for an acre of land. The way to figure out the quantity for small lots is to find the number of square yards in the piece to be fertilized and then to divide the amount of fertilizer by 4840. This will give the fraction of a pound necessary for a square yard.

Weigh and mix the fertilizers carefully at home to obtain best results. For the ordinary vegetable garden, per acre, 150 to 300 lbs. of nitrate of soda, 200 to 400 lbs. muriate of potash and an equal amount of acid phosphate will do. Spread half of the mixture on the land when raking before planting, then add the remainder in quantities to suit the various crops, as some require more fertilizer than others.

TO MY MANY FRIENDS

I wish to thank my many friends who have given me their support and pony votes, and to remind you of the fact that there are only three more days to work, as the contest closes on Wednesday, March 31st. If you have any votes now or are about to make a purchase, please go to the pony stores and buy there if possible. As you know, I am anxious to win the pony, and do not mind working hard for it, and desire to assist the merchants who have been so kind to donate it to the boys who work. If you have not promised anyone your votes, kindly phone 530 or mark your ballots for me. Thanking you kindly for your votes and assistance,

Yours faithfully,
ROD CAMERON.

NEW FIRING METHOD.

British Soldiers Hold Rifles Up In Air and Use Periscopes.

LONDON, March 30.—The Spanish way of holding the rifle overhead in firing from a trench, so as to endanger only the hands of the firer, a method which has caused foreign observers to ridicule the fighting of Spanish-American armies, and which made the fire of the insurrectionists so effective in the Philippine war, has been adopted by the British army. But it is not haphazard fire, for the aiming is done by periscope.

Instructors are now employed in the British training camps to teach this method firing, which requires a new technique. These men have astonished sceptical officials by making shots that would be creditable to a sharpshooter under the old method of holding the eye to the sight. Just how it is done is not explained, but it is known that the gun is held at arms length in the air upside down.

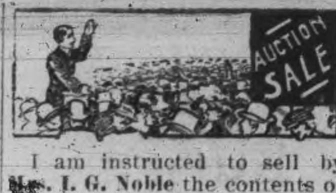

I am instructed to sell by Mrs. I. G. Noble the contents of her 18-roomed house, No. 440 George Street, on Wednesday, March 31st, 1915, at 1 o'clock sharp.

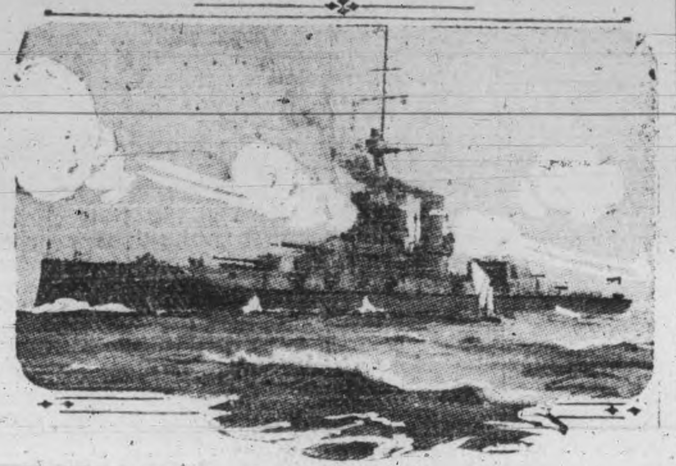
FAILURE OF FOE'S PLAN OF THEIR OWN MAKING



H.M.S. "QUEEN ELIZABETH."

The pride of the Anglo-French fleet now engaged in battering the way to Constantinople. The Queen Elizabeth was completed just a few weeks ago and is the most powerful of Britain's super-Dreadnoughts. Her 15-inch guns out-range anything that the Turko-German forces have to pit against her.

Germans Lost Whole Divisions in Attempting to Outflank the Russians

ENEMY'S SUBMARINE IS SUNK OFF DIEPPE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, March 31. — An authentic report concerning the failure of Germany's campaign along the Niemen says the daring plan of the Germans failed through a premature movement on the part of their forces.

The plan was to withdraw in the centre, and when this movement had induced pursuit by the Russians, to swing the left wing around from the north and outflank the Russians before the advance of the Russians on the centre had proceeded far enough.

The Germans threw an army corps across Lake Dusa in an attempt to perform the outflanking movement. They were caught, and in an attempt at retreat and in succeeding engagements lost, according to Russian reports, whole divisions.

PARIS, March 31.—The ministry of marine announces that a French light cruiser yesterday afternoon fired upon a German submarine off Dieppe and then ran over her just as she submerged.

Quantities of oil coming to the surface indicate that the submarine sank.

BERLIN STATEMENT.

NO MODIFICATION.

PARIS, March 31. — The official communication today simply says: "No modification of the situation has been reported since the last communication."

A LETTER FROM MAJOR BENNETT

Tells of Part Taken by Canadians in Big Victory of British --- Fred Howarth Always on Deck

Readers of the Review will find the following letter from Major Bennett, one of the most interesting yet published:—

It is just 6.45 p.m. and there being a short lull in the "din of battle," which has been raging since 5.30 a.m. today, I thought it opportune to drop you a line or two. No doubt, but that I will be interrupted before finishing but it is better to take a chance and let the future take care of itself.

We arrived in the trenches last night at 8.30, for the fourth time and immediately got orders to be ready to attack and advance at 7.30 this a.m. Needless to say we were all ready as it was our first chance to get a real go at the enemy. We however were disappointed as a further order told us we were only to "feint" in support of the division on our left, and then keep the enemy from reinforcing and also that we were likely to be made the apex of a counter attack in the event of our right attack being successful.

You may bet we were ready and every man on the alert with 300 rounds of ammunition on his person and bayonet fixed. Heavens, how our artillery roared all day and big 15-inch guns as well. One of our companies expended 20,000 rounds and the enemy's fire while inferior all along our front, was not to be sneezed at. About one hour ago the O. C. sent the word by phone that the British attack was successful and that the enemy's trenches were assaulted and captured and an advance of two miles made into the town of —— from which the enemy were driven out and many prisoners taken as well as guns. He said our support was one of the features of the attack—it was well timed and vigorous and kept the enemy from manoeuvring. As for my company, we are the reserve, the other three being in front line. We are about 300 or 400 yards in their rear and in the most dangerous situation as we are good marks, both for snipers' random shots, and have to suffer shell fire every few intervals.

"A Lucky Devil."

I am a lucky devil. Twice during the deafening din, two shells dropped within 25 yards of me but in both instances they were "blind," and did not explode. If either of them had, well it would have been all up with "the old farmer." I was out of my cave many times during the brunt, and it stings when pink zip go those vitriolic sheets of molten lead within a few feet of a fellow's head. One dug its way through my parapet, this evening, and fell peacefully on my improvished table made out of an old "hardtack" tin can.

Aeroplane Fooled Germans.

We had the pleasure of witnessing a German bombardment of a British aeroplane this evening. Say, that airman gave them some time. He doubled up and down, back and forward and had them at his mercy the whole hour. They never touched him.

On the whole things have been very satisfactory with us. There is a lot of sickness from cold and sore feet. I have eight men in the hospital but there is none very seriously sick. I have a bad cold myself and Dr. Greer wants me to lay up, but it is not that bad yet. We get a rest every little while and come back fresh as daisies.

Peterborough Boys.

Harold Matthews is in an observation post within a stone's throw of me. His battalion did good service today. Major Mills is back at our brigade stores about six miles. I saw him yesterday. Bruce is with him and both are well. Charlie Ackerman is in the trenches with his platoon. Arthur is wtih me. I have promoted both he and Field to be full sergeants. Fred Howarth is still going; he is a grand lad, always on deck, and he is my best assistant.

My company is divided into three sections, two platoons in dugouts, one platoon about three hundred [illegible] cellar of an old brewery. Would Gibson and Craig not smile when they hear of our fighting from the cellar of a brewery? One platoon is in the cellar of a farm house about 200 yards away. Then I garrison two redoubts and several ammunition reserve supply posts.

All the buildings, churches, farm houses, villages, etc., are entirely destroyed. It's simply appalling, the destruction of life and property all around. I am located in what was at one time a pretty garden and lawn. The house is entirely erased and the garden now looks more like a cemetery as you can scarcely walk out of the ditches without stumbling over a grave.

Burial of the Dead.

I have to attend to the burying of our dead. We go out in the dead of night, bring in the poor fellows and bury them the best way we can. I have a cemetery about half a mile away in orthodox style with a burial ceremony. The Germans have a peculiar liking to snipe us when we go out to do this. They locate a body and set a maxim on it and at night they send up flares and if they can catch us, open fire. The other night I was out with four chaps, burying three poor lads whey they got at us. You ought to have seen us dive for the graves. It was horrible but it saved our lives.

A mail has just arrived. The boys will be anxious for their letters so I'll drop this for a few minutes and get the mail distributed.

Since writing the enclosed I have spent a rather peculiarly interesting night and as I have an hour off duty I'll spend a portion of it writing further to you. The advance made by the British appears more important than we thought at first as we now are to continue the assault all day today and tomorrow and perhaps longer. We did not get off as easily as we first supposed, as I was called on during the night to go in for four poor fellows of No. 4 Company who got their quietus. Two were shot through the head and one through the heart. I did not look for the other. They lie peacefully now on a little rise of ground a few yards in the rear of the trenches and tomorrow I will have them marked with the little wooden cross. The words of "the burial of Sir John Moore," keep ringing in my ears from time to time.

A tremendous burst of artillery fire interrupted me here. It was replied to with rapid fire all along our subsection. I went to investigate and have made my report. The din at this moment is simply deafening and the air is full of all kinds of shell and lead.

UNION SERVICE GOOD FRIDAY

Will be Held in George Street Methodist Church

The Protestant churches of this city will unite in one service at three o'clock on Good Friday afternoon. This will be held in George St. Methodist Church.

The united choirs of George St. and St. Pauls will have charge of the music. It is expected that all the city ministers will be present.

Brief addresses suitable to the day will be delivered by Rev. L. Phelps and Rev. J. R. Webb. Last year Murray St. building was crowded to its capacity for such a service and it is expected that since the world in its present sorrow is being pushed toward the Cross that this service will exceed in attendance and interest anything that has hitherto been attempted.

Only one hour will be occupied.

A BOOST FOR BIG CONSTABLE

P. C. Deannard is Raised to Second Class Pay

At the meeting of the Police Commissioners Constable "Jack" Deannard was promoted from third class to second class. Chief Thompson remarked that P. C. Deannard is giving entire satisfaction and Judge Huycke also remarked that he has heard very favorable reports of P. C. Deannard's work. The promotion calls for an increase of pay from $650 per year to $750 per year.

LICENSE FOR MOTOR EXPRESS TRANSFERS

At a meeting of the Police Commissioners the matter of setting the price of a license for motor driven vehicles used as express transfers was brought up. It led to looking over the by-law governing the rates to be charged by carters for work. Mayor Buller stated that the rates set down in the by-law were away too small considering the "cost of living" and in accordance with a suggestion by Judge Huycke, Mayor Buller will go over the by-law before the next meeting and bring in a report on changes he would suggest. The matter of licenses for the motor express transfers was also left over till the next meeting.

Mr. John Joynt has been elected reeve of Lucknow to succeed the late Mr. J. G. Murdock.

UNIQUE FEATURE AT CELEBRATION

Four Generations at Observance of Seventy-third Birthday

Four generations were represented at the birthday celebration in honor of Mrs. Wm. Spilsbury, held on 24th March, 1915, at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. W. Jackson, 285 Dalhousie St. The event was quietly celebrated with only immediate relations present. Not only were four generations represented, but the representatives were all females, a somewhat unusual feature, as follows: Mrs. Wm. Spilsbury, aged 73 years, her daughter, Mrs. F. H. Falkner of Havelock, granddaughter, Mrs. Robt. Scully, Havelock, and great-granddaughter, baby Katherine Scully, aged 11 months, and during the day they were all photographed by Mr. F. L. Roy.

Mrs. Spilsbury resides in North Monaghan, three miles from the city and on the day following the birthday, walked out to her home which she has occupied since 1859 with the exception of a few years in the city. She enjoys good health and an evidence of her vitality is found in her ability to walk the three miles to her home. Mrs. Spilsbury has many friends in the city and vicinity who join in wishing her many happy returns of the day.

Her husband pased away seven years ago.

SUBMARINE U 28 SINKS STEAMER

Vessel Had General Cargo for Capetown

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, March 31.—The Ellerman line steamer Flaminian with a general cargo from Glasgow to Capetown, was sunk off the Scilly Islands, Monday, March 29th, presumably by a German submarine.

The crew was saved.

London, March 31. — Submarine U28 gets the credit of sinking the steamer Flaminian.

CARDIFF, Wales, March 31. — The Cardiff Echo says the British steamer Crown of Castile has been sunk off the Scilly Islands by a submarine.

Passed Final Stage at 3.10 This Morning

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, March 31.—By a vote of 69 to 23 the Ontario Legislature at three-ten this morning carried through its final stage the Liquor License Bill of the Hon. W. J. Hanna.

The vote was preceded by a warm debate lasting ten hours.

FOUR DIE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Watertown, N.Y., March 31.—In a fire which practically destroyed Norfolk village with the loss of two hundred thousand dollars, Mrs. J. Thomas, her two children and sister lost their lives.

AUTO WENT INTO RIVER

Four Prominent Persons Lost Their Lives

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Seattle, March 31.—Four prominent persons were drowned when an automobile ran off the bridge into the river ten miles from the city last night. They were Thomas Prosch, former editor of the Post-Intelligencer; Mrs. Prosch, a daughter of General McCarver who founded Tacoma; Miss Margaret Denny, a daughter of the founder of Seattle and Mrs. Harriet Beecher, daughter-in-law of the late Henry Ward Beecher.

Widow and Sons Benefit Under Will of Late John Gilchrist

The late John Gilchrist, who died at Toronto March 12, left an estate valued at $53,213. Under the terms of the will, Archibald John Gilchrist, son who is at present on active service with the 1st Worcestershire Regiment, receives $4,150, a diamond scarf pin, and a pair of field glasses; George McCuaig Gilchrist, son, of 136 Pacific avenue, Toronto, receives $1225 in stock, a cameo scarf pin, a silk hat and hat box, and $1,000 in cash; Joseph Applebe Gilchrist, son, of 455 Palmerston boulevard, Toronto, receives $4,000 when he reaches the age of 27, and is bequeathed a crescent scarf pin, and a watch chain, while the widow benefits by the remainder of the estate, or $43,813.

Deceased was some years ago a partner of Mr. R. Hall, when the business was conducted on Simcoe Street.

Mrs. Annie Irwin, who died in Toronto on June 7, 1912, and had formerly resided in Bobcaygeon, leaves her entire estate of $494 to a son, William Irwin, of 13 Bay Street, Toronto. The estate consists of $305, an interest in an annuity provided for in the will of the late James M. Irwin. Deceased had real estate in Peterborough valued at $3,500, but fully mortgaged.

ON FIRING LINE FOR TWELVE DAYS

Mrs. T. Guerin, 28 Lafayette Avenue, has received the following letter from her son Sergt. Guerin, with the battery division of the first contingent now fighting in France:—

France, March 16th, 1915.

My dear mother,—

Just a few lines to let you know I am alive and well at present, hoping this will find you the same. Well mother, we have been in the firing line for the last twelve days and have had a few good scraps with the Germans. I believe mother we have had the best of it so far. The first day we went into action my gun and Jim Guyatt's put a German battery out of action. The next day we cleared about fifty yards of their trenches. The third day they started to shell us and believe me, mother, they made it a little hot around a billett, but luck was with us. All of the men with the exception of the telephone men and one sick one were standing to at the guns. The only man that was wounded was the one that was sick. He started to go to the guns and a splinter of one of the shells struck him beside the eye. He is at the hospital doing fine. He was one of my gun crew. Earl Downey is well and he is going to run Tom Longboat when he gets back to Canada. When the Germans started to shell our billett he was in the telephone room with four others and the shells started to drop within a few feet of them. They thought it was time to beat it to the dugout and believe me they did. They must have covered a hundred yards in five seconds.

Well mother this is all this time. Good-bye. I remain your loving son,

"BUFF."

FIRST AID INSTRUCTION

Members of Police Force Must Pass Examination

The members of the Peterborough Police force will after May 1st be called upon to pass an examination in first aid work before being promoted from third class pay to second class pay. This was decided upon yesterday afternoon at the meeting of the Police Commissioners. Dr. McPherson was present, on invitation of Chief Thompson, and explained the nature of the proposed course in first aid work for the constables. The men will be given instruction about once a week and supplied with literature dealing with the work. On the completion of the course, which will take six months, the men would be able to render first aid in time of accidents and oftimes save a life before a doctor could arrive. As the policemen are often the first on the scene of an accident, instruction should be most beneficial to them.

Chief Thompson stated that Detective Newhall, Sergts. Brown and Reid and Constables Kidd and Blade at present hold certificates for first aid qualifications. It was then decided to make it a permanent rule of the force and after May 1st the men will have to secure a certificate before being promoted to second class pay.

"Sympathy" for Instructor.

The matter of giving Dr. McPherson remuneration for his services in this regard was discussed, but nothing definite was decided upon. Mayor Buller thought it would be wise to have Dr. McPherson, who is the medical health officer of the city, paid a larger salary and be affiliated with all the departments of the city. In view of the money depression he explained that it is improbable that any such a change will be inaugurated this year.

ARREST SUSPECT FOR BURNING OF STEAMER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, March 31. — The Matin says Raymond Swoboda, who was a passenger on the steamer La Touraine from New York, has been arrested, charged with setting fire to that vessel on March 6th. Correspondence found in his rooms is said to indicate he was entrusted with the task of blowing up the La Touraine.

Some of the La Touraine passengers examined by the state attorney [illegible] they were amazed to hear Swoboda remark during a conversation regarding danger to ships passing through the German war zone: "Oh, that isn't the only war zone that would be dangerous. Germany is strong enough to do what she wants. This ship herself, even before she reaches the war zone, might be obliged to have recourse to doctors and nurses aboard to care for passengers."

Swoboda was listed on the ship as an American citizen, but Washington reports nobody with an American passport with any name like Swoboda was aboard the La Touraine.

Investigation seems to establish that the fire on the steamer was caused by an explosion effected by some detonating device.

Harry Green, who deserted from the 18th Batt., C. E. F., at London at Christmas, has been arrested.

GERMANS BOMBARD

Lives Lost and Property Damaged at Libau

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, March 31. — The Libau correspondent of Reuter's sends a message saying that as a result of two bombardments of Libau by the German fleet, three persons have been killed and seven wounded. Fifteen houses were damaged and telegraph wires were also wrecked. The steamer Baltica in port sustained damake.

GEN. HUGHES ON THE STAND

Canadian Boots Defended by Minister of Militia

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, March 31. — Major Gen. Hughes was the chief witness before the Parliamentary boot committee today and he made a lively one. He defended the Canadian boots although admitting some of them were bad. A large number of our Canadian boys at the front, were still wearing Canadian boots which were better for walking. No boot ever made, he said, would stand Salisbury Plain. He had not taken any action on General Alderson's complaint and when asked why by E. M. McDonald, the Minister replied "General Alderson has no more to do with me than you have. I can make official reports better than Perley or Alderson.

"NOT WAR, IT IS ASSASSINATION"

American Press Condemns Submarine Exploits

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

New York, March 31. — In condemning Germany's latest submarine exploits, morning papers are more outspoken than at any time since the war began. The Sun says: "If this wanton destruction of innocent human life is not murder and piracy, what is the right name for the crime?"

The Tribune: "This is not war, it is assassination."

The Times says: "Out of the public indignation aroused by these latest crimes there will almost certainly come a demand that our government take notice of them. The American public will be very little concerned about protests against mere interference with our commerce. When monstrous crimes against humanity are committed, minor offences sink into insignificance."

ROTHSCHILD DEAD

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, March 31.—Lord Rothschild, head of the English branch of his family, died in London today.

MORE RECRUITS FOR REGIMENT

First of Spring Drills Next Tuesday Night

With a display of enthusiasm that augurs well for the future, the 57th Regiment paraded at the Armouries last night, 230 strong. Major Davidson gave a brief address to the men.

The first spring drill will be held next Tuesday night, and there is plenty of room for more recruits. Orders were read as follows:—

PETERBOROUGH, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1915

CLEAN UP THE GRAFTERS.

THERE IS one thing the Borden Government should not do, and we think it will not do it, and that is to hush up anything in connection with the purchase of war equipment. Some companies have made large profits that were quite legitimate. On an order for one hundred thousand dollars' worth of goods it is quite evident that in the ordinary legitimate course of business the profit would be a large sum. Then, so far as the first contingent is concerned, the element of time was an important handicap. Goods had to be delivered immediately, and that prevented any effective working of competition or cutting down of prices. On this point, profits were of necessity larger than usual, and the Government was obliged to pay them.

For such things there is little or no criticism, but where goods were supplied that were not up to standard, that were worse than inferior goods, such as some of the boots, no condemnation or punishment is too severe. Where men called themselves agents or middlemen just for the sake of charging an exorbitant commission and did not earn any title whatever to call themselves such, the action of the Government should be drastic. A real middleman is entitled to his reward, but the evidence shows that some merely adopted that name to obtain dishonest and treasonable gain. Unless something is done to clean up the scoundrels, no citizen of Canada in this or in a foreign country could decently hold up his head. If a royal commission is necessary, and it appears that it is, by all means let us have it, and have it quickly.

HOW TO IMPROVE LOCAL BUSINESS.

FROM time to time facts about a successful man's business or work are given to the public and they are interesting because of the success he has attained. One of the largest and most successful merchandising firms in Hamilton has spent fifty thousand dollars in a single year in newspaper advertising. Some Montreal merchants may spend twenty-five thousand or thirty thousand dollars and think they are doing big things. Referring to this subject, Beck's Weekly says:

> "As a matter of fact, he is a mere 'piker' when his spendings are compared with those of some of the great American merchants for the same purpose. For instance, last year Marshall Field & Co. spent $350,000 for advertising in the Chicago daily newspapers alone. One paper, the Chicago Daily News, carried $90,000 worth of advertising for that firm. Several others were not far behind. Marshall Field & Co.'s advertising bill was duplicated by several other Chicago firms. It was exceeded by those of a number of New York business concerns. In Philadelphia one firm is said to have spent half a million with the newspapers. It is significant, too, that these firms are among the biggest profit-making concerns in the country. It pays them to advertise. The average rate for store advertising in the daily papers of the three largest American cities runs close to twenty cents a line; the average rate in Montreal is about six cents. In population Montreal ranks ninth in the list of cities on this continent; in the matter of newspaper advertising it ranks about fortieth. Perhaps that's the reason so many of our merchants complain that they are constantly on the brink of bankruptcy. They haven't learned how to use printers' ink."

If Peterborough is to develop, if its merchandizing firms are to have the growing business of the locality, it is evident that progress will have to be along lines similar to those on which other cities have moved. The citizens are anxious to see prosperous merchants and business houses in this city, for that means good times, and they should help to bring this about by dealing with local business men and by paying attention to the announcements made in the daily newspapers. If merchants and others try to cater to every want of the public of this locality and tell them about it through the press, undoubtedly the public will respond. That is the history of successful firms.

WHO WILL SPEAK NEXT?

EVANGELIST Billy Sunday is unpleasant enough himself, but his imitators are apt to become unbearable nuisances.—Hamilton Herald.

The Herald is too hard on Billy, the coin collector. If there are people who prefer to pay for religious vaudeville, there will be plenty of performers.—Ottawa Citizen.

Some have disagreed with the Review's criticism of Billy Sunday. Billy is probably sincere himself, but his manner is certainly open to criticism, as well as the methods of most present-day revivals.

A TIME FOR INTROSPECTION.

THERE CAN be little advantage in trying to value an unpurchased future. The future will be just what we make it,— what we earn. Now is the time for toil, for bloody sweat, for courage and good cheer. It is a time to take inspiration from the memory of our fathers, from the example of our million brothers who line the battle front — a time for each man to judge not his fellow, but sternly to judge himself.—Hon. Arthur Meighen at Winnipeg.

ARE GERMANS COMING TO THEIR SENSES?

THE FOLLOWING paragraph has been clipped from a German newspaper, the Berlin Vorwaerts:

> "Man does not display all his strength and all his weakness save in exceptional circumstances. . . . The peoples, like individuals, reveal in times of crisis their hidden virtues or their unknown failings. The present crisis is terrible. . . . It shows that the German people are oppressed by the trouble known as jingoism, or a false sense of nationalism, which sees neither virtue nor courage in any nation but its own, and which has only insults and suspicion for others."

The tone of this paragraph is decidedly different from that which prevailed in German newspapers last August. Then there was absolutely nothing wrong with Germany, and if there was anything wrong, it was the duty of everybody to stand by their fatherland. Fierce tirades of abuse were launched at Germany's enemies. Then, what was to be a triumphal march has turned into a frantic war of defence. Instead of conquering other nations, Germany spoke of defending her life and soil. Now she is apparently turning her eyes on herself and beginning to see in their true light the false things that caused her to precipitate blindly a world war. This attitude is the beginning of the end. The faster it grows, the more will Germany realize the hopelessness of her struggle, and the sooner will the great war end.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

"FIGHTING JOE" MARTIN, known in polite society as the Honourable Joseph Martin, is now a resident of Vancouver, where he is keeping very much in the limelight. Martin recently ran for mayor of the city, but was defeated. Later he had Mayor Taylor unseated, but he was re-elected. Martin is now trying to have him unseated again. The Honourable Joseph Martin was born at Milton, Ont., in 1852. He taught school for a number of years and then studied law, practising in Manitoba and later in British Columbia. He was a member of the Manitoba Legislature and attorney-general of the province, then represented Winnipeg in the House of Commons. Later he was a member of the British Columbia Legislature, attorney-general of that province, and for a short time its premier. He then moved to England and entered the Imperial House of Commons, returning to Canada a few months ago and settling in Vancouver, where he ran for mayor. He is now editing a new daily newspaper, the Evening Journal, in that city.

THE GLOBE says that Canada has an irredeemable paper currency when thirty millions of it is secured by 25 per cent. in gold and gold bonds and when issues over that amount are secured dollar for dollar in gold. Is the Globe trying to create distrust in Canadian currency and thus cripple Canada's capacity to do her share in the defence of the Empire?

HON. GEO. P. GRAHAM runs a newspaper in Montreal. When Hon. Geo. P. Graham makes a speech in the House of Commons, Hon. Geo. P. Graham's newspaper gives Hon. Geo. P. Graham great praise. Puzzle: What's the idea of this?

Five Souls.

(W. N. Ewer, in the London Nation.)

First Soul:
I was a peasant of the Polish plain;
I left my plow because the message ran:
Russia, in danger, needed every man
To save her from the Teuton; and was slain.
I gave my life for freedom—this I know,
For those who bade me fight had told me so.

Second Soul:
I was a Tyrolese, a mountaineer;
I gladly left my mountain home to fight
Against the brutal, treacherous Muscovite;
And died in Poland on a Cossack spear.
I gave my life for freedom—this I know,
For those who bade me fight had told me so.

Third Soul:
I worked at Lyons at my weaver's loom;
When suddenly the Prussian despot hurled
His felon blow at France and at the world;
Then I went forth to Belgium and my doom.
I gave my life for freedom—this I know,
For those who bade me fight had told me so.

Fourth Soul:
I owned a vineyard by the wooded Main,
Until the fatherland, begirt by foes
Lusting her downfall, called me and I rose
Swift to the call—and died in fair Lorraine.
I gave my life for freedom—this I know,
For those who bade me fight had told me so.

Fifth Soul:
I worked in a great shipyard by the Clyde.
There came a sudden word of wars declared,
Of Belgium, peaceful, helpless, unprepared,
Asking for and. I joined the ranks, and died.
I gave my life for freedom—this I know,
For those who bade me fight had told me so.

The Jitney.

(Monetary Times.)

The jitney is a democratized taxi. It is a sign of the times. In the days of prosperity, it could get two dollars for a circuitous journey, and back up its claim with a legal looking dial. The man with a fat cigar paid and said "keep the change." Economy now being the watchword, the taxi becomes jitney. It follows a straight, macadam road at a nickel per capita. As an aristocrat, it was worse than the worst autocrat among corporations. As one of the proletariat, it seeks to make the stately street car look like five cents, for the same amount. It tickles the popular fancy. It makes a dent in street railway earnings. But the jitney may have to put on its fine clothes again or go over the hill to the poorhouse.

Curious Formation.

(Kansas City Journal.)

"Professor, you seem interested in my jelly cake."

"Yes," said the eminent geologist, "you seldom see such regular and sharply defined strata."

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Moderate north to northeast winds, fair today and on Thursday, with slightly higher temperature.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To ensure the publication of letters, the name and address of the writer must accompany the communication, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith.

WHO'S RUNNING THE CITY?

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—A few days ago one of our aldermen told me that a leading citizen had just told him that we almost have in our city commission government. When questioned as to what he meant, he said: "Why, Chief of Police, the Fire Chief and Adjt. McElhiney are the commission." It might be difficult to judge as to the truth of the above insinuation. However, from the childish letters we have been reading in the press of late on the Salvation Army and its band, the writer is convinced there is an influence bigger than the writer back of them. It seems to me this influence must be aiming at creating a state church of the Salvation Army.

We do not want to say a word against any religious sect. The Salvation Army may have some good mixed with a great deal of what is undesirable with many sensible thinking Christians. But I would like to know what right they have to the public funds any more than other denominations. They are a religious sect working sympathetically for this one society, and it is time our public men awoke to this fact.

They organize a band and use it every day in the week to attract a crowd, in order to build up their cause. As a taxpayer, I strongly object to our money being donated to any religious societies. Let each society look after itself.

It is absurd to say the two bands should have equal shares. One band is enough for this city to support, especially this year, and the 57th Band is the citizens' band, and should have help. They are not collecting money every night in the week and several times on Sunday from the public, as the Army band is doing. It causes one to smile to hear anyone say the Army is doing charity work, especially when the plate is passed around every time we hear them on the corners. On the night of "Shamrock Day" we listened to the public sneered at by the adjutant for not giving a larger collection; he said: "We will play and sing some more, and expect you people to be more liberal." This is the people whom we are told work for nothing and expect money out of the city treasury.

In conclusion, I emphatically declare that they have no right to donations any more than other churches have for their choirs. We have the 57th Band, of all denominations — let it be supported as our city band. If the city ask the services of the S. A. band, let them be paid for services rendered.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor.

TAXPAYER.

SURELY NOT.

Editor Review:

Sir,—Having read Ald. Johnston's pathetic farewell I want to say it was deserting Hydro that put Mr. Johnston out of business with the people. He got scared at the wrong time. If he had known that the great surpluses were coming he might have been cleverer about it.

Yours truly,

NO. 1.

The Ball, the Dance.

The word "ball," as applied to a dancing party, came to be used in the first instance from an ancient "ball play" given in church by the dean and choir boys of Naples during the Feast of Fools at Easter. At subsequent dancing parties in Naples the dancers threw a ball at one another to the sound of their own singing. They whirled about in measured time, and the sport consisted in loosening hands in time to catch the ball.

Power of the Albatross.

The albatross, the largest webfooted bird, measuring sometimes seventeen feet from tip to tip of wing and weighing up to twenty pounds, frequently accompanies ocean steamers from the Cape to Melbourne, a distance of 5,500 miles, without being seen to rest on the way.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

BEING pretty according to a woman's philosophy is merely carrying out the good intentions of Mother Nature.

Did you ever hear of a man getting clipped while getting out of the way of temptation?

Work is a sort of internal revenue that we all must pay for the support of happiness.

Talk straight and you get nothing for your trouble. Give a good jolly and the crowd is yours.

Disliking flattery is a pose that each of us thinks is wonderfully becoming to himself.

Kind words are doubtless valuable, but your grocer would rather have your hard dollars.

Mediocrity may not individually be powerful, but as it makes up the vast majority we have to confess that it counts.

Duty is a concession to the claims of others that we never quite feel like making no matter how stubbornly we do it.

Everybody loves a winner except the loser and his family.

While extremes meet they can never be said to be intimate.

Merest Trifles.

It's this or it's that or the other
That causes you trouble and care,
Just some little stub end of nothing
That comes in your moments to share.
The things that are big you can manage
Get onto their intricate curves
And handle them boldly with credit,
The little ones get on your nerves.

A call from a distant relation,
A boil on the end of your nose,
A dun for a bill that's disputed,
A door that refuses to close,
A phonograph owned by a neighbor,
A pen that will sputter and scratch—
It's these little things that annoy you
And make you as cross as Sam Patch.

If some one informs you by letter
Your stocks have gone down to the floor
Or comes to you bearing the tidings
That burglars have looted your store
And taken your goods and your money
You take it as cool as you please,
And have forty fits if your trousers
Fresh pressed will still bag at the knees

It's these little items that harry.
A hatpin stuck into your neck
Will cause you to rise in your fury
And make the surroundings a wreck.
Whereas had an auto assailed you
When dressed as a prince on parade
And left you as flat as a pancake
Not half of the fuss had you made.

Her Best Point.

"What should you say is the best quality a wife can have?"

"Her best virtue?"

"Yes."

"Never, never to think out loud."

"Pshaw! You shouldn't have added the last two words."

The Grouch.

"You can save my life."

"Can I?"

"Yes."

"Indeed!"

"Will you?"

"Why should I? I have no use for it."

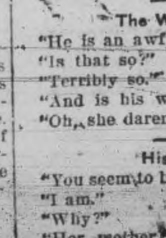
Beyond Him.

"What is the price of meat?"

"Don't bother me."

"Don't you want to make a sale?"

"Sure. But you are only getting $175 a week, so you can't afford it."



Water.

"Why don't you buy your milk of Jenkins?"

"Don't like his milk."

"Why?"

"He is such a consistent prohibitionist."

The Way It Goes.

"He is an awfully sensitive man."

"Is that so?"

"Terribly so."

"And is his wife sensitive too?"

"Oh, she daren't be."

His Reason.

"You seem to be very fond of Mabel."

"I am."

"Why?"

"Her mother makes such delicious hot biscuits."

Not Successful.

"You don't look happy. Isn't the fishing good?"

"Yes, the fishing is good, but the bait doesn't seem to be working."

Undoubtedly.

"Many a man loves his wife dearly."

"Well?"

"But he does hate to pay for her hats."

Reverse Action.

If flying high we breast the sky
To Mars and Venus calling,
But coming down is slick enough,
No trick at all in falling.

Real Trouble.

"What is the matter with Jones? Has he lost his wife?"

"No; the hired girl has quit."

Try a Review Want Ad, It Pays,

Make a Little MAKE MUCH

HAVE YOU a hundred dollars to put into something good? Not a gold mine, not a hole in the ground, not a wild-cat scheme—but an honest fellow and an honest proposition; a clean, decent sure-enough little business that just needs that hundred to make it a winner? Have you? Will you hear us? Then put a quiet little ad in the Classified columns of THE DAILY REVIEW—three or six times—and get the cream of the best business chances in all this city, brought to you and offered you "on a gold plate;" yours to study over and choose from at your leisure; to investigate and digest; "the pick of the propositions" all laid before you, some good, some bad of course, but all there for your judgment. Worth a dollar? Why it's an education! And among them you'll find some little business, some little fellow that can make you money, make you glad that you helped save a success.

One of the best women in this city, left but a thousand or two insurance money, has made a comfortable living income—all from a want ad. That ad brought her in touch with a young businesss woman who was "making good," who needed just a little capital to "make it sure." The want ad introduced them—and saved them both—made them independent. $1 in a want ad has saved many a deserving man and woman from want. It is "the little door to big opportunity." Try it. Brothers of the Air

The Story of a Heroic Deed

By RALPH BERGENGREN.

I.

The new biplane had only just left the field in an effort to climb higher into the almost cloudless sky than any aviator had yet ascended. Twice it had circled the aviation course, and each long spiral had carried it a peg upward. Already the determined, insistent br-r-r of the motor was softened by distance, and fieldglasses were necessary to assure oneself that the little black figure between the canvas parallelograms was actually a human being.

The last man who had touched the biplane—one of the mechanicians who had given the apparatus its final grooming—watched its flight grimly. His face was pale under its coat of tan, and his eyes glittered with some repressed excitement. Presently when somebody touched him lightly he started nervously and pulled himself together with an effort, but he seemed unable to fix his eyes on the tall young man in plaid knickerbockers who had thus startled him.

The young man, whose cap, worn backward after the fashion of aviators, seemed to add keenness to his long, smooth shaven face, kept his hand lightly on the other's shoulder. To the distant spectators they presented nothing more startling than the spectacle of a well known air man talking rather familiarly with an unknown mechanician. Many were watching them and pointing them out to new arrivals with the explanation:

"That's Harriman, you know, away over there across the field—the fellow who made that splendid flight yesterday in the Bleriot."

Harriman's grip tightened a little on the mechanician's shoulder.

"Did you tamper with Clinton's machine before the getaway?" he asked evenly.

His voice was low. It failed to reach the group of ten or a dozen other mechanicians gathered around his own machine at a little distance. The man in the blue overalls looked at him and then away again.

"What do you mean, Mr. Harriman?" he demanded sullenly.

"Don't lie!" said the other. "I've been watching you ever since he went up." He dropped his hand from the man's shoulder. "We're rivals in this business, and if anything happens to Clinton it's none of my funeral. But I'd like to know if anything is likely to happen—understand?

"If anything happens," he continued, "I may add that there'd be a hundred dollars coming to the man who had fixed it. But it wouldn't do for him to come to me with his story after he'd had a chance to make it fit the circumstances."

He turned on his heel and moved away, whistling. The mechanician hesitated. Then he took a long step after the other man.

"I'll tell you what will happen, Mr. Harriman," he said quickly. "He'll lose his control of the elevating plane. He gave me my walking papers this morning, but I guess he won't be looking very hard for a substitute. You watch him. When he's done about a dozen of them spirals"—

He got no further. Harriman, his face illuminated with angry determination, had turned and gripped him by the wrists.

"You low brute!" he exclaimed sharply, raising his voice.

The men puttering about the monoplane heard him. They turned quickly, saw the two men struggling together and came up running. The group surrounded the aviator and his captive like a living curtain.

"Take this man and give him to the police," said Harriman. "Pick him up as if he were injured. If he makes a fuss injure him. Two of you are enough. The rest of you get my machine in order. And you, Dick, chase across the field and tell the announcer I'm going up. Tell him," he called after the retreating figure, "that I'm going up after altitude!"

The men stared. They were used to quick action, but this happened a little quicker than usual. Only one of them caught the situation.

"You're going to catch Clinton?"

"If I can. He's up there with a tampered machine, which may fall any minute. He can't be signaled, and there's no use starting a panic in the grand stand."

II.

The distant crowd of spectators wondered as it saw two men with their burden emerge from the little group, while a third ran across the field toward the announcer, and the others swung the monoplane into line for a start. There was a moment's discussion; then the announcer raised his megaphone and bellowed to the four points of the compass:

"Mis-ter Tho-mas Har-ri-man going up in the Bler-i-ot. He—will—try—to—break—the—world's—record—for—altitude!"

Harriman, firmly settled in his machine, raised his right hand. Behind him the mechanicians sprang away from the apparatus, the propeller began its steady, insistent roar, and the monoplane careered madly across the elastic turf of the field.

Among the aviators and experts on the field the knowledge of Harriman's errand had spread from man to man. It had lapped over into the press box and sent an unaccustomed thrill of excitement along the reporters' table. Anxious eyes studied the biplane to see if there was yet any sign of defective machinery. Once the machine started as if to settle earthward; then it steadied, and those who knew drew a long breath and told one another that the swerve was due to some upper air current, for the biplane was again climbing.

Although the whiz of its propeller blades was clearly visible, like a little electric fan, the sound they made was now altogether inaudible. The roar of Harriman's motor meanwhile sounded like a continuous accent of haste and anxiety.

For the monoplane was now completing its first spiral, its motor running full speed and its occupant evidently bent on gaining every possible inch of elevation. Again and again the elevating plane lifted the insect-like body to a sudden, almost perpendicular, upward flight. There was danger in thus forcing the mechanism. Each time the aviator took the risk that the repeated stress would snap some connecting link between himself and his apparatus and send it crashing downward. But to the audience each of these splendid upward leaps seemed to be executed for its amusement, and it cheered them wildly. Here and there people argued about the probable altitude, but none denied that the monoplane was rising faster than the airship that had preceded it.

Under any circumstances Harriman's monoplane was a faster machine than Clinton's biplane. The biplane was built for stability, endurance and carrying power. The monoplane was constructed for speed first and other things afterward.

Again and again it seemed as if Harriman lifted his machine upward by sheer force of will. As the faint buzz of the motor sounded once more directly above the grand stand it was evident that the dragon fly had cut one-third from the distance that separated it from the biplane. It was impossible to estimate its height above the ground, but each successive spiral, sometimes carrying the monoplane far out over the river, evidently brought the pursuer nearer the altitude of his quarry.

Fifteen minutes, twenty, twenty-five—almost half an hour had elapsed since the monoplane started. The two airships were now near together, and fieldglasses were necessary to follow their evolutions. The band had started another march, but no feet beat time to it. The field had altogether lost its customary air of bustle and preparation. The aviators had drawn together and were looking steadily upward. The mechanicians stood in idle groups watching the airships. The announcer had put down his megaphone.

Then the biplane began to drop. It fell slowly to the level of the monoplane, and for a long thirty seconds the two machines seemed to be coming down together.

One of the men at the edge of the field spoke into a telephone, and a moment later a motor driven ambulance came into view from behind the hospital tent. It stopped and waited. Inside a couple of white coated surgeons were arranging a stretcher. The chauffeur leaned forward, with his eye fixed on the biplane.

But the two airships were again mounting, now almost side by side. Even with the glasses it was impossible to tell what the men in them were doing. But the monoplane, putting on speed, headed in front of the slower craft and then turned and plunged suddenly downward.

III.

A quick indrawing of breath ran along the grand stand, a mighty sigh, as if all these thousands of people had responded to a given signal. The band stopped playing, one instrument after another involuntarily silenced by the general feeling of something imminent and terrible.

Up there in the sky Harriman seemed to be performing feats that were no longer amusing, but criminally reckless. It was one thing, people told one another, to see a man take risks, but they had not come there to see a man commit suicide. Three times in succession he drove his machine across the path of the biplane and then dived earthward at an angle that made it seem impossible that he would not be pitched bodily out. But the fourth time the other machine followed, and the two began circling back toward the earth.

And now the race seemed to be reversed. The monoplane led, and the biplane followed. The long, graceful spirals brought them nearer and nearer to the landing place. The band, as if ashamed of its lapse from duty, played louder than ever.

The faint buzzing of the motors grew to a roar as the two airships circled the course not far above the heads of the spectators. Then it stopped abruptly as first one man and then the other shut off his power and swooped to the solid earth. Clinton climbed hastily out of his machine and approached the monoplane, taking off the pads that protected his ears from the noise of his motor and hearing for the first time the thunder of applause that had greeted his landing.

"Well, Harriman," he said, "I suppose this is what you were after with all that pantomime. But what the dickens were you trying to say to me?"

"You just look over that machine of yours inch by inch," replied Harriman, climbing stiffly out of his own airship, "and I don't think you'll need to ask questions. Overhaul your elevating plane in particular. Br-r-r-r!" He slapped his arms to restore circulation. "It's a cold place up there without one's leather jacket!"

How to Become Rich.

"My early difficulties taught me some thrift," said Mark Twain once, "but I never knew whether it was wiser to spend my last cent for a cigar to smoke or for an apple to devour."

"I am astounded," observed a friend, "that a person with so little decision should have met with so much worldly success."

Mark Twain bent his head gravely.

"Indecision about spending money," he said, "is worthy of cultivation. When I couldn't decide what to buy with my last cent I kept it and so became rich."

KEEPING METALS BRIGHT.

To clean brass flower pots or trays rub them with a piece of lemon; then pour boiling water over them, and finally polish with a soft dry cloth.

If you find yourself out of brass polish mix lemon juice with finely sifted ashes.

Verdigris and stains may be removed from brass and copper if rubbed with vinegar and salt.

Articles made of brass that have become tarnished, it is said, may be made to look like new by washing them in the water in which potatoes have been boiled.

Common baking soda will clean a sterling or German silver purse. Take just the soda and a little water and wash it with a brush. Wipe perfectly dry and rub with dry soda.

A rusty grate can be cleaned if it be black leaded and then left for twenty-four hours or even for a couple of days. The black lead will absorb the rust and the steel can then be polished in the ordinary way.

It is often a question of how to save bedding from rusting. Try painting the springs with the same aluminium paint used for the radiators.

Good Form

Neighborhood Courtesy.

"Some years ago we moved from our home town—the town we were born and reared in and where all our friends and kinsfolk lived," said the neighborly woman. "The new town was a railroad and river town. I thought we would soon have neighbors and in time friends. I did get acquainted soon with one woman, but she moved away. She recommended some other friends of hers to me. I intended to call, but never did, my boys, my work and my home keeping me busy.

"After awhile I grew to be like the people around me, tending to my own business and making no calls. But I was lonely. One of my children came down with scarlet fever. We were quarantined. It made little difference, as no one had the habit of coming to our house, anyhow, or I of going to other people's houses. The third day of the quarantine I heard a step in the back yard and rushed to the door, thinking the deliveryman had not seen the sign.

"It was my nearest neighbor. She had a dish of something in her hand. 'For the sick little fellow,' she said. 'I'm sorry I can't come in and give it to him myself.' I stood looking at her amazed. 'I hope you are not offended,' she said.

"Offended! She never can know how good she looked to me.

"We became friends after that. Through her I met other neighbors. We never tire of doing good turns for each other. It has made life a thousand times more worth living for me."

Solving a Social Problem.

A young matron who had asked six friends to luncheon suddenly found herself without a maid. She was equal to the occasion, however, and on their arrival said nothing to her guests about the very important missing member of her household.

Before going to the dining room each guest was handed a ribbon bow, to which was attached a safety pin, and told to find her place by matching the colors at the places. It did not take long to appropriate the pretty aprons with the strings of ribbon to match each bow. They were made of large colored handkerchiefs, and the point forming the bib was pinned up by the safety pin and bow.

Anchovy canapes formed the first course. After they were eaten the hostess turned to the guest at her right and said, "Look under your plate and do what the card says." And the little card bore this request, "Please remove the plates and bring in the soup." Amid much merriment this was accomplished, the bouillon being already on a tray over the gas, which was turned low. Another guest removed the cups and brought in the next course. Minute directions were on each card. The hostess did not find it necessary to leave the table, and the absence of the maid was voted to have made the party a great success. Every one declared that the aprons were the most acceptable of souvenirs.

Etiquette of Mourning.

A widow who intends to leave off her mourning in due time wears a crape bonnet and a long veil and crape trimmed gowns a year. After this dull black, suitably relieved by white and lilac touches, should be worn for a year. When two years have passed colors may be worn.

As long as the crape veil and crape trimmed gowns are worn a woman should refrain from participation in all social gayeties. After six months a widow may attend concerts and matinee performances at the theater. When the crape trimmings are put off small dinners and luncheons and night performances at the theater or opera may be attended.

Of course these are conventional rules, which she may follow if she wishes. They are not adhered to by every one, for people are becoming more liberal about mourning and are following their own inclinations regarding the matter rather than doing as some one else has done under similar circumstances.

Lenten Entertaining.

Lent this year begins on Feb. 17. While the forty days which follow Ash Wednesday will be more or less generally observed as a time for fasting, still many informal luncheons and dinners will be given, and the ever old but not less interesting "Lenten sewing circles" will hold a conspicuous place among the entertainments of the paschal season. Knitting bees will also be popular.

The day immediately preceding Ash Wednesday, known as Shrove Tuesday or Pancake Tuesday, has been observed as a day of feasting since A. D. 250. In some sections of our country the carnival of the Mardi Gras is held at this time, and much merrymaking ensues, in which the pancake or shrove cake plays an important part.

Returning First Calls.

One should return a first call within three weeks after it has been made. After a dinner, luncheon or a card party one should call within two weeks after the entertainment. A party call is not necessary after attending an afternoon tea, but after a large reception a call is necessary.

THE WOMAN IN BUSINESS

Worry About Work Dosen't Pay in the Long Run

Business women frequently allow their responsibilities to weigh too heavily upon them. They do not forget their cares, but take them home, discuss them at the dinner table, take them to bed and once more they are heard at the breakfast table.

It is small wonder that business eventually drives them and the family to the point of tense nerves and much unhappiness.

The brain should not be robbed of its peace, especially at night, for nothing wears off its finer edge more quickly than worry, which naturally encourages insomnia.

Every effort should be made to indulge in outdoor diversions, active and passive, so as to suit one's needs and moods.

Long hours of office work and household labor should be followed by periods of play, mental or physical relaxation, which serve as a balance wheel. Depression is sometimes due to too little physical exercise. Few people suffer from fatigue where the circulation is normally active.

Homeseekers and Settlers Excursions to Western Canada

The Grand Trunk Railway System issue round trip Homeseekers' tickets at very low fares from stations in Canada to points in Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan and are in effect each Tuesday until October 26th, 1915 inclusive, via Chicago, St. Paul or Duluth and will also be on sale on certain dates via Sarnia and Northern Navigation Company. Homeseekers' tickets are valid returning two months from date of issue.

Settlers' one-way second-class tickets are on sale each Tuesday during March and April from stations in Ontario, Kingston, Renfrew and west to points in Alberta and Saskatchewan at low fares.

The Grand Trunk Pacific Railway is the shortest and quickest route between Wnnipeg, Saskatoon, and Edmonton, with smooth roadbed, through the newest, most picturesque and most rapidly developing section of Western Canada. Through tickets sold and reservations made by all Grand Trunk ticket agents.

Before deciding on your trip ask G.T.R. agents for further particulars or write C. E. Horning, District Passenger Agent, Union Station, Toronto.

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibreware Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:

"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

The Gorgons.

A Philadelphia schoolteacher has lately been instructing her pupils in Grecian mythology. It is the plan to have the children read the tales aloud and the next day recount them in their own language. One lad, to whom was given the assignment to render in his own language the story of the Gorgons, did so in these terms:

"The Gorgons were three sisters that lived in the islands of the Hesperides, somewhere in the Indian ocean. They had long snakes for hair, tusks for teeth and claws for nails, and they looked like women, only more horrible."—Lippincott's.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED

BOYS IN BARRACKS DOWN AT BELLEVILLE

How the Enlisted Men Are Being Equipped for the Field, Trained and Taken Care of

The streets of Belleville are spotted with khaki-clad figures. They move about in twos, threes, and often in groups of ten or twelve. The men do not stroll. There is no appearance of idling. Seldom is there pause to converse with the civilian. Such conversation as passes is one with another. The attitude, as one may observe, is that of earnestness. Of some duty recently assigned or expectant. Occasionally the flat-topped hat of the enlisted man is seen standing up fro mthe throng on the street. The wearer is one of the many specimens of manhood, six feet and over, who have volunteered, and who are undergoing initiation into the preliminary work of the life of the soldier.

The attitude of the enlisted man is one of partial reserve. He is feeling the influence of discipline. A gathering of men brought together for purpose and lacking discipline is but a mob. Presently the volunteer, having absorbed the idea that he is one of the cogs on the wheel of efficiency and that his movement is to be regulated as a part of the larger movement of the whole gives himself willingly and cheerfully to attaining proficiency in detail. Months from now adherance to that discipline and promptness in execution of the order may mean success or failure, the carrying of a position, or the loss of a trench. He, in the first weeks of his drill begins to realize that this preparation for the battle-field is indeed serious work. He is not invited to suppress all he has of initiative, but to hold such in reserve until he may see how best to apply. The end to be achieved is to turn out, not automatons but intelligent soldiers. The personal equasion of bravery, dash, vim, and esprit de corps is taken as a part of the game. It is not even thought that the volunteer will be lacking in these attributes. And he never is.

All over the country men are enlisting and enrolling. Taken in and drilled for a few weeks they are transferred to one of the military centres and there stationed. While physical inspection has been made when the enlistment took place, at the temporary headquarters there is more rigorous inspection. It is the pity of it all that only the best, or nearest best should be selected. But it is beyond question that the man who may have some physical defect or ailment, hitherto latent, may under the stress of the campaign and exposure fall down and become a positive hindrance and charge on the force. The field is no place for any but those in fit condition and who may be forced to retire from the field only because of wounds received in action. So thorough inspection is made, and in cases a weeding out and possible rejections. For things seemingly trivial, but likely to grow into positive obstructions farther on.

Some hundreds of men have gone to the training headquarters from Peterborough. Detachments have moved off so late as the last two weeks. Others will follow so soon as provision may be made to care for and house and train. To get the best of drill and experience men must be drilled in masses as large as may be, and in many respects approaching the conditions of field service. This is impossible except at a few points, where suitable buildings can be had to house and territory to allow of evolution and practice. All this is in care of the military authorities and who are acting wisely and for good reason.

The King's Man.

The enlisted man leaves home, or the centre where enlisted, and either in civilian dress or in equipment provided is moved to the drill headquarters. Then follows inspection, and the outfitting. Just as the novitiate in some monastic order sets himself apart from the world the coming soldier sets aside the things of civil life. He is given a complete and ample outfit. These he draws from the stores of the quartermaster, who is a sort of munificient and beneficient provider. Once in his new belongings the clothes of the enrolled man are carefully parcelled and despatched to his home. He may use them months or years after. For the present he is the King's man. He wears the King's uniform. Civil affairs, aside of the interests of wife and family are no concern of his. Such are laid aside with the garments he has discarded.

That we may know how our soldier is provided for let us enumerate his equipment. First let us look at the stores from which this equipment is drawn. All that care and forethought can do has been exhausted in providing things which are necessary, and such things. Safe to say that on an average the volunteer has not had of equal quality in the whole course of his life. Two or three buildings are made use of as stores houses. A disused school has been hastily fitted up. It is crammed with good things. Barely room to leave a corner for the men busy in recording the stock and givings out. For a most careful and accurate stock-taking is practiced. Every article and object has to be accounted for.

If a counter or two were provided, the doors thrown open, the prices advertised, the department could do a land office business as a retailer of good merchandise. For there would be no question of quality. Underclothing of the very finest and warmest, socks, sweaters, mufflers, shirts, jackets, and all intimate personal wear are piled around in profusion. The now familiar khaki uniforms in sets and sizes for all. Nearly two thousand suits made from cloths well woven on the looms of the Auburn Woollen Co. at Peterborough. The great coats look especially comfy appearing. Boots of all sizes, mostly of a reddish brown color. These are some of the leather outfits that we read so much about. But these have been inspected and there is little doubt of their serviceability. At any rate the soldiers wearing them say they are fine. Here, as a matter of record, is the personal equipment of the soldier and which he enjoys. The list is that issued to the dismounted men, or infantray.

Personal Equipment.

Boots, ankle; caps, forage; great coat; jacket, puttes, shirts, service; trousers, service; trousers, drab; cap, sleeping; housewife, knife, table; knife, pocket; razor, socks, 2 pairs; towels, hand, 2; blacking or polish; mitts, winter; waistcoat, Cardigan; boot laces, 3 pairs; brush hair; brush, shaving; brush, clothes; comb, hair; drawers, winter, 2 pairs; drawers, summer, 2 pairs; forks table, 2; holdall; shirts, flannel, grey; shirts, light; spoons, table; dubbin, (for boots), kit bag.

In addition each man is given a stout mattress of ticking which is filled with oat straw, and forms the bed. A pillow filled with straw is the compliment of the tick. Two big, warm, woollen blankets are handed each man. Then with his rifle, cartridge belt, bayonet belt and bayonet, canteen, haversack, etc., one would think that the soldier had acquired so much responsibility in these personal belongings that he would be loaded down. So he would be if he essayed to carry all he claims as his own. On the line of march it is taken care of for him. It is crammed into a capacious bag, blazoned with his number and corps and carried on the transport train. It is his privilege and perplexity to find it when he is ready to turn in at night. But the soldier takes care of his own.

It will be seen that the above is a pretty full equipment. Of course neckties and sleeve buttons and such trifles are not included. These have no place in the force. They are left behind with the affairs of civil life. On what is so well provided any man can get along. If he needs anything else he must buy it out of his own private fortune.

Having outfitted the soldier the next thing is to feed him and sleep him. Both most material. The first Napoleon, of whom we hear good and bad, said, or is reported to have said, which is the same thing at this distance, that an army marched on its stomach. The eminent Corsican was most right. Experience has amply proved. A well fed soldier is a dangerous thing and that is the kind we are after making, d'ye mind. That is the end of our exertions. The soldier must be housed and mealed and that is what they are doing in Belleville. Doing it well, too, considering. This is our first war, our first preparatory experience. After we have forgotten our dander up and squabbled with our neighbors for a few years, and everlasting punched the stuffing out of them, we shall be acclimitized, so to speak, and do some things better. That is the result of experience. So to house the soldiers such buildings as were available had to be made use of. Something better than temporary wooden structures had to be made use of, for the winter has been cold.

Living Quarters.

The buildings of the big and deceased canning factory have been utilized. These are a few blocks from the centre of the city and are about as suitable a premises as could have been found. Large, roomy, the floors extend from one end to the other. It is of three stories. Substantial and built of brick. It was thoroughly cleaned, the walls whitened, floors scrubbed and made clean and sweet. The lower floor is given over to the mess room, and tabled and seated to serve eleven hundred at one sitting. At one end, and separated from the main room is the appliances for cooking. Four big double stoves, or furnaces are attended to by eight cooks. Special boilers provide steam and hot water in large quantities. All the table ware is of the enamelled kind, and is scalded after each using with boiling water and dried by heat.

The stoves are set on a wide platform of concrete, removing all danger of fire. Sinks, washing troughs, cupboards, and a complete sewer service have been installed. A big refrigerator takes care of the meats. A part of the bread is baked on the premises. Great big crusty loaves, with the "kind-that-mother-used-to-make" appearance show up handsomely. Other bread is supplied by local bakers. Foods and supplies are bought in large quantities and of the very best. There is no lack of provender. A good appetite is ensured by the outdoor exercise and there is ample to subdue such wants.

As to the soldier's sleeps, as the children say. The two floors have been fitted up with open bunks, constructed of planed scantlings. These are built across the width of the rooms, each set of bunks provide for twelve men. Getting into the upper bunks is no more troublesome than climbing into the upper berth on a Pullman. Once in, the sleeper may be calm and dream away until the bugle call rouses him for the duties of the day. He lays on the straw filled tick, inserts the straw filled pillow under his head, snugs down into his warm and expensive blankets and snores off to dreamland. All lights go off at ten o'clock. The strictest order is maintained. There is no skylarking. This getting a good night's sleep is a serious business. The only lights left burning, or rather, lighted, are at the entrance to the stairs. The dormitories are warmed by big open draft hot air furnaces, each set on a wide base of concrete. All pipes are carefully protected and are kept quite within view from the furnace to the chimney.

Not a Firetrap.

Something has been printed as to the buildings being a firetrap. Nothing could be farther from the facts. All that human carefulness can do is done to guard against the possibility of fire. There are ample windows and fire escapes. All day and all night the corridors of the dormitories are patrolled by the sentries on duty. They walk unceasingly up and down and across and watch and peer that no fire is in sight. The only way in which fire could occur would be from some soldier trying by stealth to smoke in bed. So far that has not occurred. Should a man be detected in so doing the penalty would be heavy.

On a raised platform at the end of the eating room is a piano. The force may be regaled with music while at meals, if the officer in charge permits. In the evenings the men get up concerts and entertainments, and the excellence of the programs would distance many of the events for which we pay good money to hear and see. The singing is fine and there is plenty of talent available.

Cleanliness is a thing expected and looked after. That there be no excuse, ample facilities and conveniences have been provided. The fittings are most substantial, even if not so elaborate as in the city hotel. Around one end of each of the flats a space is petitioned off for lavatory and bath room. The baths are of the shower variety. Each set of conveniences is served with hot and cold water, and the sprinkling system is efficient. The soldier takes his choice and exercises his preference. Not only may he bathe if he chooses, but he must do so. That is a part of the regulations having for its care the health of the soldier. Clean towels are provided in profusoin. Thirty men can bathe on each floor at once. The lavatories are well fitted up and most excellent in arrangement. Drinking water is served on each flat by means of the sanitary drinking jet, doing away with all cups and bowls. Taken altogether, the soldier is well clothed, well fed; cleanliness is looked after and insisted on. He has time allowed for some recreations and is, in many cases, better off physically than he has been for many years. If any ailment develops or disease shows itself, it will come about in spite of the very thorough sanitary arrangements that have been made and that are being carried out and enforced.

Of the Peterborough men doing things, there is Capt. and Adjutant Carruthers, who is one busy man. It is his care to handle the stores and to dispense. It is some job. Lieut. Rackham is in charge of the signalling corps, and making good. Lieut. Ross Cameron is into harness and a general favorite. Of the men themselves, Belleville people have only words of praise. All are diligently trying to perfect themselves in their duties, to become efficient, and to cross the ocean to share in the discomfiture of the Germans. When their time comes they will surely give as good an account as their comrades who have gone efore. —F. H. D.

HOUSE DEBATES PRISON REFORM

Dr. Edwards Criticizes Finding of Recent Royal Commission

OTTAWA, March 31.—The House occupied the greater part of the sitting yesterday in discussing prison reform and the penitentiary system as administered by the Dominion Government.

Dr. Edwards (Frontenac), Mr. Bickerdike (Montreal), Col. Hugh Clark (North Bruce), and W. F. Nickle (Kingston), agreed in denouncing cruel and obsolete practices in Canadian penitentiaries.

Col. Clark paid a high tribute to the Ontario prison farm at Guelph which he regarded as the model institution upon this continent. At the same time be declared that prison reform had progressed much farther in the United States than it had in Canada.

The subject came before the House when the estimates of the Department of Justice were under consideration in committee of supply. Dr. Edwards severely criticized the report of the royal commission which recently investigated his charges against the management of the Kingston Penitentiary.

W. F. Nickle (Kingston) warmly defended the royal commission against the attacks of the member from Frontenac.

Judge Doherty, Minister of Justice, regretted that the subject had become involved in a controversy over the actions of individuals. The commission had made many useful recommendations, which had been put into effect by the Department of Justice.

The balance of the day was taken up with the introduction of bills to amend the elections act and the estimates of the Inland Revenue Department.

Citizens Kept Out of Woods.

ROME, March 31. — Citizens of Vienna are officially warned through Neue Wiener Tagblatt not to visit the wooded hills that surround the city. These are favorite resorts in spring and summer, but fortifications are now being erected and the hills practically closed to the public. Those who disobey the orders of the military authorities will run grave risk of being shot by military patrols, gendarmes and police, who are ordered to use their arms, especially at night. The suburbs were fortified last autumn after the Russian occupation of Lemberg and the new precautions are the result of the fall of Permysl.

SENTIMENT IS STRONG

British Feeling is in Favor of Prohibition During War

LONDON, March 31. — All of the evening papers in London yesterday published columns of interviews with notables regarding the speech of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George, in which he urged that the production of war material ought not to be hampered by drunkenness.

The Chancellor's opinions are practically unanimously supported in all responsible quarters. The possibility of a prohibition bill totally preventing the sale of intoxicants during the war, appears to arouse little resentment. It is generally believed that drastic steps will be taken.

Three members of the Anglican episcopate are taking a leading part in the agitation for a drastic reduction. They are the Bishop of Lincoln, Bishop of Croydon and Bishop of Willesden.

Italy Must Have Better Position.

ROME, March 31. — The Giornale d'Italia, replying to comments in the Russian newspapers opposing Italy's acquistion of the territory on the Adriatic now in the hands of Austria because of the large Slav population, says that while Italy acknowledged the right of the Slavs to have an outlet on the Adriatic, it was not to be supposed that Italy would acquiesce merely in the substituting of Slavs for Austrians on the east coast, the Slavs having the powerful support of Russians behind them.

It adds: "It is best clearly to state now that whether Austria continues to exist as an Adriatic power, or a great Serbia be formed, Italy's position on the Adriatic must be absolutely or largely ameliorated."

Greece Must Fight, Says Venizelos.

LONDON, March 31.—The return of ex-Premier Venizelos to Athens after a short rest, the tumultuous reception accorded him and his reiteration of the declaration that Greece must join in the conflict on the side of the entente powers, have combined to start up further predictions as to when the group of neutral states, which have been wavering so long, will take up arms.

But the materials upon which these predictions are based are of the scantiest.

Serbia Ready Again.

PARIS, March 31. — Serbia will await word from the allies before beginning a second invasion of Austria-Hungary, said Milenko Vesnitch, Serbian Minister at Paris, yesterday.

"Serbia is absolutely ready to re-enter the campaign at a moment's notice," he said. "It has been decided, however, that the allies shall henceforth plan in concert all important movements on all fronts. When Serbia receives the indication to march she will immediately advance, and with greater dash and determination than ever."

FARMERS GET LEAVE.

Austrian Reservists on Border Go To Attend to Spring Work.

ROME, March 31. — The Trieste correspondent of The London Daily News reports that Austrian reservists who happen to own farm land in Trentino have been granted a fortnight's leave of absence in order to attend to their agriculture work. This measure is said to be based on the fact that assurances have been received at Vienna that Italy will maintain her neutrality and that the majority of the nation is opposed to war.

It is a fact that the troops hitherto concentrated on the western frontier have been partially withdrawn. Austrians are still convinced that Italian intervention is inevitable and are continuing defensive preparations, though not in the Alpine region.

MAPLE SUGAR BOOMING

That the gift of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught of a box of maple sugar to every member of the first Canadian contingent has resulted in quite an unexpected boom to the industry throughout the Dominion is shown in a cable received from Lord Stamfordham, secretary to His Majesty the King, notifying her royal highness that the Canadian product is to be found, not only on the royal table, but also in every hotel and large store in London.

The Maple Sugar Association, through Hon. Jos. E. Caron, Minister of Agriculture in Quebec, and G. Boyer, M.P., Rigaud, and other manufacturers, have also sent an official communication to the duchess, thanking her for having fostered in this manner the means of this new channel of trade. An engrossed address was presented a few days ago to her royal highness on behalf of the association.

Prisoners of War, 2,177.

A return tabled in the Commons a few days ago by the Minister of Justice shows that since the outbreak of the war 2,177 Germans and Austrians have been taken into custody in Canada as prisoners of war. The detention camps are at Halifax, Quebec, Kingston, Petawawa, Spirit Lake, Kapeeskasing, Brandon, Lethbridge, Vernon and Nanaimo.

MORE ESTIMATES

Seed Grain and Pensions Figure in Latest List

OTTAWA, March 31. — The supplementary estimates for the ensuing year were brought down by Hon. W. T. White in the House yesterday afternoon. The expenditures are as follows:

Civil government, $44,400; legislation, $19,000; arts and agriculture, $30,000; seed grain, $1,275,000; pensions, $1,388,400; militia and defence, $35,450; railways and canals —Bathurst spur line, $62,000; branch line from Sunny Brae to Mulgrave, $1,000,000; enlarging Port Colborne elevator house, Welland Canal, $25,000; Vancouver and Fort William harbors, $875,000; public buildings, $243,902.

The total supplementary estimates call for an expenditure of $6,667,540, of which seed grain, pensions, I.C.R., and public work items amount to $6,100,000.

German Names Retained.

LONDON, March 31. — War feeling is not likely to obliterate German names from London streets, since the London County Council has turned down a number of petitions on the ground that a sufficient case for an alteration had not been made out. Discontented patriots must therefore continue to live in Berlin road, Wiesbaden road, and other streets of Germanic origin.

Botha Takes German Camp.

LONDON, March 31. — A Cape Town despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says that a German camp at Plattben, 50 miles northeast of Ukamas, German Southwest Africa, has been captured by the British, under Gen. Botha. It contained great quantities of supplies and horses and other live stock.

$270,000,000 Loan To Small States.

PARIS, March 31. — The Senate yesterday adopted a bill, which already had passed the Chamber of Deputies, providing for the advancing to Serbia, Belgium, Greece and Montenegro as friends of the allies, the sum of 1,350,000,000 francs ($270,000,000).

FIRE LOSSES FOR CANADA

A More Stringent Building Law and Closer Inspection Required

During 1914 Canada's total of fire losses showed a considerable reduction over 1913; yet it was in excess of that of 1912.

From an analysis of the causes of fires for 1914 some encouragement may be obtained in the belief that progress is being made in education along fire prevention lines. Carelessness has always been a prolific cause of fire loss, and a reduction of fires attributable to this cause from 183 in 1913 to 127 in 1914 is appreciated. Attention must still be directed, however, to the 30 losses caused by cigarette-smoking and cigar and cigarette stubs carelessly thrown away.

One feature of the year's fire record which requires immediate attention is the large increase in the number of apartment house fires. No doubt part of this increase may be attributed to the proportionate growth in the number of apartment blocks being erected, but there is a serious danger arising in our cities from the number of one-family houses or old buildings which are being converted into apartment blocks, without corresponding protection from fire or of the lives of the inmates from fire danger. Stringent building laws should be provided covering this transformation process, and thorough inspection should be insisted upon both during the progress of reconstruction and at least annually by both the municipality and the insurance companies interested.

Too little attention is paid to the matter of building inspection, with the result that overheated pipes and heating apparatus is a common cause of fires. With proper inspection this could not be, as legal power is given to prosecute for maintaining dangerous fire conditions and all insurance policies are based upon the safe condition of heating and lighting equipment. It is a question whether fire insurance companies are not making it too easy for applicants to obtain insurance, and whether, as in the case of life insurance companies, thorough examination of the risk involved and the remedying of any dangerous or abnormal fire conditions should not be insisted upon before a fire insurance policy could be legally issued.

More attention should also be paid to the interior construction and heating of residential buildings. During 1914, no less than 750 dwellings were destroyed by fire, and of these a large proportion through forcing of the heating equipment.

During January, 1915, no less than 66 fires were reported as caused by defective heating apparatus, 11 by defective wiring, and 19 from carelessness with matches. — Conservation.

Action Was Dismissed

Plaintiff Sued for $123,50 as Payment for Drilling Well

A week ago today the case of William Edwards vs. James Edwards and Mrs. H. Dickson came before His Honor Judge Huycke. Plaintiff was suing for $123.50 alleged due him for drilling a well on the farm of Mrs. Dickson in Otonabee which was being operated by James Edwards. The contract called for James Edwards to dig the well and when water was produced he was to receive $2 per foot. The well turned out a "duster," but plaintiff claimed he should be paid $100 for drilling the well and $23.50 for a pump he installed because James Edwards ordered him to stop drilling when he was at a depth of about fifty feet. At the time when the case was heard His Honor endeavored to have the parties go on with the original contract and if water was produced the defendant should pay the plaintiff $2.00 per foot. This was agreed to and an adjournment made for one week to permit the parties to get together and arrange matters accordingly.

The plaintiff claimed that should he go on with the work he should be given his board expenses. This the defendant would not agree to, hence when the matter came up this morning, the ocunsels, G. N. Gordon for the plaintiff, and E. L. Goodwill for the defendants, presented their arguments. Judge Huycke gave judgment dismissing the action, each party paying their own costs.

Mr. Gordon in his address to the bench pointed out how James Edwards had stopped the plaintiff from executing the remainder of the work and for that reason he was entitled to the claim of $123.50.

E. L. Goodwill argued that there was no contract entered into for the payment of the pump, also that according to the agreement the plaintiff was to dig the well and supply water. As the water was not produced, Mr. Goodwill submitted that the plaintiff was not entitled to pay. The contract for drilling the well was made by Mrs. Dickson and James Edwards had no authority to stop the work. The plaintiff's action was premature and no value wsa given for the claim. The work has thus far been executed in a proper manner but the well as it stands today is useless. On these reasons he submitted the case should be dismissed.

In dismissing the case, Judge Huycke pointed out how the action was premature, also that no contract was made for the pump, and, as far as he could hold, the plaintiff was entitled to take it away. As the well is not satisfactory at the present time the terms of the contract were not complied with.

Four damage suits brought against the G. T. R. at the London assizes for accidents causing injury or death were settled. The railway paid a total of $10,500.

James Campbell, for over twenty years postmaster at Portsmouth, near Kingston, is dead, aged 69.

BIG EFFORT IS EXPECTED

Kaiser and Von der Goltz Are in Conference Over Situation Arising Out of Fall of Permysl---Dutch Correspondents Say Enemy is Planning to Fall Back From Yser---Russians Still Advancing.

LONDON, March 31. — Germany's next move in the military field — for some stroke either in the east or the west is expected before the allies attempt their spring advance — is at present the chief subject of speculation and conjecture. According to reports reaching here from Petrograd, the German Emperor is now at Berlin holding a war council with Field Marshal von der Goltz, the German military commander of Constantinople, and other leaders, and is planning a new campaign to offset the fall of Permysl and meet the situation in the Dardanelles.

There has been nothing of an outstanding nature in either theatre of the land operations since the surrender of the Austrian fortress, sniping, mining and bomb-throwing predominating along the western front, while fierce fighting rages in the Carpathians.

The Dutch correspondents of English papers in their despatches refer to persistent rumors in circulation in Holland of a change in the German front in Belgium, which is alleged to have been made necessary by the fall of Permysl and by the pressure of the allies along the existing extended front.

According to these rumors the line of the Yser is to be abandoned in favor of a less extended line slightly west of Brussels. It is reported that large bodies of cavalry already are being withdrawn from the Yser.

A line of German trenches in the western part of the forest of Le Pretre was captured by French infantry yesterday and 100 prisoners were taken. To hold their new ground the French infantry had to repel a violent German attack.

Another success achieved was the capture of a German post near Pout a Mousson and the repulse of three violent counter-attacks by the French soldiery.

German batteries got close enough to Fort Donaumont, north of Verdon, to hit it with eight-inch shells on Monday. The French artillery at once replied and silenced the enemy's batteries.

Artillery actions and mine warfare have succeeded the French infantry offensive in the Champagne region. The French War Office reports gaining the advantage in this species of warfare.

The bridges thrown across the Nieuport Canal by the allies continue to be the object of a German bombardment. The French official statement says that this firing has been without result.

From the sea to the Aisne cannonading has been intermittent.

The Russian plans are developing with perfect success. This was the cheering news given out by the Russian War Office last night. Although the Austrians and Germans are making a desperate resistance on the roads to Bartfeld and the Uzsok Pass, the Russian infantry managed to carry more of the enemy's fortified positions on the heights covering the roads. The Russian captures amounted to 76 officers, 5,384 men, 21 machine guns, 5 field pieces and one trench mortar in Sunday's and Monday's operations. The enemy put up a stubborn resistance to the Russian progress and made a series of desperate counter attacks.

A despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. from Bucharest, says:

"It is reported from the Roumanian frontier that a considerable Austrian force, which crossed the River Pruth, near Bojana, Monday, was ambushed by the Russians and compelled to retire across the river with heavy losses."

RUSSIA'S PART

Shelling of Bosphorus Forts Goes on With Vigor.

Turkish Land Troops Are Preparing For Operations Which They Expect to Occur on Both Black and Aegean Seas---Three Allied Forces Prepare to Supplement the Work of the Battleships.

LONDON, March 31.—Fine weather favored the bombardment of the Bosphorus by the Russian Black Sea fleet, and this enabled aviators to obtain a clear view of the damage inflicted. The worst destruction was done to the fort of Elmas, which early in the day had been firing its four guns very steadily. Russian 12-inch shells demolished both the old stone bastions and also the new earthworks round the emplacement where the Germans had recently transferred some of their guns.

It is known that the Turks have 22 guns at Anadoli and Kavak, four miles further along the Asiatic shore of the Bosphorus, and 24 guns at the neighboring fort of Madjar Kali. Six guns were worked from the fort of Kilia on the European side. The garrison of Elmas fled, being unable to withstand the fire of the warships. Turkish land troops are now evidently preparing for important operations which they expect to be undertaken simultaneously from the Black Sea and the Aegean Sea.

The Russian admiral congratulated the fleet on the excellent results of the day's operations.

The Chronicle naval correspondent, discussing the position at the Dardanelles, and the necessity that a passage shall be forced at all costs, says:

"There will be combined operations such as we have hardly seen for a hundred year. Three fleets are sharing in the attack, and at least three armies will be engaged in the campaign on shore."

A Reuter despatch from Athens says:

"The Turks are repairing the damage done to the forts and are concentrating troops in Smyrna.

"The operations in the Dardanelles Sunday were confined to an intermittent bombardment of several Turkish positions in which seaplanes co-operated. The Turkish reply was feeble."

CONGREGATION OF MURRAY ST. CHURCH ENTERTAINED BY MEN'S ASSOCIATION

Mr. James Ryrie, President of Baptist Convention Was the Guest of Honor

The banquet given by the Men's Association of the Murray Street Baptist Church last night, at which Mr. James Ryrie, of Toronto, was the guest of honor, was well attended and a success in every way.

The ladies provided the necessaries for the banquet, and when that was over the time was given to speeches and musical and vocal selections. During the banquet Mr. Asa Huycke's orchestra supplied music, and the young ladies of the church waited on the tables.

Mr. R. C. Read was chairman and proposed the first toast, which was to the King. Mr. Asa Huycke then sang a solo entitled "Still as the Night," by Bohm, which was so well received that an encore was necessary, and "Mother McCrea" was sung.

Mr. Raddon proposed the toast to the Murray Street Church, which was responded to by Dr. Scott. Dr. Scott gave a brief outline of the history of the church, with which he had been connected for a number of years as he naively expressed it. In 1846 the Baptist cause first came to Peterborough, and in 1882-83 the building was erected on Murray street. In 1889 they had some trouble, two deacons left, joining another denomination, one resigned, so that left just one. Dr. Scott referred to the Rev. J. E. Trotter's excellent work in establishing the Baptist cause firmly in this city. He was followed by the Rev. A. E. Dykeman, Rev. Messrs. Bastow, F. Scott (who left as a missionary for South America), and then Rev. J. R. Webb some eight years ago. Owing to Mr. Webb's efforts the present fine building was made possible.

Mr. J. H. Duncan proposed the toast to the Men's Association, and this was responded to by Mr. R. Harding, past president. The success of the Men's Association had been the outcome of the "Every man canvass," said Mr. Harding. The war made it necessary for some of their plans to lie dormant. Still, the meetings were well attended. Quite a number of their men have gone to the front, and they are glad that they have been able to go. He made an appeal for all the men to be present and said it was not always the man who made the most noise that did the best work. He thanked the ladies for their aid to the association.

Chief Thompson proposed the toast to the ladies in a manner that was quite pleasing to the assembly, and this was responded to by Mr. Jos. Wearing, who told a number of stories to set the people in good humor. He said he believed in the equality of the sexes, and that the war was helping to bring this about.

Miss Kidd then sang a solo, "A Song of Sunshine," that was so well rendered that she was recalled and sang a very pretty song, "Absent." Mr. T. F. Matthews then briefly introduced the speaker of the evening, Mr. Jas. Ryrie, of Toronto.

Mr. James Ryrie.

Mr. Ryrie then related how he had sure to be present, and recollected the pleasant time he had had at the laying of the corner-stone, and later at the meeting of the convention here of which he was now president. This time he was doubly honored by being in the home circle.

Murray Street Church was a model church, yet a model can be improved. He told a little story to illustrate this point. A model was a small imitation of the real thing. You're a model church, but at the same time only a small imitation of what you hope to be.

In church work the ladies have the first place. "I like the idea of a church," the speaker said. "A church works through these various organizations. I would like to say something to inspire and encourage you. The war has caused great changes, and some things we thought were Christian we found out were not, so we must consider several things seriously that we have not considered seriously enough.

First Consideration.

"In service to God we must consider first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and place our givings as one of the permanent expenditures of the home."

He had been connected with the Jarvis Street Baptist Church, Toronto, for fifty-five years. He had been nearly everything but deacon and church treasurer. He had been superintendent of the Sunday school for fifteen years—

"Ever sing in the choir?" asked Mr. Webb.

"No, but I sit two seats from the choir," was the rejoinder.

He described an old boys' reunion at which he met men who always lived in Toronto and whom he had not seen for twenty years. He could hardly believe it, and so the idea of visiting was good. It must be of much benefit. We should be one in the Church of Christ.

"The manhood of a church has a double responsibility. One is the observance of the sabbath. I do not believe in a Puritanical Sabbath. The Sabbath was made for man." He remembered how much ideas have changed in this regard. When he was a boy, people would not cut with scissors on Sunday. Whistling was not thought of, and his father would not think of shaving on Sunday. Shoes had to be cleaned on Saturday night. "I knew that to my cost, because I was the artist."

Church Attendance.

Mr. Ryrie then spoke of the "Oncers." Some people could not get to church oftener, but that does not apply to all. Then people should go on time. Mr. Ryrie thought they should all try to sing. "If you can't sing like a canary you can sing like a tree toad." The gathering at the Lord's table should be faithfully observed as well as the Wednesday night prayer-meeting. He received benefit from them.

Mr. Ryre then related how he had succeeded in attaining a certain object, and on returning home opened his Bible and read, "He giveth them their desires, but sendeth leanness into their hearts." There is the temptation to be taken up with other things too much. He closed by saying that among the busy things of life we should try to retain our interest in Christ's kingdom.

A hearty vote of thanks was moved to the speaker by Rev. Mr. Webb and Mr. Webber.

STOP LIQUOR FOR THE DANCE HALLS

LONDON, March 31. — Liquor licenses are being refused to dance halls by the magistrates in charge of this branch of excise. Formerly they were generally awarded without much question, even to halls in which dances were held only occasionally.

"The present is not time for dancing anyway," explained a magistrate in West London, in refusing an application. "If they must dance, they will have to dance on coffee."

German Troops for Cracow.

BERNE, March 31.—News has just reached me that about 160,000 German troops have arrived in Austria, the greater number being despatched to Cracow and the Carpathians and any point where Russian attacks are feared. One hundred and seventy troop trains have reached Angvar since March 24, most of the men in them being Bavarians and Saxons, and many of them students under 18 years of age.

INVASION IS INEVITABLE

Hungary is Now Sick of the War and Wants Peace

LONDON, March 31—The Morning Post correspondent at Budapest telegraphs: Newspapers here occupy themselves daily more and more with peace talk, for this is the only subject people are interested in in Hungary. There is no allusion to peace which does not find eager readers, and there is no peace, however humiliating, which would not be welcome. The tone of these peace articles is always the same — consoling people with statements to the effect that Hungary will receive her reward for the immense sacrifices made; that this time Austria will be willing to acknowledge the superiority of Hungary, and that "our national independence" will be our reward. At the same time hatred against Austria is growing day by day. The former admiration for Germany is well on the wane.

Hindenburg alone has admirers, but Austria is hated and despised even more than before the war. Moreover, to make things worse, everybody is preparing for the inevitable invasion. I had a talk with a high Ministerial official yesterday, who said: "No one thinks it impossible. The Russian offensive in the Carpathians which began a few days ago cannot now be checked." He was of the opinion, like a good many others I have seen, that this time we have been prepared for an unprecedented onslaught, and one which will not cease until it has achieved its aim. He pointed out that the Russian advance, although it will be slow even in the west and centre, in a few days' time will reach Eperjies and probably Kassa, and if during the next few days the battle now proceeding has not given Austria the victory, nothing will stop the Russian forces invading our plains.

The papers give 80,000 to 100,000 as the number of Russians released at Permysl, but nobody gives credit to them.

WESTERN MINERS AGAINST STRIKE

LETHBRIDGE, March 31. — The referendum taken by the miners on Monday shows that five to two of the men are in favor of continuing at work and accepting the new agreement arrived at in Calgary between their representatives and the operators. In Fernie, Hillcrest and other camps, except Bellevue and Blairmore, the sentiment was overwhelmingly in favor of it. The result at Coalhurst is in doubt.

Pre-arranged Plan Failed.

WASHINGTON, March 31.—Additional information about the attempt of the German steamship Odenwald to slip out of the harbor of San Juan, Porto Rico, without clearance papers, a week ago Sunday, was received here last night from Collector of Customs Richardson.

The report says investigation after a five-inch shell from Morro Castle had stopped the Odenwald, showed that five rowboats had been anchored along the channel, indicating a prearranged plan to point the way out of the harbor for the German skipper.

Aviation Corps Given Prize.

PARIS, March 31.—Acting on the suggestion of Gen. Joffre, the French commander-in-chief, the Academy of Sports has awarded the grand prize of 10,000 francs ($2,000) to the military aviation corps. Minister of War Millerand has undertaken to distribute the money among the families of the French airmen who have been killed during the war.

LICENSE COMMISSION MAY DECLARE ANY AREA "DRY"

On Second Reading of Liquor Amendment Hon. Mr. Hanna Amplifies Explanation of Measure ---Premier Pledged to Appoint Highest Type of Men.

TORONTO, March 31.—The Government's liquor legislation was under debate all day yesterday and until three o'clock this morning. The Opposition amendment introduced by Mr. Proudfoot (Huron) was finally defeated by a vote of 69 to 23, and the second reading given to the bill. Mr. Proudfoot's amendment to the measure was in two sections, the first expressing regret that despite the war crisis, not a single bar was closed. No reduction made in hours of sale, nor any enlargement made in the power of the people. The second section urged that the Government,

"(1) Close all drinking places during the war (this covers all hotel and club licenses); (2) grant to the electors of the province the right to decide by a majority vote whether these drinking places shall remain closed or be reopened at the end of the war; and, (3) provide more effective measures for wiping out any shops which may remain, by making local option county-wide."

Hon. Mr. Hanna, in moving the second reading, amplified his original statement regarding the bill, and announced that a clause would be added to the section giving the commission power to restrict the sale of liquor to any class of persons by giving additional authority to declare "any area, no matter how large or small, absolutely dry." The Provincial Secretary laid great stress on the character of the men to be selected for the commission, who would not represent any particular class or section, to have no opposing interests on the board.

Mr. Proudfoot followed with his amendment. He believed that the Government proposed to keep a grip on the commission to revoke anything which might be undertaken.

Messrs. Musgrove, Munro, McElroy, Davidson and Price followed and Mr. Rowell took the floor late in the evening. He described the bill as "a pitiable performance in the face of a national crisis." The liquor dealers alone were satisfied with it. Russia, France and Britain had all taken steps against the evil. In the Ontario House alone was it laughed out of court.

The Premier, in reply, said Mr. Rowell was not so much afraid of the Government being discredited as of himself not obtaining credit for one of the most advanced laws. There could be no comparison of conditions in Europe with those in Ontario. The Ontario measure was broader and deeper than the British one, yet nothing had come to it but castigation. He review the system prior to 1905 and in conclusion he gave his word that men of the utmost purity and integrity would be chosen for the commission. He pledged himself to this and said he "until I am proven false my word should be accepted."

Allan Studholme concluded the debate and the division was taken. The House rose at 3.15 to sit again at 2.15 p.m. to-day.

The charge of forgery laid against Mr. A. D. George, solicitor of Fort Francis, has been dismissed by the magistrate, the evidence showing that no intentional forgery had been committed and that the charge should never have been laid.

SEA CAPTAINS ARE AROUSED

They Want Guns to Fight German Submarine Peril

LIVERPOOL, March 31.—The Falaba outrage has aroused mercantile masters, who are determined to avenge the death of Capt. Davis. He was of a quiet, reserved disposition, with hosts of friends in the service. It is declared in Liverpool that the gallant manner in which he died was typical of his character.

"Give us guns is the reply of shipmasters to the German pirates," said Thomas Scott, of the Mercantile Marine Service Association, in discussing the outrages yesterday. Continuing, he said: "Submarines have now given sufficient evidence that they have not the slightest scruple in murdering defenseless crews and passengers. There no longer is anything in the argument that arming merchant ships would provoke submarines. They need no provocation. Our only defence is guns."

DOCKERS REFUSE WEEK END WORK

LIVERPOOL, March 31.—The Birkenhead dockers last evening refused to do the week-end work until the ship owners agreed to pay them on Saturdays for the work done Friday nights and Saturdays.

John Sexton, secretary of the Dockers Union, addressed them, but was unable to persuade the men to change their decision. The suggestion that the military might be called upon to do their work was received with derisive laughter.

Government intervention in some form is generally expected at an early date.

To Drop Conspiracy Case.

SEATTLE, Wash., March 30.—The prosecution of Dr. Wilhelm Mueller, German consul at Seattle and B. Max Schulz, his secretary, charged with conspiracy to bribe an employe of the Seattle Construction & Drydock Co. to reveal secrets of his employers' business, will be dropped, it was announced here yesterday.

The State Department at Washington desires that the prosecution, under a state law, be discontinued, to which the prosecuting attorney has assented.

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, March 30.—Assertions that a change of policy had seemingly prevented until May, if not altogether, the entrance of Italy into the war, did a good deal today to lift the price of wheat. The market closed strong, 1½c to 3⅛c above last night's close. Corn wound up with a gain of ⅝c to 1⅛c, and oats unchanged to ⅛c higher. In provisions, the outcome varied from 12½c decline to a rise of a shade.

Strongest prices of the day in wheat came in the last hour. On top of the cable news, complaints piled up from Illinois and Missouri that dry, cold weather was hurting the winter crop. A comprehensive report, indicating that the winter-killed area was small, and that the condition of the plant thruout the country as a whole averaged better than in December last, had only a transient effect on the market.

Corn mounted with wheat, and as a result of a material improvement in cash demand, due largely to rough weather. There were also rumors of some export business.

Adverse conditions for seeding tended to make oats firm. Seaboard call, however, was disappointing.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, March 30.— Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 833 cattle, 972 hogs, 120 sheep and lambs and 258 calves.

But choice, lightweight butchers' cattle were in demand and sold readily at Monday's advance. The fat cattle market was unchanged in values, with nearly everything cleaned up in good time.

Stockers and feeders were being looked for by farmers on the market, which caused prices for them to be firm.

Receipts of milkers and springers were larger, but not greater than the demand, and values equaled those paid last week.

Sheep and lambs remained at Monday's high market value.

Butchers' Cattle.

Easter quality steers and heifers, $7.75 to $8; choice butchers, $7.25 to $7.50; good, $7 to $7.25; medium, $6.60 to $6.85; common, $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good cows, $5.75 to $6; medium cows, $5.25 to $5.60; canners and cutters, $4 to $4.50; choice bulls at $6 to $6.50; common bulls at $5 to $6.

Stockers and Feeders.

Steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $6.40 to $6.75; stockers, 530 to 730 lbs., at $6 to $6.40. See list of sales by Dunn & Levack for stockers and feeders.

Milkers and Springers.

Choice milkers and forward springers sold at $70 to $80, with a few select cows at $85 to $90; common to good cows sold at $40 to $65 each.

Veal Calves.

Choice veal calves sold at $10 to $11.50; good at $8 to $9.50; medium at $7.50 to $8; common at $6 to $7; eastern rough calves at $4 to $5.

BOWSER CUDDLES DOWN

The Mother-in-law is the Cause of It

By M. QUAD.

On his way home the other evening Mr. Bowser had his feet stepped on, his hat knocked off and his ribs poked by umbrellas, and by the time he reached hime he was ready for a row. To add fuel to his feelings he found that his mother-in-law had arrived two hours before and was comfortably installed at the head of affairs, while Mrs. Bowser had gone to bed with a headache. Formal greetings had scarcely been exchanged when he said:

"What's all this twaddle about headache? When I left the house this morning Mrs. Bowser was as chirp as a cricket. Mighty funny that a headache should flop her into bed all at once."

"There's nothing funny about it," promptly replied the mother-in-law. "She had a nervous headache, and I told her to go to bed. She looks to me as if her nerves were all racked to pieces, and she ought to go home with me for a year."

"That's all nonsense! Her nerves are all right—as right as mine. She's probably been sloshing around in the rain and got her feet wet, and if so she will get no pity from me."

"I GAVE HER SEVENTEEN MINUTES TO GET OUT."

"You are not asked nor expected to pity her, sir, and if you want any dinner you'd better eat it now! I found the cook very lazy and impudent and trying to run things to suit herself, and therefore I discharged her. I've managed to cook a little something myself, however."

"You—you discharged the cook at an hour's notice!" he exclaimed, with flushed face.

"I gave her seventeen minutes to get out. I'd like to see a cook or any one else trying to walk over my daughter."

Mr. Bowser sat down to the table with his gorge in his throat. The mother-in-law had thrown down the gauntlet, and he had picked it up.

"It is a picked up dinner," she explained as she brought it from the kitchen. "This is one of my Irish stews, and I know you'll like it."

"A stew for dinner!" he gasped as his eyes began to roll.

"Certainly and not much besides, but if it's good enough for me it's good enough for you. I've heard about your finding fault with your dinners, but you can either eat this or let it alone. When a man gets the idea that a house is run for his benefit only it's time he was brought to book."

Mr. Bowser meant to jump up and pound on the table and declare that he was master of his own house and wouldn't eat Irish stew for dinner if he starved to death, but to his intense surprise he not only clung to his chair, but actually found himself eating the stew. There was something in the icy glare of the woman that had a restraining influence on his impetuosity. The coffee was weak and the potatoes underdone, and he had opened his mouth to declare that he wouldn't ask a hog to sit down to such a meal when the mother-in-law fastened her eyes on him and said:

"You just keep quiet and be thankful for what you've got. I've known husbands to make a dinner on raw turnips."

The pudding was flavored with vanilla, and had Mrs. Bowser been there Mr. Bowser would have made her heart ache for a month, but those icy eyes checked his outbreak and even compelled him to eat rather generously. It was only when dinner was finished and they had returned to the sitting room that he determined to shake off the incubus and assert his independence.

"I think I'll go over to the club for two or three hours this evening," he observed as he toyed with the cat.

"You'll do nothing of the kind," replied the mother-in-law as she wheeled on him. "You'll sit right here and see if a doctor is wanted or if there are any errands to be done. The idea of you loafing around a club when your wife is almost too sick to speak! If you had a soft toe-corn the whole house would have to hover over you!"

Mr. Bowser choked and strangled in his indignation, and the cat grinned and said to herself that things would break loose pretty soon.

"And I've heard," continued the woman as her teeth clicked together, "that you play poker at the club and sometimes lose as much as $10 of an evening. I wish you were my husband for about an hour! You'd never play poker more than once!"

"Did you come out here to insult and abuse me?" demanded Mr. Bowser, with a flash of independence.

"I came out here to straighten things up, and I shall do it!" she sternly replied.

Then followed a powerful silence, broken at last by his going down to the cellar to nail a board on the coal bin. He had just started to drive a nail when the mother-in-law appeared on the stairs and said:

"Drop that hammer like a hot potato! Don't you know that every blow goes through your poor wife's head with a bang? You've got about as much heart in you as a rhinoceros!"

"Woman, how dare you talk to me like that!" he shouted as his face grew white as flour.

"Don't call me 'woman' and yell out that way!" she replied. "No bulldozer can scare me a cent's worth. If you want something to do go up and sit with your wife while I wash up the dishes."

Mr. Bowser sulked for a few minutes and then walked upstairs. Finding Mrs. Bowser asleep, he thought it would be a good thing to overhaul his dresser. He had scarcely pulled out one of the drawers when he discovered a sock with a hole in the heel. Indignation overcame him on the instant, and he flourished the sock on high and exclaimed:

"So this is the way my house is run, is it! Here's a sock that I bought new two weeks ago and never had on my foot, and yet some one has worn a hole in the heel!"

"Is—is it you?" asked Mrs. Bowser, as she woke up.

"Yes, it is me, and what about this sock? Look at it! Behold this specimen of wifely interest in your husband's welfare! Is it any wonder"—

The mother-in-law appeared at that moment, and pointing to the stairs, she said:

'You and your holey sock get out o' this as fast as you can!"

Mr. Bowser got. Something in her he feared—some element or mastery—but as they returned to the sitting room he shook off the feeling and hoarsely whispered:

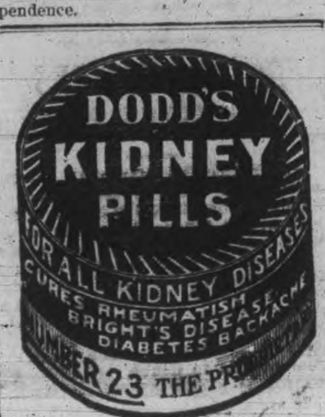
"There is a train at 10 o'clock in the morning! You can go by that!"

"If I do it'll be as a corpse!" she grimly replied. "Sit down there! Now, then, I want to tell you a few things You are a bulldozing husband, and it would do you good to be hit across the neck with a crowbar. You think you know it all, and you are bound to have your way over everybody. No other woman in this world except your wife would live with you two hours, and she's a fool for doing it! You never come home except to kick about something, and if I was your wife I'd scald you. You talk about waste and extravagance and yet you'd buy sand for sugar if left alone. You boss and browbeat and roar and bellow, but in a week I'll have you as humble as a cat! It's all in the right woman getting hold of you."

"And you'll stay a week!" groaned Mr. Bowser.

"Four of them!" she replied. "And I'll work a remarkable change in you or know the reason why! It won't do you a mite of good to roll your eyes, grind your teeth and crack your toes. You've got to cuddle right down like a barrel of molasses. Don't go upstairs again till bedtime, and if there's any more rows over holey socks you'll go barefooted in your shoes the rest of the winter!"

She went to the kitchen to finish the dishes, and the cat crept over to Mr. Bowser and rubbed against his leg and purred in sympathy. The room seemed to stifle him, and he got up and walked softly down the hall and out on the step, followed by the cat, and they sat down side by side and gazed into vacancy. A tramp halted at the gate and asked for a loan of a dime to get victuals for his vitals, but Mr. Bowser and the cat gazed on—gazed at vacancy and realized that the end of the world was close at hand.



He Was Really Out.

"This is the fiftieth time you've told me 'The editor is out,'" said the man with the bill. "Now, I don't want to call you a"—

"You'd better not," warned the office boy. "I've told you true. He's out."

"Well," the man growled, "I notice that he's bought an automobile, and"—

"That's just it," the boy interrupted. "He's $1,500 out."—Atlanta Constitution.

WAR HORSES IN BATTLE.

Cavalry Mounts Revel In the Dash and Fury of the Charge.

It will probably surprise you, said a retired colonel of hussars, to learn that a cavalry horse usually enjoys a battle at least as much as his rider and displays as much courage in it. He will chafe and stamp with impatience while waiting for the order to charge and at the signal will dash forward like a greyhound released from the leash, full of fire and fury and often neighing wildly. At the moment of contact with the enemy he will rear, striking and biting savagely at the opposing horses and trampling down the infantry.

When his rider falls he will dash along with his fellows and crash as gallantly into the foe. In the famous charge of the Light brigade scores of riderless horses swept down the "valley of death," thundering through the smoke on to the Russian guns, and galloped back in safety with the shattered remnant of the brigade. Five horses raced neck and neck with Lord Alfred Paget, who rode in advance of the line, so eager were they to get at the enemy.

And not only is the well trained charger as brave as his rider. He is often as intelligent. He knows the bugle calls just as well and answers them as promptly. In fact, I have known many a case in which a horse has put his rider right when he has mistaken an order and has gone faultlessly through a maneuver in spite of the efforts of his mistaken master to make him do the wrong thing.—London Tit-Bits.

JACK JOHNSON WITH ROMAN HEAD WOULD BE SCULPTOR'S MODEL

HAVANA, March 31.—Jack Johnson is in perfect physical and mental condition. The big negro was examined by Dr. G. L. Hagenberger, at the request of Jack Curley. Doctor Hagenberger practiced his profession in Boston for fifteen years previous to coming to Havana. He was connected with the New York Health Department for ten years.

Doctor Hagenberger's report follows:

"In twenty-five years of medical practice I have never examined an athlete, who is so symmetrical and well balanced as Johnson. He is in excellent physical and mental condition. His heart is abnormally small for an athlete, and he has the endurance powers of a man of twenty-seven. His lungs are in excellent condition, and his muscular frame work splendidly, with not an ounce of superfluous flesh on his body. Johnson's weigh is 227 pounds. If Johnson had a Roman head he would be a sculptor's model."

Johnson boxed twelve rounds this afternoon, showing much speed and finishing in good condition.

Willard boxed twelve rounds. He seemed tired and lacked his usual aggressiveness, his sparring partner, Tex O'Rourke, frequently breaking through his guard and landing heavy blows on Willard's chin.

Gen. Bustillo, the governor of Havana, has appointed three prominent local physicians to be at the ringside to attend Johnson and Willard in case either of them is injured in their fight on April 15.

Physicians last night took the measurements of the pugilists in the offices of the fight promoters. The result were as follows:

SKIP LITTLE HANGS UP CURLING RECORD FOR LINDSAY RINK

Skip G. A. Little holds the unbeaten record of having won 20 straight games, while his rink standing is 25 wins and 4 losses. The veteran skip has been playing in tip-top form this season and won many a hard-fought game by playing in superb fashion. He has also received splendid support from his rink: Jas. Keith (lead) and P. Burke (second). They have, generallp speaking, played consistently.

Monday afternoon Skip Little succeeded in defeating Secretary Knowlson by the score of 10 to 5. The ice was of a gummy and dead nature—not keen nor even tough. —Lindsay Warder.

Brutal Black George.

No rougher customer ever occupied a throne than Servia's first ruler, Black George. Except when under the influence of wine or the smell of gunpowder, he was habitually moody and dangerous to cross. When his aged father thwarted his wishes he drew a pistol and shot him through the head. When his mother tried to cheat him over a beehive he bonneted her with it and stalked off, regardless of her shrieks of pain. Black George was admirable as an administrator, scrupulously just in all his dealings—outside of the family circle—and as brave and disinterested a patriot as ever lived. After brilliant victories he would return to his squalid home, empty handed, and resume the uneventful life of a pig breeder.

COMMENT As You Like it

BOB CARSON was approached the other night in Quebec by a flat-footed individual carrying a slip of paper. Robert M. thought it a subpoena and requested the visitor to "wait till I get me coat." After a prolonged session of hand-waving and after pitching three or four innings to imaginary batters, the man with the paper got it pumped into the local hurler that the paper was a city league certificate, printed in French. Bob signed with "Robert de Carson."

JACK PILLING'S name hasn't been mentioned in connection with baseball as yet this season. Appears as though the manager of last year's Red Caps is too interested in the Home Guards.

VIC SCULLY is turning out with the Classics and is expectant of landing a berth in the outer garden. "Doc" also has dreams of playing lacrosse. There's a red light on the; etc., etc.

BILL ANDREWS may umpire again this year, but it's safe betting the players on the north bench won't be subject to the fumes of any cigars between games. She's been a hard winter, girls.

EAST CITY will likely have a team in the City Baseball League this season. In Hagerman and Swanson the Brooklyn crew have an excellent battery.

"STRIKE-OUTS linger longer where the roses bloom," is the song Vic Fowler is singing these days. He has Gus, Ray and Lornie Rose on the pitching staff of the Classics.

THE THISTLES will be in the City League. As usual, the team will not be real strong till the colleges close for the summer vacation

BILL WHITTY is getting a little lacrosse interest worked up down in Stirling. According to reports, Bill is to trot out a speedy team.

GLOOM THOUGHT for today—the reports a year ago about the Petes' peppery manager.

CY YOUNG IS 48.

Tuesday was the forty-eighth birthday of Denten Tecumseh Young, better known as "Cy," who was the only pitcher in captivity to win 500 games in his big league career. When he was past forty Cy commanded the biggest price [illegible] for a pitcher. In 1909 [illegible] $12,000 in cash and two pitchers, Charlie Chech and Jack Ryan, and in addition gave Cy a bonus of $5000.

Life In the Open.

Men who ride to hounds learn much more than the technique of a sport. Observation, a quick eye, judgment and a number of other qualities are developed. From the bridge of a battleship I have seen a hunting landsman pick up torpedo boats at night before the lookout man saw them. If you can brown your skin nerves vanish. Sunbeams are good for old bones and young. Hot baths and constant shade multiply emotion and increase fads and flaccidity. Yet life in the open tends to become for town dwellers an expensive luxury for the few.—A. White's Essays.

HOME GUARD

Target Practice Will Continue Every Evening

A general meeting of the Rifle Association was held at the ranges last Thursday night and a large number of members attended. Matters as to the future of the association were discussed. It was decided that the target practice would continue and be placed on a self-sustaining basis. As a large majority of those present wished to continue drilling at least as long as the war continued, it was decided to form up one battalion on the basis of four double companies. This will enable the Guards to have properly qualified officers and instructors for each company.

The general feeling of the meeting was that the Home Guards should not and did not interfere with the 57th Battalion, and it was noted that a number of the younger members, also a number of our officers had enlisted in the 57th Regiment.

The following financial report was read and discussed:

Receipts

City grant	$ 800.00
Membership tickets	150.00
Donations	79.00
Sales, badges	74.50
Sales, ammunition and targets	91.00
Sales, instruction books	3.20
	$1198.70

Expenditures

Rifle ranges and practice	$ 945.45
Drill	65.00
General expense	252.62
Deficit	$ 64.33
Members on roll	932
Enlisted overseas	50
Members paid dues	151
Members not paid dues	732

Assets

Memership dues (approx.)	$500.00
Rifles	200.00
Second-hand lumber, steel, &c.	75.00
Targets, &c.	30.00
	$805.00
Estimated weekly expense.	$28.00

A large number of the members have paid their dues since the meeting, and as a charge will be made of 5c per score of eight shots for use or rifle ranges, ammunition and targets, the expense can be met and the work go on.

Orders by officer commanding Peterborough Civilian Rifle Association Home Guards:

Carrying out resolutions of general meeting, March 25th, 1915, target practice will continue at the ranges every evening and Saturday afternoons, also one afternoon during the week, to be decided later. A charge of 5c per score of eight rounds will be made for use of ranges and ammunition. Members may use their own rifles or ammunition, but charge will be the same.

Drill will continue on Thursday evening, and the class of instruction will be held after drill. A battalion of four double companies will be formed, and the following officers are detailed to organize these companies:

No. A. Company—Capt. J. Pilling, Capt. C. J. Hicks.

No. B. Company—Capt. C. E. Sisson, Capt. Keyes.

No. C. Company—Capt. V. W. Lancaster, Lieut. Reg. Turner.

No. D. Company—Capt. H. R. Parsons, Lieut. J. S. Watson.

Companies will be organized and be maintained at equal strength. Responsibility of attendance will be placed on section commanders and members are requested not to join this battalion unless they can give each Thursday for this purpose of drill. Members of Home Guard must be members of the Rifle Association.

The battalion will parade for organization on Thursday, April 1st, at 8 p.m.; members will fall in on twelve company markers so that they may be posted to the four companies in sections.

By order,

PRESTON—FRY.

At three o'clock this afternoon a charming house wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Lillico, 579 Homewood avenue, when Miss Margaret Fry was united to Mr. Allan Preston of Monaghan.

Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Charlotte Street Methodist Church, tied the knot, the ceremony being performed 'neath an arch of smilax. Beautiful lilies and geraniums figured in the decorative arrangement of the home, with a patriotic touch lent by the introduction of flags.

The groomsman was Mr. Fred Preston, a brother of the groom, while the bride was assisted by her sister, Stella.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Lewis.

Immediately after the ceremony a pretty buffet luncheon was served, the happy young couple leaving on the 4:23 C. P. R. train for Toronto and points west.

Upon their return they will take up residence in Monaghan, where the bride will be "at home" to her host of friends after May 1st.

BROWN—FEE.

A very charming wedding was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Browne, Melbourne street, Lindsay, when their daughter, Loretta M., was united in marriage to Mr. Samuel J. Fee, of Lindsay, by Rev. S. J. Shorey, D.D.

The bride, who was daintily gowned in an exquisite Belgian blue travelling suit with hat to match, and carried a bouquet of roses and orchids, was attended by her bridesmaid, Miss Naomi Fee, sister of the groom, Mr. Lester Lytle being groomsman.

The ceremony was performed beneath a beautiful arch of palms, carnations and smilax, which made a magnificent setting.

After the wedding the young couple and guests sat down to a bountiful wedding breakfast before leaving on the C. P. R. afternoon train for an extended trip via Toronto and other points west. They will reside in Lindsay.

The bride was the recipient of an unusually large number of beautiful and costly presents which reflect the place she holds among her many friends.

BUCKAM—FISHER.

At a charming ceremony performed this afternoon in George Street Methodist Church, Lillian May Fisher, 493 Water street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Fisher and one of Peterborough's most popular young ladies, was united in sacred wedlock to Mr. Frank Buckam, son of Mr. John Buckam, of Monaghan.

Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D., officiated at the ceremony.

The bride and groom were unattended. She was married in a very becoming travelling suit of navy blue poplin. Suitable wedding music was supplied by Mr. J. H. Renwick. Mr. and Mrs. Buckam left on a short wedding trip.

The bride has many very warm friends who will extend her sincere wishes for a happy future. The groom is also a popular and highly esteemed young man. Many beautiful gifts were received by both, slightly indicative of the regard in which they are held.

Mothers' Club of King George School

Six New Members Are Added to the Roll

A very enjoyable meeting of the Mothers' Club of the King George School was held yesterday afternoon. After the business of the club had been concluded a very interesting paper was read by Mrs. W. E. Conway. Mrs. James Lock contributed a splendid instrumental solo and also accompanied Master Sam Whitehouse, who sang "Boys of the King." Many thanks are due to the three mentioned for the pleasure they gave. The club is happy to announce that they have gained six new members, which brings the membership list up to 33. The next meeting of the club will be held April 12th, when the members are asked to bring with them needles, thimbles and scissors.

THE HOLY CITY SPLENDIDLY SUNG BY COMBINED CHOIRS

A triumph in every sense of the word was the verdict passed by the audience upon the presentation of "The Holy City" in George Street Methodist Church last night by the combined choirs of St. Paul's Presbyterian and George Street Churches. "The Holy City" is one of the heavier and most difficult of oratorios and its treatment, to be effective, must be on a high plane. It abounds in solos, duets and quartet numbers that test the vocalism of performers to the limit, and is admirably adapted for the production of powerful and impressive dramatic effects. The treatment of the subject of this work is almost entirely reflective, the more dramatic parts of the book from which many of the numbers are taken, namely, The Vision of St. John, having been treated in so masterly a manner by the great German composer, Louis Spohr, in his oratorio, The Last Judgment. With the exception of two hymns, a verse from Milton, and three verses from the Te Deum, the words are almost entirely Scriptural.

For months the choirs under the leadership of Mr. John Allan and Mr. J. H. Renwick have been faithfully practising and rehearsing for this undertaking, and it surely must have gladdened their anxious minds to see how beautifully and smoothly the production glided off. Honors were equally divided by the two bodies of singers, and the union of choirs for the performance creates a precedent that is most worthy and commendable. Furthermore, it speaks eloquently for the ability of the two leaders insofar as they showed unmistakably that they have talent to a marked degree for conducting such enterprises. But without the choirs, of course, there would not have been the opportunity for the display of this musical ability; and to the singers who have worked with such faithfulness and fidelity throughout to make the venture a success, the very highest praise is due.

The choirs showed the result of their training. No flaw could be found; indeed they exhibited a balance and harmonious relationship that was apparent to the most inexperienced ear. When an extra effort was incumbent upon tenors, altos, sopranos, basses, they could always be depended upon to measure up to the occasion. At no time did the work of any one division of the chorus overshadow or weaken the general effect. In addition, the precision and perfect time maintained throughout sustained this pleasure-producing effect.

Mr. Maurice Park, whose sweet, well-controlled tenor falls naturally into oratoric vocalism, was quite at home in his opening solo, "No Shadows Yonder, All Light and Song." Honors were about equally divided in the opinion of the audience between Miss Dorothy Allan and Mr. Park. Miss Allan's work was particularly pleasing, the splendid range of her pure, bell-like soprano being one of the shining features of the evening. Miss Ida Sanderson also sang in excellent voice a number well adapted for her modulated contralto. Miss Sanderson's voice possesses an unusually rich clear tone that is particularly pleasing. The other soloists all acquitted themselves well, both in quartet selections and individually. Mrs. Renwick was heard to advantage, while Mr. Fred Miles, Charles Thorpe and Edward Jones all received highly enthusiastic aplause.

The quartet composed of Mrs. and Miss Allan, Messrs. McKeown and Dickson, was given a most gratifying ovation, as was also a sextette composed of Miss M. Armstrong, Miss E. Kemp, Miss Pearl McKee, Miss Telgmann, Mrs. McCarrell and Mrs. Rehill. Miss Allan and Mrs. Renwick were heard acceptably in a duet, while in the closing chorus Mrs. Renwick, Mrs. Allan, Miss Allan and Miss Sanderson took a quartet part in a manner that was par excellence.

Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the impressive choral work which at all times maintained a standard that will be hard to surpass. Mr. Allan and Mr. Renwick each took their turn with the baton, one presiding at the organ while the other directed. Miss Pearl McKee officiated at the piano in her customary satisfactory manner.

The big church was filled, both on the main floor and back to the walls in the galleries. The entertainment was over in nice time.

Local News in General

Recruiting.

Recruits for overseas infantry will be taken on at the Armouries at 10 a.m., 3 p.m., and 8 p.m. daily.

'Don't ask for "tea," specify "SALADA," and avoid the risk of getting old, dusty tea, sold for the sake of extra profit. Generous sample to prove our superiority to anyone not at present using "SALADA." Address postal to "SALADA," Toronto, and say whether you use Black, Mixed or Green Tea and at what price.

Garbage Collection.

Good Friday being a holiday, the garbage will be collected from Friday's route on Thursday afternoon. Residents in the district affected are asked to leave their garbage out at noon on Thursday.

Committee Meetings.

The legal and reception committee meets tonight at eight o'clock. The finance committee meeting for the passing of accounts and reconsidering the question of band grants will be held tomorrow afternoon at four o'clock.

A FINE FLORAL DISPLAY.

The Easter trade this year at the Peterborough Floral Co. is very extensive, and to cope with this an exceedingly fine stock is to be found in the main office and hothouses at the corner of Brock and Water Sts. The office and store is a mass of tulips, carnations, ferns, azalea, hyacinthes and Easter lilies, all very artistically arranged.

PONY NOTICE

Contest closes tonight. The merchants who are conducting the pony contest have decided to have Mr. Horace Walkey of the Bank of Montreal to audit their books during the period of the contest.

They have also agreed to appoint him as official judge of the counting of the ballots.

All ballot boxes and votes will be counted tonight by Mr. Walkey.

As some of the boys have a quantity of votes that are not yet deposited in ballot boxes, they may deposit same today or meet Mr. Walkey between 7.30 and 8 p.m. at Weber's drug store on Charlotte Street, where he will receive them and give receipt for same.

Boys who have quantities, will largely assist in work of counting by giving votes to Mr. Walkey and save the assorting out in names.

As Mr. Weber and the Empire Theatre are open evenings the merchants have arranged with Mr. Walkey as above to give every boy a chance to get in all his votes.

The counting of the votes will be proceeded with at once and the winner announced as soon as possible.

Was Remarkable Series of Services

Canon Davidson Conducted Mission at Port Perry

Under the above heading the Port Perry Star gives the subjointed racy description of the Parochial Mission recently conducted by Canon Davidson in Port Perry. He evidently met with a warmly appreciative reception from the citizens generally judging from the different notes of his meetings in the Star. He addressed the staff and pupils of the high school, 100 in number, on the relation of Canada to the Empire, and 125 public school teachers and scholars on "the duties of young citizens to their country, being introduced by the chairman of the school board. He also addressed a special and enthusiastic meeting attended by 70 members of the Woman's Patriotic League of Port Perry, and an open-air meeting of men (chiefly farmers), on Saturday afternoon on "The Country, the Empire and the Kingdom," with reference to increased production not only of agricultural products but of Canadians of sterling character.

The account of the services themselves evidently written by an outside visitor is as follows:

Canon Davidson of Peterborough, has held at the English Church here a "Mission" as it is called in their phraseology beginning Sunday, March 14th and ending the Sunday evening following, at which service the largest congregation of all attended, filling the aisles and gallery for the first time in years.

Canon Davidson is not an orator, but his utterances are forceful, logical and conspicuous for their absolute purity of expression. While the services were clothed with considerable more warmth than the public are inclined to associate with Episcopalianism and divested of much of the formalism which outsiders consider cold, yet there was not the slightest suggestion of revival clap-trap of the Rev. Billy Sunday type. The speaker urged in simple language the clean, upright, manly life. Hell and Devil, if not altogether obsolete words in his vocabulary, were not employed, they were given a well merited rest.

Something-for-nothing did not appear to be part of the Canon's philosophy, we do not recall that anyone was invited to "get saved," but all were urged, through Divine power, to live up to the Standard Character that would make them worth saving. In short, Christ and His Kingdom were proclaimed to the people of Port Perry as they have seldom been before, and even those of us who are callous to the dry-rot of indifference with which we are being turned into mummies, could not help but feel that if but a handful of determined men and women resolutely set themselves to measure up to the Standard set before them that this community would very soon feel the thrill and pulsation of a new force quickening a new life in the corpses."

On Sunday morning in St. John's a letter from the Church Wardens and other officers of the congregation was read expressing "deep appreciation of the services, the memory of which would be cherished and the effect lasting. The congregation were inspired to gain an insight into the possibilities before them and the kingdom distinctly advanced."

"THE GOOSE GIRL"

A PLAY OF PURE ROMANCE.

Will Be Shown at the Empire Theatre Thursday, Friday and Saturday of This Week.

"The Goose Girl," the Jesse L. Lasky photo-drama from Harold McGrath's world famous romantic novel of the same name, in which Marguerite Clark appears as the star, is a charming example of pure and unalloyed romance of the screen. It is a piece which takes us all far from the routine of every-day existence into the life of imaginary principalities, where princesses are stolen by gipsies and young kings refuse to marry the mates chosen for "reasons of state." But, happily, the Goose Girl becomes the princess again at the end of the story, and the young king finds duty and love both pointing in the same direction.

Marguerite Clark appears in this Lasky production by the courtesy of the Famous Players Film Company, and brings to the story rare qualities of beauty and personality seemingly created especially for the role of "The Goose Girl."

AT THE ROYAL THEATRE.

"The Plot," a Vitagraph production, in which Maurice Costello is playing the role of a newspaper reporter, made a very favorable impression at the Royal Theatre last night. Films revealing a story in which a reporter figures are generally fascinating. "The Plot" is above the average. The other pictures are good.

The vaudeville consists of local renditions and selections on a harp. Miss Clark's singing of "My Hero," from "The Chocolate Soldier" made a big hit, and her Scotch selections also were well receved.

VENERABLE NAG DIES IN HARNESS

John Doig's Steed Sent to the Haven of Equine Rest

A faithful, lean-looking specimen of horseflesh dropped upon the hard road of McDonnel street yesterday afternoon and was soon after sent to the haven of equine rest by a bullet from the gun of a police constable. Such was the ignoble end of one of John Doig's horses, which fulfils the familiar saying that he died in harness. When the epitaph comes to be written the praises of this noble animal should be lavishly extolled. For years it has been a hardworking, uncomplaining steed. Who shall say that visions of green pastures and a life of freedom never flitted through its animal intellect? But such joys are not for Mr. Doig's horses, and this one was gathered to its fathers with longings and wishes unfulfilled.

The corpse lay upon McDonnel street all night, but Sanitary Inspector Spence was notified, and had the remains carted to the dump, the chief mourners being several small boys who interestedly watched the ceremony.

MEAT VENDOR TO APPEAR IN COURT

Meat must not be brought to the city unless properly covered and complying strictly with the provisions of the Act covering the exposure of food stuffs. The vigilant eye of the sanitary inspector discovered a case this morning which has caused him to swear out an information against Mr. R. G. Mullen, a meat dealer, who brought a large supply of meat to the city for sale from Smith township, the covering being a dirty tarpaulin, so the inspector says.

Mr. Mullen will be brought before the magistrate, and the inspector will endeavor to show that he was violating the Act.

CAREFUL NURSE.

Two nurse-maids were wheeling their infant charges in the park when one asked the other:

"Are you going to the dance tomorrow afternoon?"

"What!" exclaimed the other. "And you so fond of dancing!"

"I'd love to go," explained the conscientious maid, "but to tell you the truth, I am afraid to leave the baby with its mother."

Canada to Build Warships.

Canada is not only supplying Great Britain and her allies with large quantities of material, but will also soon be in a position to build warships of every type, says The Yorkshire Post. This will result from the activities of British firms which have laid down plant in the Dominion. The yard in Montreal, belonging to Messrs. Vickers, of Barrow, will shortly be capable of taking vessels up to 1,000 feet in length, and the berths are entirely covered, so that work can proceed in all weathers. On the opposite side of the river Sir W. G. Armstrong, Whitworth & Co., of Elswick, are erecting works for the manufacture of forgings, shipbuilding sections, castings, shaftings and high-speed tool steel, this enterprise being, it is understood, associated with the larger scheme of making Canada self-sustained in the construction of warships. At Vancouver Messrs. Yarrow, of Scotstoun, are preparing to build destroyers and other small naval craft, in which they specialize.

TURKS LOSE TWELVE THOUSAND MEN

KITCHENER JOINS PROHIBITIONISTS --- LIVES LOST WITH STEAMER

CITIZEN IS HURT CLAIMS DAMAGES

Ald. Stratton Suggests That Pedestrians Wear Spiked Shoes

CITY MUST PAY

The legal committee last evening gave considerable time to discussing a claim against the city by a resident who was injured through ice on the sidewalk. Nothing can be done until City Engineer Parsons furnishes a report as to whether the street at that particular point is dangerous or not. It was the unanimous opinion that there are many sections of sidewalk in the city where water flushes over them in the day time because of a thaw, and then freezes at night. Some of the aldermen named a few of the dangerous spots, but Mayor Buller remarked that he could point them out a hundred in the south end. Ald. Stratton suggested that the residents of that locality wear spiked shoes.

The details of a case of an indigent patient in a Toronto hospital for whom the city is liable were made known to the committee. The patient is a young girl suffering from pulmonary trouble. She was a former resident of Peterborough, in fact her mother and stepfather reside here. She went to Toronto for a short time to work, and while there she became ill. She went to the hospital, the city of Toronto paying the expense. She grew a little better, and, anxious to see her mother, she came to Peterborough. While here she suffered a relapse, and returned to Toronto and entered the hospital. The question of which municipality should be liable came up. [illegible] it was agreed that in preference [illegible] having the matter go to a county court and an expense of over $100 occasioned, it would be wise to have Judge Morson of Toronto look into the case and give judgment. This he did, and decided against Peterborough. The city will have to pay the expenses of the girl—$1.00 per day. The committee last evening decided to pay $10, the city's share of Judge Morson's costs.

BIG INCREASE IN MORTALITY

Forty Deaths Registered During Past Month

ELEVEN WEDDINGS

There were forty births and forty deaths, an increase over March, 1914, when the statistics were thirty-one births and twelve deaths.

MARCH SHOWS SLIGHT GAINS

Fewer Permits But More Money Represented

The month of March did not do so badly so far as building permits were concerned, there being a slight increase. In March of 1914, nineteen permits represented building operations to the amount of $5665 while for the past month nine permits were issued for work costing $5717.

Still Peppering Away at Enemy

Mrs. John Hort of town has received a letter from her brother, Private Geo. Buchanan of the 1st Contingent, in which he states that he is still in the trenches peppering away at the Germans, and that he is feeling fine and doesn't mind the hardships of such a life. He mentions the fact that Lieut. Dossee and Capt. Abell of his Company had been wounded, but they would soon be on duty again.—Havelock Standard.

STEAMER LOST IN ENGLISH CHANNEL

Seventeen of French Vessel's Crew Believed to Have Perished

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 1. — The French steamer Emma was torpedoed yesterday off Beachy Head by a German submarine. Nineteen of the crew were drowned, only two being saved.

The periscope of the submarine had hardly been sighted when a torpedo struck the Emma in the engine. No warning was given.

The ship foundered in three minutes. A British destroyer subsequently picked up two men who had been in the water for a couple of hours and at the same time recovered two bodies.

SUPPLY BOAT FOR GERMAN SUBS. CAUGHT.

LONDON, April 1. — The Exchange Telegraph Company says a large Dutch cargo boat, the Lodewijk Van Nassau, has been brought into New Haven by two British torpedo boats which chased and caught her near Brighton. She is suspected of supplying German submarines with fuel oil.

It is said that members of her crew appeared to be Germans. The vessel has a cargo of oils on board, and this is now being examined. When hailed by the torpedo boats, the steamer refused to stop.

TWO ARRESTS ARE MADE

Police Round up Men With Criminal Records

Charge Them With Theft of Clothing

Two daring and notorious crooks were rounded up by the police yesterday and are now held on charges of breaking into Zacks brothers' clothing store, 422 George Street, and stealing therefrom goods valued at $320.00.

Both were nabbed with some of the goods upon them and the police have a chain of evidence which seems complete. Both are big, husky fellows with criminal records and are wanted at the present time for breaking jail. Their names are Frederick Mitchell and David Rousell. Rousell says he was serving a term of six months in Central, while Mitchell was sentenced in December, 1913, at Ottawa to twenty-four months being convicted of arson. Both were remanded a week this morning when brought before Police Magistrate Dumble.

Rousell elected summary trial and pleaded his innocence while Mitchell wanted to be tried by a jury but asked for a week in which to decide definitely. As the Crown was not ready to proceed the week's remand was given in both cases.

How They Were Caught.

The police performed good work in rounding the two up in so short a time, Detective Meagher and Acting Detective Blade having been hot on their trail since Tuesday morning. After the robbery at Zacks' store they instituted a thorough search of the city with the result that information was received that certain parties had been seen early Sunday morning hanging round the boathouses on the river indulging in alcohol. Descriptions were secured and where they were stopping. Detectives Meagher and Blade visited this place but found that they only stayed there one night. They trailed them however with the result that Rousell was placed under arrest on Simcoe Street at 11.15 yesterday morning and at three in the afternoon Mitchell was landed on George Street.

The two blew into Peterborough about three o'clock Sunday morning from the east as far as is known, getting in on a freight. It is alleged that they hung around the city all day Sunday and Monday and committed the burglary early Tuesday morning. They then walked down the C.P.R. tracks to Indian River a distance of eleven or twelve miles. They came back and had not been long in the city before being caught and taken to the police station. The prisoners claim they only took two suits and as the police have yet to locate some suitcases belonging to them they are unable to state exactly how many were taken. Zacks brothers, however, say there is missing from their store twelve suits of clothes and seven raincoats.

Wearing the Suits.

When found Rousell was wearing one suit next to his flesh. Mitchell was wearing the other suit. The police have received some bottles of whiskey which the two had and which are claimed to have been stolen from the Peterborough liquor store by the two prisoners.

A picture of Mitchell reposed in the office of Colonel Sherwood at Ottawa, and Chief Thompson who took a jaunt down to Ottawa yesterday in connection with the case received full information regarding his record, and this photograph which is an excellent likeness.

This morning the two prisoners were put through the process of having their finger print impressions taken and were then locked up. Rousell is apparently addicted to the use of liquor and his nervous system is in a pretty bad condition.

When arrested yesterday Mitchell first gave his name as Morrison. Mitchell is wanted for breaking out of Central recently with two other prisoners named Murphy and Wilson.

FRENCH PENETRATE GERMAN TRENCHES

Berlin Claims Capture of Hamlet and Belgian Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BERLIN, April 1. — The headquarters staff daily report says: "We have captured the hamlet of Klosterhoek with 45 Belgian prisoners. French troops have penetrated a small portion of our outer trenches to the west of Pont-a-Mousson.

"In an outpost engagement near Lunneville the French suffered considerable losses.

"In the eastern arena Russian attacks have been repulsed at several points.

"During March we captured altogether 55,800 Russians."

MINES BLOWN UP.

PARIS, April 1. — The war office daily statement says: "A struggle is going on at numerous points on the front. To the southwest of Peronne we blew up successively four mines.

"North of Berry-au-Bac we blew up a mine saphead at the moment the Germans were at work on it, and followed this explosion with a storm of shells from our guns.

"A German observation post disappeared in the gap caused by the explosion."

THREE BROTHERS HAVE ENLISTED

Judge Huycke Gives Three Sons for Empire's Cause

His Honor Judge Huycke has been very closely allied with many patriotic movements in Peterborough and assisted very materially by addresses on various occasions in the raising of the Patriotic Fund. Every step which would tend to alleviate suffering caused by the war has found in him an able supporter, but today comes the news that he has done still more for his King and country. His three sons, Wilfred, Douglas and Meredith, have enlisted for active service with the next overseas contingent. Many parents have given one son to the service of the Empire, some have given two but it is a rare occurrence for three to don the khaki from one family.

The eldest son, Wilfrid Huycke, who a couple of years ago obtained his degree of Bachelor of Arts at Toronto University and who is now attending the Law School at Toronto, has been made Provisional Lieutenant of the 40th Battalion at Cobourg.

Douglas Huycke who is an accountant in one of the large financial institutions at Toronto has also enlisted and it is expected will be attached to the Artillery Corps at Kingston, as he has orders to attend the Artillery School at Kingston within the next few days.

The third son, Meredith Huycke, will be remembered as the young man who carried off the Prince of Wales Scholarship while attending the Collegiate Institute at Peterborough, and after a brilliant career at the Collegiate is now a student of Toronto University. Likewise he has enlisted and is expected to be attached to the Artillery for overseas service.

COMMISSION TO MANAGE SCHOOLS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, April 1. — After sitting thirteen hours with only luncheon as recess, the Legislature early this morning passed the reading of the Liquor License amending act with one amendment suggested by the opposition which gives the new central commission power to suspend or cancel any license without reference to the governor-in-council.

The House also passed Dr. Pyne's bill authorizing the government to appoint a commission to manage Ottawa Separate Schools which refused to comply with the regulations of the Educational Department.

ASSYRIAN CHRISTIANS MASSACRED BY TURKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, April 1. — Letters received by M. Z. Bacchus, a student at a Bible training college from North Persia, say that more than thirty-five hundred Assyrian Christians were massacred by Kurds in Urumiah district, and of fifty thousand who fled for safety, twelve thousand are safe in Tiflis. Five thousand reached Julfa, but the remainder perished from cold and hardships on the journey.

WAR SECRETARY FOLLOWS KING

No Alcoholic Beverages for His Household

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, April 1. — Kitchener is among the first of the prominent men in England to respond to the suggestion of abstension from the use of alcohol, in King George's letter to Lloyd George.

The war secretary today issued instructions that no alcoholic beverages be served in his household for the duration of the war.

SAY PROVINCE WAS DEFRAUDED

Manitoba Liberals Want Commission

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Winnipeg, April 1.—Liberal members of the legislature last night presented a memorial to Lieut.-Governor Cameron praying him not to prorogue the legislature before provision has been made for the appointment of a royal commission of three judges to make inquiry into the construction of the new parliament buildings, in which the Liberals claim the province has been defrauded of eight hundred thousand dollars.

At two o'clock this morning the House adjourned until ten a.m. but when it met at ten, a further adjournment was taken on motion of Sir Redmond Roblin until three o'clock this afternoon to permit the government, so the Premier said, of having a conference with the governor.

ACCEPT RULING OF THE JUDGE

Messrs Gordon and Hill Will Abide by Judge's Interpretation

SCHOOL BOARD TANGLE

Last night the Legal Committee met and while going over the file, Ald. Dobbin, the chairman, came across a letter in connection with the Board of Education investigation. Ald. Dobbin explained to the committee just where the matter stood but it was pointed out that the matter was in the hands of a special committee composed of Ald. Dobbin, Ald. Edgar and Ald. Green and the Legal Committee could not deal with it. It will come before the special committee before Monday night's meeting of the council.

According to Ald. Dobbin's explanatory statements the committee waited upon Judge Huycke and asked him if he would go into the matter and decide whether or not G. N. Gordon and W. H. Hill are qualified to act as school trustees. His Honour stated that his decision would only be final when the parties would agree that it should be. The committee then sought to secure the views of the interested parties. In some manner, although no mention was made of it in any resolution of the City Council, the name of Trustee John Crane became mixed up in the affair. Mr. Crane's position was similar to that of Mr. Hill, he having sold the Board of Education some insurance. The special committee sent a letter to Messrs. Gordon and Hill and also sent one to Mr. Crane. The former two have replied, stating that they are willing to consider Judge Huycke's decision final but Mr. Crane's reply intimated that he would not acquiesce. Mr. Gordon's first answer to the Committee stated he would not agree but yesterday he wrote a second letter stating that on a second thought he would abide by Judge Huycke's finding. This is where the matter stands at present and what the special committee decides upon remains to be seen.

Mr. Hill's letter was as follows:

I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of the 12th inst. I beg to advise you that I am quite content to be bound and to abide by the decision of His Honor Judge Huycke in connection with the charge made by Mr. G. N. Gordon against me. As a member of the Board of Education, I am desirous that the investigation be made as thorough and complete as possible, and I shall do all in my power to have any charges that may be brought as fully investigated as is possible.

Very respectfully yours,
W. H. HILL.

Mr. Crane wrote:

I beg to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 12th instant.

With every desire on my part to assist your committee and minimize expense, I would point out that the facts in question are within the cognizance of the City Council and the Board of Education, and it is for these bodies to take such action as will safeguard their respective interests. It is obvious that it is not within my province to suggest, or acquiesce in, any method of inquiry—the matters in question affecting the status of the whole board.

I respectfully suggest that the inquiry be full and exhaustive.

Yours truly,
JOHN CRANE.

Mr. Gordon's letter: —

Re Board of Education investigation I received a letter some time ago regarding the Board of Education. I am quite satisfied to be bound by the finding of His Honor Judge Huycke in the matter. I understand from Mr. Edgar that the other members of the Board of Education interested in this matter have also agreed to be bound by the finding of the County Judge.

I expect under the circumstances that the investigation will be started early after Easter.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

PRESTON'S GIVINGS.

Preston, April 1. — The Preston Patriotic Committee in their canvass of the town to raise funds, collected $23,000 in the past two days, which is rated exceedingly well for a town the size of Preston. The town sent over 100 men in the three contingents.

SIR WILFRID'S CANADIAN NAVY.

MR. BURNHAM'S speech in the House of Commons dealing with a Canadian navy should be carefully read and pondered over by all our readers. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has recently given prominence to this question, and, in the event of a Dominion election, it will likely be one of the big issues before the people.

With conditions as they are, this is not an opportune time to endeavour to establish a Canadian navy such as Sir Wilfrid favours. With the greatest war of modern times on our hands, and having already spent one hundred and fifty millions on it, our resources are not sufficient to make any practical application of Sir Wilfrid's idea. If that were tried, it would shoulder on the taxpayers of Canada a burden that would be simply staggering. If the war lasts longer than this coming summer, another war vote of one hundred millions will likely have to be made, and so in view of Canada's efforts to do her share in the defence of the Empire, it is simply absurd to give any support to Sir Wilfrid's plan for a Canadian navy. The first chapter of Sir Wilfrid's naval policy has not been to his credit. The heaviest guns on the Niobe are of six-inch calibre. Against a battleship like the Irresistible, which was recently sunk in the Dardanelles and which was classed an old pre-Dreadnought, but which carried twelve-inch guns, the Niobe would be practically helpless—unable either to defend herself or to damage the enemy. To build modern, effective ships is at present beyond the financial resources of Canada, unless they are built to take part in the war, and that is scarcely possible. Canada can't embark on any such naval policy as Sir Wilfrid Laurier's has in view.

THE FRENCH QUESTION.

THE REVIEW has taken the position that the Canadian Senate has no jurisdiction in the bilingual school question and that Ontario should insure an English education to every child in the Province. It it interesting to note that the Catholic Record has taken a much more vigorous and decided stand than the Review, and it is quite justified in its position. The following is an extract from an editorial of the Catholic Record of February 27th, 1915:

"As in the great world struggle now going on many Canadians do not realize that the existence of the British Empire is menaced; so in this so-called bilingual question many easy-going Ontario people, far removed from the bilingual zone, see nothing but local squabbles between French and Irish Catholics. They forget, if they ever knew, that the 'invasion and conquest' of the eastern counties of Ontario was carried on successfully through the Public, not the Separate, Schools; that the Commissions of 1889 and 1893 dealt exclusively with the Public Schools of Prescott and Russell; that in Northern Ontario the English-French schools are chiefly Public Schools, (the official list, 'Public and Separate Schools and teachers in Ontario,' gives forty-eight English-French Public Schools in Nipissing and Algoma); that though where there is 'an abundance of instruments' to carry out the National policy the trouble may become more acute in Separate Schools, it is not confined to them. The school is the weapon by which Protestants as well as Catholics and Catholics as well as Protestants are driven out of the 'invaded' territory and effectively kept out of the 'conquered' districts. No one can convince English-speaking parents, whether Protestant or Catholic, who have had experience of such schools (call them French, bilingual, or English-French or what you will), that they afford decent facilities for the education in English of their children. Hence they move out and give place to French-Canadians. Protestants and Catholics alike were and are still being driven out with the strictest impartiality on the part of the 'peaceful invaders.' Those papers which profess to regard the bilingual difficulty as a Separate School affair are either wilfully dishonest or woefully incompetent to inform public opinion on a question one of whose obvious consequences is the practical shifting of the boundary line between Ontario and Quebec.

"To forestall misrepresentation it may be as well to add that we should welcome French-Canadian immigration into the Province of Ontario if these immigrants, instead of destroying the schools so far as their usefulness to English-speaking people is concerned, would use them to acquire a working knowledge of the language of the Province to which they come to better their condition."

In view of this utterance and thousands of others from Catholics as well as Protestants, it is evident that the Ontario Government is on the right side in enforcing its laws, particularly Regulation 17.

TEACH THE CHILDREN ABOUT THE WAR.

AS A RULE, children are not mature enough to understand the issues in this great war. Battles are terrible, and so is the sinking of ships, but why it is being done they will realize only in after years. Still, much can be done. In this respect there is a little book just published by Hodder and Stoughton, entitled, "Captain Loxley's Little Dog." This dog went down with his master on the bridge of the battleship Formidable when it was torpedoed on New Year's Day. This little story emphasizes the tragedy of this war in a way that appeals to the heart and sympathy of children and impresses some of its great events on their young minds. It tells the story of Captain Loxley's death — how this hero went down with his ship for the honour and safety of Britain and the Empire. It is accurate and authentic, and altogether a splendid child's book about the war.

TIME FOR FULFILMENT.

NOW is Canada's opportunity to make good her boast that she is the granary of the Empire. Many of her young men are displaying a martial turn and hastening to offer themselves, to sacrifice themselves, in the cause they have at heart. But there is even a deeper duty resting on this country. That duty, well fulfilled, while helping others, cannot fail to help ourselves. We shall be abundantly paid for all we do, and in doing will possess the proud sense of serving the right. To neglect the opportunity for improved production is not only to fall short of the call of patriotism, but to be guilty of a crime. We have the soil, we have the resources, we have the energy to justify our claim to be the granary of the Empire.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

APRIL FOOL.

DO YOU remember the time you used to play April fool jokes?

THE punk boot men are still at large.—Globe. Yes, and so is the Grit tanner who furnished the punk.

IF WE do not miss our guess, the Canadians in the trenches have played some tricks on the Germans today.

THE MINISTER of Militia and Defence has this unique distinction in Hansard—while all other members of the House of Commons are regularly referred to with just a common mister, he has Major-General in front of his name.

WHY should a Hamilton firm make army boots at a profit of two cents a pair on an order of 6,000 pairs, while others charged a price permitting a commission of fifty cents a pair besides profit?

LA PATRIE is on the right track when it makes an appeal to its readers that all loud agitation over the bilingual schools should cease and the question be left to men of moderation. When most Frenchmen get excited, moderation flies away.

ALL the spring poets do not bud in the newspapers. Here is the rhetorical effusion that appeared in an "ad." in a sporting magazine for April:

"When the flood tides of the North send forth their winter hoards of piscatorial beauty, you will naturally want to be in the vanguard eager for the spoils."

Do you get that? It is almost worthy Vergil.

TWO HEARTS ARE HIS.

(M. M. M. in Beck's Weekly.)

Two hearts are his,—the man who fights
For his country,—one that is icy cold,
And hard, and brave when he faces foe;
And it stirs his pride to feel, to know
That he's one of them,—heroes bold!

One he has,—the man who fights,
One that is tender and warm and true,
That reaches to those he holds most dear;
And it stirs his love and starts a tear,
For he's one of them,—heroes, too!

Honesty the Best Policy.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

Our army boot contractors were evidently not of the same caliber as the woollen salesman who approached the head of a large firm for an order and displayed his samples. Puck tells the story as follows:

"Is this suit all wool?" "Not precisely. It also contains horse-hair, iron filings, cocoanut fibre, block tin, pipe clay, glue, jute, rope ends, spun glass, shellac, and some cotton. However, there is the usual amount of wool in it." His honesty got him the order.

The End in View.

(La Presse, Montreal.)

The determination of the allies to prosecute the war until Prussian militarism is completely destroyed becomes more manifest than ever. We do not desire peace, even an advantageous peace, if it will permit the enemy to prepare for a revenge. The war must be prolonged, and every sacrifice must be made until peace can be established with the definite destruction of Prussian militarism.

Hitting Back at Germany.

(London Daily Telegraph.)

The British people, as they observe even the limited success with which the German tactics are meeting, naturally desire that effective steps shall be taken by way of reprisal with the least possible delay. Since the early days of the war we have learned that the enemy merits no such consideration as we have always extended to our foes in the past.

When War Boosted Wheat.

(London Daily Mail.)

In the struggle with Napoleon, when the British navy commanded the sea, the price of wheat for the year 1801 averaged 119s, and actually reached 126s 6d in 1812. The British people are paying less than half as much today, though two of the main sources of supply — Australia and Russia — have failed.

Ignorant Criticism.

(Duluth Tribune.)

Criticism of churches comes in largest measure from those who never go to them.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

Moderate north to northwest winds, fair and comparatively mild today and on Friday.

AN "EXCLUSIVE" RESORT.

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—Your contemporary announces the opening of the Roller Roller Rink for Good Friday and says roller skating is "highly spoken of by leading physicians." Will the Examiner or other parties interested in the rink give us the names of these "leading physicians" and quotation of what they said?

The announcement referred to promises "exclusive patronage"! What is "exclusive patronage"? Is it the patronage of boys and girls who neither work nor go to school, as was the case in former years? Or does it mean simply that class of males and females who frequent roller rinks?

"High class" and "exclusive patronage"!! Can the people of this city afford, in the light of past experience, to tolerate the re-establishment of this resort? Do parents want the example of this place and its frequenters for their children?

Yours truly,

ANXIOUS PARENT.

FRIENDS PAID LAST TRIBUTES

Funeral of B. W. Moffat Was Very Largely Attended

(Special Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, April 1. — The funeral of the late Bristow W. Moffat on Sunday afternoon last was one of the largest funeral processions seen here in many years. The late Mr. Moffat was a prominent member of the Orange fraternity and had attained to high rank in the order, in fact he had gone as high as was possible here, having taken the highest degree in the Black. The procession was headed by about 150 Orangemen from Norwood, Belmont and Dummer lodges, as well as several from Hastings and other places. Besides the Orangemen, about an equal number of sympathizing friends and acquaintances followed the remains to their last resting place in the Norwood cemetery. The pallbearers, members of the order, were Messrs. W. H. Thistlethwaite, Fred Robertson, Thos. W. Morrison, Robt. Martin, Albert Webster, E. Montgomery and W. Montgomery, and the honorary bearers were Messrs. J. B. Pearce, James Calder, D. Oakley, Weir, J. Harper and Richard Nichol. Rev. Mr. Wolland of the Presbyterian Church, officiated at the house and also at the grave, after which the Orange burial service was solemnized conducted by Brothers Matthew Elliott and W. H. Thistlethwaite.

We are pleased to hear that Mr. Wm. Rogers, who has been ill with typhoid fever, is recovering, and expects to be around again soon.

Mr. Warden Elliott, who is ill in Toronto with scarlet fever, is making satisfactory progress toward recovery.

Mr. Hartley Ivey has entered again into the employ of the Union Bank of Canada, having accepted the position of ledger keeper at the head office in Smith's Falls. He entered upon his duties there Monday morning of this week.

Mr. William Foster has returned home to Calgary after spending a few days with friends here.

Mr. Ollie Baskin has opened up the Royal George Hotel, recently vacated by E. C. Graham.

Miss Pearl Baskin spent Wednesday last in Toronto.

Mr. Earl Cumming and Percy English drove over to Havelock Sunday last.

Misses Sadie and Lillian Greenbank, also Master Ralph, visited their mother, who is ill at Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough.

Miss Jean Minore visited Peterborough on Saturday last.

Miss Kathleen Hawkins of Toronto is visiting friends here.

AN AMERICAN WAS KILLED

U. S. Must Now Take Official Action in Falaba Outrage

WASHINGTON, April 1. — While no official notification of the death of an American, Leon C. Thresher, on the British liner Falaba, sunk by a German submarine, had reached the American Government yesterday, officials viewed the situation as fraught with grave possibilities.

Secretary Bryan said that he expected Ambassador Page in London to submit a full report on the case, if advices there confirmed reports of Thresher's death, but added that no enquiries had been received by the department, nor had any been made of Mr. Page. Officials generally were not inclined to discuss the matter until some official version of the destruction of the liner was received.

It is known, however, that in view of the language of the American note of enquiry, in reply to the German notification of a submarine blockade of England, the facts in this case will be awaited with the greatest interest. That note contained a plain warning that the loss of American lives through the German program of sinking merchant vessels would be viewed as an unfriendly act.

ARE TAKING PRECAUTIONS

Government Wants Power to Expropriate Part of G.T.R.

OTTAWA, April 1. — The House of Commons yesterday put through committee stage the resolution proposed by Hon. Frank Cochrane authorizing the Government to expropriate the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway line between Superior Junction and Fort William, together with its grain elevators and terminal facilities. Mr Cochrane explained that the Government already had authority to operate the eastern division of the National Transcontinental between Moncton and Winnipeg, but for the efficient operation of that system it was necessary to acquire the branch line which led to the head of navigation. He laid before the House considerable correspondence, including a formal demand upon the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. to take over, lease and operate the Government railway from Moncton to Winnipeg. He said that the company had not absolutely refused to comply, but under the circumstances, the Government thought it only prudent to prepare to operate the National Transcontinental itself, in case the company repudiated its contract.

The resolution was vigorously opposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, George P. Graham, Hon. Wm. Pugsley and Hon. Frank Oliver. Sir Wilfrid took the position that the Government had broken its contract with the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Co. by degrading the standard of the road. They said the time had not yet arrived for the Grand Trunk Pacific to decide whether it would take over the road or refuse to operate it.

Hon. Frank Oliver said the Government was in the wrong and intends to bulldoze the Grand Trunk Pacific by seizing its line between Superior Junction and Fort William together with its elevators and terminal facilities. Of course, if the Grand Trunk Pacific could not get to the head of the lakes, it might as well go out of business.

Solicitor-General Meighen argued that the road was completed within the meaning of the contract.

On account of pressure of business and the desire of the members on both sides to hasten the end of the session, the usual Easter recess has been omitted and the House will merely suspend for Good Friday.

CASUALTIES

Leaders In Disfavor.

NORWICH, Eng., April 1.—Public opinion here is so strongly incensed over the attitude of some of the labor leaders on the war that the Independent Labor party was unable to secure a suitable hall for a conference which had been arranged for Monday and Tuesday.

The Ministerial Association of Hamilton has passed a resolution calling for the closing of all bars, and the prohibition of the sale of liquor in clubs during the war.

New Money For Old Odds and Ends

THE SMART PEOPLE AREN'T ALL DEAD YET. There was a wise little woman in the west end who wanted some extra Christmas money—and it wasn't forthcoming. She didn't know what to do. She cudgelled her brains. She put her wits to work. Then she figured it out. She ransacked the house from garret to cellar. She "dug up" an old iron bed, jap-a-lack'd it back to life again; she resurrected some chairs; and a bureau; four pictures; a wash stand; a carpet, etc. She dusted out an old hall rug, patched the edges into shape—and made a list.

She put an ad. in the want ads. of THE DAILY REVIEW. She told what she'd done; she said the things weren't new—but they were good enough to furnish an entire room comfortably—and at a price that was less than reasonable. She ran the ad. twice; it cost her 30c.; she sold the things for $19 in cold cash. She not only saved the waste of letting them go to ruin, "she got something for them" by going straight to the people with her story. A WANT AD. DID IT. Why can't you do the same thing? WHY? Have you no little fairies in your house that little want ads. will turn into gold.

If Silicon Were a Gas.

Whistler at West Point seems to have had a sort of subconscious knowledge of his destiny, and this gave him an utter indifference to everything not consonant with it. Here he was a failure. A direct statement in a class recitation that "silicon is a gas" discouraged his chemical instructor and was one of the final blows to his military career. As Whistler said himself, if silicon had only been a gas he might have become a major general. But the fates were against it.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The matter published in this column will be supplied by the local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

A feature of one of the meetings of the National Council of Women in Ottawa which aroused great interest was a letter read by Mrs. Cummings from Mademoiselle Bonneval, convener of the suffrage committee of the National Council of Women of France, in reply to one sent by Dr. Anna Shaw, convener of suffrage of the International Council, urging that action be taken in favor of an appeal to the women of all countries to take initiative in a movemnet in favor of peace. The sentiment expressed in this letter, from which the following extracts are made, are the sentiments, it was stated, felt universally by the women of France:

To Rev. Dr. Anna Shaw: —

We have unimpeachable proof that Belgium, confiding in the treaties that assured her neutrality, had no thought of waging war; that France and England until the very last moment made every effort to avoid it; that our governments in acting thus were expressing the national feeling to which so many eminent pacificists had given voice and for which one has paid with his life, his last effort to prevent the crime of this war.

This crime nevertheless has been accomplished, and is being achieved with a barbarity worthy of the darkest stages. Human life and the treasures of art, all are the victims of the destroyer. Belgium invaded in spite of treaties signed and sealed, has unhesitatingly paid with the blood of her children the price of keeping her signature inviolate. And David, the youth, has stayed the onward march of the giant, Goliath. The bravery of our neighbors gave to France, surprised by an attack as sinister as it was precipitate, the opportunity to collect her forces and face the enemy.

England, our loyal friend, whose spirit is at once so liberal and so democratic, and who, also had spared no efforts to maintain peace, seeing her labour vain, drew her sword in the service of right and of justice. Now we three allied nations stand united by an immutable solidarity, and bent upon pursuing the combat till victory is ours.

Perhaps you have reason to think that if women, all women, were called into the council to decide for peace or war the difference would be settled otherwise than by war.

But this is the time for action, not theory. We are attacked, we are defending ourselves and not one of us would lend an ear to premature advances for peace. We should blush with shame if our fear should weaken the courage of our boys whose spirit is so high, and whose enthusiasm is so great. They know they are fighting for a principle for more than to avenge wrongs. It is a holy crime they are defending, the rights of a nation, the establishment of a world based on justice, peace and human fraternity. We shall not for a moment weaken our determination nor yet utter a word of recrimination for our neglected rights. Later on we shall have a better reason for securing our rights in that we have done our duty completely.

And in the calm of a beneficial peace we shall re-read with pride the beautiful epistle you have addressed to us.

MARIE BONNEVIAL,

Convener of Suffrage Committee, National Council of France.

This letter is a great contrast to an article which appeared not long ago, in an American paper. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland is said to have cabled out to Miss Jean Adams, President of the Women's Peace Party of the U.S., asking her to be present at a convention of women of neutral countries to be held at The Hague in April, "to discuss means of ending the war." This is rather like dusting the china with the bull still in the shop.

When a small boy suddenly stops in his play and reaches out silently and swiftly for a stone to shy at a wandering hen did it ever occur to you that he is only exercising a Divine instinct or gift which has come down to him from his remote ancestors? A gift the possession of which meant to those ancestors a succulent meal or none at all. If parents only realized that this gift directed and trained away from wandering hens or stray cats might place their son on the dizzy heights of a celebrated baseball pitcher they might take more interest in supervised playgrounds.

Supervised Play-Grounds.

What are they doing for the child?

How many people realize the value of teaching children how to play.

Did Tom ever think of what it would mean to grow up having only the dusty street in which to play and even there finding no peace, being ordered off some one's bit of green when you sat down to rest—of having your ball games interrupted by neighbors who complained of your noise?

It was all very well, when every street had its vacant lot, but now-a-days children must go long distances to find open spaces where they can play uninterruptedly, and maybe get into mischief on the way or be hurt and in the case of younger children mothers dare not let them away from the doorstep and the little one must sit alone and grow tired and pester the poor divine mother with pleas for amusement which she, loving soul, has not time—or knowledge—to give her child. Think of her relief, if during the holiday months she knew her little one was safe in a play-ground happily amused with other children, under the eye of an experienced woman who with loving care would teach the child to use its fingers and at the same time to keep it happy, and then in the heat of the day to draw the children to some shady corner and there pour into the receptive minds tales of chivalry and love.

One of the great and main ideas of supervised play-grounds is to surround children with conditions which prevent their being robbed of their childhood. It is an agency for dealing with causes and not consequences.

Sympathy with and for the child is the keynote.

OPTIMISM.

Optimism is a belief in a great purpose underlying the world for good, absolutely certain to fulfill itself somewhere, somehow. That must have been what God saw when he looked upon the world and called it "good."—Phillips Brooks.

Lesson I.—Second Quarter, For April 4, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, Matt. xxviii, 1-10. Memory Verses, 5, 6—Golden Text, I Cor. xv, 20—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

The regular lesson would be I Sam. xv, in which we have the record of Saul rejected because he rejected the word of the Lord (I Sam. xv, 23, 26). Samuel reminded him of the time when he was little in his own sight and how the Lord promoted him, but because he preferred his own thoughts and ways to those of the Lord he could not continue. It grieved Samuel; he cried unto the Lord all night; he mourned for Saul, but came no more to see him until the day of his death (I Sam. xv, 11, 35).

It is refreshing to turn from such a story to that of another rejected king, but in this case He was rejected by man, not God. God raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory. He is now alive forevermore, the Prince of the kings of the earth, King of kings and Lord of lords, the true Son of David, yet to occupy the throne of David and reign forever, but waiting for His kingdom as David had to wait.

The Scripture is full of the sufferings of Christ, from Gen. iii, 15, 21, on to the end of the book, but it is also full of the resurrection, the kingdom and the glory. Willingly and of His own accord He humiliated Himself unto Bethlehem and Nazareth and Golgotha that the Scripture might be fulfilled, but God raised Him from the dead and gave Him glory and all power in heaven and in earth that He might rid the earth of the devil and the curse and make it His own fair world, as in Gen. i. He is our "alive forevermore" king (Rev. i, 5, 18) waiting for an "alive forevermore" people to reign with Him. If we have seen ourselves as guilty, condemned sinners and have seen Him bearing our sins in His own body and raised from the dead and ascended to the right hand of the Father and have honestly received Him, putting all our trust in His finished work, then we may safely rest on Eph. i, 6, 7; John vi, 37, 47; Rom. iii, 24, and joyfully anticipate I Thess. iv, 16, 17; I John iii, 1, 2; Col. iii, 4. His enemies made His tomb as sure as they could by a seal and a guard of soldiers (Matt. xxvii, 64-66), just about as secure as seals or soldiers can make things today, but all was unavailing. He makes us safe forever by His precious blood, sealing us by His Holy Spirit, and no power can break the bundle of life in which we are bound nor pluck us out of His hand (I Sam. xxv, 29; John x, 28).

I like much the great words of Acts i, 3, "He showed Himself alive after His passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." It is all so grand and suggestive—Himself, infallible proofs, forty days, the things of the kingdom. He had just as infallibly foretold by the prophets and more plainly by His own words that He would suffer and die and rise from the dead the third day, and if His disciples had only believed His words how much sorrow they might have been spared and how much more joy they might have had! It is helpful to keep in mind the five appearances of the resurrection day, which were probably in this order—to Mary Magdalene, the other women, Simon Peter, the Emmaus walk, the ten in the evening. Recently in Judges we saw how God honored Deborah and other women. Now it is Mary and the other women, and, although Mary Magdalene saw Him first, the other women are the first to touch Him (verse 9). The reason is plainly given in John xx, 17, implying that between the two appearings He had ascended and returned.

What He did at His several appearings during those forty days gives us a sample of what we can do in our glorified bodies. What an inspiration it should be to us to consider it! These women who so loved Him and were devoted to Him, not expecting His resurrection, had bought spices with which to anoint His dead body when the Sabbath was past, but they never did. Believing His word will prevent us from spending money unwisely. Love is in some respects the greatest, but in the matter of service it must be faith working by love (I Cor. xiii, 13; Gal. v, 6). Note the ministry of angels at His birth, in the wilderness and in Gethsemane, as well as in our lesson, and take comfort from Heb. i, 14. Note the "Fear not" of the angel (verse 5; Luke ii, 10) and compare the Lord's "Peace be unto you" of Luke xxiv, 36, and hear His own voice to you in many similar sayings, for all His thoughts to His people, however unworthy we may be, are thoughts of peace (Jer. xxix, 11; Ps. xxix, 11). Since Christ is risen our great commission is, "Go, tell!" "Go teach all nations!" "Go into all the world!" (Verses 7, 10, 19; Mark xvi, 15.) And if we are not obedient great will be our loss. It is ours to be obedient, to go quickly and tell. He will see to the results. There is no use talking about the power of His resurrection unless His love constrains us to make it known. A commentator reminds us that the devil paid large money to have a lie proclaimed (verses 11-15), but our Lord sends us forth with the truth and stays by us to provide all things (verses 16-20).

THE MOTHER'S CHOICE.

One Five Minutes In the Life of Her Dead Soldier Son.

A mother lost her soldier son. The news came to her in dispatches from the war. He had fallen fighting nobly at the head of his regiment.

She was inconsolable. "Oh, that I might see him again!" she prayed. "If only for five minutes—but to see him!"

An angel answered her prayer. "For five minutes," the angel said.

"Quick, quick!" said the mother, her tears turned to momentary joy.

"Yes," said the angel, "but think a little. He was a grown man. There are thirty years to choose from. How would you see him?"

The mother paused and wondered.

"Would you see him," said the angel, "as a soldier dying heroically at his post? Would you see him as he left you to join the transport? Would you see him as you first saw him in his uniform? Would you see him again as on that day at school when he stepped to the platform to receive the highest honors a boy could have?"

"How did you know?" the mother asked, her eyes lighting.

The angel smiled. "Would you see him as a baby at your breast? Would you"—

"No," said the mother, "I would have him for five minutes as he was one day when he ran in from the garden to ask my forgiveness for being naughty. He was so small and so unhappy, and he was very hot, and the tears were making streaks down his face through the garden dirt. And he flew into my arms with such force that he hurt me."—C. V. Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

LET THE PEOPLE EXPRESS THEMSELVES AS TO IDEA OF NAVY FOR CANADA

Mr. Burnham Would Give Them Opportunity to Knock The Whole Thing on the Head

The following is a Hansard report of Mr. J. H. Burnham's remarks when the War Appropriation Act was discussed in the House at Ottawa:

Mr. BURNHAM: The sooner we get to the country and get this Canadian navy idea knocked on the head for good and all, the better. For my part, I have been intensely disappointed to see the right hon. leader of the Opposition and his lieutenants and supporters generally egging on this Government to a great naval expenditure, and, strange to say, the Government does not seem to have fortitude enough to resist it. The other day we had an example of the positively triumphant manner in which the Minister of Marine was compelled to say that he would take the sum of $1,000,000 which he had formally and technically provided for certain purposes, and would actually make use of it and spend it. A navy and an army are two different things. The army in this country has been a great success. It was suddenly called into existence, yet it is ready to fight, and when the war is over it will melt as suddenly away, or can be readily reduced to a peace footing; and the ordinary people of this country will have the satisfaction of being able to go about their business without having to appropriate continually a very large part of their earnings for the purpose of some absurd, bombastic expenditure on an army in the name of nationhood. But a navy is a different thing and must be established beforehand. It is a breakable sort of thing that may break up at any time, yet it must be fully and permanently established; and of course the members on the two coasts, of both parties, are only too pleased to see the people in the middle of this country — in the Middle West and in Ontario and Quebec — breaking their necks to pay taxes to establish fleets and naval units, or whatever you choose to call them, on the coasts. We can mine the approaches to this country — if we like; we can stop all ingress, and we can defend the country with our military; but what on earth do we want a navy for? A country with a population of 8,000,000, why does it propose to blow itself up like the frog in the fable and actually try to rival Great Britain and the United States and other great nations with a naval establishment, with something that must be put on a great practical basis, with all its training colleges and training ships and equipment, involving an immense expenditure?

And here we are told in an easy, off-hand way, that for the future it will be necessary to appropriate so many millions more, and, as I have said, I am amazed and disappointed to find that the leader of the Opposition is the apostle of this new propaganda. The other day a very eminent Liberal in the House said to me, "Burnham, we will yet have the Canadian navy in spite of you fellows," and I believe they will. I believe they will have the Canadian navy in spite of the country, unless we go to the country pretty soon and give the people a chance to knock the whole thing on the head. It certainly should be made an issue before we commit ourselves [illegible]. The people of this country regret that they have to make a great military expenditure. They regret that the necessities of the hour are such that they must comply with the demands for defence. But the people are paying willingly, and are satisfied that, apart from a few boots or bootlaces, and things of that description they are getting their money's worth. There has been a great and energetic attempt to place Canada on a war footing, and it has succeeded in a way that very few could have though possible. A few years ago we were an amateur nation. Now, we have suddenly entered the great arena of war and are able to take our part. That is one thing. But that a little nation like this should have two strings to her bow, have not only a great military establishment, but a great naval establishment as well, is in my opinion a betrayal of the honest toiler of this country; and I beg the Opposition to recant; and I to egg on this Government to an expenditure which is absolutely unjustifiable in every way. The time may come when we shall have a hundred millions of people, and if they should want a navy and can afford to pay for it, all right. But surely we have enough to pay for now; surely the increase in taxation is enough to satisfy the most ardent supporter of taxation for purposes of expenditure. But, no, it is not; they want more. And next year, when we come back they will have thought out a great system of naval expenditure that will be highly satisfactory to the maritime coast and exceedingly pleasant to our friends of the Liberal party, who will then be able to say: "We told you so; we have now a great Canadian navy, are you not proud of it?" But mark my words: I am a very humble individual, but I assure you that I know what the people in the middle of this country think. If they only had an opportunity of voting on the naval question, they would send this Canadian naval estaablishment higher than Gilderoy's kite. That is what they would do. I regard this thing as unwise and uncalled for in every way, and as something that in its way is unequalled. Of course, the minister has done his work well. We are accustomed to seeing him do his work thoroughly. But he has allowed himself to be shoved into this expenditure simply because there was no opposition to it. In this case we have not two parties met for the purpose of discussion, but a Government and an Opposition, both together apparently trying to unite a great overwhelming tide in favor of a navy, which in my opinion is unnecessary and absolutely unjustifiable.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER: "I cannot let the occasion pass without offering thanks to my hon. friend for directing his criticism not against the Government, but against the Opposition. That is certainly flattering to me on this side of the House. According to my hon. friend we are carrying on the Government, we are imposing our views upon the Government, and the Government are submitting to our dictation. If we had an opportunity of going to the country, I am afraid the Government would be knocked down for being so submissive to the Opposition.

Mr. BURNHAM: I think so, too.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER: We are a people of some eight million souls. We have a country fronting on two oceans. Does my hon. friend believe that a country so situated can do without any naval service?

Mr. BURNHAM: Perhaps not indefinitely.

Sir WILFRID LAURIER: It has to be one thing or the other. You have to choose between a Canadian navy and contribution to the Imperial Government. At one time I thought the Government had taken their stand for Imperial contribution. But no, they seem to have submitted to the Opposition, to have been egged on and bulldozed by the Opposition into a Canadian naval service. Well, I can stand it if the hon. gentlemen opposite can. The minister has given us a very interesting statement, very full, very complete, and I sincerely offer him my congratulations upon it.

UNION SERVICE GOOD FRIDAY

Will be Held in George Street Methodist Church

The Protestant churches of this city will unite in one service at three o'clock on Good Friday afternoon. This will be held in George St. Methodist Church.

The united choirs of George St. and St. Pauls will have charge of the music. It is expected that all the city ministers will be present.

Brief addresses suitable to the day will be delivered by Rev. L. Phelps and Rev. J. R. Webb. Last year Murray St. building was crowded to its capacity for such a service and it is expected that since the world in its present sorrow is being pushed toward the Cross that this service will exceed in attendance and interest anything that has hitherto been attempted.

Only one hour will be occupied.

TO ENLIST DOCKERS.

British Government Plans To Organize Longshoremen at Liverpool.

LIVERPOOL, April 1.—Lord Derby announced yesterday that the Government was planning to organize the dockers of Liverpool, under the name of First Dock Battalion of the Liverpool Regiment. The men are to be dressed in khaki overalls. This plan is to be adopted to prevent further delay in handling war supplies. Labor trouble among the workers on the Mersey recently has caused serious embarrassment.

The battalion will be made up of about 2,000 men, who will be inlisted under the military law, with army pay, in addition to a guaranteed minimum wage of 25 shillings weekly.

OUTBREAK OF MEASLES HOLD BOYS AT OTTAWA

Leave for Easter Holidays is Cancelled by the Commander

Ottawa, April 1.—About one hundred members of the Eighth Canadian Mounted Rifles from Toronto and Peterborough, who intended spending the Easter holidays at home, were disappointed last night when an order was issued canceling all leave. Several cases of measles have been discovered among the men, and Lieut.-Col. Munro is taking no chances of a spread of the disease.

Recruiting has closed at the Armouries for the 39th Battalion and for the 25th and 26th Overseas Battery. Sergt. Major Edwards left for Belleville this morning to take up his duties with the 39th Battalion and Lt. Hilliard and Gunner Randle left for Kingston to join the Battery. Sergt. Edwards was accompanied by a small number of men who were home from Belleville for medical treatment.

Recruiting for infantry will be continued at the Armouries. Just what division the recruits received will be sent to is not known.

Lt.-Col. Duff and Col. Hemming of Kingston stopped over in Peterborough yesterday while en route from Kingston to Lindsay. The report that the former was to inspect the men sent back to Peterborough from Ottawa and Belleville was without foundation. He merely stopped over to see the officers.

The 26th Battalion at Kingston was inspected yesterday.

The 26th Battery now has four officers and 143 men.

Col. Duff, Administrative Medical Officer of the Third Division, Kingston, and Major Eastwood, of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough, visited Lindsay on Tuesday and examined some seventy-five or eighty of the soldiers who had been rejected last week at Belleville, and the result of the examination is most satisfactory. Only twelve men were rejected, and several of these were only rejected temporarily in order that they might undergo certain medical treatment.

The whole company was lined up, and the officers were highly pleased with the physique and general efficiency of the men. It might also be mentioned in passing that all the men from Lindsay who left Monday to join the Second Contingent at Kingston were accepted after passing a rigid examination. It was stated that the local detachment was the finest body of men that the 21st had accepted.

Naturally Lieut.-Col. Fee and his officers are delighted with the result of the medical examination. It bears out the contention that the men were not given a fair inspection at Belleville.—Lindsay Warder.

TROOPS PRAISED BY ALDERSON

Canadians Have Outdone Expectations He Says

OTTAWA, April 1. — "We have been holding some 6,500 or 7,000 yards of trenches since March 1, and I can safely say that all arms have settled into their work very well. I knew they would do very well, but they have really done better than I expected."

This is what Gen. Alderson, commanding the Canadian division in northern France, says in a letter received by Maj.-Gen. Hughes, Minister of Militia, yesterday.

Gen. Alderson praises particularly the good work of the Canadian heavy battery from Montreal, which is under the command of Col. Lacey Johnston.

"We have not, up to the present, been attacked," continued Gen. Alderson. "But we have been considerably shelled at times, and the casualties up to date are six officers and 164 of other ranks. I am sorry to say that Major Rigby, a fine officer in the Seventh Battalion, has been killed by a shell. He is a great loss to his battalion."

Trolley Men on Strike.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 1.—Not a trolley wheel in Springfield except a car or two used in the service of the United States mail has turned since the calling of a strike of the trolley men at midnight Tuesday.

Huerta To Start Again?

MADRID, Spain, April 1. — (Via Paris.)—Gen. Victoriano Huerta and his secretary sailed yesterday from Cadiz on the trans-atlantic steamer Antonio Lopez, according to advices received here from Cadiz. Gen. Huerta's family remains in Barcelona, reports from which place say that a rumor is in circulation that Huerta is on his way to direct a new revolution in Mexico.

The steamer Antonio Lopez is due to touch at Porto Rico, Cuba, La Guira, Venezuela and Colon.

KING PREPARED TO ABOLISH LIQUOR FROM HOUSEHOLD

Various Remedies For National Difficulty Suggested in Britain.

LONDON, April 1. — King George has added his plea to that of the shipowners and in some cases that of the Laborites themselves, that some vigorous measures be adopted to cope with the question of drunkenness, which, it is urged, is having the effect of delaying the delivery of munitions of war.

The King has volunteered, if it is considered advisable, personally to give up the use of all alcoholic liquors and to issue an order against their use in the royal household. Such a notification has been sent to David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, by the King's private secretary, Lord Stamfordham. The letter of Lord Stamfordham follows:

"Dear Chancellor of the Exchequer:

"The King thanks you for so promptly letting him have a full report of the proceedings at yesterday's meeting of the deputation of employers. His Majesty has read it with intense interest, but also with the deepest concern. He feels that nothing but the most vigorous measures will successfully cope with the grave situation now existing in our armament factories."

"We have before us the statements not merely of the employers but of the Admiralty and the War Office, which are responsible for munitions of war and the transport of troops and their food and ammunition. From this evidence it is without doubt largely due to drink that we are unable to secure the output of war material indispensable to meet the requirements of the army in the field, and that there has been such serious delays in consequence of the necessary reinforcements of supplies to aid our gallant troops at the front.

"A continuance of such a state of things must inevitably result in the prolongation of the horrors and burdens of this terrible war.

"I am instructed to add that, if it be deemed advisable, the King will be prepared to set an example by giving up all alcoholic liquor himself and by issuing orders against its consumption in the royal households, so that no difference shall be made, so far as his Majesty is concerned, between the treatment of the rich and the poor in this question.

(Signed) "Lord Stamfordham,
"King's Private Secretary."

The effect of drink on the work which is considered necessary for the successful carrying on of the war overshadows at the present everything else in public interest. The press and public favor some drastic measures, a majority of the newspapers expressing the belief that total prohibition which would apply to all classes, is necessary. The Government, however, has not yet reached a decision on the question, although, if Mr. Lloyd George and Lord Kitchener have their way, it is believed that there will be total prohibition. To bring this about the Government must have an act of Parliament passed.

It is pointed out that to prohibit the sale of liquor only in the localities where men are engaged in the manufacture of munitions would cause a great outcry, and that aside from total prohibition, apparently the only way of dealing with the matter is a further curtailment in the hours of sale. Some persons favor prohibiting the sale of spirits, but allowing the sale of beer and wine. It is understood that the leaders in this matter would not be satisfied except with the most stringent restrictions.

The matter will require long consideration for the questions of compensation and the finding of employment for the thousands of men and women who would be thrown out of work.

At a meeting of the Glasgow liquor dealers, it was decided to ask Mr. Lloyd George to receive a deputation from them which will suggest a drastic reduction in the hours for the sale of liquor. The same deputation will confer with the labor leaders.

Colonization Road Grants

The Provincial Government has cut down its colonization road grants this year about 60 per cent., or from $480,000 in 1914 to $210,000 this yera.

Despite this fact Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.L.A., has been able to secure a comparatively large sum for East Peterborough made up as follows:

Austruther Road	$100.00
Burleigh Road	600.00
Chandos Road	400.00
Cordova Mines Road	200.00
Methuen Road	100.00
Belmont & Methuen by-law	500.00
Douro by-law	200.00
Dummer by-law	300.00
	$2400.00

Indian Tribesmen Revolt.

SIMLA, India, April 1.—A revolt of 10,000 tribesmen at Tochi has resulted in a battle with Government troops. The tribesmen were repulsed.

The following official statement was issued yesterday:

"Ten thousand tribesmen, composed mainly of Zadraus, collected with a view of attacking Tochi, near the Miranshah Post. Government troops under Brig.-Gen. Vane engaged the natives at dawn on the 26th, repulsing them completely, killing 200 and wounding 300.

"A subsequent reconnaissance showed no trace of the band."

TURKS PREPARE TO DEFEND CAPITAL

Six Hundred German Officers Are Attached to the Turkish Armies and Germans Are Defending the Dardanelles---Porte Fears an Attack From Bulgaria---Russian Fleet Bombards Asia Minor.

LONDON, April 1. — The Daily Telegraph's correspondent in Bucharest cables as follows:

"I have obtained from a reliable source details of the situation at Constantinople. The Turks have between 180,000 and 200,000 soldiers in their first line, but they need munitions. Four divisions are on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and the remainder are at Adrianople and between that town and Constantinople.

There are 600 German officers. The Dardanelles are defended by German officers and soldiers.

"The Turks fear an attack by Bulgaria. Almost all the Ottoman Senate, as well as the Grand Vizier and the heir to the throne, would like to make peace, but they lack the courage to overthrow Enver Pasha. The German Ambassador practically governs Constantinople.

"The guns from Adrianople which were transported to Constantinople have been fixed at different points outside the city. The mosque of St. Sophia and the new Seraglio garden are surrounded by cannon.

"Roumania political circles do not believe that Bulgaria will come in before further bombardment of the Dardanelles gives them assurances of the success of the allied fleets."

In a lull in the operations at the Bosphorus, the Russian Black Sea fleet paid an unexpected visit to four Turkish ports in Asia Minor, about 150 miles east of Constantinople, and heavily bombarded them yesterday. A series of heavy explosions and a number of fires followed. The points attacked were Zunguldak, Koslu, Kilimli and Eregli.

News of the operations of the allied fleet is lacking.

GERMANS RETIRING FROM NORTH POLAND

Allied Airmen Drop Bombs on Submarine Station at Bruges and Aviation Camp at Gits.

PETROGRAD, April 1.—The Germans have abandoned the siege of the Polish fortress of Ossowiec, it was announced in a semi-official statement given out here yesterday. After several weeks of battering away at long range the enemy found further progress out of the question and on Tuesday began withdrawing his siege guns toward the Prussian border.

The German retirement at this point indicates the collapse of Von Hindenburg's whole campaign against the Warsaw-Petrograd railway, according to the War Office. The Germans who massed for another attack on Przasnysz are also reported retiring upon the border.

On the new Russian base along the line of Uszok, Lupkow and Bartfeld, in the Carpathians, substantial beginnings of the spring campaign are visible, the Russian column moving into Hungary along the Ondava river, captured two full regiments and a field battery. The Austrians are now bringing large reinforcements from the south. The first stage of a battle engaging great numbers of men is now developing. The Germans in the north are covering the period until fresh corps arrive from the west by restless, futile raids. The enemy's exasperation as the steady, crushing of his Niemen campaign is unmeasured. Gen. Buelow's artillery has been evacuating positions to the northwest of Ossowiec for several days. Some twenty batteries were shelling the outer sector of the fortress; now only four remain, and even they are quiescent. All the heavy mortars have been withdrawn slowly along the Lyck road. The field troops remain in one corner of East Prussia.

Austrian cavalry in moderate numbers have crossed from Czernowitz into Bessarabia, a Russian province which formally belonged to Roumania, in the direction of Khotin. It is believed to be a move to impress the Roumanians.

Air Raid Successful.

PARIS, April 1. — Allied airmen yesterday made a daring raid on the German submarine station at Bruges and the German aviation camps at Gits in Belgium, dropping many bombs and causing consternation among the enemy. The aviators flew low ad it is believed that their explosives worked considerable havoc.

In the night, French and British airmen visited enemy bivouacs in the Woevre, the Champagne and Soissons districts, and in Belgium. Twenty-four bombs were dropped and the rest of the enemy was much disturbed. At Thourout 30 German soldiers were unofficially reported killed and 60 wounded.

French troops renewed their offensive in the Argonne district yesterday and Tuesday night and early yesterday morning captured about 650 feet of trenches with many German prisoners and two trench mortars. Incessant activity marked the operations in this theatre. The lines between Four de Paris and Bagatelle have been in particular the scene of great military activity. In some places the fighting was at pretty close quarters, and at one point a German trench mortar, which was struck by one of the French heavy bombs, was projected right into the French lines.

A heavy fight was put up by the Germans in the forest of Le Pretre to recapture some positions that they lost to the French infantry the preceding day, but it concluded with the defeat of the Germans. They opened the engagement by delivering a heavy counter-attack at dawn with several battalions, and at first they succeeded in gaining a foothold in the western part of the position. The French troops, after a severe attack, dislodged them from the trench. In the course of the struggle the French soldiers took a number of prisoners, including an officer.

The Amsterdam Tijd says that 30 German soldiers were killed and 60 wounded near Thourout, Belgium, by bombs dropped by five airmen of the allies.

HAVE LOTS OF MACHINE GUNS

Capture of German Pieces Not Important

LONDON, April 1. — The official "eye-witness," in a summary of minor events occurring on the British front last week, sounds a note of warning against placing importance on the capture of machine guns from the Germans, reports of which so often appear in the official statements.

"It must be remembered," he says, "that to the Germans the loss of one or several machine guns does not represent what at the beginning of the operations it would have meant to us, with our then vastly inferior total and proportional number of these weapons.

"It is believed that before the war commenced they had available altogether a stock of 50,000 such guns, apart from any that may since have been turned out by their arsenals. Their employment of them, therefore, has in a certain sense been prodigal and carried out with a disregard to loss, which is only comprehensible when the large reserve of these weapons in their possession is borne in mind."

GOOD PROGRESS MADE.

Amendments to Compensation Bill Advanced In Legislature.

TORONTO, April 1. — The Legislature spent the bulk of the day yesterday in committee, and although several points occasioned discussion, unusual progress was made. The order paper was cleared of several rows of third readings, and amendments to some important bills were added.

The workmen's compensation bill was changed to make the employers of Ontario workmen injured outside the province individually liable. All Ontario men so employed will receive compensation unless they have been living beyond the confines for more than six months. An employer may include himself upon his own pay list of employes, but will never receive compensation on a salary basis of more than $2,000. The age limit of 21 is removed, and parents will receive compensation for a son's injuries.

When the good roads bill appeared, the Opposition urged that more than twenty per cent. be spent for maintenance in order to bring old roads up to the new standard.

Hon. Mr. Macdiarmid said so generous an offer was out of the question.

Wife Unable to Appear in Court

Husband is Charged With Assaulting and Beating Her

William Jackson, a middle aged resident of the south part of the city was brought before the magistrate this morning charged with assaulting and beating his wife. He pleaded not guilty. As his wife is not in condition to appear Jackson was remanded one week.

A fight which started in front of the Ideal pool room last night resulted in two young men being in police court and Thos. Donahue charged with assault. Donahue did not appear to face the charge, so he will be brought to court tomorrow morning.

DOCTORS CAN ENLIST WITH THE FORCES IN ENGLAND

Rates of Pay Will be $5 and $6 a Day — Period of Service One Year

Canadian doctors who have qualified for positions with Canadian units for overseas service and were unable to secure places on account of the large number of volunteers, can enlist with the forces in England if they so desire, as there is a demand for medical men "on the other side." This is the gist of news from Ottawa, and Lt.-Col. H. B. Yates, A.D.M.S., will receive names of applicants.

Medical recruits must belong to the R. A. M. C., and will get the rank of lieutenant. Their rates of pay will be $5 and $6 a day, almost the pay of a captain of the Canadian Medical Corps.

In addition they will receive rations or allowance in lieu thereof, $150 for outfit, $37 for camp outfit, with a gratuity of $300 at the expiration of service, if satisfactory. The perod of service is for one year, or until they are needed no longer. Applicants must be British subjects, fully qualified, and pass an examination for fitness.

Attack Dutch Ship.

YMUIDEN, Holland, April 1.—The skipper of the Dutch trawler Hibernia reported here yesterday that his ship had been attacked by a German hydro-aeroplane on Monday. A bomb was dropped which exploded near the Hibernia, notwithstanding the that the vessel was flying the Dutch flag. A little later two airships, probably Zeppelins, passed over the Hibernia. Then came a squadron of German warships. An officer from a torpedo boat destroyer went on board the Hibernia, but, finding nothing suspicious, allowed her to continue on her way.

German Raider Coaling.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 1.—An order was placed yesterday for 1,600 tons of coal for the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich. The loading of the fuel on barges for transportation to the Prinz Eitel began at once.

Naval officers asserted that this was double the amount that would be required to take the cruiser across the Atlantic.

BIG BATTLESHIPS.

Wonderful indeed are the fighting powers of the Queen Elizabeth, one of the group of five battleships. Each of these ships cost about £2,359,000, and they are the most expensive vessels ever built for the fleet. The Queen Elizabeth and her sisters embody many new and striking features in battleship design, all helping to make them the most formidable warships in the world. In the first place, they burn no coal whatever, relying entirely upon oil, which will be stored between the inner and the outer skins. Should the occasion arise, each vessel will be able to carry 3,500 tons of liquod—no less than 1,050,000 gallons!

OBITUARY

MRS. ROBERT ORDE.

The many friends, both in Peterborough and Otonabee, will extend heartfelt sympathy to Mr. Robt. Orde of that township over the death of his wife, who passed away at her home on Lot 13, Concession 11, of Otonabee, Wednesday afternoon.

The late Mrs. Orde, who was 77 years of age, had been in ill-health for the past five years. Her illness was borne with Christian fortitude.

The maiden name of the deceased was Thomasina Fanny Toker. She was a member of the Church of England. There are left to mourn her death her husband and eight children, viz.: Mrs. H. F. Battersby, Beeton, Ont.; Mrs. W. Hancox, of Port Hope; Mrs. W. Wheeler, Keene; Mrs. John Edwards, Lang, and Miss Helen, at home; Messrs. Richard, Otonabee; Henry, Otonabee, and Leonard, of this city. Two sisters are Mrs. Gage, Mark street, and Mrs. Dunford, Lindsay.

The funeral will be held from the family residence at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

MRS. MARY CAMPBELL.

Mary Campbell, forty-five years a resident of Nassau, died at one o'clock this morning at the ripe old age of eighty-four. Death followed a lingering illness, which took a turn for the worse three days ago, and it was soon seen that recovery could not be expected. The deceased was born in England, and before taking up residence at Nassau lived in Monaghan.

Surviving are three sons and four daughters, her husband having predeceased her six years.

The funeral has been set for Saturday afternoon at 2:30 to Little Lake Cemetery, service at the house at 2 o'clock.

U.S. RIFLE ASSOCIATIONS.

Washington, April 1.—Jorgensen rifles, long since discarded by the United States Army, and stored in Government arsenals, are being distributed to "Government civilian rifle clubs" in the various states, which were organized under an Act of Congress, it was announced today by the National Rifle Assocation of America.

FRACTURED AN ARM.

Thelma Livingstone, the little daughter of Bruce Livingstone, Fradette Avenue, fell down the cellar steps of her home and fractured an arm. Dr. Moir was summoned and reduced the injury. Reports today state that the little girl is doing well.

AFTER SUFFERING TWO LONG YEARS

Mrs. Aselin Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Minneapolis, Minn.—"After my little one was born I was sick with pains in my sides which the doctors said were caused by inflammation. I suffered a great deal every month and grew very thin. I was under the doctor's care for two long years without any benefit. Finally after repeated suggestions to try it we got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. After taking the third bottle of the Compound I was able to do my housework and today I am strong and healthy again. I will answer letters if anyone wishes to know about my case."—Mrs. JOSEPH ASELIN, 628 Monroe St., N.E., Minneapolis, Minn.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotics or harmful drugs, and today holds the record of being the most successful remedy we know for woman's ills. If you need such a medicine why don't you try it?

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

HASTING'S NURSE NOW IN FRANCE

Private Bagnall Has Returned to Firing Line

DISTRICT NEWS

(Special Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, March 31. — Letters received from the war zone convey the intelligence that Miss Helen Fowlds has gone to France as nurse in one of the hospitals there, and that Mr. F. Bagnall has regained his health and has returned to the scene of action. Their many friends in Hastings are pleased to learn of their well-being.

The ladies' aid of the Methodist church held their March meeting in the basement of the church Thursday afternoon; when a number of important items of business were discussed. A good representation of the members of the aid were in attendance.

The King has awarded the Albert medal to Mr. Julian Carter, of Havelock, for bravery in saving the life of a little girl at the risk of losing his own. Mr. Carter is a son of Mrs. J. Carter of town, and has been in the employ of the C. P. R. for some years.

The news has come to friends in Hastings of the death near Tweed of Mrs. John Taylor.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Hugh Collins is confined to her home through an attack of la grppe.

We notice that the robins have returned from their winter quarters and are heralding the approach of spring.

Maple syrup is being offered for sale and is bringing a good price. A number of the farmers in this vicinity are engaged in its manufacture.

A cold wave struck these parts on Friday last, and is continuing in severity still. We are reminded of the old adage, "If March comes in like a lion," and from all appearances this month is likely to prove its truthfulness.

A trainload (consisting of some ten or eleven coaches) of volunteers passed through here last week en route to Kingston, via the G. T. R.

Mr. Fred Hubbs, who has been in Peterborough for some few weeks, has returned to his home here.

We are pleased to report mprovement in Mr. James Stevenson's (sen.) condition, although he is still weak.

Mrs. D. Scriver has returned from a visit with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Armor Weir of Norwood spent a few days during the week in Hastings, the guest of Mr. Lloyd Hess.

The selection of ready-to-wear garments, under the supervision of the Reid Co., of Peterborough, who displayed here for a few days during the past week, was admired by a large number of ladies, some of whom gave orders for their Easter gowns. The fine array of Fashion's latest certainly does credit to the firm.

Messrs. Milton and Percy Beavis of Norwood spent Saturday in town.

Another aged resident has been called away in the person of Mrs. John Collins, who passed away at her home on Sunday last at the age of 70 years, after a lingering illness. She is survived by her husband and one son, John, who resides in Hastings. The funeral will be held on Wednesday morning to the R. C. cemetery. Friends extend sympathy to the bereaved.

Mr. Duncan Campbell of Roseneath spent Thursday last in Hastings.

Mr. Spooner has moved the house he recently purchased from Mr. Graham down to his own lot on Front street, and is busy refitting it for occupation.

Mrs. Torpey of Otonabee has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. Fitzpatrick.

Miss Flossie Carter spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Mrs. Victor German spent a few days last week with her sister, Mrs. J. Fairman, of Percy.

Mr. F. Buller of Peterborough spent Tuesday in Hastings.

A MARKET TO RETAIN.

In 1914 Britain imported Canadian produce in excess of 1913 to the value of $4,652,000 and in excess of 1912 of $22,690,000. For the last quarter of 1914 the excess over the same period in the previous year was nine and a half millions. These figures surely furnish some idea of the necessity there is for further production. To retain the market, Canada must have the goods. To have the goods she must cultivate the best. It is this great and important doctrine that the Patriotism and Production campaign is instilling, and that the publications issued by the Department of Agriculture are intended to impress and further. Any of this literature can be had by sending a post-free application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, saying what is wanted. A list of upwards of two hundred publications from which to choose will be forwarded on request.

HIS HEALTH IN A TERRIBLE STATE

"Fruit-a-tives" Healed His Kidneys and Cured Him

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., AUG. 26th. 1913.

"About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My Kidneys were not doing their work and I was all run down in condition. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen "Fruit-a-tives" advertised, I decided to try them. Their effect, I found more than satisfactory.

Their action was mild and the result all that could be expected.

My Kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old-time vitality. Today, I am enjoying the best health I have ever had".

B. A. KELLY

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest Kidney Remedy in the world. It acts on the bowels and skin as well as on the kidneys, and thereby soothes and cures any Kidney soreness.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Humor and Philosophy

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

THE youth who announces that he intends becoming famous usually compromises by becoming ridiculous.

The man who can believe his own romances has a mortgage on happiness.

Many a woman has joined the suffragettes to offset her husband's lodge activities.

Silence is golden, but it is noticeable that most of us are shy on the yellow metal.

No man is a hero to this valet, but some women are glasses of fashion to their maids.

Uneasy lies the head that has just been to the hairdresser.

"Why do you talk so much?"
"For self protection."
"For self protection?"
"Yes."
"But I don't see how that protects you. I should think you'd be in danger of some crank trying to shut you up."
"Not in the least. And when I am talking I can't hear the rest of you idiots yawping all round me."

"Indeed I do. I have been trying for the last month to do something that would please you."
"All right, you may."
"Thanks awfully. What is it?"
"Go away and give me a chance to forget you."

Hogs.

Selects, weighed off cars, sold at $8.80 to $9, and one firm reported a sale at $9.10, which is the highest yet given.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 31.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market receipts of live stock for the week ending March 27 were 700 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 1040 hogs and 1150 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 150 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 1500 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle, but the feeling was very firm, as the supply was the smallest of any previous market day this year; however, there was no excitement in the market on account of the fact that buyers in most cases had filled their wants pretty well on Monday, and consequently the trade was rather quiet. Sales of a few choice steers were made at $8 to $8.25, good steers at $7.50 to $7.75 and the lower grades at from $5 to $6.50, while butchers' cows brought from $4.75 to $6.75 and bulls from $5.50 to $7 per hundred pounds. One bull, weighing 2460 pounds, sold for $180.

The supply of spring lambs offered for the Easter trade was probably the smallest for many years, for which the demand was good and sales of a few choice head were made at $8 to $10 each, and the smaller ones at from $2.50 to $5. The trade in calves was active and sales were made freely at from $2.50 to $10 each, as to size and quality. One calf weighing 425 pounds sold at 8c per pound. The tone of the market for yearling lambs was firm at $8.50 to $9 and sheep at $5.25 to $6 per hundred pounds.

The condition of the hogs was unchanged, the feeling being strong under a good demand and small supplies, and sales of selected lots were made at $9 per hundred pounds weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, March 31.—Cattle—Receipts, 11,000; market, unsettled; beeves, $5.85 to $8.75; western steers, $5.90 to $7.40; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.75; calves, $7 to $10.

Hogs—Receipts, 24,000; market, lower; light, $6.60 to $6.87½; mixed, $6.60 to $6.87½; heavy, $6.45 to $6.85; rough, $6.45 to $6.55; pigs, $5.50 to $6.60; bulk of sales, $6.75 to $6.85.

Sheep—Receipts, 8000; market, firm; native, $7.25 to $8.35; lambs, native, $7.75 to $10.10.

FARM HAND'S WAGE.

Saskatoon, Sask.—According to a bulletin just issued by the Dominion Census and Statistics branch, Ottawa, the average wages, including board, paid to farm hands in Canada during last Summer were:—$35.55 for male and $18.81 for female help. For the year, including board, the average wages were $323.30 for males, and $189.35 for females, whilst the average cost of board per month works out to $14.27 for males and $11.20 for females as compared with $12.49 and $9.53 in 1910.

Average wages per month in 1914 were lowest in Prince Edward Island, viz., $24.71 for males and $14.48 for females. In the Western provinces they were for males $39.13 in Manitoba, $40.51 in Saskatchewan and $40.26 in Alberta, females receiving $22.35 in Manitoba, $22.96 in Saskatchewan and $23.63 in Alberta.

Because the cannery companies have large stocks on hand Mr. R. L. Innes, of the Dominion Canners, says they will not pay an increased price for produce this year.

FREMONT AND KIT CARSON.

Pen Pictures of the Pathfinder and the Famous Scout.

In "Kit Carson Days," by Edward L. Sabin, we get this glimpse of the personal appearance of Carson and Fremont when the two daring spirits first met:

"In June, 1842, came the fateful meeting of the trapper scout, already known throughout the west, and the Pathfinder whose great fame was still to come.

"The two men were opposites. Carson was Scotch-Irish, gray blue eyed, sandy complexioned (under his tan), light haired, rather flat featured, gritty, but so quiet and ordinary both in appearance and manner that few not knowing his name would bestow upon him more than a passing glance. Fremont was French, flashing blue eyes, olive white complexion, thick brown hair, features regular and oval, disposition sensitive, quick, eager and indomitable. Few would forget him.

"Fremont was a scholar of both American and continental accomplishments. At this time Carson could not read nor write even his own name, and his speech even in 1866 was of patois wherein mingled Mexican, Indian and many a frontier English 'thar,' 'fout,' 'massacreed,' 'pore,' etc. But he spoke in more languages than did Fremont himself, not only being fluent in English, French, Spanish and several Indian tongues, all acquired orally, but also being well conversant with the sign language of red man and of trail."

Of this meeting on the Missouri, out from St. Louis, came comradeship first and a friendship that never ceased. In California and in the Mexican struggle the stanchness of both men and their loyalty to the flag were well tested.

His Chance to Tap the Legal Purse Too Good to Miss.

Attorney Thomas C. Brinsmade doesn't object to a good story, even if it's on him. He tells this one:

"The other day an old colored man came sauntering up to me in my yard, where there was a big pile of rubbish.

"'Morning, John,' I said.

"'Mornin', Marse Tom. Don't you want that rubbish hauled away?'

"'What'll you take?' I asked.

"'Dollah a load, an' I think it'll take jes' about two loads.'

"'I'll give you 75 cents a load,' I told him.

"'You remember me, do you, Marse Tom?'

"'Why, sure, John.'

"'Well, you remember when I was up for shootin' craps an' you pleaded me guilty in police court?'

"'Sure,' I said.

"'An' you charged me $10 an' I never said a doggone word!'

"John hauled the rubbish at $1 a load, and he made three loads of it."—Cleveland News.

The Austrians are known to be the greatest "sticklers" for genealogy, many of the nobles tracing their descent back to almost the dawn of history. Even in Austria, however, it is generally admitted that the dukes of Norfolk represent the oldest family in the world. SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

KNOTTY LEE GATHERING HIS FORCES FOR THE FRAY

Is Picking Them up From all Corners for Guelph Club

Guelph, April 1.—Knotty Lee has not allowed any grass to grow under his feet since he was named as manager of the Guelph baseball club for 1915, but has already a number of players signed up and strings out for several other good men. Knotty has a splendid connection with clubs across the border and can secure good players without much difficulty, and he has the first choice of any surplus players of the Toronto Internationals. He has the signed contract of a catcher named Frank Jordan, of Scranton, Pa. Several teams are reported to have been after him, and he was signed up by Lee for the Toronto club, who has turned the contract over to him. He has strings out, however, for a catcher of experience who would be a tower of strength to the club, and expects to land him.

For pitchers he has Tony Dorbeck, whose ability is too well known to need comment here; Carney, of Boston, who was with Taunton in the Colonial League last year, and who won 18 games and lost 10 with a tail-end club. He is a right hander. Then Lee also expects to get Kirley from Toronto, who was with Guelph in 1913, and who was the Beavers' leading pitcher last year.

He has also signed up an infielder named Murray, of Somerville, Mass. He comes from the Everitt high school, a school which has turned out many top notch ball players, Eddie Collins, of the Chicago White Sox, being one of them. Then he has Johnny Murphy, who fairly burnt up the league last year until he had his leg broken. He is all right again, and expects to have a good season. He comes from Scranton. Another contract is that of Frank Sullivan, a member last year of the famous Chicago Logan Squares, the best semi-pro team of Chicago. He is said to be a good fielder and hard hitter. Bradshaw, formerly of Berlin, who was drafted by Toronto in 1913, may also come to Guelph. He is a pitcher.

Three players who will go south with the Toronto team are Killilea, Hunt, Isaacs, and Lee expects to get at least two of them, as well as outfielder Hunt, who is said to be very fast and a fine sticker. Hoover, who pitched fine ball for Guelph's Wobbly team last year, will also be given a chance to make good here.

COMMENT
As You Like it

Louis Yeotes has secured Knute Belting for the summer to play ball in Peterborough, and he has a picked team that he says will be hard to beat. He will announce the line up later in the season. This club will look for a berth in the City League with Belting as a bench manager. When the club plays out of town games Belting will play.

THE NATIONAL BOARD of Arbitrators of Professional Baseball Leagues has handed out a judgment by which Louie Schettler is a free agent. Schettler took the matter to the National Board before the local club decided to remain out this season. The action of the club automatically made all the players free agents.

Refund Taxes to Hydraulic Coy.

At last night's meeting of the Legal Committee it was decided to refund the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. $89.79 the amount which the company wrongly paid for taxes in 1912, 1913 and 1914 through an error by which the company was overassessed.

The report of Assessor W. J. Henry on the matter stated that the Peterborough Hydraulic Power Co. was assessed for the sum of $58,700 plus $1230 for lot 8 south of Hunter and east of Water, plus $850 for house occupied by Matthew Young on London St., making a total of $60,770 on west side of river, exclusive of Dawson property. The assessment of $1230 for lot 8 should have been included in the fixed assessment of $58,700, instead of which it was added to it. As to the other $850 assessment of house occupied by Matthew Young which would make up the $2070 which the Hydraulic Power Co. so claim depends on the interpretation of the following clause in their agreement:—

"Provided however that when and so often as any part of said land shall be used for the purpose of dwellings, such part or parts where and so long as used for such purpose shall be assessible as if this by-law had not been passed.

The assessment of water, power and privileges was $200,000, which was refused by the court of revision to $125,000.

City Solicitor G. N. Gordon reported that in his opinion "immediately any part of the lands are used for dwellings, then that part requires to be assessed as its actual value, the same as any property in the city is assessed and that the fixed assessment is not reduced by the amount of the land withdrawn for the purpose of using the same for the purpose of dwellings. The by-law makes no provision for the reduction of a fixed assessment, by reason of the withdrawal of any lands from the assessment, and I am of the opinion that the assessment should not be reduced by the value or any proportionate value of the lands withdrawn."

French Cruiser Sinks Submarine.

PARIS, April 1.—A statement indicating that a German submarine may have been sunk by a French cruiser was given out yesterday by the Ministry of Marine. It is as follows:

"Tuesday afternoon a French light cruiser sighted a German submarine manoeuvering on the surface off Dieppe. The cruiser immediately gave chase, forcing the submarine to dive, firing meanwhile at the periscope and turning in order to ram it with the bow.

"The cruiser passed above the submarine at the moment the periscope disappeared and from the spot where the submarine was last seen quantities of oil flowed to the surface."

But still we all like to see a woman can flirt in the kitchen.

COULD DOUBLE THE TERRITORY

Former Premier of Greece Favors Intervention in War

PARIS, April 1.—Former Premier Venizelos of Greece, who has returned to Athens after a short rest, has made declarations to political friends concerning concessions he obtained during his ministry in regard to territorial claims of Bulgaria, according to the Athens correspondent of the Havas Agency. M. Venizelos is quoted as saying:

"At the beginning of the war the demands of Bulgaria included not only Kavala, but Vodena. These demands, which were supported by certain powers, assumed a serious character, but my line of policy was such that I succeeded in obtaining the withdrawal of this support from Bulgaria."

Speaking of the participation of Greece in the war on the side of the allies, urged by him, the former Premier said he believed that with her fleet and a division of her army Greece could have doubled her territory.

Lieut. Bottomley Dismissed.

OTTAWA, April 1.—The Militia Department yesterday confirmed the cable report of the dismissal from the position of a paymaster of the first Canadian contingent of Lieut. John Bottomley. He was short in his accounts.

THE SUMMER HOLIDAYS

People fortunate enough to be sure of summer vacations have to lay their plans early. This year there are reasons for laying them earlier than ever.

After the early part of May in past years, thousands were leaving the American shores bound for Europe. By the end of June, thousands of school teachers, students, and sightseers have also looked to Europe for their summer vacation. Where are all these people going this summer? Owing to the war, not to Europe, and this great army of summer tourists are looking for new fields to explore and new playgrounds to visit. Canada offers just the ideal places with variety that will suit the most fastidious. Present indications give promise that these resorts are going to have the biggest season in their history, as our cousins from the other side of the international border are looking this way for their objective point this summer. Now is the time, therefore, for Canadians to make their plans and secure their accommodation in the charming districts that include the following:

Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays; The Maganetewan River, Algonquin Park, Timagami, and the 30,000 Islands of the Georgian Bay.

Drop a postal card to C. E. Horning, D. P. A., Union Station, Toronto, for handsome descriptive literature of any of these districts.

Blind Ants.

It is reported by a famous entomologist that a species of white ant attacked the country home of an East Indian farmer, and in a short time ate many of the sills and floors of the house. These ants, according to the entomologists, have no eyes, can live only in darkness, and their food is wood. The entomologist also said that in many respects they resemble bees.

Walrus Tusks.

The walrus never slips upon the glarest ice, for his tusks steady him. That is the chief use of his tusks—to help him to climb up the sheer and glassy sides of floes. He uses his head as a hammer—bang!—and, fixing his tusks in, he draws up his soft body—a strange sight to see.

Greek Painters.

There were several great painters in ancient Greece, and it is rather difficult to say which was the greatest. It is possible that the honor might go to Apelles, 332 B. C.—New York American.

RE-ELECTION OF JOSEPH BOYD

Had Been Unseated as School Trustee in Cavan

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, April 1.—The pancake social under the auspices of the Ladies Aid Society of the Presbyterian Church, was a fairly good success. Those who attended were treated to a splendid feast of maple syrup and hot pancakes with profusion of other delicacies. Everyone seemed to enjoy himself splendidly.

Mr. Jos. Boyd who was unseated as a trustee of S.S. No. 1 Cavan was re-elected by a large majority over Thos. Poast.

The Women's Red Cross Society is preparing a patriotic concert to be given shortly after Easter. No one should fail to be on hand for this rare treat. The entertainment will be furnished principally by local talent of note.

Mr. Errol Woodruff who is attending high school here returned to his home in Kearney, for the Easter holidays.

On Easter Monday night, April 5, there is a treat in store for those interested in evangelistic work as it is being carried on in the world today. Rev. Dr. Hazelwood, undoubtedly one of Canada's foremost speakers in this particular line, will deliver his famous address "The King's Business." Mr. Hazelwood comes to Omemee in the interests of the Social Service and Moral Reform Society of the Methodist Church. Don't forget the place—the Methodist Church. Refreshments will be served by the ladies and all are cordially invited to attend and listen to this thrilling speaker.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Galaugher of North Bay, who were home for a few days attending the memorial service, which was held for Lieutenant W. Galaugher, who was recently killed in France, returned on Monday to North Bay. Mr. Galaugher is in the post office inspector's division in that city.

Rev. E. Rowland is at his home in Omemee for a few days visiting his parents. He delivered a splendid address on Monday evening at the meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist Church.

A meeting of the Board of Education of the town was held in the school on Monday night. There were several matters of importance to be settled before the Easter vacation.

Mr. Victor Johnson left a few days ago to take up a position in Coldwater, Ont.

Mr. F. Ford left on Wednesday morning for Ridgetown, Ontario, where he is to have a position.

Rev. A. Macfarlane, of Toronto, the week-end at the parsonage returning to Toronto Tuesday morning. He preached Sunday morning in the Methodist Church. Rev. J. W. Down occupied the pulpit on the Bethel circuit.

Warden Mulligan was in Lindsay on Tuesday to settle some important business matters of the county.

There will be special services in the Anglican Church Friday morning. The local clergymen will deliver addresses.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

It takes a really skillful person to be good and a clever one to stay that way.

You can't use your friends as much as you would like to because they are generally so busy using you.

His Satanic majesty is generally dead willing to light our pathway when we feel that darkness envelops it.

Men never become mothers to the race, but lots of them degenerate into nice old ladies.

There are people who are so busy saying nothing that they completely wear out their voices.

Always being in the right is a habit that really is deforming.

There are persons so mean-minded that they ought to be thankful if they stand any chance of losing their minds.

Some persons are really adept at adjusting difficulties but they never can guarantee that the adjustment will hold.

Miss Luella Harrison is spending the Easter holidays at her home in Madoc.

Miss Pearl Emmerson will spend the week-end with friends in Millbrook.

Miss Ethel Locke of Campbellford has gone to North Bay, Ont., to enter Queen Victoria Memorial Hospital as nurse-in-training.

On account of the union service in George Street Church tomorrow afternoon, St. Paul's Ladies' Aid will meet at 4.30 instead of 3.30.

The members of the Go-Forth Mission Band of Knox Church spent a very enjoyable evening on Tuesday, when they were the guests of the secretary, Miss G. Watt.

During the evening an excellent paper entitled "The New Era in Korea," was admirably presented by Miss Lillian Holyman, earning well deserved applause.

It was with regret that the members took leave of their hostess at a late hour.

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead; they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

CITY LIABLE FOR CARE AND TREATMENT OF GIRL

Judge Finds Home of Patient in Toronto Hospital is in This City

A judgment given out at Toronto by Judge Morson, a copy of which has been received by the chairman of the legal committee, makes the city liable for the maintenance and treatment of Bessy Montgomery, who is a patient in the Toronto Free Hospital.

The judge finds that Bessy Montgomery was a resident of Peterborough at the time of entering the hospital on the 4th of March, 1914, and that the city is liable to the hospital for her maintenance and treatment since that date.

The account from the hospital has been disputed by the city ... is $1 per day.

In his judgment, Judge Morson finds:

"That Bessy Montgomery was admitted to the hospital on March 4, 1914, and that she came from Peterborough at the time, and was living with her mother and step-father; that her father and mother had moved into a rented house in Peterborough; that they lived in Toronto before this, and removed to Peterborough to live, seven or eight years before; that she (Bessy Montgomery) was living with a Miss McRae at the time her parents moved to Peterborough and a long time before that, keeping her, as she lived alone; that Miss McRae sent her to school and kept her in clothes in return for services; that she continued to live with Miss McRae after her parents had moved to Peterborough; that she visited them two or three times in Peterborough whilst living with Miss McRae. The first time, she stayed two or three months; the second time was two years afterwards, when she stayed only a short time; that Miss McRae afterward left Toronto and went to Montreal to reside, and wanted Bessy Montgomery to go with her, but her mother would not consent; that she then returned to her mother in Peterborough and remained there a year or more, when she returned to Toronto with some of her Peterborough friends and got employment, and continued in employment till she went to the hospital the first time, and she remained in the hospital three months as a patient; that her mother then wrote to her to come home for a little while until she got well, which she did, remaining there a month, when she again returned to Toronto and got employment and continued working until she went to the hospital in February, 1913, where she remained until the 1st of July, 1913, when she again returned to her home in Peterborough, because her mother wished her to return for a change which she thought would do her good; that, while she was there she helped her mother in the house; that she was ... months, when she again returned to the hospital, where she has been ever since.

"These are the facts as related to me in the presence of Dr. Dobie, the superintendent.

"Now, the law is clear that the residence or domicile of a legitimate minor (which Bessy Montgomery is) is that of her parents, and that temporary absence while in employment or visiting, for any other purpose, is not abandonment by a minor of her domicile.

"On these facts it is quite clear that the residence or domicile of her parents at the time of her entering the hospital on the 4th of March, 1914, was the city of Peterborough.

"It is also equally clear, I think, that the girl's home, in law, was always with her mother, and that both she and her mother so regarded it.

"It is true that she was temporarily from her home, as many girls are, for the purpose of earning her own living, but that she always considered her home was in Peterborough, and that she had not abandoned it, is made clear, I think, by her many visits to it, and by her always returning there when she was out of employment.

"On the above facts it is hardly, I think, arguable that her domicile was not in Peterborough."

WEDDING BELLS

STIRLING—GOODWIN.

At Kingston yesterday morning a quiet wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Goodwin, when their eldest daughter, Edith Carey, was married to John Bertram Stirling, B.A., B.Sc., of North Battleford, Sask., son of Dr. J. A. Stirling of Picton. The Rev. Dr. Malcolm MacGillvray performed the ceremony, and Miss Alice Goodwin, sister of the bride played the wedding marches. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin and lace, and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was attended by her sister, Miss Dorothea Goodwin, and Mr. Graham Bertram, of Dundas, cousin of the bridegroom, was best man. Col. and Mrs. Bertram and Mr. Aimers Bertram, of Westmount, and Mr. Aimers Bertram, of Lachine, were among the guests present.

HAMBLIN—DAVIS.

In Knox Church vestry on Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock, the marriage was solemnized of May Davis, 585 Sherbrooke street, and Walter Hamblin, of Lakefield. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. A. MacKenzie. The young couple were unattended, and will reside in Lakefield.

HUMPAGE—HOPKINS.

A quiet wedding took place this afternoon in Knox Church, the principals being Miss Ada Hopkins and Mr. Edward Humpage, both of this city. The bride is a member of Knox Church and the groom is a member of the choir.

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie conducted the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Humpage will reside in Peterborough.

LECTURE AND DEMONSTRATION ON LIVING MODELS

At the Hall Store

A great treat is in store for the women of Peterborough at the Hall store on Monday and Tuesday, April 5th and 6th, on the second floor, in the ready-to-wear department. A lecture and demonstration on living models on the hygienic principles of the famous Gossard front lace corsets will be given by two expert corsetiers from the Chicago headquarters.

Lecture starts promptly at 3 p.m. followed by demonstration. This invitation includes women and misses only.

GOES TO ORANGEVILLE.

A prominent young musician in the person of Mr. Harry Hill left the city early this morning to take up his position of organist and choirmaster in the Methodist church at Orangeville, a position he has held for some time in Park St. Baptist Church. He began to study music while serving two years as a boy alto in St. John's choir, and has achieved first-class honors in several examinations in both vocal and instrumental music. He will be greatly missed at Park street as well as by the Choral Society which he was a faithful member. Mr. R. J. Devey has been his only teacher, and regrets very much the loss of so apt a pupil.

Business at Custom House

Total for Year Just Ended is $409, 765,67

The 31st of March brings the 1914-15 customs year to a close, and it is interesting to note that in Peterborough for the twelve past months the total customs returns amounted to $409,765.67. This is a decrease of $58,531.62 over the year 1913-14, the total for which was $468,197.29. The unusual condition of the financial world explains why a decrease should be found, but it is most gratifying to note that during the past few months the returns have been an increase over the returns for the corresponding months of last year. During March the total return was $42,804.19, while the returns for March, 1914, was $34,932.60, which gives the month just closed an increase of $7,871.59 over the corresponding month last year.

The following is a comparative statement of the various months:

April	$52,837.43	$37,826.46
May	52,272.84	27,273.81
June	47,836.40	25,366.19
July	42,783.93	23,792.86
August	43,886.82	51,299.37
September	32,203.50	37,870.52
October	39,310.80	41,511.71
November	35,593.57	15,571.60
December	30,359.27	27,576.13
January	29,432.81	38,254.17
February	26,747.32	40,618.66
March	34,932.60	42,804.19
	$468,197.29	$409,765.67

DIVISION COURT

Christopher Eaton Gets Judgment for $45.50

At the sitting of the Division Court this morning Judge Huycke gave judgment in favor of the plaintiff for full amount and costs in the case of Christopher Eaton vs. Ross Green for $45.50. Defendant did not appear.

The following cases were dealt with:—

Fred Blastorah vs. Thomas Twomey, $28. Judgment for plaintiff.

Henry Parker vs. ... $30. Transferred to Bobcaygeon Court.

GOVERNMENT TO CONTROL MANUFACTURING PLANTS IN SCOTLAND

CAUGHT IN WEST

Coneybeare Has Been Apprehended

SPENDING HIS MONEY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, April 3. — Word has been received here by the provincial police that Howard Coneybeare, the express messenger wanted in Lindsay for the theft of a money package of three thousand dollars, has been apprehended in Edmonton, where he has been spending Home Bank bills which formed part of the contents of the package.

Inspector Boyd leaves immediately to bring him back.

NURSING SISTER FATALLY HURT

Eyes Were Torn From Sockets by Explosion

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

QUEBEC, April 3.—By an explosion at the Hotel Dieu Hospital yesterday, Sister Edward, in secular life Miss Alda Pelletier, was terribly injured and cannot live. Just as she entered the disinfecting vault an explosion hurled a steel door against her, fracturing her skull and tearing her eyes from their sockets.

Sir William Price Leaves Commission

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

QUEBEC, April 3. — Sir William Price announced yesterday his resignation as chairman of the Quebec Harbor Commission, saying he is out of politics for good. Mr. Lesperance, member for Montmagny, is prominently mentioned as his successor.

TANNERY BURNED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

BRANTFORD, April 3. — Thornton's tannery was badly damaged by fire last night, but the stock of hides was saved.

MENINGITIS IS FATAL TO SOLDIER

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 3. — Private William Houghton, of the 33rd Battalion from Lucknow, died here today of meningitis, after three weeks' illness.

HAD NO LICENSE TO OPERATE RINK

Unknown to the police department, the roller rink was operated yesterday without a license having been taken out. This afternoon, Chief Thompson sent an officer to inform the men in charge that they must take out a license immediately.

The license was taken out this afternoon.

LLOYD GEORGE IS FLOODED WITH MAIL

Greater Part of Letters Urge Prohibition of Liquor

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 3. — In the first mail delivery this morning Lloyd George received fifteen thousand letters, the greater part of them urging prohibition [illegible] in full-page advertisements [illegible] Friday's paper. It was expected that he would receive altogether today twenty-five thousand such letters.

MINING WARFARE SUCCESSFUL AT THREE POINTS

German Aeroplane Brought Down by French After Rheims Had Been Bombed

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 3. — (War office statement)—"In the regions of Somme, La Boiselle and Dompierre, mining warfare continued with noticeable advantages for the French.

"The total number of prisoners taken at the forest of La Petre, northwest of Pont-a-Mousson, from March 30th to April 1st is more than two hundred, including six officers.

"A German aeroplane was brought down yesterday, after dropping bombs on Rheims. When fired on, it immediately came to earth. Two aviators, who were unhurt, were taken prisoners."

SAY FRENCH ATTACKS FAILED.

BERLIN, April 3. — (German headquarters statement)—"A Belgian attempt yesterday to win back Klosterhoek farm failed. A French charge in the forest of La Petre was not successful.

"A French attack on the heights south of Nieder Aspach, west of Muelhausen, was repulsed.

"Nothing of importance has occurred on the eastern front."

GENERAL JOFERE DECORATES BELGIANS.

PARIS, April 3. — The newspaper Eclair has a despatch from Dunkirk stating that Gen. Joffre, in the course of a visit to Belgian headquarters, where he decorated several Belgian officers with the Legion of Honor, told King Albert and Premier de Broqueville that the war would soon come to an end to the advantage of the Allies.

TROUBLE AT BELLEVILLE

Some Soldiers Said to Have Been Unruly

The members of the 39th Battalion who are home on leave over Easter report that the camp is by no means a peaceful one. According to their story the arrival of a quota of men from Lindsay ushered in a number of soldiers who appear to have little regard for law or order. Fights and rough tactics among the tough element have marred the good name of the camp. As for the men from Port Hope, the local volunteers state they are better than those from Lindsay. Peterborough men are the best in the camp.

One Peterborough man, Pte. Wm. A. Richard, who resided at the corner of Erskine and Woodbine avenues is ill in the hospital. The nature of his illness is not known as yet.

Reports from Belleville this morning stated that a private, not from Peterborough, had passed away during the night with meningitis.

Capt. Spencer, Lt. Cameron and Pte. Eastwood have all been appointed to "A" Company. The Peterborough quota goes to make up "D" Company.

Acting Sergeant Major Wilford is transferred from the headquarters staff to D Company. — Kingston Standard.

A rumor spread today in the city to the effect that a riot occurred in the barracks at Belleville last night when it became known that one of the men died from meningitis. According to the rumor over 200 men refused to re-enter the building. Later reports state that but five objected to sleeping in the building.

PART OF THE DIVINE PLAN

The Cross and Calvary Was Theme for Good Friday Service

Church union seemingly would work out extremely well judging by the liberal way Protestant church members of all denominations gathered yesterday afternoon in George Street Methodist Church to take part in the annual service of praise and worship. The church was nearly filled and a decidedly helpful service was held.

Choral work entered largely into the program, the singing of the combined George Street Church and St. Paul's Presbyterian choirs being very enjoyable. They contributed appropriate Easter anthems while the solos were also beautifully sung by Miss Dorothy Allan and Mrs. J. H. Renwick. Most of the city ministers were present.

The two principal speakers were Rev. L. Phelps and Rev. J. R. Webb.

The theme of the Cross and the Saviour's sacrifice on Calvary was eloquently treated by both ministers and the significant part it should play in the lives of people today explained.

Rev. Mr. Webb in dealing with the subject emphasized the reason why the Saviour submitted to the degradation of the cross, refusing to save himself when taunted and jeered by the multitudes who shouted "He saved others, yet he cannot save himself." It was part of the divine plan whereby God was to die to save the world.

Miss Allan's contribution of "There is a Green Hill Far Away," was beautifully interpreted.

The service occupied a little over one hour.

The house at Ottawa has decided not to make any change in the hours of polling at Dominion elections.

BLOWN UP BY GERMANS

Louis Houedry was Travelling on Train at the Time

GLAD HE'S BACK

Says Germans Have Lost Heart and War Will End in July

Rather badly shaken up and delighted to be back again in the land of rest, Mr. Louis Houedry arrived home at noon today from France where he has been acting in the capacity of interpreter for the British Army Service Corps. It is by a miracle that Mr. Houedry is alive today and in the possession of his life, for the reason that he was the lucky man out of twenty-four to escape being blown to pieces when a train in which he and twenty-three others were riding, was blown up by an explosion of shells. Mr. Houedry was blown about fifty feet and landed in a ditch where he lay in a pool of melted snow all night and when found in the morning was next thing to dead from exposure. However he was picked up and taken to a hospital where he remained for two weeks and then was taken to his home in France where he convalesced. Altogether he was on the sick list two months and he is more than glad to be home in Peterborough to recuperate. The train in which he with the other unlucky members was traveling was carrying four cars of shells for the use of the Allies when it was hit by a German shell. With characteristic French expressiveness Mr. Houedry indicated how they were all shot in various directions and how he went soaring outwards. All were killed but himself.

Mr. Houedry is minus two teeth which he considers a pretty small price to pay for his lucky and almost miraculous escape. While he is home now he is liable to be called upon again in three months to rejoin the army as interpreter and when the call comes it is a case of go without any alternates.

About three weeks after the war was declared Mr. Houedry went straight to France where he was first attached to the army service corps, his duty consisting of bringing up supplies and munitions to the allies. Then he was transferred to the interpreting corps and was with the British troops most of the time.

Speaking of the Canadians, he was most demonstrative in his praise of their gallantry. He was informed that at Neuve Chapelle they tore through two miles of trenches and it was difficult for their officers to restrain them, so eager were they for the fight. There was nothing to beat the Canadians, he said, and they were easily as good fighters as the British regiments.

Mr. Houedry was in many engagements. In fact, he said the fighting over in France is a series of continuous engagements. The biggest fight he was in was at a town called Boisseille.

Over in July.

Asked when and how he thought the war would end, Mr. Houedry said that by the end of July it would be over, for the simple reason that the Germans already had lost heart and the conviction was being pressed upon them that they were a beaten people. He said the military men were strong for the war, but the great masses were anxious for peace.

The trouble would be settled by the German empire being cut up and divided among the allied nations.

Talking of quick travelling, Mr. Houedry said he landed in New York last evening at five-thirty and reached here at noon today. He came home on the steamship Chicago which was escorted by two torpedo boats. They were warned to beware of the submarine U-28. Mr. Houedry could not refrain from again expressing his keen delight at being home. When the train pulled in this morning he could not help shoutng out, "Home again to good old Peterborough."

MAKING READY FOR PAVING OPERATIONS

The Foley and Gleeson Co. will in all probability commence work next week in Peterborough. Several employes have been in the city this past few days getting the plant in readiness and as soon as the task is concluded, work will be begun on the streets. The first to be started will be the tearing up of the pavement laid prviously and which has not proven to be satisfactory. The asphaltic surface will be torn up of as much as the city engineer claims is not according to the company's guarantee. When the repairing is completed work will be begun on the section of Charlotte Street which was not finishe last year.

TO OPERATE PLANTS IN SCOTLAND DAY AND NIGHT

To Accelerate Manufacture of Motor Lorries for Transport Service

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

GLASGOW, April 3. — All motor manufacturing plants in Scotland have been placed under government control in pursuance of the government's plans to accelerate the supplying of war material. These will in future be run night and day in the production of motor lorries for the transport department.

SMALL STEAMER IS TORPEDOED.

LONDON, April 3. — The British steamer Lockwood was torpedoed by a German submarine Friday night off Start Point in Devonshire. The crew was saved.

The Lockwood was a small and rather old boat.

LONDON, April 3. — It was learned today that the British steamer Eston was torpedoed off Devonshire coast, and not near Cape Finisterre, as previously reported.

LAW IS MADE MORE DEFINITE

Regarding Children Attending Moving Picture Houses

The small boy who is usually associated with a front seat in the moving-picture show watching the daredevil conduct of his favorite cowboy, must keep away from his beloved haunts in future unless he attends such places accompanied by his parents or some adult member of his family. The amended statute governing this reads now that no child under the age of fifteen, unless accompanied by its parents, guardian or adult member of the household, shall be permitted to attend any theatre or any exhibition by cinematograph or moving picture machine at which place an admission fee is charged.

The old act, before its amendment, which took place in 1914, read that no child could enter these places unless accompanied by adults. The amendment now makes it more definite.

It is a common occurrence, however around the picture amusement houses, for some youngsters to congregate, and sometimes they prevail upon adults to take them in. This must be stopped, for if apprehended they will be prosecuted. It is also unfair to the moving picture show proprietors, in the opinion of the authorities, and leaves them open to being imposed upon. In future, however, any complaints against proprietors will be taken to court, as the police have information that boys under fifteen have been going to certain picture show unaccompanied.

SEVEN MEMBERS OF MOUNTED RIFLES ON VISIT HOME

Seven members of B. Squadron, 8th Mounted Rifles, are home from Ottawa despite the order cancelling all leave for Easter.

There is a slight outbreak of measles at the camp and Pte. Thompson who enlisted here, is on the sick list.

DOMESTIC WAS THE VICTIM OF ASSAULT

A man about thirty-five or thereabouts named William Johnston, a bushman, and another party for whom the police have their eyes peeled, are scheduled to take leading parts in a police court hearing on April 5th in connection with an assault upon a domestic who was employed at the Palace Hotel. It is alleged that they made insulting proposals and followed it up by laying hands upon her. Johnston occupied the dock today but the remand was ordered to permit further information being obtained and the other party apprehended.

City Engineer's Office.

T. A. S. Hay, of the city engineering staff, is sufficiently convalescent to spend a couple of hours each day at the office. City Engineer Parsons' office is rather short handed at present, as Lieut. Hilliard is with the 26th Battery in Kingston and T. Q. Quartermaine is ill. The services of Mr. E. Cumberland have been secured.

FATHER AND SON PARTED BY BULLET.

With the 48th Highlanders from Toronto, Private George Stanley, a widower, and his son, Private Irving Stanley, fought side by side in the trenches until a bullet from the enemy ended the career of the father. These pictures of the dead soldier (on the left), and his boy, were taken at Salisbury Plain.

GIFT TO PASTOR

Purse of Gold for Rev. T. J. Robinson

GOES TO LAKEFIELD

Milverton, April 3. — A pleasant event took place when the Young People's Society and choir of Burns church met together and presented Rev. T. J. and Mrs. Robinson with a purse of gold in appreciation of their work among the young people of the congregation. Supper was served and a short program rendered. Expressions of regret were heard on all sides at the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson from Milverton.

Rev. Mr. Robinson has accepted a call to the Presbyterian Church at Lakefield. The call has been sustained by both Presbyteries.

57th BAND GETS THE FULL GRANT

Recommendation is Made by Finance Committee

At the meeting of the finance committee on Thursday afternoon it was decided to rescind the motion of a former meeting by which the 57th Band and the Salvation Army Band should receive $362.50 each as a municipal grant, and a motion recommending for the 57th Band a grant of $500 and for the Salvation Army $225 carried.

It was decided that an additional $25 would be granted to the Industrial Association to enable that body to operate the free employment bureau until April 15th. After that date the bureau will be closed.

Want Monthly Statement.

City Solicitor Gordon presented a statement of expenses amounting to $27.88. Some of the accounts dated back to 1914, and when the motion authorizing the payment of the amount was carried a clause was inserted asking the city solicitor to present his statement monthly.

MEAT VENDOR IS FINED $10

Covering for Meat Did Not Suit the Inspector

Scant mercy will be shown to meat vendors by Magistrate Dumble if they come before him for violation of the act governing the protection and care of meat. In assessing a Smith township dealer named E. G. Mullen $10 this morning for a violation of the act, he declared that he often shuddered as he saw the dirty-looking horse blankets in which meat was often brought on the market or covered with. He hated to think people were forced to eat it. The formal charge registered against Mr. Mullen, who is a meat dealer, was that he conveyed meat from place to place for sale without it being protected by a clean covering. To the charge he pleaded not guilty. Sanitary Inspector Spence laid the information, having discovered Mullen with a load of carcasses on Wednesday on George street that were not properly protected. They were resting upon a dirty canvas tarpaulin which the inspector said had congealed patches of blood upon it that appeared to have been there for a considerable time. Inspector Spence described it as a filthy looking tarpaulin.

Police Constable [illegible] the tarpaulin and considered that it was in a very unclean condition.

City Solicitor Gordon appeared on behalf of the city and argued that Magistrate Dumble should bring in a finding upon the case which would have the effect of making an example of such cases and affording the city some concrete basis to work on in combating future infractions. He said the city was vitally interested in such matters, and wanted a finding that would make it a dangerous proceeding in future to bring in unprotected meat.

The Magistrate laid special stress upon the need these days for fighting the microbes which he considered infinitely numerous.

Mr. Mullen tried to tell His Worship that it was impossible for him to wash his tarpaulin like one would a cloth. It had to be scrubbed just like a board with soap and water. He was unable to recall, however, just when he had last cleansed it.

He was not pleased with the idea of forfeiting $10, and to a reporter who spoke to him after court he said he would probably appeal against the decision.

TOO LIGHT IN SUBSTANCE.

THE OTTAWA FREE PRESS gives the following as the opinion of Mr. Geo. A. Slater, a Canadian shoe manufacturer:

> "They should temper their statements with discretion. They should look after the trade. The trade has spent thousands in advertising the Made-in-Canada project. Instead of blazing abroad that the boots were like blotting paper they might say they were too light in substance."

This is a splendid testimony to the power of the Canadian press. At least one prominent shoe manufacturer feels that the press has a very important influence on the public, so much so that the press could have salved over one of the most dastardly scandals that has ever taken place in Canada, and prevented an exposure.

If the newspapers had done so, if they had said the boots "were too light in substance," the manufacturers could have gone on sending paper-soled boots to the soldiers and robbing the Government, for there is no evidence that the calloused conscience of the manufacturers in question would have smote them and led them to produce honest boots.

It should be noted that this investigation refers only to soldiers' boots. It is more than likely that these manufacturers have been producing paper-soled boots and shoes and selling them to the public. What has Mr. Geo. A. Slater or the Ames-Holden-McCready Company to say to this? A man has to pay six dollars now for a good pair of shoes, and he does not know whether he is buying leather shoes or shoes in which scraps, paper and bits of wood are the principal constituents. To come down to shoes of the four-dollar and three-dollar variety might bring out some interesting and disconcerting details. It is our opinion that some legislation is necessary to protect the public from exploitation by foisting fraudulent footwear on them. If it was necessary to do this in regard to patent medicines, it appears also necessary in the matter of boots and shoes.

SOME BIG WAR NEWS COMING.

IT APPEARS that the position of the Russians in the Eastern theatre is strengthening and that of the Germans steadily weakening. The fall of Permysl (as it is spelled now) is beginning to have its effect. It is probable that some interesting developments will arise very shortly because the position of deadlock that exists in the trenches cannot be continued indefinitely. One side or the other is going to find a way to get behind them or render them of little service, whether it be Russians, Italians or British. Some think the German trenches will be made untenable by shell fire, and a general advance made in that way, but this is a slow, costly way, unless a drive of considerable length can be effected. The feeling is beginning to spread that some place or other the war is going "to break" soon, but whether it will end soon is another matter, and not likely to happen.

FIELD KITCHENS.

IT IS generally admitted that field kitchens should be provided for our soldiers on active service. It is claimed they increase their efficiency twenty-five per cent., but, as these are not in the army list of the British War Office, and as Canada follows the British regulations, they cannot be provided by the Government. They can be provided privately, however, and specifications are laid down for their manufacture. Captain Gray was fairly successful in getting financial support in Peterborough for a field kitchen for the men from this city. He received, however, only about half the amount he requires for an adequate service, and if any desire to assist further in this matter by giving a donation, they should send it to Col. W. St. P. Hughes, or to Captain Gray, 21st Battalion, Kingston. These kitchens figure out to a cost of about ten dollars per man. They permit hot meals being served right up to the firing line, and with much more variety than with the usual camp-kettle. The object is worthy and should be supported by all who are able to do so. The list of contributions was published a few nights ago in the Review, and it is hoped other names will be added to the list.

WHAT IS THE MATTER!

A WELL-KNOWN Canadian Liberal statesman is reported to have remarked that ignorance of the difference between right and wrong was getting to be a Canadian characteristic. When asked how he accounted for it he said that "professions" seem to be all that was necessary in our religion, and the consequence was that the churches were in the last stage of decay preceding a complete breakdown. We think this is too strong, although the lack of philosophical teaching has left the rising generation without the knowledge of how to come to a "right," a reasonably right, conclusion. The time is one of grave concern to all religious teachers.

WATCH YOUR POLICY.

AN INSURANCE POLICY is something that should be very carefully studied by all who have one. Every detail should be clear in their minds, as an oversight of some detail may mean financial loss and worry. Sometimes agents are not careful to explain their policies, and holders are led to believe that their policy is different from what it is. That causes trouble which could be avoided by a closer attention to details when the policy or contract is made.

In our news columns today there is a report of the case Devitt vs. Mutual Life of Canada, which is of interest to all holders of life insurance policies, and particularly to people who may be depending upon what is known as the nonforfeiture clause to keep the policy alive. Holders of life insurance should read carefully the report of this case, as given in a Toronto despatch. A life insurance policy is a contract to which there are two parties, and the validity of any contract depends upon both parties discharging their obligations in respect to it. In the case of a life policy, the ability of the company to pay the claim when it falls due depends on the receipt of adequate premiums. The company stands ready to pay the claim, but only if the assured has faithfully remitted his premiums. Sometimes policy-holders are careless, and death overtakes them with the premiums either not paid up to date or charged against the policy for such an amount that the value of the contract will not bear the debt. When death takes place under such conditions there are often very pitiable circumstances touching the beneficiary. A company, however, cannot out of sympathy deviate from sound principles. The payment of a questionable claim in a single instance might not bear very heavily on the resources of a life company, but it is only by applying correct principles that the institution can be kept solvent. Readers who carry life insurance should be warned by this important decision, and should see to it that premiums have been remitted up to date, or are fully provided for by the value of the policy itself. If any doubt exists in the mind of the assured, the head office of the company should be communicated with and a satisfactory arrangement made wherever the necessity may arise. This care should be exercised, no matter with what company you happen to be insured.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE JUAN FERNANDEZ group of islands, near one of which the "Dresden" was sunk, consists of two rocky islands in the Pacific, 420 and 450 miles, respectively, west of Valparaiso, Chile, to which they belong. The island nearest to the mainland is usually called Juan Fernandez. It was here that Alexander Selkirk, a buccaneer, lived alone from 1704 to 1709, and his story is believed to have suggested the romance of Robinson Crusoe to Defoe.

THE EXHIBITIONS of pitiful cupidity before the Public Accounts Committee at Ottawa shows how impossible it is for a government to protect itself against general conditions. The Borden Government has escaped more by good luck than anything else. Petty grafters seemed to spring up from everywhere. There was none of it, however, from Peterborough.

IT IS REPORTED that orders have been placed in Canada and the United States for $80,000,000 worth of shells. Just think of it—eighty million dollars to be all blown to smithereens.

A CAREFUL ESTIMATE of the "Dresden's" damage to shipping places the figure at something over £250,000. This may not be a very formidable sum, but still it is a quite large enough bag for a small war vessel.

Canadians in the Trenches.

(Chatham Daily News.)

The phrase "entering the trenches" is worth pondering. It denotes something more than warfare, something different from the sort of fighting that is begun by the blowing of bugles, and that is ended in a dash across the open against the enemy. It is warfare of the deadliest kind. It conveys the impression of a man going to work as well as going to war. It combines all the dangers of warfare with all the minor discomforts and physical exhaustion of the most grinding sort of labour. Canadians standing in the trenches will be soaked with rain, chilled by the wind, yet almost unmindful of these discomforts by reason of the ever-present prospect of a sudden death. As they grow more accustomed to the bursting of the German shells, the hail of German bullets and the occasional hand-to-hand fighting that relieve the tedium of life in the trenches, they are likely to think less of their dangers and more of their discomforts. To face danger and to laugh at misery seems to come natural to British soldiers. The Canadians will not be second to them in fortitude and cheerfulness.

And Then He Knew.

(Beck's Weekly, Montreal.)

"I was speaking with your father last night," he said at last, somewhat inanely.

"Oh, were you?" answered the sweet young thing, lowering her eyes. "Er—what were you—er—talking about?"

"About the war in Europe. Your father said he hoped the fighting would soon be over."

The sweet young thing smiled.

"Yes," she remarked, "I know he's very much opposed to long engagements."

Heroism.

(Acadian Recorder.)

Heroism, when it is analyzed, is that quality in men or women which enables them to stand unmoved or to go forward without flinching to the performance of what they believe to be their duty, entirely regardless of personal consequences. And fortunately for the race, this quality is found in strength in both the sexes, although in ordinary life there is oftener call for it on the part of women than of men.

Sticking to His Post.

(Harper's Magazine.)

With but three minutes to catch his train, the travelling salesman inquired of the street car conductor: "Can't you go faster than this?"

"Yes," the bell-ringer replied; "but I have to stay with my car."

Branded!

When the donkey saw the zebra
He began to switch his tail;
"Well, I never," was his comment;
"There's a mule that's been in jail."

THAT "PURITY CONGRESS."

Editor, Review:

Dear Sir,—The ratepayers have from time to time patiently paid the cost of foolish, needless or extravagant expenditure sanctioned by the Mayor and Council. Uniformly wise expenditure is perhaps too much to expect, and so ratepayers may now and then have to pay for a little nonsense. But the suggestion to send delegates to the "purity congress" is worse than nonsense. It is too ridiculous, hypocritical and brazen to be tolerated.

"The suppression of public vice and the promotion of personal and social purity" in Peterborough cannot be accomplished nor in the smallest degree assisted by anybody's trip to California.

Does mayor, alderman, delegate or anyone need to go to San Francisco to find out what, for example, the influence of the Roller Rink was and is upon "personal and social purity" in Peterborough? Is a "purity congress in California the place to find out in what or whose joints in Peterborough the likes of Helen Brown see their finish? Are the names of the owner, procurers and "exclusive patronage" list of these resorts in Peterborough to be ascertained in San Francisco? Does any alderman or any officer need to go outside the city limits to find out whose money is invested in a disgraceful resort and whose interest protects it from abolition as a nuisance? Where is the place to find out whose money paid for the operation that ended in a double tragedy in Peterborough some weeks ago? Why have three prominent preachers remained silent for years concerning a notorious resort, well known to them all, and this notwithstanding the "tincture of iron" one of them boasts of? Can a "purity congress" in California do anything for the like of this in Peterborough? Surely the very suggestion to send delegates to a "purity congress" at municipal expense is, in the light of facts, not merely ridiculous. It is shocking.

Yours truly,
A RATEPAYER.

IT'S TOO BAD.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—In a letter written by Private Wilkins of Norwood to his mother he says that they have all the knitted things they require except perhaps socks, but what they do want is hospital supplies, such as bandages, cotton batting, etc. The only thing they could find to cover his wound was an old sock. Surely we should not allow our brave boys to suffer unnecessarily. Come, ladies, I know you only want to know what is wanted. Send your bandages and other things necessary for wounds to the Red Cross Society and they will forward them, I am sure.

Yours truly,
A FATHER.

POLICE COURT CASE.

Editor, Review:

I, the undersigned, am not the William Jackson referred to in the police court mentioned in Thursday evening's Review.

Baron Rothschild Buried.

LONDON, April 3.—In accordance with his request, Baron Rothschild was buried quietly shortly after noon yesterday at the Willesden Jewish cemetery.

Brief services were held at the late residence of the baron in Piccadilly. The services were private, being attended only by the family and close friends. Outside the house there gathered a crowd of perhaps 4,000, among whom were many persons from the Jewish community in the east end.

King George was represented by Lord Annaly and Queen Mother Alexandra by Earl Howe. Others who attended the service were David Lloyd George, A. J. Balfour, Lord Reading, Lord Sandhurst, Lord Acheson, Lord Haldane, representatives of the various Jewish societies and most of the other leaders of the Jewish community.

COURT DECISION OF INTEREST TO POLICY HOLDERS

Responsibility on Insurers Who do not Keep Premiums Paid up Regularly

COMPANY WINS CASE

Toronto, April 3.—An important decision of interest to all holders of life insurance policies has been made by the Court of Appeal for the Province of Ontario. The decision emphasizes the fact that a policy-holder should watch carefully to see that his policy is in force beyond all possibility of dispute. The case was that of Devitt vs. The Mutual Life of Canada. There had been a partial payment in cash of the current year's premium and a note had been given for the balance. The note was not redeemed at maturity, and a little while afterwards the assured died. The company disclaimed liability, and the question at issue arose out of the interpretation of what is known as the nonforfeiture provision of the policy.

The policy contained a table showing the amount that would be paid in cash at the end of each policy year if the policy were surrendered for cancellation, these amounts being termed the cash surrender value. It also contained a nonforfeiture provision, common to most present-day life insurance policies, whereby, in the event of default in the payment of a premium, the contract should automatically continue in force if the cash surrender value to the credit of the policy were sufficient to cover the annual premium or even a half-yearly or quarterly premium. Owing to a loan existing against the policy, there was not a sufficient amount of cash surrender value, as determined by the table of the surrender values shown in the policy, to continue it in force through the operation of the nonforfeiture provision, and, in consequence, when the premium note remained unpaid at maturity, the policy terminated.

It was contended by plaintiff's counsel, and concurred in by the trial judge, that the cash surrender value applicable in the case of the nonforfeiture provision was something different from the amounts set out in the table of cash surrender values in the policy; that for the former purpose the cash surrender values must not be considered as increasing only at the end of each policy year, but as increasing day by day throughout the year, and that, as the policy had continued in force for part of the current year, there should be a corresponding increase in the cash surrender value that was available at the beginning of such year; that if such increase were taken into account there was sufficient value to continue the policy in force under the operation of the nonforfeiture provision beyond the point of death. The contention, however, was not sustained by the four justices who constituted the court of appeal, who held that the surrender values at the beginning of each year, as shown in the table in the policy, were the ones that should apply in connection with the nonforfeiture provision, and judgment was accordingly rendered in favor of the company.

The decision places an important responsibility on insurers who do not keep their premiums paid up regularly and who are depending on the nonforfeiture clause to keep their policies alive.

Scheme of Kaiser Frustrated.

OTTAWA, April 3. — The postal authorities here have held up a number of iron finger rings addressed to German sympathizers in Canada, and at the same time have unearthed a peculiar scheme to assist the "fatherland." The plan is being carried out by certain German newspapers in the United States. People are asked to send in their gold rings, which are said to be forwarded to Germany, ostensibly to assist the Red Cross fund, but it is believed to help swell the Kaiser's gold reserves. In return for the gold ring the donor is sent an iron band, to be worn as a mark of devotion to his country. The rings are inscribed in German: "To the Old Fatherland, my faith to prove, I give in time of stress gold for this iron."

The scheme is understood to have been worked extensively in the United States.

When you hear a woman declare that it is always her luck to get into the meanest neighborhood possible, you may be sure that the neighbors are glad when moving day comes.

New Money For Old Odds and Ends

THE SMART PEOPLE AREN'T ALL DEAD YET. There was a wise little woman in the west end who wanted some extra Christmas money—and it wasn't forthcoming. She didn't know what to do. She cudgelled her brains. She put her wits to work. Then she figured it out. She ransacked the house from garret to cellar. She "dug up" an old iron bed, jap-a-lack'd it back to life again; she resurrected some chairs; and a bureau; four pictures; a wash stand; a carpet, etc. She dusted out an old hall rug, patched the edges into shape—and made a list.

She put an ad. in the want ads. of THE DAILY REVIEW. She told what she'd done; she said the things weren't new—but they were good enough to furnish an entire room comfortably—and at a price that was less than reasonable. She ran the ad. twice; it cost her 30c.; she sold the things for $19 in cold cash. She not only saved the waste of letting them go to ruin, "she got something for them" by going straight to the people with her story. A WANT AD. DID IT. Why can't you do the same thing? WHY? Have you no little fairies in your house that little want ads. will turn into gold.

A Certain Rich Man's Son

How He Worked Out His Own Reform

By GUY C. BAKER.

"I mean just what I said—I'm not ready to go to work."

There were unlimited complacency and assurance in Hilling's voice as he said it.

"Then what—what do you want to do?"

"I want to run around a bit, you know, and see what's going on in the world."

"See the world! Why, good heavens, from reports I've had of your college career there's nothing left for you to see or do!"

"Plenty of time for drudgery and all that sort of thing later, dad. I want to knock about a bit like the other fellows I know."

"By thunder, you shall do as you wish! Pack your gewgaws and go—I don't give a tarnal rap where—but go! Go and see the world—all of it, every stratum of it. I'll pay the freight—every penny. But this is the condition—you've got to stay away five years! You are not to write home, nor shall any one from home write to you. You will draw upon my New York banker for your needs. I—but that's all—there is no need for further discussion."

Young Hilling stared with mild surprise at the broad shoulders of his father for a moment; then, the exasperating look of superciliousness returning, he arose languidly to his feet.

"Aw—er—I say, dad, isn't that—er—just a trifle strong?"

The older man did not look around.

"No; not a bit of it! Scoot!"

For a moment the mask of insolence fell away from the young man's face and the natural strength of his features stood out strikingly.

"All right, sir; you're on! The five years begin today. Goodby, dad."

As he swung jauntily down the street of the prosperous southern town—a town that had seemed a good place in which to live before his eight years of college life—he became suddenly conscious of a feeling of uneasiness as he thought of the gentle mother who but a few hours before had thrown her arms about him in a joyous welcome home. Many months passed before a realization filtered through his brain of how inconsiderate was her disillusionment.

When a couple of hours later Hilling boarded the train for the north he carried with him the disturbing picture of his mother's disappointment and solicitude. To him she had ever been the diplomatic buffer between the acerbity of his father and his own self willed follies. But he realized this last—this five years' silent absence—was too much for even her philosophy of indulgence.

But, whatever of remorse his precipitate departure caused him, it was of short duration.

He went abroad and for a time reveled in the glitter of the cafes of Paris. He idled precious hours in Italy. He barely escaped a duel in Berlin.

Then, after a month of stupid boredom in London, he hastened back to New York.

Thus two years passed.

Not once had he heard from either his father or mother. Not once had he written home. Once or twice his submerged manliness threatened to break through the veneer of his pleasure seeking existence—some eddy of memory which brought a fleeting recollection of that last glimpse of his mother—but always would he brush it stubbornly aside and plunge with increased abandon into the whirlpool of folly.

Then one evening, after an exceptionally strenuous day, he arrived at the theater during the third act just as a prima donna of worldwide fame was rendering her finest number.

Hilling stood at the head of the aisle for a moment, carelessly sweeping the audience filled theater with his glance; then, with a scornful shrug, he turned and strolled down into the smoking room.

The singer finished, and a tremendous outburst of applause filled the theater and echoed out into the corridors. Again and again the singer responded to the encores.

Curiously, Hilling wandered back into the foyer and once more took up his position at the back of the theater and watched the audience. Bowing and smiling, the prima donna was approaching the footlights for her fifth encore.

Hilling watched with patient antipathy. He fidgeted nervously, his forehead drawn in a scowl and his lips curled with unbounded sarcasm.

Then in notes low and tremulous the singer began the line, "Far from the old folks at home." At the same moment, with the startling suddenness of a crash of thunder, the audience was electrified to hear a man's voice—discordant, raucous, scoffing—join in the song with the prima donna.

Then, with a scornful laugh, Hilling permitted himself to be led away by a couple of pale faced, agitated ushers.

Out in the lobby he impatiently shook himself free of the ushers and imperturbably passed out and stepped into his motorcar. As the chauffeur threw on the power and the machine glided swiftly away Hilling flung back at the undecided group of theater attaches the words of the song with taunting mockery.

When, at 4 in the morning, his valet admitted him to his apartments Hilling had worked himself into a frenzy. He seemed obsessed with the notion that the valet in some ingenious way was responsible for the hideous words of that song and treated him accordingly.

He tossed sleeplessly until daylight, the words of the song pounding his eardrums unceasingly. Gradually the whole line blended into one word—home.

"Confound that infernal, asinine word!"

Irascibly he got up and dressed, sent for his automobile, dismissed the chauffeur and all that day motored alone over quiet country roads that led through peaceful villages and over picturesque hills.

One moment he would viciously shift the throttle wide open, sending the car hurtling along at a reckless pace; then, coming a quick change of mood, he would slow down sharply, lean back against the cushions and gaze thoughtfully over the peaceful fields as his machine chugged slowly along.

All the while "Old Folks at Home" harassed him like an inexorable thing of chastisement.

The sarcasm and mockery were still in his face, but there was also something else creeping in there—lines which bespoke torment and raging conflict.

That night as the prima donna appeared again in the famous third act scene Hilling, pale and tense, sat alone in the deep shadows of a box. With eyes that burned with strange emotion and perfect sobriety he leaned eagerly forward as if his soul were drinking in the melody through eyes and ears.

Again was the singer recalled repeatedly. As she appeared for the fifth encore and the orchestra had started in on a lively prelude to some Scotch air Hilling, his voice strangely hoarse and shaken, called out, "Suwanee River!"

Instantly the call was taken up enthusiastically all over the house. A wave of applause shook the theater. With a smile the prima donna nodded to the orchestra leader, and a moment later the rich, clear voice of the singer was glorifying the old folks at home.

Hilling was as tense and motionless as a man of stone. Perspiration dampened his forehead; his dry lips stood apart; wide eyed, he clinched his nails into his hands. His very soul seemed a thing detached that floated upward with the melody of the song.

With indescribable pathos and expression, her voice low and trembling, the singer paused; then "Far from the old folks at home" floated out and upward like a benediction. It was grand, dramatic, glorious!

Something like a sob surged up into Hilling's throat. His eyes blurred.

The following morning early he discharged his valet and chauffeur, sold his machine, resigned from his club, gave up his apartments and packed his trunk. Then, his passing as unobtrusive as his advent had been vainglorious, he dropped completely out of sight.

Two years later and four years after the stormy scene with his father Richard Hilling again crossed the threshold of that grim gentleman's office.

Inside the door he waited respectfully while the stern faced, gray haired head of the great steel works finished the signing of certain papers before him on his flat mahogany desk.

Pausing, pen suspended, the elder Hilling glanced up briskly.

"Well?"

"I wish to speak to you on behalf of the men, sir."

The other gave a start and leaned forward. "You—why—Richard—why"—

He could say no more. For a time he stared into the marvelously changed face in silence. Slowly his appraising glance traveled downward, taking in every detail of the son's clothing and lingering wonderingly on the big, grimy hands. Again he spoke—hoarsely.

"What does the condition of my employees matter to you?"

"A great deal. I am one of them, and I find they are underpaid."

"One of them?" Skepticism and astonishment gave varying inflections to his tone of voice. "One of them? What do you mean by that?"

"Just that. For two full years I have worked out there in the shops. I began at the very bottom. I know whereof I speak."

Again the father surveyed the son in silence, searching his face long and critically. Slowly a look of conviction crept into his face, softening it and paving the way for one of great hope and gratification. Then, smiling, he puffed out his lips in mild reproof.

"Then—er—you did not observe my orders to remain away five years."

"I—I did not come to discuss—that."

The father persisted eagerly.

"But I want to know; I want to know."

"I obeyed you for two years, sir, and that was two years too long. You see, mother and—and home called me—strongly. Mother and home and—work."

"And does mother"—

"Yes, she knows—has known all the time." Then firmly, "But I wish to take up this matter of the workmen."

"Yes—yes, to be sure. But first tell me—did you—have you actually been working out there in the shops as a common laborer for two years?"

Silently the son spread out his blackened, hardened hands in mute answer.

For a time father and son looked each into the other's face. Then, his face inscrutable, the elder Hilling said:

"And—and—you think that reforms are needed—out there?"

The answer came forcibly.

"Yes, sir, I do."

"Then make them—it's your job—now."

A Titled English Girl Who Likes Lawn Tennis.

Quite a noted tennis player is this little girl here pictured. She is an English girl, and her name is Lady Rosamond Butler, quite a high sounding title for one so young. In England, however, it is not at all unusual for some small person to bear a big name. Lady Rosamond is very fond of racket and ball and is said to be very skillful. Tennis is an excellent outdoor sport and is deservedly popular in this country. In winter, of course, there is not much opportunity to play the game, as it is essentially a game to be played in the open air. Some folks have indoor courts and keep up practice all the year.

A Potato Race.

Put ten medium sized potatoes in a pile for each contestant and about twenty feet away from each pile a pan. Provide each contestant with a teaspoon and at a given signal let all start to transfer the potatoes to the pans. The potatoes are not to be touched with either hand. The contestant who first gets the ten potatoes into his pan is winner. The larger the potatoes selected the greater is the skill required. Entries may be limited to men, women, girls under twelve, and so on.—Country Gentleman.

Milady's Mirror

The Beautiful Profile.

It is in profile that the features show perfection or defect. A face that to front view appears symmetrical may in profile present angles and hollows and features that are too sharply delineated for beauty. So study your side view in the mirror.

Note whether the side line of the head is too long. If it is draw the hair a little farther down over the temples and if the line of the face is too long bring the hair forward a bit.

Carrying the chin uptilted ever so slightly diminishes the apparent length of the facial outline and seems to elongate the curve of the throat. If the head is tipped a trifle to the side and back, presenting a broad side face, a good shoulder line is effected, but if either throat or face is thin beware. Hollows will deepen, and the line of the jaw will become a sharp edge.

If the neck and face are too fat the fat is apt to accumulate at this particular point. Sometimes the neck is flat in front and bulging at the sides. Here the side view is distinctly not beautiful. To correct either of these defects practice the head bending exercise. Bend the head from the base of the neck first to one side as far as possible and then to the other, repeating the movements several times.

Removing Dust.

Dust is insidious. A wash cloth and warm water at best remove but little of it from the face. If you really wish to see how much dust the face can take up in a walk take a damp wash cloth when you arrive home and dip it in your cold cream jar. Then scrub face and neck. The wash cloth will be so black that one is horror struck to think that so much dust has been carried on the face even for a short while.

For some reason soap and water do not seem to remove the dust as well as cold cream and warm water. The face should then be sponged off with cold water to tighten the pores, which have been opened by the warm water and dusted with powder that has been chosen to match the color of the skin as nearly as possible. This powder should be wiped off till not a bit of it shows, for nothing is more disagreeable than smears of it on the face.

Salt Springs.

In ancient times among inland peoples the possession of a salt spring was regarded as a special gift of the gods. The Chaonians in Epirus had one which flowed into a stream where there were no fish, and the legend said Heracles had allowed their forefathers to have salt instead of fish.

WOMEN CAN HARDLY BELIEVE

How Mrs. Hurley Was Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Eldon, Mo.—"I was troubled with displacement, inflammation and female weakness. For two years I could not stand on my feet long at a time and I could not walk two blocks without enduring cutting and drawing pains down my right side which increased every month. I have been at that time purple in the face and would walk the floor. I could not lie down or sit still sometimes for a day and a night at a time. I was nervous, and had very little appetite, no ambition, melancholy, and often felt as though I had not a friend in the world. After I had tried most every female remedy without success, my mother-in-law advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and gained in strength every day. I have now no trouble in any way and highly praise your medicine. It advertises itself."—Mrs. S. T. HURLEY, Eldon, Missouri.

Remember, the remedy which did this was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For sale everywhere.

It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration, after all other means have failed. Why don't you try it? Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibrewear Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:

"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

PUT GERMANS OUT OF RUNNING FOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Bugler Banks of Omemee Says Canadian Artillery is Doing Grand Work

"Just a line to let you know I am still on the warpath," writes Bugler Banks of Omemee, in a letter to Lt.-Col. Fee of Lindsay. He left with the first contingent.

"Our battalion came out of the trenches last night for a day's rest. We have been in several times now. Some of the trenches we were in were very wet, but we are getting fine weather now and they are drying up. We get it a little hot sometimes, and we have got to care for nothing now. We have a great time in the billets when we come out for rest. We enjoy ourselves in the trenches, having lots of fun marking misses and outers with the shovels to the German snipers, when they get banging at our trenches. Our battalion has had a few casualties. The Canadian artillery are doing grand work here, and they can get the range every time they want it. The three Lindsay signallers are still with the 2nd battalion. Noel Clark and myself are still in the same company, A. I never see any of the 45th lads and do not know where they are. I don't know where Underwood is; he was in the 2nd battalion when we were in England, but I never see him at all now. You remember Doc Coleburn the horse doctor. Well, he is over here, and a captain at that. We have been trying to find Bill Neil, but we have not as yet, but know he is here.

I thank the ladies at Lindsay and Omemee for the presents I and other boys have received from them. We have received a number of presents from both towns, but never could find out who sent them, but they were all welcome, and they arrived all O.K. We all were glad to leave Salisbury Plain, as we got tired of the mud and water. If we had have stayed there much longer Canada would have had a first-class navy, for we were more like marines than soldiers, but we enjoyed ourselves nevertheless, and were used fine.

We are all well fed, and after we have been in the trenches our — days we enjoy ourselves by getting a hot both and permission to visit the towns that have been blown to pieces by the Germans. The Germans are devils for putting the churches out of business. But it's only the matter of a short time and we are going to put them out of the running for the championship of the world.

Well, Colonel, I think I will have to close now. We go back in the trenches on March —, so we are busy today making our shamrocks to wear in the firing line.

McLAUGHLIN

Power and Economy
Combined with Permanent Service

The "McLaughlin Six," which we made last year caused an entire revolution in automobile construction—providing a most luxurious and powerful Motor Car at a moderate price.

Experienced Motorists throughout Canada showed their appreciation by creating such a demand that we were unable to meet it.

The result is that we have been assured of its popularity, and are able to produce them at and give an even better car—that is the car has many minor improvements in body refinements and mechanical details.

LOWER PRICES

The McLaughlin-Buick famous "Valve-in-Head" Motor develops most power with least fuel. Every Motor is guaranteed to develop and DELIVER more power than any other type of Automobile Motor of equal size of any make.

The "McLAUGHLIN SIX" is of the graceful Streamline design—has Delco starting, ignition and lighting system—dimming searchlights—disappearing tonneau seats—best hand buffed leather upholstering—English weatherproof top material—new vacuum gasoline feed—cantilever rear springs.

Every "McLAUGHLIN SIX" is GUARANTEED to run at least 17 miles to each gallon of gasoline.

CANADIAN WAS SHOT BY SENTRY

Hamilton Officer Did not Hear the Challenge

TORONTO, April 3. — Although previously advised of the death of her son, Lieut. F. C. Andrews, of Hamilton, word has only now been received by letter by Mr. C. F. Andrews from G. M. Hutton-Smith, major 2nd Leinster Regiment, as to the particulars of his death.

Instead of being killed by a German bullet, he was unfortunately shot by a British sentry. According to the information gathered by his superior officer, he was killed during the relief of his company from the advanced trenches when he had taken a road which led him in front of the trenches of another battalion. Apparently he had not heard the sentry's challenge and he was shot dead.

The sentry was not blamed, as it was a very dark night, with the enemy's lines only a short distance away. The unfortunate occurrence was deeply regretted by the men and officers as Lieut. Andrews was looked upon as a very gallant and promising officer. He was buried at the battalion dressing station behind the trenches.

A letter received from the front contains full particulars regarding Sergt. Walter Clarke, Brampton, who was wounded on March 11th. Sergt. Clarke was carrying a despatch from one despatch post to another, a particularly dangerous piece of work. A Canadian sentry by some mistake bayoneted him in the chest. He will recover.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

There has been issued by the Department of Agriculture, through the branch of the Experimental Farms, a brief pamphlet containing seasonable hints for the information of stock raisers, grain growers, bee keepers, poultry raisers and gardeners. While it contains only 12 pages, it is replete with suggestions and recommendations made in the hope that some of them at least will be helpful to each and every reader who secures a copy. Practically all of the suggestions made and recommendations given tend toward the increasing of production or the lowering of the cost of the articles produced.

Copies of this pamphlet are being sent to those whose names are on the mailing list of the Department of Agriculture, but the pamphlet is also available to others who make application to the Publications Branch of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

FINES ARE INCREASED.

One important license law amendment designed to penalize more heavily hotel-keepers guilty of selling by the bottle was put through the house on an unanimous vote. The fines are practically double for offence in this regard. Whereas formerly a man was fined under the blanket charge of breaking the law and minimum fine was $20, this is now changed and he comes under the same category as he who sells after hours. The new minimum is $50, and the penalties for repeated offences are raised correspondingly.

REPLENISH YOUR BLOOD IN THE SPRING

Just now you are feeling "out of sorts"—not your usual self. Quite exhausted at times and cannot devote real energy to your work. Sleep does not rest you and you wake up feeling "all tired out." Perhaps rheumatism is flying through your muscles and joints, or maybe your skin is disfigured by rashes, boils or pimples. Headaches, twinges of neuralgia, fits of nervousness, irritability of temper and a disordered stomach often increase your discomfort in the spring.

The cause — winter has left its mark on you. These troubles are signs that your blood is poor and watery, that your nerves are exhausted. You must renew and enrich your blood at once and restore tone to your tired nerves, or there may be a complete breakdown. The most powerful remedy for these spring ailments in men, women and children is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People, because these Pills cleanse bad blood and strengthen weak nerves.

New, rich, red blood — your greatest need in spring — is plentifully created by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and with this new, pure blood in your veins you quickly regain health and increase your strength. Then your skin becomes clear, your eyes bright, your nerves strong, and you feel better, eat better, sleep better, and are able to do your work.

Begin your spring tonic treatment today for the blood and nerves with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills — the Pills that strengthen.

These Pills are sold by most dealers, but do not be persuaded to take "something just the same." If you can't get the genuine Pills from your dealer they will be sent you by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Emperor Joseph Well Says Tisza.

LONDON, April 3.—Count Stephen Tisza, the Hungarian Premier, in speaking yesterday of his recent trip to Vienna, during which he had an audience with Emperor Francis Joseph, said that the Emperor appeared to be surprisingly well and had gone through the winter without the slightest cough or cold. The ruler showed the liveliest interest in all the affairs of state, said the Premier.

The Hungarian Government is requisitioning all grain and flour in the country. Count Tisza yesterday announced that Hungary intended to withhold foodstuffs from Austria, and declared that any surplus would be sent to her.

ROBT. BARR, Sr., DEAD

WINDSOR, April 3.—Robert Barr, 88 years old, father of Robert Barr, the famous novelist, and a resident of Windsor for thirty-five years, died last night at his home, 60 Dougall avenue. Mr. Barrs health had been gradually failing since the death of his wife five years ago, and the death of Robert Barr, his son, which occurred three years ago, also told heavily upon him. Mr. Barr crossed the Atlantic sixty years ago. He first located at St. Thomas, where for many years he conducted the business of a general contractor. After taking up residence in Windsor he took an active part in Federal and municipal politics.

Cattle Plague Eradicated.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Practical eradication of the foot and mouth scourge disease of live stock in the United States is announced by the department of agriculture.

Officers in charge of the campaign waged against the plague said that with the single exception of a herd of animals near Syracuse, N.Y., which has been ordered slaughtered, the disease is now wiped out.

ALLIES HAVE TESTED GERMAN STRENGTH

Pressure of Last 31 Days Shows That the Enemy Have no Central Reserve Force But Must Reinforce Point by Robbing Other Places

LONDON, April 3.—The official British Observer with the French army compares in his latest report, which was issued last night, the results achieved by the French offensive in Champagne with the object with which the operations were undertaken. The object, he says, was to keep a constant pressure on the German first line defences in order to affect the use by the Germans of the railway from Bazancourt to Challerange, and to wear down their reserves of men and ammunition.

"As regards the first object," says the report, "the pressure continued for thirty-one days, with the result that the enemy has lost the fortified area which he had been holding and continually strengthening for five months. His use of the Challerange and Bazancourt line has not been materially affected, for, although at certain points it is within range of the French guns, he can, without difficulty, continue to run the trains required for the maintenance of the corps on that part of the front, and the junction at Challerange is secure. The using up of his reserves has been achieved in a very marked manner. At the beginning of the operation there were some eighteen regiments in that part of the line. At its conclusion thirty-three have been identified. Fifteen that had been called up to withstand the French offensive were drawn from many parts of the German lines, which indicates that the enemy has no central reserves that he can call up in case of an emergency.

"As regards ammunition, the German artillery has practiced economy, which is unusual with him. On many days they made no effort to keep down the fire of the French guns, although this meant heavier losses for their infantry in the trenches. This showed clearly that their supply of ammunition was not all that they could have wished, and an extra expenditure may well have made itself felt in the amount available on all parts of the German front.

"Two valuable lessons, therefore, have been learned from these operations. The first is that the German front can be pierced. There were moments both in Champagne and Neuve Chapelle when the way was open, when nothing more formidable than the weak resistance of sorely tried troops faced the attackers, and it does not follow because the hole was closed before advantage could be taken of it that this will be the case every time.

"The second lesson learned is that a serious attack on one point has an effect on the enemy's plans and fighting power at every other point. The British attack at Neuve Chapelle ruined the enemy's chances of success at St. Eloi. The French attacks at Perthes helped the British attack at Neuve Chapelle. Both of these assisted the Russians to withstand the German offensive in the eastren theatre.

Speaking of inspection by Gen. Joffre in March of several divisions which had been through the whole of the fighting, the Observer says that it was the biggest inspection he has held, and he was accompanied by many foreign observers. "We must not forget that these regiments have had to be brought up to strength, sometimes almost reorganized, after each of their attacks, of which they carried out several during the last thirty days. What we really are looking at is the French system of reinforcements and the system which keeps army corps not only up to their strength, but up to their full standard of fighting efficiency. It is one which plainly is answering well."

Total Receipts of Patriotic Fund

Replying to a question by Major Sam Sharpe in the Commons, Hon. Louis Coderre, secretary of state, stated that the total receipts of the Canadian Patriotic Fund are $3,496,918. The contributions from the various provinces have been: Quebec, including the C.P.R. gift, $1,389,554; Ontario, $1,163,103; Nova Scotia, $111,609; New Brunswick, $121,971; Prince Edward Island, $25,000; Manitoba, $88,720; Alberta, $149,837; Saskatchewan, $141,628; British Columbia, no report from Vancouver, $141,763, and the Yukon, $9219.

The minister stated that the United States contributions totalled $7632. The city of Montreal, including $50,000 from the C.P.R., has contributed $1,055,017; Toronto, $466,380; Ottawa, $236,690.

HOUSE ADJOURNS

Temperance Legislation More Important Than Realized Hanna Hints

TORONTO, April 3.—The Ontario Legislature stands adjourned and formal prorogation will take place on Thursday. In the small hours of yesterday morning the flow of oratory ceased, the last few bills were whipped through third reading and the strenuous seven-weeks' war session was brought to a close. With the members singing patriotic strains and showers of bluebooks flying through the air the mace was lifted from the table and the House rose from its annual session.

Hon. W. J. Hanna made a very significant reference to the first year's work of the commission. In speaking of the British Government in restricting sale during war time, he stated that the Government was not oblivious to conditions and demands. The powers of the board would be found much more important than at first was understood.

One amendment revised in committee now grants full power to the commission to suspend or cancel licenses at their own discretion, and without consent of the Government.

VACANT LOTS FOR GARDEN PURPOSES

The Dominion Agricultural Gazette Approves Scheme

The recent number of the Dominion Agricultural Gazette contains an article on the production of food on city lots, which is well in keeping with the "Patriotism and Production" campaign recently launched by the Federal department of agriculture. The article follows:

The slogan "Patriotism and Production" is proving effective in arousing interest and determination on the part of crop growers to put forth a special effort this year to increase the yields on their farms. Thousands in every province who have heard or read the message are working out plans for the securing of better than usual returns. Never in the history of the department of agriculture has there been so keen a demand for bulletins and reports that have been prepared to teach the best method of agriculture. Nor is the increased production movement confined to the rural districts. Towns and cities are taking it up by converting vacant property into gardens. This is a work that requires only a little encouragement and help from city and town councils, boards of trade, horticultural societies, improvement leagues and other organization to accomplish a great deal. To set this movement going is to commence a revolution toward civic beautification, as it at once means a thorough and permanent clean-up without cost to the community of vacant areas that are too often weed infested dumping grounds. It means more than this — the providing of quantities of health-giving foods in the form of fruits and vegetables fresh from the soil, besides flowers to enjoy and to be given away. The cultivation of fruits, vegetables and flowers has a great moral influence and tends towards better citizenship.

BOMB MULLHEIM

Berlin Reports Damage to Town in Baden

LONDON, April 3. — An Amsterdam despatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. says a message from Berlin states that a hostile air craft appeared above Mullheim, Baden, at 5.30 o'clock Thursday afternoon and dropped a bomb which caused considerable material damage.

Another aviator dropped three bombs on Neuenburg, also in Baden, at 7 o'clock, but the damage done was slight.

The following official communication was issued last night in Paris:

"Our flying squadron dropped thirty-three bombs on the barracks, aeroplane hangars and railway station at Vigneulles, in Woevre. A great number of the projectiles fell on their targets. The aviators were subjected to a heavy fire at close range. Three of them returned with large holes in the wings of their machines, and the canvas of other machines pierced by shrapnel bullets. None of the aviators were hit. All the machines returned to our lines.

"At 7 o'clock this morning, east of Soissons, a German aviator was shot down inside our lines. This is the third aviator to be brought down in 24 hours."

SLAVS HAVE UPPER HAND

Russian Armies Pressing Forward All Along Front

LONDON, April 3. — Fighting is general along the whole eastern front. From the Baltic to the Roumanian frontier, as well as in the Caucasus, the Russians are pressing the attack. In Northern Poland, in the Augustowo region, the Germans are being driven back to the East Prussian border. In the Carpathians, Bukowina, and Bessarabia, the Russians have the upper hand. A fresh development of some significance is the concentration of a big Russian army on the coast of Finland. Evidently the Germans hope to create a diversion in this territory in the hope of winning the Finns to their support, but any likelihood of German success in this quarter is ridiculed at Petrograd. Military experts incline to the opinion that Germany will not risk inevitable failure by an invasion of Finland.

All the Russian advances, according to Petrograd advices, are proceeding successfully. The capture, at the point of the bayonet, of a strongly fortified ridge, southwest of Baligrod between the Lupkow and Uszok Passes, was carried out in face of tremendous obstacles, the Russian troops scaling the ice-covered heights and driving the enemy from behind the strong defences of barbed wire entanglements and timber barricades. Russian reports claim that the raid into Bessarabia has been successfully countered near Chotin. The 42nd Honved Division of the Austrian army which undertook this diversion was virtually annihilated. Over 2,000 of the survivors were captured.

In a cable despatch from Petrograd Frederick Rennet, special correspondent of The London Daily News, says:

"The double failure of the enemy's obstructive minor tactics in the extreme north and south has allowed the great preparations for the Russian advance to proceed steadily towards their fullest development.

"The equipment for the new forces and the re-equipment for the seasoned troops have safely reached their destinations. The general Russian dispositions nowhere have been disturbed.

"It is known that the Austrian main body in Bukowina, with its German supports, numbers about 140,000. This army is now falling back before the Russian southern movement from the Dneister. This advance of the extreme Russian left in the region of Czernowitz probably is the commencement of the campaign for eastern Hungary."

It is evident from the manner in which they are surrounding and destroying the Austrian force entrenched in the westerly corner of Bessarabia that the Russians have the situation there well in hand. We hear nothing more of the enemy's cavalry which inaugurated the Bessarabian raid, but if it is not already withdrawn it obviously runs serious risks of having its retreat cut off and being driven over the Roumanian frontier.

FIND MEN WERE STARVED

But Austrian Officers Feasted and Lived Like Lords

LONDON, April 3.—The Times this morning prints the following:

A scandalous story of the siege and surrender of Permysl is told by our special correspondent with the Russian armies, Stanley Washburn, who by the courtesy of the Russian high command is the first foreigner to visit the great Galician fortress since its fall. The garrison, which numbered three times more men than were needed for the defence of the forts, was doomed to starvation from the moment of investment. To this initial act of incompetence on the part of the Austrian commander is added the outrage of allowing his officers to swagger about as if they were in Vienna, and to parade their gluttony before the population, which was glad to subsist on cats and dogs, and in the face of the ravenous soldiery, which, when the fortress was surrendered, devoured the raw carcases of the officers' chargers.

While the garrison became thin and half-starved the mode of life of the officers in town remained unchanged. The Cafe Sieber was constantly well filled with dilettante officers who gossipped, played cards and billiards, and led the life to which they were accustomed in Vienna. Apparently very few among them shared any of the hardship of their men or made any efforts to relieve their condition.

In the Hotel Royal, until the last the officers had their three meals a day, with fresh meat, cigars, cigarettes, wines and every luxury; while as a witness informed me, their own orderlies and servants begged for a slice of bread.

There can be no question that the ultimate surrender was due to the fact that the garrison was on the verge of starvation, while the officers diet was merely threatened with curtailment.

Witnesses state that private soldiers were seen actually to fall in the streets from lack of nourishment.

Despondency Causes Suicide.

MONTREAL, April 3. — Martin Baker, secretary-treasurer of the Township of Dunham, Missisquoi County, and chairman of the local school commission, died Thursday morning from a gunshot wound in his head, "self-inflicted while temporarily insane," according to the verdict at the inquest. Despondency over the death of his father was given as the cause.

U. S. Artillerymen Killed.

COLON, April 3.—Corpl. Langdon, of the United States Coast Artillery, was shot and killed and three other American soldiers were injured, one of them seriously in a riot here yesterday. The soldiers were engaged in patrol duty in the tenderloin district. The shooting, which resulted in a general fight was the outgrowth of an argument between a soldier, who is alleged to have been drinking and a Panama policeman.

ARE SINKING THE LITTLE FELLOWS

Germans Violate Another Provision of Hague Convention

LONDON, April 3. — During the last 24 hours news has been received in London of the sinking of the British steamer Eston, the Norwegian barque Nor and three British trawlers by German submarines, and of the Dutch steamer Schieland, presumably by a mine. Seven sailors of the Schieland are missing.

The sinking of the trawlers, it is alleged here, is a violation of The Hague convention of 1907, which expressly exempts fishing vessels from molestation.

A decided extension in the range of operations of German submarines is indicated by a Lisbon despatch, to the effect that the U-28 has been operating off the coast of Spain. The British steamer Eston, which went down off Cape Finisterre, is said to have been torpedoed by the U-28. It is more than 70 miles from Cape Finisterre to the nearest German submarine base. The cape is about 500 miles north of Gibraltar.

Three Tyne trawlers, the Gloxiana, Jason and Nellie were sunk by the German submarine U-10 Thursday. After all the members of the crews were safely in small boats the Germans blew up the trawlers.

They then towed the fishermen towards the Tyne until they encountered fishing craft which brought the men ashore.

The fishermen say that the commander of the submarine was quite genial. He supplied hot coffee and tobacco to them, but told them: "We have orders to sink everything. It is war, and England started it."

The Dutch steamer Schieland was blown up Thursday morning in the North Sea at a point 24 miles from Spurn, on the east coast of England, at the entrance of the Humber. One man of the vessel's crew was killed. Two children and seven other members of the crew were brought to Hull, while another boat with seven sailors is missing.

The Daily News has the following from Rotterdam: A remarkable story of a German submarine burning a Norwegian ship and giving a certificate that it had been done under the provisions of the Declaration of London has arrived here. Thursday night the Norwegian steamer Unita reached Rotterdam having on board the crew of the Norwegian barque Nor of Frederikstar. The latter, which was bound for Hull with a cargo of seasoned wood, was stopped by the German submarine U-10 at midday on Wednesday, set fire to and sunk after the crew had been ordered to board the Unita. Both ships were northwest of the Dogger Bank, latitude 56 degrees 13 minutes north, longitude 4 degrees 25 minutes, east.

"I have this day, March 31, ordered the captain and crew of the Norwegian sailing ship Nor to leave their vessel and go aboard the steamer Unito and go to Rotterdam. The Nor is to be destroyed on account of contraband under articles 24, 17, 33 and 34 C, and 39, 40 and 49 D. (Signed), Stulw, Commander Lieutenant, submarine U-10."

Germany Continues Embargo.

WASHINGTON, April 2. — Efforts of the U. S. Government to obtain concessions from Germany which would permit the importation of German potash fertilizer, failed yesterday, it became known, when American officials were advised that Germany would make no alteration of her embargo. Negotiations had been in progress since the outbreak of the European war.

Hamilton Man Electrocuted.

CHATHAM, April 3.—Charles Balmer, an electrician of Hamilton, met instant death by electrocution yesterday afternoon when he came in contact with a live wire while adjusting wires at [illegible] Griffin Theatre.

TO PENSION THE TEACHERS

Government Will Contribute Two Per Cent

TORONTO, April 3.—The Ontario Government is prepared to go half way in providing a superannuation fund for school teachers in the province. One important clause in the draft bill submitted by Hon. Dr. Pyne in the closing hour of the session provides for a Government contribution of two per cent. of the teacher's annual salary, a similar amount to that which the teacher himself will pay. The opinions of trustees and teachers will be sought and action taken next session.

Local school boards will be obliged to shoulder considerable responsibility. In addition to being required to pay one per cent. of the teacher's salary as their contribution they will collect the teacher's contribution monthly, and will be responsible for it.

If the bill goes into effect it will be made compulsory and every teacher, whether counting on spending his life in the profession or not, must yield up his salary percentage. The Minister stated that it would be necessary for all local pension funds to be swallowed in this greater one, and that to become workable, compulsory contribution would be imperative.

PRESS CAMPAIGN BEGUN.

London Papers Publish Prohibition Petitions for Signature of Public

LONDON, April 3.—Several of the London morning papers appeared yesterday with full page advertisements presenting petitions with the request that supporters of the movement to cut them out and send them to Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd George. These petitions read:

"I am entirely in favor of the suspension of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors during the war, which I consider imperative for a quick and successful termination of the war. I shall heartily support the Government in any such measure."

The petition idea is backed by merchants and business men and other employers of labor, who disclaim any save a war interest in the proposed measure.

When your wife appears to believe your yarns she may be merely planning to touch you for $50 after breakfast.

Modern business methods to a man up a tree sometimes look strangely like mediaeval robber methods.

AUS IS HELD

South Africans Have Water and Forage

LONDON, April 3.—The capture of Aus, an important trading station in German Southwest Africa, is likely to have a strong bearing on the campaign says a Reuter's despatch from Cape Town. The place is situated at the end of a ninety-mile stretch of desert from Luderitz Bay and stands at the gateway of a fertile region where the Union forces will be able to operate with greater freedom, less hampered by the lack of water and pasturage.

Aus is the principle resting place on the great caravan route from north to south. It was strongly held by the Germans who were prepared to offer stubborn resistance but were obliged to evacuate, the despatch says, when union forces threatened their flanks and line of retreat to Keetmannshoop.

Relief For Canadian Teachers.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., April 3.—Relief for alien teachers whose situation was the subject of telegraphic correspondence Wednesday between Governor Johnson and Secretary of State Bryan is supplied in a bill which passed the Senate without a dissenting vote Thursday.

Under its terms no alien teacher could be removed from office if declaration of intention to become a citizen was made. The bill specifically exempts the University of California from restrictions against alien teachers.

It was said many Canadian teachers will be affected.

The action taken by the Senate of California is a sequel to a protest made recently in the Dominion Parliament by William Gray, member for London, Ont.

Reforms may come and reforms may go, but graft goes on forever.

RAIDS MADE ON SUBMARINES

British Flyers Keep up Attacks on German Bases

LONDON, April 3. — While the German submarines continue their activity around the coasts of Britain the naval wing of the Royal Flying Squadron keeps up its attacks on the German submarines which are being built at Hoboken, and on the submarine base at Zeebrugge.

It is believed that two of the underwater craft lying at the mole of Zeebrugge were damaged by British aeroplanes.

The Admiralty's statement is:

"The following report has been received from Wing Commander A. M Lonmore, R.N.:

"'I have to report that this morning Flight Sub-Lieut. F. G. Ardreae carried out a successful air attack on the German submarines, which are being constructed at Hoboken, near Antwerp, dropping four bombs.

"'Also Flight Lieut. J. F. Wilson while reconnoitering over Zeebrugge observed two submarines lying alongside the Mole and attacked them, dropping four bombs with, it is believed, successful results.

"'These officers started in the moonlight this morning. Both pilots returned safely'."

That a rich man may not enter the kingdom of heaven was never known to deter a man from amassing all the wealth he could.

LOCAL MARKET

When potatoes don't fetch fifty cents on the market and when they have to be carted back to the farm unsold; the vendor naturally doesn't feel in exactly a happy frame of mind. This was what one unfortunate farmer was compelled to do this morning when people passed up his "murphies" at a price which is ten cents lower than asked last Saturday.

"Business as usual" seemed to be vigorously borne out, by the look of the square today. Produce was abundant, consisting chiefly of vegetables and meat. Inside, butter, eggs and chickens were the principal offerings, eggs being particularly plentiful at eighteen cents. Butter still sticks at the rather elevated figure of thirty-five and thirty-six cents. It was quite plentiful.

The weather of the past week has not been the kind in which the sap runs, hence maple syrup was not conspicuous. What was brought on changed hands at $1.50 a gallon. Real mild weather must ensue before the sap will flow in any liberal quantities, and in the woods it is pretty cold, even on a day like today, according to one farmer who knows.

The meat supply is on the decline, owing to the warmer weather. There was but little offered, and most of this was pork, which went at twelve and thirteen cents.

The prices were:

Potatoes, per bag	$ .50	$ .60
Apples, per peck	.25	.35
Onions, per peck	.30	.35
Parsnips, per bag		.75
Turnips, per bag	.35	.40

UNMOVED BY THREATS.

Sir Edward Grey's Answer to Note Regarding Prisoners Is Published.

LONDON, April 3. — A German protest and threats of reprisals on account of the treatment by Great Britain of the prisoners taken on board German submarines was made public here yesterday. This protest was transmitted by Germany to Great Britain through the United States.

The reply of Great Britain also was made public.

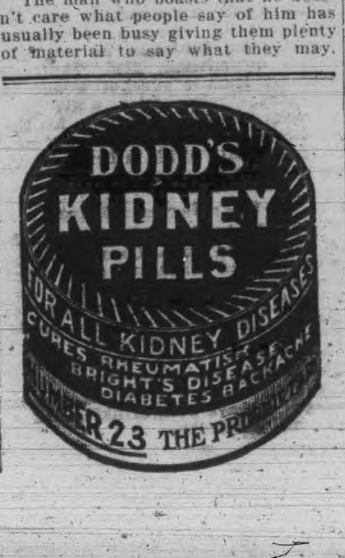
The German Government, in its protest, asked whether Great Britain intended to accord less favorable treatment to captured German submarine crews than to other war prisoners, and if so, what form this discrimination would take. Germany stated that if Great Britain adopted such a course, a British army officer held prisoner in Germany would receive correspondingly harsher treatment for each member of a captured German submarine crew.

The Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, in his reply, said that the prisoners from German submarines had been placed in naval detention barracks and segregated from other war prisoners, but were being treated humanely and permitted to take exercise. Furthermore, the Foreign Secretary said, German prisoners in England are better fed and clothed than are British prisoners of equal rank in Germany, and the Germans are not subjected to forced labor.

As the submarine crews have been engaged in sinking neutral merchant ships and unarmed British vessels, Sir Edward said they could not be regarded as honorable opponents, but were "offenders against the law of nations and common humanity."

The Foreign Secretary said that 1,000 officers and men of the German navy had been rescued during the war but that none from the British navy had been rescued by the Germans. However, he made no suggestion for a change.

The man who boasts that he doesn't care what people say of him has usually been busy giving them plenty of material to say what they may.



WHAT TO PLANT

The plan below should be followed in planting a small vegetable garden so as to have a succession that will last throughout the season.

If all the vegetables are sown outdoors nearly two months will be lost, so to have fresh vegetables in April and May a hot-bed and a cold frame are needed. These can also be used to raise the plants for transplanting, such as celery, tomato, cabbage, cauliflower and pepper. Judgment must be used in making the first sowing, as the earliness or lateness of the season determines the date. These may be considered hardy plants and can be safely sown before all danger of frost is past, or when the buds of trees are bursting and the peach is in bloom: Beets, celeriac, carrots, lettuce, onions, parsley, parsnip, early potatoes, radish, spinach, Swiss chard and turnip. Some semi-hardy varieties are: Bush beans, corn, and peas, which are safe to sow when the apples blossom and there is little danger of frost.

The tender vegetables and melons must not be set outdoors until all danger of frost is past and nights are warm; the following belong to this class: Wax podded bush beans, limas, corn, cucumber, egg plant, peppers, pumpkins, squash and tomatoes.

In planning for succession divide the garden into four equal plots (north, south, east and west). On the northeast plot sow parsley, parsnip, salsify, celeriac, Swiss chard, leek, onion and early potatoes in one part, so that they can remain all season, then fill out the plot with beets, carrots, turnips, peas, making two sowings two weeks apart. Start the southeast plot two weeks after the northeast one is finished, with beets, carrots, green eans, wax beans, and peas (ground to be replanted), leave room in this plot for early celery and potatoes which will keep their ground all season.

Southwest plot should be started two weeks after southeast, with more beets, carrots, peas, wax beans and green beans, sown in two lots for succession. Tomatoes, peppers, and egg plant should go into this plot.

Northwest plot should hold the all-season crops, as melons, early and late corn, with pumpkins and squash, also lima beans and cucumbers.

As the crops on the northeast are used, clear the land and plant Brussels sprouts, kale cabbage and cauliflower. On southeast plot follow the early crops with carrots and beets for winter, turnips, late bush beans and peas. Celery and potatoes will, of course, remain till end of season.

On southwest plot, tomatoes, late celery, egg plant and peppers will last all season; the early stuff can be replaced with more celery, bush beans, spinach, radish, lettuce and endive.

The northwest plot remains as it was when first planted, as its crops are too late to allow of successon. Remember that of sweet corn there are many varieties that will ke[illegible] trated by stereopticon views in keep[illegible] months.

SO ODD

One day succeeds another
In constant, steady flow.
It's Sunday, Monday, Tuesday,
All standing in a row.
With weeks and months together
All added make a year
Without a bit of trouble.
Now, doesn't it seem queer?

Some twenty toes and fingers
Are tacked upon a man.
You simply can't explain it.
It's part of nature's plan.
And arms and legs are needed
To make the man complete,
So he can tend to business.
Now, don't that frost your feet?

The sun shines in the daytime,
We have the moon at night,
And when there isn't either
We're mighty shy on light.
It's just a little better
If several stars are there
To scatter feeble flickers.
Now, don't that scorch your hair?

We marvel at the wonders.
Our mouths are open wide,
So that a person standing
In front could see inside.
We float around on water,
We walk abroad on land
And eat when we are hungry.
Say, don't it beat the band?

LACROSSE WILL HAVE BIG YEAR IN THIS PROVINCE

Enthusiastic Convention of O.A.L.A. — Officers Elected—Percy Lancaster of Havelock on the Executive

TORONTO, April 3.—The Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association had a big and enthusiastic convention yesterday, marking another stage of the national game on the high road of success. President-elect J. Ed. Hines of Orillia had reached the highest office without a contest, and there was consequently lacking the stimulus of an election to bring out the greatest representation of the association, but forty-sx clubs were enrolled and eligible to take part in the day's business, a number that will be greatly increased before the season opens, as many of the clubs in various parts of the province have not completed their organization. It is confidently expected that the number will surpass the hundred before the grouping for the playing season is completed.

The convention was welcomed by Mayor Church, and was in session both morning and afternoon. No matters of great contention were up for discussion, but there was a general debate on the points offered for consideration, and a good day's work was accomplished. The convention showed a majority of twelve votes for the change of the annual meeting from Good Friday to Easter Monday, but that required the support of two-thirds of the delegates, and so was not carried.

Officers Elected.

The election came down to a choice of the executive, as Mr. Marklinger withdrew from the race for the second vice-presidency, the only other office which promised a contest. The association's new officers are as fololws:

Hon. President, James Stevenson, Toronto; President, J. Ed. Hines, Orillia; First Vice-Pres., T. W. L. Tegart, Toronto; Second Vice-Pres., J. Bert Brown, Fergus; Secretary, Frank Doyle, Toronto; Treasurer, W. McArthur, Toronto.

Executive Council — Thos. Henry, Brampton; Percy Lancaster, Havelock; Bert Booth, Orangeville; Eugene Dopp, Toronto; Ernie Doyle, Newmarket; James Dundas, Toronto; W. H. Gurney, Wingham; Charles Hocking, Toronto; E. H. Johnston, London, and John Ross, Toronto.

Auditors — Col. J. J. Craig, Fergus; T. Herbert Lennox, Aurora; Dan A. Rose, Toronto.

Peterborough Represented.

Messrs. E. Dillon and J. Crough of the Peterborough club were present. Other clubs in this vicinity which were represented were Campbellford, Hastings, Havelock, Madoc, Norwood, Tweed, Stirling and Millbrook.

His Counter Thrust.

The Other Side's Counsel (fiercely)—I suppose you were brought up to tell the truth?

The Goaded Witness—No, I wasn't.

The Lawyer—Not brought up to tell the truth! What do you mean by that?

The Witness—My folks intended me for a lawyer.—Buffalo News.

Jack Johnson Looks for Win Over Williard

HAVANA, April 3.—The Johnson-Willard fight will be on the level, so far as Johnson is concerned he cannot lost. Johnson will not 'lay down" before Willard. It will be a stand-up, knock-out, drag-out battle from the "dark" corner of the ring. Johnson is out to win—and quickly.

With Johnson is is a question of coin. He realizes that retention of the title means more than a fortune. He feels that if he lost he'd be a "dead coon," financially. He realizes fully that if he loses he wouldn't ever draw a five cent piece anywhere as an ex-champ. With the title again tucked firmly under his belt, Johnson's exchequer will never want, and that he will be good for big money any time and anywhere—except for his enforced expatriation from "the States."

After Tucking away Willard, Johnson plans a harvest on a tour of South America and France. He said today: "Willard is a novice. I'll admit he is a big fellow, young and strong. But there's nothing to it. He isn't the first big, young fellow I've put away. He hasn't a chance. Put your money on "Lil Artha.'" Johnson's confidence of winning verges on arrogance. He derides and redicules Willard's chances. Betting was still light today; there were plenty of jawbone wagers, but little real money being covered.

Riot Occurred.

A riot occurred in the stadium because Jack Johnson refused to work out in a downpour of rain. A crowd of 400 had gathered to see the big smoke go through his stunts, and when it was announced that Johnson would not train outside, but would do his work in the gymnasium, the crowd demanded the return of the admission price.

The management refused to part with this money, but offered to give out rain checks entitling the holders to admission tomorrow.

This angered the crowd, which commenced to throw things. The seats and nearly everything in the place were torn up and the air was filled with missiles, heads were ducking and flying, chairs and stones and the gate had nearly been torn off its hinges when a riot call was sounded and the Cuban police, coming on the double quick, put a stop to the disturbance.

Johnson did not do any work in the morning and spent the major portion of the afternoon at the race track where, questioned, he said: "I am in condition to fight the greatest battle of my life. I want my friends to bet on me and am telling them all to do so. I will win before the fight goes twenty rounds, probably before it goes thirteen.

Willard boxed seven rounds in the afternoon in the rain, while a crowd of 500 gathered in the Hotel Mirama grounds looked on. Willard now weighs 238 pounds and tomorrow will commence tapering off in his work.

T majority of the fight experts down here seem to agree with Willard's supporters that the cowboy will win.

Unless the odds drop to 3 to 2 it looks as if there was going to be very little real money wagered on this fight, in fact less than has been bet on any previous heavyweight championship battle in history.

The ticket sales are increasing, but so far there are no signs of a scramble for the higher priced seats. There is a fair demand for the $30 tickets.

Jack Johnson offered to bet $10,000 to $15,000 that he would defeat Willard. He declared that the offer was open to anyone, but refused to accept any longer odds.

Willard's Castles in Spain.

Jesse Willard meanwhile is spending his spare time delving into railroad folders and planning a triumphal entry into the United States. The cowboy is confident he will be able to land Johnson with his right; and if he does he intends to charter a special car and make back platform speeches in every town and hamlet between Key West and New York. Jesse stands to make his everlasting fortune if he wins, and he does not intend to overlook a single opportunity for publicity.

Yesterday Willard turned down a vaudeville contract for a week, win or lose, at $1,000. Willard figures that he is worth five times as much if he brings the championship back to the white race and figures that he can get the $1000 anyhow.

M. J. Hinkel, of Cleveland, was yesterday named alternate referee for the Johnson-Willard fight next Monday. He will referee in case Jack Welch is for any reason unable to reach Havana in time. If Welch does get here it will be Hinkel's duty to sit at the ringside ready to step in and relieve Welch in case the latter should get knocked out by a stray punch or suffer from sun stroke.

Congress Adjourns.

The Cuban Congress has decided not to convene on Monday, as that would interfere with the desire of the members to witness the battle.

Appointments yesterday were: M. J. Hinkel, Cleveland, alternate referee; Bob Vernon, New York, official timekeeper; Ben Harris, New York, alternate official timekeeper; Sam Leonard, Toronto, timekeeper for Johnson; Otto Floto, Denver, timekeeper for Willard. Tom Jones, manager for Willard, will act as Willard's chief second. Tom Flanagan and Bob Armstrong will second Johnson.

LA TOURAINE SET ON FIRE

Chemists Prove Conflagration Was Work of Fire-bug

HAVRE, April 3.— Expert chemists who are investigating the causes of the fire aboard the steamer La Touraine, now express the belief that it was not the result of an explosion, but originated in three large cases of textiles which were stored in the baggage hold.

The investigation has disclosed, the experts assert, that the flames could not have been caused by spontaneous combustion, and from this they conclude that the contents of the boxes must have been set on fire.

Raymond Swoboda, who is under arrest on a charge of being responsible for the steamship fire, has not yet been transferred to this city, but is expected to arrive to-day. He will be interrogated immediately by Magistrate Barnaud, who will attempt to establish his real identity, which remains uncertain.

Anti-War Riots In Vienna.

ROME, April 3.—Advices received here from the Austrian frontier describe the internal situation in the dual monarchy as increasingly grave. Opposition to a continuance of the war is said to be growing stronger among the classes which are suffering most from the scarcity of food. Violent anti-war demonstrations are reported to have occurred in several cities especially Vienna, where a crowd attempted to stone the windows of the War Office, but was charged by the police and troops.

Clocks Are Moved On.

REGINA, April 3.—Last night at midnight Regina adopted fast time, following the experiment of last year. All clocks were put ahead one hour, the postoffice department, under orders from Ottawa, following suit.

McNEIL STILL ON ERIE TEAM

Former Local Catcher Will be in the Central League With Quinlan Crew

ERIE, Penn., April 3. — Larry Quinlan will pick his crew of players to represent Erie in the Central League from twenty-seven men signed for tryouts. Deals also are under way by which the club hopes to obtain some of the best Class B players and it is said that several of the deals now are practically closed.

Johnny Jones, the little spit ball pitcher with the Terre Haute club in 1912, has been requested to report for practice. He is a free agent. Larry also is after a good southpaw and expects to land one. Quinlan will take care of the short field. To fill Gygli's shoes at first base three men will fight it out. John Scott will have no third base aspirants to fight for his job, but on second there will be three men fighting for the position.

There will be a crowd to fight for outfield positions. Kelly Harris and Jack Dawson are the only old men to try out again.

Cooper probably will be the first string catcher, and McNeil and Carroll will fight for the second job.

Quinlan is confident of a good season this year, and the only thing that is worrying him is the weather. "If we have good weather for the training season," says Larry, "the men will be able to get into shape by the time the first game is played. We need that, because I like to get the jump on the rest of them. A good start is a big boost in the pennant race."

Globe Trotting.

The record trip around the world up to date is held by J. H. Mears. Commissioned by a New York newspaper, Mears left New York July 2, 1913, and completed the trip of 21,066 miles in 31 days, 21 hours and 35 minutes. The best previous time on a similar trip was 39 days, 19 hours and 42 minutes, by Jaeger Schmidt, in 1911.—New York American.

Uncertain.

"Better stop the car," said the owner. "There are three women crossing the street."

"I think I can dodge through," suggested the chauffeur.

"Not with wings. One of them will dodge forward, another back and the third probably will go up in the air."—Pittsburgh Post.

COMMENT
As You Like it

THE HAMILTON BALL CLUB directors will have to provide themselves with a new business manager. Bobby Kerr, who so ably handled the club's finances last year, it is understood, will not accept the office again. He is at present working for a good cause—the patriotic fund—and will not give up his duties for baseball.

ENTERPRISING YOUNG MEN of Campbellford have organized an association to be known as the Campbellford Social and Athletic Club. They have a large and increasing membership, and a part of their club-room equipment is a handsome player piano. The club is entering a team in the intermediate series of the Ontario Amateur Lacrosse Association, under the management of Mr. R. H. Cole.

TOM McCannon who on more than one occasion in days gone by, pitted his skill on the mound against that of Dan McCabe, died at Kingston on Thursday. He was for many years a successful pitcher for the Kingston Ponies.

Under the auspices of the Janet Carnochan Chapter, Sir George Foster will address the convention. There will be a banquet in the evening.

A Recipe For Good Times.

Exports of Canadian manufactures for the year 1913 were $43,966,733. It is an axiom in manufacturing that the larger the output the less the proportionate cost. If Canadians, by purchasing made-in-Canada goods, enable Canada's manufacturers to increase their output to the extent of 50 per cent. of her imports, it would permit such a reduction in their manufacturing costs as to give them a greater opportunity of meeting competition in the markets of the world. This would again call for the employment of more Canadians and the further use of Canada's raw material.—Conservation.

"September Morn" is Coming to the Grand

"September Morn," one of the most talked-about photo plays, is coming to the Grand Opera House Saturday, April 10th. A press criticism of the production says:

Abounding in lively melody and picturesque scenes, though with partially antiquated comedy, "September Morn" is truthfully on a par with the up-to-the-minute musical affair, and either tangoes or maxixes its way through a period of three acts. It was obvious that the terpsichorean end of the program was given more minute attention than the ook. Everything, it appeared, was presented either a la tango or a la maxixe, and at the conclusion one almost imagined one was leaving a dansant.

In regard to the plot — indeed, there was something of that sort discernible—the action has to do with a school of art, where a young man and a gruff army man are ardent admirers of Argentina, a dancer. The army man ultimately weds the young man's mother and the young man marries the army man's daughter, while the danseuse retaliates by wedding her press agent. The only suggestion of the famous painting is a picture exhibition in the art school.

Frank Minor, as the "prof" in the art school, had the principal comedy role, and exclusive of one or two bits which helped him refresh his memory, he extracted a round of laughs. William Cameron, in another comedy role, proved more of an acrobat than a comedian, and Louis Kelso and Clarence Nordstrom were acceptable in the straight parts.

The feminine contingent was generaled by a wee bit of miss, programmed as Maude Potter, who played the character of Argentina. Miss Potter looked well and danced much better. Her partner was Clarence Nordstrom, who also proved a capable exponent of the Castle steps.

The only voice of the company was that of Arline Boiling, a comely, stately young woman who essayed the army man's wife, but unfortunately she was allotted but a single number. Kathryn Bowen, Edgar Murray, Sr., and Mona Northrup were the remaining principals. The chorus was able in every particular — even the chorus men—and appeared to excellent front row advantage in the costumes which, abbreviated as they were, had a style unlike the "S. M." model viewed in the finale. The electrical effects were well executed, and the mountings were satisfactory. A calcium light novelty arranged to set forth vividly the qualities of the chorus girl, did more to enlarge the clientele of the optician than that of the production.

In the score were two or three appreciable numbers, including "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "A Spare Rib from the Butcher Shop of Life," and "Where Is the Pleasure in Wine and Song, if the Woman Is Not There?" Miss Boiling was deservedly applauded for her singing of "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming."

MME. DE THEBES IS BUSY AGAIN

Parisian Seer Produces More Prophecies

Mme. de Thebes, the Parisian seer, describes the year beginning with March, 1915, as a great year full of tumults, splendours and things atrocious and sublime. The war should end between March and July.

Nationalities, says the prophetess, will be re-born and oppressed people freed. Italy will draw the sword, and Germany will be torn to pieces, south against south and north against north, with revolutionary movements against the military aristocracy and with peasant barbarisms, a parody of the French revolution.

Hostages will be massacred, and there will be trials and scaffolds. The conquerors will cross her frontiers; Germany will seem to give way suddenly, and gaining time, will renew her attacks.

In any event, the Hohenzollerns will not rule, and the crown prince will not reign. Austria will share the bitter fate of her ally. Francis Joseph has brought bad luck to all who have loved him, and cannot die without bringing bad luck to his people.

The menace of entire destruction will not yet have passed from Belgium, but her people will yet know grief and tears, but her destiny seems magnificent. England, by this war, will escape grave interior perils. She will play a supreme part and will be saved herself. The entente will be fruitful, and England's destiny renowned and sparkling.

Russia will march forward, and Poland will rise again from its ashes. The Slav flood will thrust Turkey out of Europe, but the Bulgariens, Greeks, Roumanians, Serbians and Montenegrins will be wounded by the fall of the fragments of the Ottoman empire.

We are not near peace throughout Europe. Serbie among others is not at the end of her warlike destiny. For France the year will take a bloody and broken path for three parts of its course, and then steady itself in the brilliance of peace. Three new men, of whom one will dominate all the others, will appear at the end of the year.

The woman who boasts that her husband is a genius is conscious that she is complimenting her own choice.

When a man has a grudge against his neighbor he sometimes buys a phonograph.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The matter published in this column will be supplied by the local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

What are we doing to improve the physique of our children? The great republic south of us is getting busy along this line. They have established a Children's Bureau at Washington, in nearly all their cities they have medical inspection of schools, district nurses and depots for babies where pure milk is supplied to them, and free medical attention given. Another important move they are making is the establishment of model playgrounds. These have been so successful and have done so muck good, that already many Canadian cities are following their example.

But what are we doing in Peterborough for the rising generations? Our medical inspection consists of one solitary nurse; our babies, as far as municipal attention goes, are absolutely neglected, our children play upon the street. An effort however, is now being made by the local Council of Women to have a model playground, in our city, under the supervision of a capable man and woman, where boys and girls can play merrily and happily, all through the summer months, and mothers can sit contentedly at home, knowing their children are in good hands.

The use of a school ground has already been provided and if all goes well, the Women's Council hope to have the playground in full swing during the months of July and August.

STAINER'S CRUCIFIXION IS SUNG AT ST. JOHN'S

The tenth performance of the sacred meditation on the Passion of our Blessed Lord was given in St. John's Church last night at 8 p.m. under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey with Mr. Cyril Devey at the organ. To prepare this work right before Easter entails sacrifice on the part of all concerned, and the large congregation present expressed their appreciation at the close of the service. The solo parts were taken splendidly by Mr. Morphet, Mr. Chandler (tenor), and Mr. Ward, baritone, as was also the chorus work by a well balanced choir of fifty voices among whom were well known choristers from All Saints, Murray St., and Park St. The attack and expression throughout was fine, the unaccompanied work being a special feature. The conductor (who has now led the work for thirty presentations was skillful, and the young organist came out of the difficult task with great credit. Both attendance and offertory were an improvement on last year.

Lecture on the War.

On Friday evening next, S. W. Dancey, the Canadian journalist who accompanied the British forces on the retreat from Mons to the gates of Paris, will give an illustrated lecture in Victoria Hall. Mr. Dancey served as a war correspondent during the fore part of the present war, and is the first one to return with sufficient information and views to give an address. He was with the German, British, French and Belgian forces.

Is it not remarkable how some tea merchants reduce the quality of their teas in sympathy with the rising markets? Admittedly the auction prices of teas on the London, Calcutta and Colombo markets have risen to an extraordinary level, and there seems little respite ahead. Nevertheless, we will continue to supply the public with the same high standard of quality that they have learned to rely upon in Salada packets. Salada has always been kept "up to a standard," and never "down to a price," and we will never depart from this principle which has earned us such appreciation. If market prices make it impossible to supply Salada at present prices, then the cost to the retailer and consumer must go up. — The Salada Tea Co., in the "Canadian Grocer."

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead, they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

TAIT OPTICAL CO.

410 GEORGE STREET

OBITUARY

GEORGE MADILL.

The death took place at Watson, Sask., on Thursday, March 25th, of George Madill, at the age of 55 years. Deceased formerly resided in Lakefield and was well known in this district.

MRS. VON KLEEK.

The death occurred in the General Hospital, Vancouver, last Monday of Mrs. Von Kleek, a former resident of this town. Deceased was held in the highest esteem by a large circle of Port Hope friends and the sad news of her death will be received with profound regret by all. Mrs. Von Kleek has been a great sufferer for months past, death being due to cancer. One son, Arthur, is left to mourn her departure. Interment takes place in Vancouver. — Port Hope Guide.

MARGARET JOHNSTON.

One of the oldest resident of Manvers township passed away on Wednesday, March 31, in the person of Mrs. Margaret Johnston, relict of the late Richard Johnston. The deceased lady, who was born in the county of Cavan, Ireland, came to Canada shortly before her marriage and settled in the above township, where she lived up to the time of her death. She is survived by one brother, George Henry, who resides in Western Ontario, and the following sons and daughters: Richard, Margaret and Sarah at home; Thomas, of Haliburton; William of Edmonton, and Mrs. Heaslip, of Toronto.

The funeral took place yesterday afternoon.

JOHN PILLAR.

Mr. John Pillar, for forty years a resident of Peterborough, passed away this morning shortly after 8 o'clock. He was born in Armanagh, Ireland, on the 6th of January, 1838.

The late Mr. Pillar had been superintendent of Jackson Park and Nicholls Park since the city took them over as a gift of the late Mrs. Charlotte Nicholls, and he had done much to improve their general appearance.

Deceased is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Frank Wise and Miss Rebecca Pillar, of this city, and two sons, Messrs. James and Samuel Pillar, of Saginaw, Mich., and Brown City, Mich., respectively.

He had resided at 29 Argyle street.

The funeral will be held next Tuesday at 2:30 p.m. to Little Lake Cemetery. House service at 2 p.m.

JOHN GREER.

John Greer, a retired farmer residing on George street, north, died last night, aged 73. He was well and favorably known throughout the county.

The funeral will be held Monday at 10 a.m. to the Centreville cemetery. Rev. Jas. Rollins will conduct the service at the house.

Beautiful Building Lots

Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald is offering for sale some beautiful building lots on Benson, Geraldine and O'Carroll avenues. This property lies within two minutes' walk of the street railway and ten minutes' walk of the heart of the city. The city water, gas, light and sewer services are installed, the property being already completely surrounded by beautiful homes. The site is an ideal one, with a gentle southeasterly slope, and being considerably elevated above the city and not in the immediate vicinity of any manufacturing industries, the air is always pure, healthy and invigorating. Nearly all the lots are already beautifully wooded with foreign and domestic shade trees. Two handsome residences are already under construction on this property, and several more will be erected this season, and for anyone contemplating the erection of a home there are certainly not lots in the city that offer equal advantages.

Copies of registered Plan No. 149, which covers this property, may be seen, and all other information may be had, at the offices of Mr. R. J. Kidd, J. T. O'Connell & Co., C. J. Carroll & Co., also at the office of the owner, Mr. J. W. Fitzgerald, Ontario Land Surveyor, 435 George street. 'Phone 885.

The California Expositions

The Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railways with their steamship and other connections offer the traveller a choice of delightful routes to and from the great Expositions being held in California this year. In taking your round-trip ticket you should travel at least one way through Canada and behold the scenic wonders of the territory opened up by the newest and most modern of Transcontinental railways. The Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific run a superior service, they offer ideal ways to or from the Pacific Coast and California, threading the land abounding in big things—great lakes, majestic mountains, dark forests, deep canyons, mighty rivers and fertile valleys and plains.

From points in Eastern Canada the Grand Trunk provides exceptional facilities of reaching Chicago where a choice in transcontinental routes is offered the traveller. A desirable route is via Chicago and one of the American transcontinental lines, returning via Seattle, Victoria, Vancouver, through the "Norway of Canada" to Prince Rupert, thence Grand Trunk Pacific.

Special Preacher for Easter Services

The special preacher at the Easter services in St. John's Church tomorrow will be Rev. Prof. Cosgrave, of Trinity College, Toronto. Prof. Cosgrave is an Irishman and a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin. He is not only a scholar of wide reading, but is also of a most earnest and devotional temperament. Prof. Cosgrave spent last summer studying in Germany, and made his escape with the greatest difficulty when war was declared. He will preach in St. John's at both 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. The church is being decorated today as usual with Easter and memorial flowers.

- THEATRICAL -

THE DRUM MAJOR.

The presentation of the charming and popular musical comedy to be given by the Orpheus Society, promises to be a splendid treat for the people of Peterborough. The operetta is full of catchy songs and choruses, dances, and the libretto deals with the stirring days of recruiting in the early days of the French Empire under Napoleon, and the martial atmosphere pervading the whole making it most appropriate for the present time. The cast is as folloks:—"Clarice," Miss Lettie Drope, the prettiest girl in Paris; Sergeant Leroux, of the French army, Mr. Harold Lee; "Jean," a musical genius, Mr. Ed. Hanrahan, "Babette," his adoring sweetheart, Mrs. A. A. Perrin; "Julien," "Gaspard," "Pierre," recruits, Messrs. F. Hartshorn, P. Naish and Norman Laing; "Antoinette," "Suzanne," "Jacqueline," village beauties; Mrs. J. Lock, Miss Helen Lytle and Ruby Quartermain; in "Marcel," a prominent orator of the day, Mr. Donald Shook. The dances under the direction of Miss Bickersteth and the operetta by permission of J. Fischer & Bros., New York, under the direction of J. Edward Fisher.

BRITISH AVIATORS HAVE CAUSED EXTENSIVE DAMAGE

COMMANDERS OF "BABY KILLERS" CALLED DOWN

Count Zeppelin Chides Them for Their Delay in Making Attacks

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROMANSHORN, Switzerland, April 5. — Count Zeppelin has called together his engineers and captains of his dirigibles at Friedrichshafen and chided them for awaiting favorable weather conditions instead of responding promptly to military requirements.

He holds that an attack on London and Lower Thames has been unnecessarily delayed.

CREWS PICKED UP BY BRITISH.

LONDON, April 5. — The Glasgow steamer Olivine and the Russian bark Hermes were sunk by a German submarine Sunday afternoon off the Isle of Wight. The crews of both vessels took to boats and were rescued by a British torpedo boat destroyer.

NOTHING FURTHER TO ADD.

PARIS, April 5.—(French official.)—"There is nothing to add to the report given out last night."

UNKNOWN RUSSIAN BARK SUNK.

LONDON, April 5. — The Daily Mail says an unknown Russian bark was sunk in the Channel yesterday. The crew was saved.

HERE'S THE LATEST VIA SAYVILLE.

BERLIN, via Sayville, April 5. — A despatch given out by an overseas news agency says the British battleship Lord Nelson which stranded inside the Dardanelles has been destroyed by fire from Turkish land batteries.

ENEMY NOT IN HEARTY CO-OPERATION.

LONDON, April 5. — Latest reports say there was not hearty co-operation of Prussians, Bavarians and Saxons at Neuve Chapelle. Bavarians and Saxons were under the impression that they were grossly mishandled by Prussian officers.

The eye-witness also says the Germans allowed their wounded to lie in front of their trenches without attempting a rescue, and when the British, moved by pity, went to their aid, the Germans in the trenches continued to fire and wounded several would-be rescuers.

CONQUEST OF A GERMAN TRENCH BY SAPPERS

Taking a trench by assault is extremely dangerous, and costly, under modern conditions of warfare, and the greatest danger is from under the earth. The sketch shows a party of French sappers who have burrowed through the earth between the two lines of trenches and are connecting an electric wire with the dynamite which they have placed under the enemy. When the dynamite is exploded the trench will be rushed by the French infantry. Both sides engage in sapping operations and the first to reach the opposing trenches through their underground galleries will be victorious.

MASTER HORSESHOERS ARE IN ANNUAL CONVENTION

Nearly One Hundred Delegates Are Welcomed by Mayor Buller

HAD GOOD YEAR

A decidedly flourishing and prosperous condition of affairs was revealed this afternoon at the fourth annual convention of the Master Horseshoers' Association, which convened at two o'clock in the Victoria Hall, in the old Opera House. Between seventy-five and one hundred delegates were on hand, including many commercial men and hardware representatives. T. C. De Vere of Toronto, president of the association, was in the chair.

Welcomed by Mayor.

The delegates were welcomed by His Worship Mayor Buller who extended to them the freedom of the city and hoped that the convention would be successful and benencial to them all. He promised to be present at their banquet this evening at seven o'clock and would endeavor to have all the aldermen present if possible. The first portion of the convention was occupied in the reception of reports.

President De Vere, who presented his report first praised the commercial men, as the back bone of the institution. The convention was the time to do business and the association was just on "a teeter." It was a case of going one way or the other. In Toronto this had been a mighty hard year on the horseshoers. He reported, however, that the association was nearly $200 ahead, despite many adverse conditions. He praised the loyalty of those horseshoers who had closed up their shops and came to the convention, leaving the non-union horse-shoers to have things their own way.

"The horse shoers were the back bone of this provincial association," he said. Cookstown had closed up its shops for the convention. Every horseshoer from Warsaw was present. He was sorry to report that organizer Church's son had undergone an operation which prevented him from being present. Mr. Morry was also away because of an operation. In Hamilton he met Brother Groves and persuaded him to come to the meeting, and he was sure they were all glad to see him.

Balance of $169.02.

The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $169.02, the books having been audited and found correct.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read and approved as was also the secretary's report.

A letter was read from provincial organizer Church withdrawing from the association.

At three-fifteen the meeting was thrown open for a general discussion.

At seven o'clock tonight there will be a grand banquet held in the Oriental.

Election of officers will take place this evening after the banquet.

CAUGHT LUNGE

Three Men Are Fined for Illegal Fishing

LINDSAY, April 5. — Illegal fishing does not pay, and besides it spoils the sport for the fishermen who obey the law. Consequently when it was known that illegal fishing has been going on for years past on the Kawartha waters, the Provincial Government, at the suggestion of Sturgeon Point council, placed special inspectors on the above waters to put a stop to fishing through the ice and out of season.

As a result of this close inspection three people appeared in police court Saturday before County Magistrate F. D. Moore, K.C., and were fined after pleading guilty to the charge of fishing through the ice for lunge. The offence was committed on Emily Creek on March 29th, and J. Thurston was fined $15 and costs, or $19.60, while William Arnott was mulcted in all $19.37, and George Lintic $5 and no costs.

Two other cases were adjourned.

HANGAR WAS HIT

Two German Submarines Destroyed

SHIP YARDS GUTTED

Forty Workmen Killed in Bombardment

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 5.—The French war office gave out the following statement today: "Military authorities have received precise information concerning results of a bombardment carried out by British aviators in Belgium on March 26. A dirigible hangar at Berghen, Steagathe, was seriously damaged with a dirigible airship sheltered within.

At Hoboken, Antwerp, the naval construction shipyards were gutted, two German submarines destroyed and a third damaged. Forty workmen were killed and eighty-two were wounded."

Austria and Turkey Seeking Peace?

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

ROME, April 5. — Notwithstanding all denials, it is believed here that efforts are being made to secure peace by Austria and Turkey without reference to Germany, and the belief finds support in the activity of DJavid Pasha who negotiated peace between Italy and Turkey.

He is now in Switzerland, and despite his denials it is believed that his mission is in the interests of peace.

Warmest Day This Year, Was Sunday

Easter Sunday was the warmest day this year up to the present, with a temperature at its highest point of 47 degrees.

March had an average temperature considerably above the usual figure. The warmest day was the 23rd, with 46 degrees; the coldest, the 4th, with 6 degrees. No zero weather has been recorded since February 10th. This is most unusual. The rainfall during March was light, only .11 of an inch. The snowfall also was light, between 2 and 3 inches. While the first part of the past winter was severe, the latter part has been generally quite moderate.—W. P.

SEND-OFF FOR FIREMEN WHO HAVE ENLISTED

A little revelry will take place tonight at the fire hall when two former members of the department, E. Munden and M. J. Clancy, will be tendered a farewell. These two men have enlisted for active service and Chief Howard and his men felt like giving them a banquet of some kind ere they left. The chief was instrumental in securing for them extra leave so that tonight's little affair might be possible.

The commanding officer, Major Hall seemed very much pleased that some members of the fire department should have enlisted and granted the chief's request for extra leave for the two men most gladly.

BRIGHT EASTER DAY SERVICES

Most people went to church Easter Sunday and while millinery and other decrees of dame fashion are not supposed to figure in religious services, it is only fair to say that the parsons saw a well-dressed Peterborough. The oncers and now-and-agains were quite prominent and he who failed to receive some inspiration and enjoyment from the service must indeed be case-hardened.

The messages from the pulpits were short but full of the significance of the day. The story of the Resurrection, the greatest story ever written, will always bear repeating and until the end of Time, there always will be a fascination about Easter to draw people to church.

The excellent choirs and soloists of which this city may well feel proud excelled themselves in their part of the services. Altogether, it was a very bright Easter Day.

LEFT KINGSTON WITHOUT LEAVE

Pte. Murray's Visit Extended to the Police Station

Pte. Thomas Murray, known in Peterborough as "Red" took French leave from Kingston Saturday where he was encamped with the 21st Battalion of the second contingent. Murray enlisted with the Lindsay quota but as he had resided in Peterborough the officials deemed it possible that he would spend the holidays renewing old acquaintances. The local police department were notified Saturday afternoon and about two hours later Detectives Meaghr and Newhall were escorting him to the police station. He had a ticket to Kingston and returned yesterday unaccompanied.

INDEPENDENT LABOR PARTY WANT PEACE

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Norwich, England, April 5.—The National administrative council of the independent labor party has reported to convention, a set of resolutions that the labor movement is opposed to the policies which produced the present war and that its duty is to secure peace at the earliest possible moment on conditions which shall re-establish amicable relations between the workers of Europe.

NO LICENSE YET FOR ROLLER RINK

Police Chief Signed the Application on Saturday

When the man in charge at the roller rink was approached by a police officer, Saturday afternoon, and informed that he must secure a license to operate the place, he made a trip to the city clerk's office with the evident intention of taking out the license. But he did not have the money with him and the bank was closed.

The banks were opened as usual today but up to three o'clock this afternoon, the rink was still doing businesss without a license.

The Chief did not know this morning that the license had not been taken out. He said he had signed the application.

The license fee is $50.

IS CHAPGED WITH THEFT OF SUIT CASE

No very heinous offences were on the police court calendar this morning, about the worst being a case of theft, in which Herbert Hudgins, a farm laborer, was accused of stealing a suitcase containing a coat and vest and pair of boots from James Howden, another farm hand. Hudgins elected summary trial, but was remanded unitl Friday to permit of an important witness from the country being called.

Steven Elmhirst, a farmer, got into a fight at the Munro House and was fined $5.75. He did not appear in court.

Robt. W. Mitchell of Havelock came to Peterborough and got drunk. It cost him two dollars.

The non-jury sitting of the Spring Assizes will be held in Peterborough April 19th. As yet the presiding judge has not been named.

PTE. ROSCOE KENDREY

Is with the Peterborough boys, who have had their first experiences in actual fighting. He is a son of Mr. Emmet Kendrey, formerly of this city and now of Renfrew, Ont. Pte. Kendrey has written several letters in which he has given the impression that he is just as much at home as when knocking down line drives at Riverside Park. He played short field for several local ball teams.

McDONALD DID NOT APPEAR IN COURT

Mr. Stanley Phoenix, representing the Children's Aid Society, appeared in police court this morning on behalf of the child of Mr. and Mrs. Dan McDonald, which is in charge of the society, and has been for some months. McDonald, so the evidence showed, is out of work owing to his alleged fondness for liquor, which incapacitates him, while his wife is working in the endeavor to support herself. McDonald was to have appeared this morning, but faled to show up, so the case was remanded till tomorrow.

QUAKE SHOCKS

Centre of Disturbance is at Avezzano

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, April 5.—A Central News despatch from Rome says earthquake shocks were registered there today with no local damage. The centre of the disturbance is in Avezzano where a disastrous earthquake a few weeks ago occurred. News from Avezzano is lacking.

Ottawa, April 5.—Today's casualties: Third field artillery, dead, Gunner Geo. West, of Kingston, motor car accident.

TITLE IS WON BY WILLARD

Terrific Right Swing Gave Him Decision Over Johnson.

IN 26th ROUND.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Havana, April 5.—Jess Willard, the Kansas cowboy, is the new heavyweight champion. He knocked out Jack Johnson today with a terrific right swing to the jaw, in the twenty-sixth round. Seventeen thousand people saw the combat. Johnson took the referee's count while lying on the ropes but the moment after Referee Welch had given the decision, the former champion got to his feet in time to escape the wild rush of the excited spectators.

For full report of Johnson-Willard fight, see sporting page.

Regina has definitely adopted fast time, following the experiment of last year. All clocks were put ahead one hour, the post office department, under orders from Ottawa, following suit. The railways will retain the old time.

WILL NOT LIKELY DO IT AGAIN

Man Who Insulted Domestic is Assessed $10

For making an indecent remark to a domestic who was employed in a hotel, William Johnston, a man who has been staying at the hotel, was fined ten dollars and costs today with a warning that he must be respectful to women in future.

The charge read that he assaulted the woman, but the evidence showed that he addressed an insulting remark to her and placed his hand upon her person while passing downstairs. On Good Friday the plaintiff was engaged in dusting the rooms at the hotel when Johnston accosted her but she indignantly treated his remark and went on with her dusting. Johnston persisted, and a few minutes after put his hand upon her, giving her a little squeeze. There was another man implicated who was warded off by the plaintiff with the aid of a broom, but as no direct evidence was against him no action was taken to bring him to court.

G. N. Gordon conducted the case for the plaintiff, and asked the magistrate to make a finding that would protect respectable hard-working women from the advances of lewd men. This His Worship did, adding that because a woman worked in a hotel there was no right on the part of the prisoner to presume that she was other than respectable.

MORE INTEREST WANTED IN POLITICAL AFFAIRS.

IF THERE IS an election shortly, and the signs indicate that such will be the case, the electors should make some effort to understand the issues on which it will be fought. It will be one of the most important elections in the history of Canada if the issues that are now shaping themselves form the battleground in the struggle between the two parties.

Most Canadians have read with disgust of the cupidity that has led to scandals in the supplying of war equipment for the Canadian forces. Many have asked themselves if the spirit of the Canadian people is worthy of the great country they possess. It may be, but it is evident there is great room for improvement.

So the question is, how is this improvement to be brought about? It is required in politics as well as in business, in fact in all departments of Canadian life the need is for a larger public spirit. We have been too much engrossed in the pursuit of wealth, in big interest returns, western real estate, Cobalt mines, and oil wells, to pay proper attention to finer, yet necessary, qualities like independence, sacrifice and patriotism.

In politics, improvement necessitates a better understanding of the questions of the day and an intelligent discussion of them. There will likely be little improvement if the majority of electors merely put in their party plug without knowing what the parties are divided about. We believe the body of intelligent, independent electors is growing, and in them lies much of the hope of Canadian political life. We need independent members, too, who are actuated by a desire to serve their country disinterestedly. Parents can do much by teaching their children the demands of citizenship, that public serivce is an honour and duty requiring the highest sacrifices. Schools and universities should also be important factors for the making of good citizens. Sometimes they are not what they should be, but there are plenty of ways by which the public life of Canada may be made more worthy of this country and its place in the Empire. The sacrifices and necessities of the great war should be a compelling factor in driving home to the Canadian people the need for a return to serious things, and for a broader public spirit than has hitherto been manifest.

THE N. T. R.

THE DEBATE in the Commons the other night showed the Opposition in the most lurid and extraordinary of lights. The Government was asking for power, if necessary, in case of the refusal of the G. T. R. to carry out its contract, to acquire the Superior Junction to Fort William link from the G. T. P. This would enable the Government to operate the road. A short time previous, in the same debate, the Hon. Geo. P. Graham had frankly admitted that his ideal was the linking up with the Intercolonial and a government-owned transcontinental road. Notwithstanding these facts, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Hon. W. Pugsley and Hon. F. Oliver fought the proposal to a finish, all acting and speaking with heat and as if the G. T. R., and not the country, was their chief concern.

THE OTTAWA CITIZEN, LIBERAL.

LIBERAL politicians and newspapers have taken pleasure in quoting persistently the Ottawa Citizen as "a leading Conservative newspaper." The object was to whack the Conservatives by means of one of its own newspapers, to make it appear that there was dissension in the party when one of its own organs was kicking over the traces. So insistent has become the practice that the Citizen has felt obliged to declare itself, and the following confession from its own leading editorial column is to the point:

"Mr. A. E. Fripp, M. P., was at some pains a day or so ago to make it clear to the members of the House of Commons that the Citizen was not a Conservative newspaper. Mr. Fripp did the Citizen a service, even though it was by way of being a work of supererogation.

"The Citizen is not a Conservative organ, nor even a Conservative newspaper, although it was the organ of the political party now in power during the Laurier administration. The Citizen has stepped out of the party-organ rut and has claimed and used and will continue to use its independence in what it conceives to be the public interest—an untenable position so long as its first concern was for the party advantage. But the Citizen, for obvious reasons, declined to take this step until the party to which it had freely given its allegiance had attained power."

FIGURES THAT CARRY A LESSON.

GREAT BRITAIN imported 51,786,915 bushels of wheat from Canada in 1913. She also imported 9,360,400 bushels from Russia, 2,050,987 from Germany, 804,533 from France, 201,653 from Roumania, 265,843 from Austria-Hungary, and 76,533 bushels from Bulgaria, a total of 12,759,949 bushels, that will have to be made up. There was a decrease in Russia's exportation to Britain of 7,000,000 in 1913 compared with 1912, and of 24,000,000 compared with 1911. In 1913, the United States supplied the United Kingdom with 80,013,879 bushels, an increase of 32,000,000 bushels over 1912 and 43,000,000 bushels over 1911, while Canada's increase in 1913 over 1912 was only 1,177,000 bushels. Great Britain's total importations reached 229,580,865 bushels.

Great Britain imported 14,245,000 bushels of barley from Russia in 1913, 3,240,533 bushels from Roumania, 5,208,700 bushels from Turkey in Asia, 832,067 from Germany, and 622,533 bushels from Austria-Hungary, a total of 24,148,833 bushels. Canada supplied 5,977,533 bushels and the United States 10,355,567 bushels. Great Britain's total importations amounted to 52,358,245 bushels.

Great Britain imported 9,173,459 bushels of oats from Russia in 1913, 11,273,459 bushels from Germany, and 2,007,765 bushels from Roumania, a total of 22,454,683 bushels. Canada supplied 7,734,588 bushels and the United States 4,723,814. Great Britain's total importations of oats were 59,829,950 bushels.

Surely the foregoing figures carry their own moral to Canadian farmers.

THE COMPETITION OF THE JITNEY.

WHILE the jitney 'bus has not yet made its appearance in Peterborough, it has been recognized in some other Canadian cities as an effective competitor of street railways. So, attempts have been made to hamper their service. It is held that the driver should be put under bonds to protect the public from reckless driving, but motor car drivers are not under bond, nor cab drivers. No thought is taken of reckless street car drivers. The criticism is not fair and shows that the competition is felt.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE SUSPENSION of Col. Hurdman by the Minister of Militia pending investigation of matters relating to binocular purchases is a reminder that, great as has been the Opposition pow-wow over political changes in the civil service, there are many good Liberals yet directing high executive work for the Government. — Toronto Mail and Empire. It also leads one to conclude that the Government would be well advised to release a few of these "good Liberals."

THE ADVERTISING that Peterborough now receives at Ottawa is never of a character to bring a blush to the cheeks of respectable men and women. It has not always been thus.

Canada's Part in Naval Defence.

(Ottawa Citizen.)

The independent protest of Mr. J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for Peterborough, against increased expenditure over Canada's political navy is courageous and timely. Speaking in the House of Commons yesterday morning Mr. Burnham warned the country of the bipartizan scheme to fasten a Canadian navy upon the already overburdened taxpayers. The politicians on both sides seem determined to open up this new source of extravagance. As Mr. Burnham says, they seem determined to have a Canadian navy "in spite of the country," and he would seem to be quite right when he blames the so-called Opposition for "egging on the government" into an utterly wasteful and useless outlay at the present time.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier takes the position that Canada must either adopt the policy of Imperial contribution for naval defence as advocated by the Conservative party or there must be a Canadian navy as planned by the Liberal party. Sir Wilfrid would seem to assume that there is no other alternative. No doubt the active lobby of the armament interests and the attitude of the armorplate press might make it appear as Sir Wilfrid says; but there certainly is and always has been another practical way for Canada, and the present war has demonstrated it. The war on the seas has also made clear a number of very definite and practical objections to Canada launching into any heavy naval expenditure in the near future.

. . . . The Canadian people will need all the independent members this Dominon can boast of, to save the treasury from being plundered by the thoroughly organized agents of the armament interests. Mr. Burnham mentioned the word "betrayal." So long as the Liberal party is linked up with private armament interests, it is betrayal of the basest kind.

Relief Fund for War Sufferers.

(Christian Science Sentinel.)

In response to the call for contributions for the relief of Christian Scientists in distress by reason of the present war in Europe, the sum of $82,104.02 has been received by the treasurer of the Mother Church. Of this amount, $77,595.51 has been disbursed to the relief committees organized by Mr. McCracken in England, Germany, France and Switzerland, as called for by them. Much gratitude has been expressed by the Christian Scientists in these countries for the help extended to them by their brethren in America.

In addition to the $82,104.02 collected for the relief of Christian Scientists, there has also been collected the sum of $29,154.90 for the relief of war sufferers other than Christian Scientists. This entire amount has been disbursed to relief committees of Christian Scientists in Holland, England, Germany, France and Switzerland. The total amount received to date for these two funds is $111,258.92, of which but $4,508.51 remains unexpended. As the need for help still continues, this small balance will not last long; therefore Christian Scientists are given the opportunity to continue to send contributions to the treasurer of the Mother Church for this relief work. For the future it is proposed to maintain but one fund, and from this both Christian Scientists and others will be assisted.

A Medal for Von Tirpitz.

(Westminster Gazette.)

Admiral Von Tirpitz is now the proud possessor of the Turkish Grand Military Medal for Merit. It has been sent to him by Enver Pasha. In sending it, in the name of the Sultan, Enver sent such a nice complimentary telegram, telling the German Admiralissimo that it is due to him that the German navy is able to cope victoriously with the numerically superior forces of the enemy. It is hinted that all this butter is in reality only a request for further assistance, of which there is no sort of promise in the admiral's response by way of thanks. Still, it must be a great consolation to have the Turkish medal, and he will doubtless wear it when next he inspects his canalized fleet.

"UNKNOWN TO THE POLICE."

Dear Sir,—In an item of news in your issue of Saturday we read, "Unknown to the police department the roller rink was operated yesterday without a license having been taken out. This afternoon Chief Thompson sent an officer to inform the men in charge that they must take out a license immediately."

How could that operation be "unknown" to the police department. It was announced and advertised in the Examiner and also on large posters upon all the poles along the principal streets for days before and Chief Thompson knows that a license for the roller rink can not be issued without his consent and signature to the application. (Possibly the Chief does not read the Examiner.) Therefore, Chief Thompson knew the rink had no license, and he knew it was being operated on Friday in violation of the by-law. He knows it is his duty to prevent, or arrest, or summon before the magistrate those who violate the law in that open, defiant way. Why did he not do his duty in this case?

If, according to the item, a license was taken out on Saturday afternoon, then Chief Thompson must have signed the application for it and consequently recommended as a fit and proper person to operate a roller rink a man who to his knowledge openly violated the law the day before. Why did Chief Thompson move in the matter even on Saturday?

Is it not time law-abiding ratepayers of this city wake up and take notice? We all know who pays the cost of our police department. But who gets the protection we pay for? It might be interesting to many ratepayers to know who owns the "underworld" institutions of this city. How long will the indulgent ratepayers permit the present friendly relations between the police force and the management of the rink.

Yours,
RATEPAYER.

A STUBBORN ARTIST.

Mansfield Wanted a Likeness, and the Painter Gave It.

Richard Mansfield once asked Frank A. Nankivell to make a picture of him. The actor explained that be wanted an imitation of an old Roman coin with his own profile shown instead of Caesar's.

"Do you want an absolute likeness, or shall I idealize it a bit?" asked Nankivell.

"I want an absolute likeness," replied Mr. Mansfield stiffly, and the artist made a sketch of his patron.

When the completed picture—a splendid piece of work that looks as if it were embossed—was shown to Mr. Mansfield he was not pleased.

"It looks like a prizefighter," said Mr. Mansfield.

"That is not my fault," said Nankivell. "You know that you said you wanted a likeness."

There was a further exchange of courtesies, and then Mansfield suggested that the artist try again. "Excuse me," said Nankivell. "Once will do me."

"Well, change this picture a little," said the actor. "Perhaps you can fix it up."

"Not a fix," said the artist as he rolled up the picture and prepared to go with a parting shot. "You don't want an artist to draw your picture; you want a lithographer. Good day."

Mexico Has a Respite.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Advices from Mexico to the Department Saturday were summarized as follows:

"The Department is informed that Generals Villa and Angele has gone west from Monterey, which is reported quiet. Carranza forces from Laredo and surrounding towns are said to be concentrated at Lampazos. Advices dated April 1, from the west coast, state that Carranza forces are advancing in the direction of Guadalajara and that Jose M. Addis, an Indian subject, has been imprisoned for three weeks, apparently by the Carranzistas at Manzanillo. Conditions are quiet at Guaymas and Ma-

GETTING INTERESTED.

THE man who hardly knew you
And who was nothing to you
Comes round to shake
Your hand and make
An awful fuss about you
As though to live without you
Was something that if he is true
He really wouldn't like to do
And doesn't care, indeed to try,
Because for why?
Well, you can guess
It more or less,
For this year he is on the slate,
A full fledged, jolly candidate.

How he relates the latest jokes
As he inquires about your folks
And wants to know
If it is so
Your boy will graduate next year.
"Oh, dear,"
He says, "that boy is smart;
You're giving him a dandy start
But he will have to go, you bet
To keep the pace his dad has set;
He'll turn out well,
For stock will tell."
You get the taffy strong and straight
From one who is a candidate.

Then he proceeds to talk away
About the evils of the day;
Says it is time
That graft and crime
Were made the public wrath to feel
And that we need another deal.
They could not win,
Who now are in,
This doubtful officeholding crew,
If people just their record knew.
He says it's fierce the way things are,
And then he slips you a cigar
And talks you blind and deaf and dumb.
Yes, this year he is going some.

Sisterly.

"Mother?"

"Yes?"

"I wish you'd make Brother Jack stay out of his room part of the time."

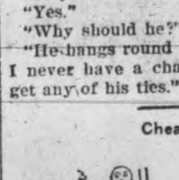
"Stay out of his room?"

"Yes."

"Why should he?"

"He bangs round there so much that I never have a chance to slip in and get any of his ties."

Cheaper.



"I wish I could travel."

"Then why don't you?"

"It costs money to see the world."

"Does it?"

"It does."

"You can look at the moon for nothing."

Profitless.

"There are such a myriad of good things that we are always going to do."

"Yes, and I have always noticed that they have a common peculiarity."

"What is it?"

"They never increase our bank account."

But No Player.

"Does your husband play poker?"

"No."

"I heard he did."

"That is an idle compliment."

"Compliment?"

"Yes. He loses an awful lot at poker."

Fast Talker.

"That woman ought to be arrested."

"Mrs. Brown?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"She is violating the speed law."

Like Ann.

"A man is as old as his arteries."

"Is that so?"

"That's what they say."

"And how old is a woman?"

"Oh, she is as old as the hills."

Feel Good.

"When are you happiest?"

"Happiest?"

"Yes."

"After I have had the toothache."

Linguist.

"What language do you speak besides English?"

"Prizefight and motor."

Up in the Garret and Down in the Basement

Do you remember that rocker you took out of the sitting-room when you got the new one?

Where is it?

Up in the garret? Down in the cellar? Out in the servant's room?

Why didn't you sell it?

Why didn't you try to sell it? Don't you know that a few cents spent on a want ad. in THE DAILY REVIEW would have brought at least $2.50 or $3.50 for it? And there are chairs enough in the back of the house without wasting that one.

O! if people only knew by experience, as we do, what big things little ads. in THE DAILY REVIEW can do for them, they wouldn't tolerate the waste and ruin of the perfectly good household articles that are now relegated to the storeroom, to be covered with dust, and finally thrown away.

Think of the people who want them, who can use them, who have place for them. Owners of apartment buildings and flats might get a hint from this, also.

A Rival's Downfall

Out of Bitterness the Lovers Drew Happiness

By ESTHER AINSLEE.

If Dalzell's store advertised a sale of silk dress goods in the Monday issue of the Rosemont Banner it was a certainty that the paper's Tuesday night number would contain an ad. from Thompson's store across the street telling of bargains in satins, with a side line of embroideries, at which Rosemont smiled appreciatively and reaped the benefit.

The town was proud of the proprietors of the two leading dry goods stores, for most of the young men left for the adjacent big city when it came time to make their way in the world, but Malcolm Dalzell and Lewis Thompson within a year of each other settled down to make a living in their home town.

Perhaps it were better to say Rosemont was proud of their enterprise, for Lewis Thompson was not the type to inspire affection in the hearts of his townsmen. A man cannot be blamed for lack of magnetism and an attractive nature, but nevertheless he suffers for it, and Thompson possessed besides these drawbacks a hot headed, quarrelsome disposition and a theory that every man had a right to look out for himself to the exclusion of any possible rights of others.

His aggressiveness made him enemies where Malcolm Dalzell won friends by his mere cheerfulness and diplomacy. But each flourished on his own side of the street.

Not only were they rivals in business, but from the days of carrying schoolbooks there had seemingly been but one girl in the world in the eyes of each, Milly Wainwright, with the waves of soft brown hair and eyes that matched it, with the sweet voice and appealing little ways.

Shrewd people even said the reason both boys stayed in Rosemont was that each was afraid to leave the other a clear field with Milly, who had never shown any preference between the two.

Lewis Thompson was a different man with her. Her mere presence smoothed and softened the aggressive young business man, and she smiled incredulously when stories of his cold shrewdness and overreaching deals came to her ears.

Yet unknown to herself Malcolm Dalzell occupied a place in her life from which no one could dislodge him. Milly was in the delicious and dreamy state of indecision which a girl always prolongs unwittingly. Life was sweet to her, and even the growing wildness of her younger brother, Dick, which was aging her father and mother, had not power to do more than depress her momentarily.

"It's only because Dick is young," she told her mother half indignantly. "He will see the mistake of his ways before he ever does anything really wrong. Why, Dick wouldn't be really bad. It's absurd!"

She was great chums with the handsome eighteen-year-old brother, and because she did have faith in him the boy turned to her always in his rare spells of repentance. At present he had gone to work in a bank in the next town, six miles distant.

The Rosemont Banner had two columns of description, speculation and denunciation when Thompson's store was robbed. Malefactors were rare in Rosemont, and the night watchman's work was perfunctory, but nevertheless Lewis Thompson discovered a back window pried open and nearly $200 worth of silks and laces missing.

Three weeks later he was reduced to explosive rage by the discovery that again his store had been entered. This time a hundred dollars' worth of goods vanished. In his wrath the owner of the store telegraphed for a city detective and established a night patrol for the block. The city detective looked important, smoked the cigars of the leading citizens, who wanted to tell him their theories as to the robbery, had a very pleasant time and departed with dark hints as to future developments.

"At any rate," Lewis Thompson said vigorously, "with Maloney on hand as a watchman the thief won't get another chance!"

"It's hard luck, Lewis," sympathized Malcolm Dalzell with his business rival. Thompson regarded him coldly. Of late Milly had been in Dalzell's company more than he liked.

"Thanks," he said. "It's funny the thief doesn't attack your premises, Malcolm. I don't understand such favoritism unless it's because he knows where the best goods are!" He smiled somewhat maliciously as he made the fling.

"Superiority has its drawbacks, then," Dalzell said quietly, holding his temper. He understood Thompson's grudge against him and could afford to be magnanimous, for he had begun to cherish a certainty that he had distanced Thompson with Milly. For her he would endure much.

Lewis Thompson did not relax his vigilance as the weeks went by. One Thursday night as he made one of his personal trips of inspection about 1 o'clock he started for his store on a run after finding the watchman, Maloney, knocked senseless at the corner. And he was rewarded. The revolver in his hand covered the dark form of the man standing at the rear window with the faint gleam of a dark lantern on the floor beside him.

Yet even Lewis Thompson was speechless when after his trembling fingers had turned on the rear light he saw the man before him was none other than Malcolm Dalzell, who stood white and quiet facing his captor.

"I—I can't comprehend," Thompson almost stammered, still covering the marauder with his revolver. "You—of all people!"

The man before him moistened his lips. "Lewis," he said at last, "will you believe me if I say, in spite of this, I'm not the robber—that it's just unfortunate circumstances that have brought this about? Will you?"

Lewis Thompson recovered his coolness, and he laughed shortly, sarcastically, glancing significantly at the dark lantern, the fallen jimmy, the goods piled at hand for removal.

"I don't see any one but you, Dalzell," he said curtly. "You've got to take your medicine. You can plead kleptomania, you know. Rising young business man, easy circumstances, no need to rob—why, of course, it's kleptomania!"

There was a little triumph edging into his laugh as what this meant to his rival dawned upon him. And it was likewise dawning upon his captive, who shut his jaw when the marshal, hastily summoned, almost refused to obey Thompson's command to take the prisoner to the jail.

"Go ahead, Smith," was all that Malcolm Dalzell would say, and he walked to the lockup with his head in the air.

The whole town shared the sensations of Smith the next morning, and the Rosemont Banner exhausted all its heavy black faced type that evening and paused only for absence of more space. It was paralyzing, horrifying, this downfall of a man like Malcolm Dalzell, one of those queer croppings out of hidden tendencies that sometimes destroy the world's best.

The three days that intervened before his preliminary hearing drew lines in Dalzell's face and gave him a pallor that usually it takes age to bring. Yet he maintained those close shut lips and, further than stating he was not guilty, refused to talk.

When he faced his friends and neighbors at the preliminary hearing there was a trace of proud defiance in his glance that yet was strangely hurt, for on many faces he read a dawning wavering in allegiance to him.

Much talk had bred suspicion, and every one knew of the long rivalry between the two men. What more natural than that Dalzell should attempt to harass, to ruin his opponent? So they waited for the sensational disclosures.

The sensation came. As usual with sensations, it was quite different from what was expected. This white faced girl, with eyes reddened by tears, who suddenly presented herself struck pity from the heart of the hardest. She spoke rapidly, breathlessly.

"Malcolm did not do it!" she protested, with tight clasped hands. "If he won't tell I will, now that I know the truth! It was Dick, my brother, and Malcolm, who also was watching, saw him and entered Thompson's store to save him, to get him away, to help him, and when Lewis Thompson came upon him—he, Malcolm, would not tell because"—

Milly Wainwright's voice died away, but the end of the sentence was furnished by Malcolm Dalzell's quick step to her side and hiding her tears on his shoulder. Both had made their sacrifice for each other and out of the bitterness had snatched happiness. And Rosemont, with the fickleness of the human race, said it served Lewis Thompson right and he should have had more common sense.

PONGEE FOR SPRING.

The War Partially Responsible For the Popularity of Oriental Silks.

The sports gown pictured here is for spring wear. It is fashioned of ecru pongee, a silk for which much favor is predicted. Owing to the war in France, we shall, of course, have to depend on what the looms of America will produce, together with the silks of the orient. The skirt of this model is quite short, gored and buttoned in front from the waist line to the hem. The jacket has a yoke and a straight peplum, the middle portion being laid in plaits. The patch pockets are also plaited. A comfortable hat with rolling brim is worn with the costume, which is suitable for golf, tennis or tramps in the country.

THE SPOTLESS KITCHEN.

Spread newspapers over the kitchen table before starting to clean poultry or any other dirty work and see what a labor saving device it is.

When a table top is very dirty and stained sprinkle a good handful of common salt over it and scrub with hot water and soap. This takes out all the stains and whitens the table splendidly.

To secure a shining surface, wipe off the range with vinegar before polishing with blacking.

When plates and dishes have to be warmed in the oven, if a newspaper is placed underneath it will break the heat and prevent the plates from cracking.

Mix a little vinegar with the stove polish, then the blacking will not fly off in fine dust, and it will not take much rubbing to polish the stove. Polish it with old newspapers.

Tack up white oilcloth on your kitchen where pans are to be hung and back of the sink where water is likely to be spattered. Also cover pantry shelves and the kitchen table. You will find this a great labor saver besides adding to the appearance of the kitchen.

Massaging the Scalp.

When you comb back the hair run the fingers over the scalp and massage with a rotary movement. It is best to wet the fingers with some good tonic or if the hair be dry to put a bit of vaseline on tip of each finger, spreading it evenly over the ends, rubbing the fingers of the left hand over those of the right. Now run the fingers up over the scalp and manipulate it with a rotary motion. As soon as the scalp assimilates the grease apply more as described. This is a simple and efficacious way of applying a stimulant to the scalp.

Cookery Points

Oyster Stews.

There are many receipes for oyster stews. One must be careful about the length of time the stew is cooked. The special point is to achieve a broth that is piping hot and filled with plenty of oysters. The oysters must be cooked enough to be shriveled. If thickened with eggs or flour the broth must be smooth and creamy, not a pasty, lumpy, curdled fluid.

To avoid imperfections strain the oyster liquid to free it from sand and shell; rub together the butter and flour used for thickening until thoroughly kneaded and stir until smooth and even. Care must be taken in measuring the flour for a cream soup. One tablespoonful to the same quantity of butter or one ounce of each by weight will usually make a quart of cream soup of the right thickness.

An excellent cream soup with oysters is made by heating one quart of oysters in their liquor, with enough cold water added to make a quart of broth. When the boiling point is reached rub the oysters through a sieve until fine, pour the liquor over the pulp and set aside where it will keep warm. Blend two ounces of butter with two of flour and stir until it bubbles briskly. Add one quart of hot milk gradually and when smooth add the oysters and liquor. Season with salt and red pepper to taste.

Dishes For Lenten Eggs.

Most of the novelty kitchen devices sold over American counters originated in Germany. German cooks delight in making many novel and special dishes in which to serve special foods. This is very likely owing to the fact that the German housewife likes to use odd shaped and gayly colored dishes on her table.

In the breakfast eggs are the quaintest little dishes of majolica. Some of them are covered and some uncovered. Many of them rest over a dish designed to hold warm water and thus keep the eggs from cooling off. A design which is especially pleasing was an arrangement of twelve little nests in the shape of half eggshells grouped around a brown hare which was standing up quaintly on its hind legs and which served a point of usefulness as a convenient handle to the dish.

Another egg set arranged in much the same fashion had a little yellow chicken, life size, as the handle and center decoration. One covered dish was topped by a comfortable looking hen with her wings spread out as if she were sitting on a nest. In all there were perhaps a dozen different designs in this attractively colored majolica ware, which has the advantage of being reasonably priced.

Baked Potatoes and Eggplant.

It is better always to help the steam to escape from baked potatoes by pricking them either before they are put into the oven about three times with a steel fork or when they are nearly done and the water in them has a good deal expanded in steam. Once in awhile a potato will burst if this is not done, and this makes work as well as loss.

And, speaking of bursting, there is no explosion on a small scale that is much louder or has a more complete scattering of substance as its accompaniment than from an eggplant which is not pricked in time, some time before it is soft. This sort of thing is perhaps more likely to happen if the vegetable is put in the oven straight from the refrigerator.

In the course of baking the skin of this vegetable becomes drier and drier until it is stiff and hard as the hardest leather and as shiny as that called patent. The vegetable being so largely water, when this is thoroughly hot and begins to turn to steam, the cook should provide a vent; otherwise she will lose her eggplant, get a good fright and have a very mussy oven to clean.

Cream Puff Shells.

Cream puff shells, which are not at all difficult to make, are a great help in arranging dainty meals. Not only for desserts and entrees, but for the main course at luncheon, they may be used to advantage.

The shells, filled with a salad or aspic jelly, are something of a novelty, and as they lend themselves to attractive garnishing they have much in their favor.

For desserts they may be used in many ways. Filled with ice cream, fresh or cooked fruit, topped with whipped cream or meringue or with any one of the numerous cold custards or a blancmange, they will not fail to find a welcome.

Keeping Lemons.

Lemons can be kept a long time without becoming dry if put into a jar of water with a lid. The water should be changed once a week if they are to be kept long. When used they will be quite as firm as when fresh and, if anything, more juicy.

The juice of a lemon added to a pan of water will freshen wilted vegetables. Let them stand in it for an hour.

Boiling Rice.

When boiling rice add a little lemon juice to the water. This will give it a whiter appearance and make it dry and grainy.

Trying to Cure Insomnia

The immediate cause of insomnia is the presence of too much blood in the brain. The feet go to sleep first, so use a hot water bag or a soapstone first of all to see if you cannot draw the blood to the extremities or soak the feet in hot mustard water just before retiring, but you must not do this too often.

If very nervous put a mustard plaster at the back of the neck. The little ones already prepared and sold at the drug store for 5 cents each are nice for this purpose. One of the simplest and usually an effective method is to place a hot water bottle on the stomach. Never use drugs. They deaden, but do not heal.

Weeds.

During the past five years agricultural investigation work has been conducted along various lines by the Lands Committee of the Commission of Conservation. The weed question has received considerable attention and some facts have been revealed which show the real seriousness of this problem. Many of the worst weeds are getting ahead of the farmers and unless methods of control are put into practice at once, the weeds will gain the upper hand.

In 1910, 100 farmers were visited in each of the Prairie Provinces and on 100 per cent. of the Manitoba farms, wild oats were found. In Saskatchewan, 71 per cent. and in Alberta, 3 per cent. reported wild oats. In 1911 on the same farms in Alberta, 31 per cent. reported wild oats while, in 1912, a still larger number reported this weed, showing that it was traveling westward rapidly.

MRS. CARMAN TO FACE NEW TRIAL

Important Evidence Has Been Discovered

MINEOLA, N. Y., April 5 — Mrs. Florence Conklin Carman, wife of Dr. Edwin Carman, of Freeport, will go on trial again charged with the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey.

District Attorney Smith of Nassau county announced that the case would be called May 10th, Justice Abel E. Blackmar of Kings county having been assigned to preside at the trial.

The district attorney intimated that he had discovered important new evidence. He declined, however, to indicate its character, and said that both he and counsel for Mrs. Carman had agreed not to discuss the case in any manner before it is called.

Frank Farrell, the wandering engineer, who was an important witness against Mrs. Carman, is said to have disappeared, but all the other witnesses for the prosecution, including Celia Coleman, Mrs. Carman's negro maid, are asserted to be within call.

MORE POULTRY NEEDED.

Canada is short fifteen hundred thousand hens, averaging one hundred eggs per year. Canada in 1914 imported two hundred thousand dollars' worth more poultry than she exported, and imported eggs to the enormous amount in value of $2,500,000 in excess of her shipments abroad. These are the somewhat surprising, if not alarming, statements made by the poultry division of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, from which also emanates the important announcement that Britain took from Belgium, France, Russia, Germany and Austria-Hungary in the available months of 1914 three million dollars' worth of poultry, and 136,000,000 dozen, or sixteen hundred and thirty-two million, eggs — sufficient to give two million two hundred and thirty-five thousand six hundred and sixteen people two eggs apiece for every day in the year. Such facts must surely convey a world of meaning to poultry breeders in Canada. These facts are further emphasized by the statement that the average egg yield per hen in this country is but 80 eggs per year, which we are further assured by experts could, by careful selection, feeding and housing be increased to 180 eggs per hen per year. As the head of the division at Ottawa remarks, "It would be a profitable thing to strive for." Pamphlets particularly bearing on the subject, which can be had free on addressing the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, are No. 1, "Winter Egg Production," by W. A. Brown; No. 2, "The Crate Fattening of Poultry," by T. A. Benson; No. 3, "The Candling of Eggs," by W. A. Brown; Noo. 4, "The Organization of Co-operative Egg Circles," by W. A. Brown; No. 5, "Plan of Permanent Laying House for Poultry," by W. A. Brown and T. A. Benson, and No. 6, "The Payment of Eggs According to Quality," by W. A. Brown, J. H. Hare and W. H. Ault. Other publications that can be had are by F. C. Elford, dealing with Incubation and "The Farmer's Poultry House," and by Victor Fortier, on "Duck Raising" and "The Management of Turkeys and Geese."

COOKING WITH ELECTRICITY

Conservation Bulletin Compares it in Cost and Results With Gas

Electricity is rapidly replacing gas and other fuels for cooking purposes, says the current issue of Conservation. Thus, the electric iron, which a short time ago was considered a luxury, has become a necessity and a money saver in the most humble household.

For cooking, electricity has long been known to be superior to older methods, but, in the past, the price of both the energy consumed and the necessary appliances has been so high as to prevent its general use.

Of late, electric central stations have become aware that it is to their advantage to offer a very low rate for their use, and prices ranging from 1c to 3c per k.w.h. are now quite common. As a result, more appliances are being used and, as the consumption increases, the manufacturer lowers his price. As an example: two or three years ago, a 5 lbs. electric iron cost $5; today, a better quality can be obtained for one-half that price.

Less Shrinkage Loss.

One peculiar feature of electric cooking, aside from safety, (no matches, no leaky pipes, no open but unlit valve cocks) is that in cooking meats, fish, fowl, etc., whether baked or broiled, the actual loss in weight or "shrinkage" is much less than when the cooking is done by coal, charcoal, or gas.

Comparative Results.

As figures constitute the most convincing argument, the following table is taken from a paper read before the Canadian Electrical Association last year. It shows the comparative cost of cooking various articles on the electric range and gas range, electricity being taken at 2 cents per kilowatt-hour and gas at $1 per thousand cubic feet.

Roast beef—Electricity, time 109 minutes, cost 2.6 cents; gas, time 70 minutes, cost 3.9 cents.

Steamed potatoes—Electricity, 87 minutes; cost, 0.3 1-2 cents; gas, 45 minutes, cost 0.5 cents.

Bread — Electricity 77 minutes, cost 2.5 cents; gas, 55 minutes, cost 2.7 cents.

Apple pies—Electricity 60 minutes, cost 1.5 cents; gas 70 minutes, cost 3 cents.

Broiled chicken — Electricity 95 minutes, cost 1.3 cents; gas, 101 minutes, cost 1.4 cents.

In many localities, particularly in Ontario, the rate for electricity is as low as 1c per kw. hr. and the cost given under electric range will be just one-half that shown in the table.

A Bread Test.

As a further confirmation of the low cost of electric baking, we may take the figures obtained in a test carried out in a western city where batches of three ordinary domestic loaves of bread were baked, one batch in a modern gas range and the other in an electric range. Taking the same comparative rates, that is, electricity at 2 cents per kw. hr. and gas at $1 per thousand cubic feet, the cost with gas was 6.0c. as compared with only 2.8c with electricity.

Some Points Brought Out.

In general the experience of those who have tried electric cooking has brought out the following facts:

(1) Joints of meat and steak are cooked better and lose less in weight than by other means, the electric method requiring also a shorter period of training to enable the attendant to secure good results.

(2) The certainty that, if the same time is given for the same operation, exactly the same result will be produced.

(3) The convenience and cleanliness and the avoidance of an unhealthful atmosphere in the kitchen.

(4) Where rates for electricity are reasonably low a saving is effected.

LAID AT REST

The funeral of the late William Fair, who passed away on the morning of March 30 at the residence of his son, Mr. Robert Fair, 505 Dickson street, city, was held on Thursday, April 1. The remains were transferred to Millbrook on Thursday morning per the 8:10 G. T. R. train, and placed in St. Thomas Church, where service was conducted at 2:00 p.m. by Rev. Canon Allan, rector of the parish, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Westmacot, also of Millbrook, who was a warm friend of the late Mr. Fair. Rev. Canon Davidson of St. John's Church, city, also assisted.

There was a large and representative number of people in attendance, among whom were Ald. G. W. Green, Messrs. J. H. Ferguson and R. M. Waddell, of Peterborough, Col. McLean, Messrs. Geo. N. Patterson, John Walker and A. G. Waddell, of Port Hope, and William F. Allen, a nephew, of Bowmanville.

The mourners were Mr. Robert Fair, a son, and two grandsons, Walker and Allen Fair.

The floral tributes, which were many and beautiful, testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held in the community. Among the many floral tributes were two from the employes of Messrs. Robt. Fair and Company, Peterborough.

After the service at St. Thomas Church the funeral cortege proceeded to St. Paul's Church cemetery, Cavan, where interment took place in the family plot.

Six nephews of the deceased, Messrs. James McCamus, James Fair, Thomas Wood, W. B. Campbell, Robert McCamus and George Fair, were the pallbearers. As a tribute of respect to an old friend the merchants of Millbrook dropped the blinds of their stores during the passing of the funeral cortege.

RETURNED PRINCESS PATS DESCRIBE INTRODUCTION TO THE KAISER'S FORCES

Were Four Days in the Mud and Water of Trenches Without Relief

Corp. Robert Staples, of 705 King Edward avenue, Ottawa, and Sergt. Charles Garwood, two soldiers invalided home from the Princess Patricia regiment, now fighting in France, gave an interesting joint account of the conditions at the battle front, how trench warfare is carried out, the effect of the heavy howitzer shells, etc., to a Citizen reporter when seen at the home of Corp. Staples.

These two soldiers were in the trenches the first time with the Princess Pats, when they had four days and five nights of it, because the firing was so heavy that reinforcements could not be brought up. They tell of the water and mud in the trenches. They were in hospital later with bronchitis, rheumatism and other illness due to the exposure the soldiers at the front have to undergo.

Long Stay in Trenches.

"The first time we went into the trenches was on January 6th," said one of the men, in course of a conversation in which both took part.

"We were there for four days and five nights. It was not the fault of the officers that we were kept there so long, but they could not get up the reserves. It was so dangerous that the relieving troops could not get in. Germans were pouring shells on to this part of the firing line and the snipers were picking off anyone who showed his head, so we could not get relief. The troops are moved in and out of the trenches only during the nights. You are lucky to get through safe even then.

The Big "Jack Johnsons."

Robert Staples
Ottawa

"THOSE big shells, 'Jack Johnsons,' certainly tear up ground. When a shell hits the ground right and explodes it tears up a hole fully six feet deep and easily 20 feet across. When you were quietly leaving the trenches in the night and making back towards the base, first thing you know you tumble into one of these big holes. That is when you curse the 'Jack Johnsons.' You get some bad falls that way. One of our men was badly injured in this way. These holes are all around the trenches and in the darkness you cannot see them.

Days in the Water.

"When we went into the trenches the first time they were two and three feet of water and mud in them. It was cold, you may believe. This mud and water was almost at the freezing point. There was no way to escape it. You just had to stand in it hour after hour, day after day. If you tried to get out your head might project above the parapet and a German sniper would pick you off. You would lean up against the wall but the man next to you would bump you into wakefulness again.

German Charges.

"The Germans charged us several times while we were in the trenches on the first visit. Their trenches in many cases were not more than 40 yards from ours. There would be a heavy cannonading, then suddenly the Germans would scramble over the trenches and make for us. They would rush on 8 and 10 deep and we would mow them down as they came. They never actually reached our trenches while we were there, but they got pretty close before they had to give way before our fire. The casualties were awful for them on these rushes.

Germans Good Shots.

"Say, but those German snipers can shoot. They could shoot the wings off a fly without touching its body. The reason a great many of our young fellows got hit in the first fight was that they were so anxious to see the shells bursting that they would forget and stick their heads out, when the Germans were always waiting. You could not sleep, night or day.

"The enemy kept the sky illuminated with bursting shells all night. Some times they get the range and drop a shell right into the trench. It will clear out a whole bunch of men. The way we did when under the artillery fire was, as the shells began to drop near one part of the trench, to move away to some other part and let them fire ahead. Then when they shifted the fire, we would move back again.

Construction of Trenches.

"Sometimes we stood close together in the trenches, in groups. Sometimes extended ten feet or so apart, always on the watch. The trenches as a rule are six feet deep. Some are shallower, according to the nature of the soil. When the trenches are dug, some of the earth is taken to make a parapet, a little ridge in front of the trench about nine inches high, so that we could rest our elbows on the top of the trench and shoot over this parapet. The sods from the earth are saved and cover this little ridge so that the enemy cannot distinguish the fresh earth, which would give them a mark to shoot at.

Three Trench Lines.

"There are always three lines of trenches lying one behind the other. One is the firing line. The next one is for the transports and the third is for the reserves. There are passageways cut from one line of trenches to the other, so that the men can take turns on the firing line. Besides the front trenches, there are the flank trenches running at an angle to the front ones. These were dug so that if the enemy attacked from the side, we could run around to the flank trench and fire on them from there.

"We were in the trenches several times after the first occasion, but only for short periods. There were some fearful sights around them," and here he gave a description of the frozen bodies of soldiers who had fallen in battle.

Wonderful Endurance.

"It seems almost impossible that men could endure standing in the icy water for so long a time," remarked the reporter.

"Well, it was possible, because they did it," answered the man from the Princess Pats.

"We went right into the trenches the first time with our ordinary outfits, wearing boots and puttees. Our great coats dragged in the water and many of the men, when the coats got wet or soggy, cut a foot or so off the bottoms of them. They were queer looking outfits after that. The government later gave us short fur coats which were a great help.

Shouted to Germans.

"We used to shout over to the Germans to come across and have dinner with us. But they never got across. When we were in the trenches all we had to eat was bully beef and biscuits. The Army Service Corps would bring the loads of provisions up at night and dump them into the trenches of the reserves. We did not take long distributing the beef and biscuits as soon as it got into the trenches. We looked after that all right.

"However, back at the base we were well fed, had lots of everything. The difficulty was in getting the provisions into the trenches.

The Fake Story.

"Did you read that about the Princess Pats eating their Christmas turkeys in the trenches? Wasn't that the limit? Say, if the Princess Pats could have got hold of the reporter who sent over that stuff about our slouch hats and our great charge we would have finished him. The first time we were in the trenches was on January 6. The Pats were certainly sore about that crazy despatch. It was surely a great joke getting turkeys into the trenches.

Sunday Was Pats' Day.

"Sunday was a particular day with the Princess Pats. We were moved from the steamship Megantic to Levis on Sunday. We sailed for England on the Royal George on Sunday. We landed at Salisbury on a Sunday. We struck tents and moved to Winchester on a Sunday. We left Winchester for France on Sunday. In our division when we marched out of Winchester for Southampton were such famous regiments as the King's Royal Rifles, the Gloucesters and the Rifle Brigade.

Sufferings at Salisbury.

"We were glad to leave Salisbury camp, where we suffered almost as much from the mud and water as we did in the trenches. I never remember when it was as cold in England as while we were there. The Canadians seemed to suffer worse from the damp cold in England and France than they do from the severe cold here. The mud was almost as bad at the camp at Winchester. It was in places fully two feet deep.

Did Not Improve Soldiers.

"The Princess Pats were in better condition when they left Canada than when they left England. So were the other Canadians. They were in better shape physically when they left Valcartier. I suppose the reason they were kept so long in England was that they were not needed in France at that time. There were many thousands of troops at the base in France when we arrived there.

"There was quite a lot of snow in France when we were there, and it was quite cold. When we were back from the firing line we had to drill nearly every day.

Orders in Trenches.

"In the trenches the orders are usually passed along. The officer gives the order to some man. He tells it to the man next to him. The second man repeats it to see that he understands it right, then passes it on to the man next to him, and so on, until it has gone the entire length of the line. Of course, when the enemy rushed, there were no orders, each man had to use his own head.

Praise for Major Gault.

"Major Hamilton Gault has the right stuff in him. He stayed right with the men every time and every man in the regiment is strong for him. You cannot say anything too good about our major. He is expected to go back and take command of the regiment. There could not be a more popular officer."

Both Corp. Staples and Sergt. Garwood were in hospital in England as a result of the hardships they underwent in the trenches, and came over after they left hospital on the steamship Missinabie. They tell their stories of life at the front in a modest way, but it can be easily seen that they have played their part well in the great war, helping to make the name of the Princess Patricia Regiment famous. There came with them on the ship, also invalided home, Sergt.-Major James Lee of Toronto, Sergt. Douglas Ward of Saskatoon, Sergt.-Major Sanson of Calgary, Lance-Corp. Hugh Horne of London, Pte. J. Fraser of Winnipeg and Pte. Corby. The only one of these to be wounded was Sergt.-Major Lee, who was shot in the hand, and the wound has not healed well.

The Ross Rifle.

With regard to the Ross rifle, one of the returned soldiers said that the chief objection to it was that it had the peep sight. But it is a splendid shooting rifle. "When you get a man covered with the Ross you have him," remarked Sergt. Garwood.

TO DEAL WITH SHORTAGE.

Parliament May Be Asked To Take Up Grain Situation.

OTTAWA, April 5.—The afternoon sitting of the House Saturday was entirely taken up with the estimates for the grain commission, the terminal and internal elevators and the administration of the Canada Grain Act. Sir George Foster stated that ten million bushels of grain had gone through the Government elevator at Fort William during the crop year of 1913. He intimated that Parliament would be asked at this session to deal with the question of grain shortage. He had endeavored to bring about an agreement between the shippers at the head of navigation, the lake carriers and the eastern elevators, but had been unsuccessful so far as the eastern elevators were concerned. His suggestion was that the shippers should make up any shortage to the extent of ten bushels in the thousand, and the eastern elevators any shortage above that. Of course in the case of any considerable discrepancy the parties affected would still have a right to appeal to the courts.

Trying To Starve Montenegro.

ROME, April 5. — Despatches received here from Cettinje, the capital of Montenegro, indicate that Austria-Hungary is endeavoring to cut off Montenegro from all communication with the outside world and thus starve her.

The dual monarchy is described as surrounding this small state with overwhelming forces of Croats on the mountains, in addition to a garrison of 40,000 men at Cattaro, which prevents any communication with Herzegovina and the Adriatic.

Against about 100,000 Austrians Montenegro can oppose only 15,000 men, with limited artillery. Something like 70,000 people from villages in Bosnia, burned by Austrian troops, have taken refuge in Montenegro.

Danish King Recovering.

LONDON, April 5. — King Christian, according to Reuter's correspondent at Copenhagen, underwent a slight operation on Friday. He has recovered and no further bulletins will be issued concerning him.

DIDN'T EXPECT TO REGISTER AT A HOTEL

Members of 39th Battalion Are not Inclined to Complain

A Review reporter who spoke with several members of the 39th battalion who were home from Belleville over Easter, found as was quite natural, that all did not have the same statements to make in regard to conditions at their headquarters. One soldier said he did not go to Belleville expecting to be registered at a hotel and receive the benefits of hotel accommodation and he was not inclined to complain. Another thought the canning factory in which the soldiers were quartered might be worse. The accommodation was, he had been told, as good as that at Kingston. Another private said there were some things that should be remedied but everything considered, there was little cause for complaint.

The Belleville Ontario's report of the trouble was as follows:

The death of Pte. A. T. Davidson of C Company in Belleville hospital and the aversion of some of the soldiers of the 39th Battalion to the canning factory reached a head last night about ten o'clock. Thenceforward for two hours military and civilian circles were in a whirl of excitement.

During the past week there has been some talk around town of an outbreak of sickness among the men of the regiment, and hints were made that the illness was really meningitis. Some soldiers were removed to the Belleville hospital and among them was Pte. A. T. Davidson of C Company, of Lorneville, Victoria county, above Lindsay. He was 19 years of age and a recent arrival at the camp. On Monday he entered the hospital and yesterday afternoon he died.

There is no doubt in the least that death was caused by meningitis.

There are some other soldier cases in the hospital, some of them being down with cerebral grip and some possibly with a disease of a meningial nature.

Last evening the news reached the soldiers, and as a precautionary measure the bedding of the dead man and that of the soldiers who slept in the same bunk was taken out and destroyed. It was decided to separate the men and have the dead soldier's section housed at the Belleville armouries until further arrangements could be made at the barracks in the canning factory. While this work of fumigation was being conducted, soldiers arriving about ten o'clock at the barracks were kept outside. They did not know the reason for this action and became impatient. Suddenly they saw a number of men marching out with rifles and kits, and thinking they were breaking camp, the men outside thought they would do likewise. Once the suggestion was made, it was at once acted upon. They seized their kits and began shouting, and struck for the Grand Trunk station. On their way up there was excitement galore, although they did not molest anybody. There were anywhere from thirty to fifty men in the crowd.

Col. Preston, O. C. the 39th, was at once notified of the movement, and sent officers and a picket of 50 men to the G. T. R. station.

It was said that the intention of the men was to return by the midnight train to their homes. There the officers met them, and entered nito conversation with them. It was finally arranged that the soldiers should return and be housed in the armouries for the present, as they were afraid to go back to the canning factory, and that no mark was to be entered against them. On these terms the men returned with the picket and entered the armouries, which were placed at their disposal by Lt.-Col. Marsh of the 15th Regiment.

The men who were concerned in the trouble were many of them new men, some having come in as late as Saturday last. They had come without officers, and unorganized.

Yesterday some of the men came into possession of money and in some way had got bottles of liquor, although the shops and bars were closed.

The whole affair on the part of the soldiers was a stampede for fear of meningitis infection. There has been a growing objection to the canning factory's sleeping quarters by some of the soldiers. Doubtless the quarters are very much cramped.

This morning it was stated at headquarters that the men in the trouble were not under arrest. They will be accommodated at the armouries until better arrangements are made.

The street last night and this morning was alive with all kinds of unfounded rumors of guards who had been overcome by soldiers breaking bounds, of riots, etc.

This morning the sight of the guard on the armouries gave some color to the rumors. It was even said that one hundred and twenty prisoners were inside. This morning men who were not prisoners were marched out and returned with bedding and other supplies.

Pte. Davidson is the first soldier to die of th 39th Battalion. It is thought he may have brought the germ of the disease with him. His home is at Lorneville, ut his detachment was organized at Lindsay. His father is station agent at Lindsay.

Among those who succeeded in passing their military examinations, qualifying for lieutenants and non-commissioned officers, held at Port Hope during January and February and March were the following;

Lieutenants — Weatherspoon of Port Hope, Gillis of Port Hope, Etcher of Cobourg, Legot of Lakefield, Carter of Lakefield, Browing of Lakefield, formerly of Peterborough, Spafford and Wright of Newcastle and Fair of Peterborough.

Those who qualified as non-commissioned officers were Davis of Norwood and Ball, Mahood and Le May.

Three of the lieutenants have since volunteered for active service but appointments have not been secured for them yet. They are Spafford, Wright and Fair.

Lt.-Col. Fee has made aplication to the militia department for the organization of a provincial military school at Lindsay. The miltary sipirit seems to have caught on locally among our young men, many of whom are anxious to identify themselves with the 45th Regiment. — Lindsay Post.

Capt. J. W. Wallace of Lindsay has in his possession a sword that was carried by his father (the late Col. Wm. Wallace, of Millbrook) during the rebellion of 1837. Capt. Wallace states that he carried the sword as a commissioned officer of the militia from 1866 until his retirement in 1898.

BULGARS ROUTED

Serbians Have Driven Back Band of Raiders.

Irregular Force of Bulgarians in Uniform Which Attacked Serbian Frontier Station is Repulsed With Considerable Loss on Both Sides.

LONDON, April 5. — The Serbian legation in London yesterday received the following despatch from Nish:

"Bulgarian irregulars were driven back from Strumitsa. The fight was short. When reinforcements arrived our advanced posts cleared the Strumitsa station and the invaders fled in the direction of Bulgaria.

"Our troops, pursuing the enemy, found 30 of their dead, and it is presumed that others were carried away. We lost 50 killed."

An official statement on Saturday said:

"At about 2 a.m. Saturday Bulgarian irregulars wearing military uniforms attacked in large numbers our outposts at Valandove. Our frontier guards, overwhelmed by superior numbers, were forced to give ground and retreated in the direction of the railway station at Strumitsa.

"At 5 a.m. the Bulgarians occupied al the heights on the left bank of the Varder. The losses on both sides were serious.

"Wounded soldiers state that the Bulgarian bands manoeuvred and fought under the direction of Bulgarian officers. The number of troops engaged was slightly more than a regiment."

The Petit Journal of Paris says that Serbia has protested to Bulgaria because of the invasion of Serbian territory by a force described as Bulgarian irregulars. While couched in moderate terms, the protest is strong and demands the arrest and imprisonment of the soldiers responsible for the raid. Further details of the incident received yesterday confirm the report that invaders were driven away from the railroad station at Strumitsa, the Serbian town near the Bulgarian border, where the attack was made.

The Serbian frontier guards who pursued the fleeing irregulars retook the two cannon which had been captured.

This is said to be the fifth incident of its kind since the beginning of the European war, and there is much speculation in Paris as to their exact significance. It is felt that the attitude of Bulgaria on this occasion will indicate what policy she intends to pursue.

A despatch from Rome says:

"D. Rizow, Bulgarian Minister to Rome, expressed the opinion yesterday that the incident on the Serbo-Bulgarian border was the work of Macedonian revolutionists in Serbia, who are opposed to the Serbian regime in the territory gained in the Balkan wars, in which the fighting occurred. M. Rizow asserted that the Bulgarian Government was in no way responsible for the affair and that its only desire was to preserve neutrality.

"M. Ristitch, the Serbian Minister, took issue with M. Rizow's statement. He says, having spent 30 years in the region concerned, he knew it thoroughly and could affirm that the Macdonians in this part of Siberia had no desire to oppose the present order of things.

"Responsibility for the incident might be determined by considering to whose interests it would be to provoke such an outbreak. This, he said, pointed clearly to Bulgaria, which by occupying the left bank of the Varder river could threaten to cut Serbian communications with Saloniki, the only source from which the country could bring in its supplies. Already, he said, communication by telegraph and telephone had been cut."

A semi-official communication from Nish, Serbia, to Reuter's, says that the invading force scattered among the Serbian frontier villages and compelled the inhabitants to remove to Bulgaria, taking their goods and cattle with them. It is also stated, although not confirmed, that the invaders set fire to the Serbian blockhouse at Plauvotch and Borakli.

ENEMY LOSE THREE BOATS

Two Coasters and a Steamer Lost in the Baltic

FRENCH FISHING VESSEL TORPEDOED

LONDON, April 5. — "A despatch from Malmo," says Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent, "asserts that two German coasting steamers during the last few days have struck floating mines and sunk in the Baltic Sea, in immediate proximity to the route between Trelleborg and Sassnitz, with which points traffic has been temporarily suspended. The crews of the steamers were saved. Some of the men have been landed at Sassnitz."

A Reuter despatch from Stockholm says the German steamer Grete Hemsoth has struck a mine in the Baltic and sunk, and that 25 members of her crew were drowned.

The Grete Hemsoth was a vessel of 1,554 tons. She was engaged in traffic between Sweden and Germany.

The steamer City of Bremen of Dublin has been sunk by a German submarine off Wolf Rock, in the English Channel, about fifteen miles south of Land's End, Cornwall.

Four members of the crew of the steamer were drowned. Twelve survivors have arrived in Penzance.

The three-masted fishing vessel Paquerette of Fecamp, France, was sunk Saturday by a German submarine off Etretat, nine miles southwest of Fecamp. The crew of the fisherman were rescued in the ship's boats or by the boats of a nearby sloop.

The Paquerette had just sailed for the Newfoundland fishing banks with a crew of thirty-two men.

The British steamer Lockwood was torpedoed by a German submarine Friday night off Start Point, in Devonshire. The members of the crew were saved.

RECALL OFFICERS

Observers With the German Army Find Tension Too High

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The five American army officers on duty as military observers with German armies have been ordered home, and their places will not be taken by other officials. The reason assigned by Secretary of War Garrison for the recalled order was that their mission had been fulfilled. This explanation it was announced, would be the War Department's last word on the matter. It is known, however, that other reasons, largely of a personal character, were considered by army officials in determining to withdraw the observers.

The American officers, it is said have found their position somewhat difficult because of the high tension to which at least a few of those with whom they must come in contact in Germany have been strung by months of warfare and press reports in Germany criticizing the attitude of the United States on various subjects relating to the war. International complications are feared.

TURKISH VESSEL SUNK BY MINE

Medjidiah Blown up in the Black Sea

LONDON, April 5.—The sinking of the Turkish armored cruiser Medjidieh is reported from Petrograd to Reuter's Telegram Co. A semi-official communication from Sebastopol to Petrograd says that the Medjidieh struck a mine near the Russian coast Saturday night and went down.

The Medjidieh was a member of the Turkish Black Sea fleet, which has attacked Russian ports on several occasions and sunk Russian vessels. On Jan. 31 it was announced at Petrograd that the Medjidieh, with the Turkish cruiser Midirli, formerly the German cruiser Breslau, had been discovered near Samsoon by the Russian fleet, but escaped after a long pursuit.

A Berlin despatch states that Turkish headquarters reports that the crew of the Medjidieh were all saved by a Turkish warship.

The sailors of the Medjidieh, the despatch adds, before their ship sank, removed the breech locks of the guns, and torpedoed the cruiser to prevent her being refloated by the Russians.

Rich Woman Dead.

BALTIMORE, April 5.—Miss Mary Garrett, only daughter of the late John W. Garrett, died suddenly Friday night at the Deanery, Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania, where she had been living for several years.

Miss Garrett was one of the best known women philanthropists in this country. She was considered the richest woman in Maryland, her fortune having been estimated as ranging between $15,000,000 and $20,000,000.

William C. Martin Dead.

KINGSTON, April 5. — William C. Martin, aged 62, a life-long resident of this city, is dead. Twenty-five years ago he was manager of Kingston's Opera House. He was well-known all over eastern Canada. He is survived by his wife, four daughters and two sons.

MOUNTAIN PASSES ARE CARRIED BY RUSSIANS

Arrival of Permysl Army in Nick of Time Gives Russians Great Advantage in Invasian of Hungary.

LONDON, April 5.—The most important news from the eastern theatre, confirmed by a Vienna official despatch, is the capture of the central crest of the Beskid range by the Russians after a terrific battle lasting over a week.

In a despatch from Petrograd, Frederick Rennet, the special correspondent of The London Daily News, says:

After a week of fierce and incessant fighting the Russians have captured the central crest of the Beskid Mountains and opened another passage into Hungary. The battle began fourteen miles north of the position now won.

The infantry often had to buffet its way through snowdrifts reaching to their necks.

The defenders, chiefly Germans, resisted with the utmost vigor until the continued Russian successes between Lupkow and Uszok Passes threatened their left flank.

The victory in the Beskids presages a battle involving much larger forces than could be employed in the high and narrow mountain roads. Fighting in the mountains has been for positions 2,000 and 3,000 feet high.

The new entrance into Hungary opens the way into a different country, where the Carpathian ridge declines into broad, undulating forests 700 to 1,200 feet above the Hungarian plain.

An earlier cable from the correspondent of The London Daily Telegraph at Petrograd states:

It is evident from the number of prisoners taken by the Russians that their advance through the Carpathians is proceeding with accelerated speed. The battle is still being waged for that section of the actual summit of the Carpathians between Meridians, Yasliska and Lutowiska.

For some time the Russians have been taking prisoners in this region alone at the rate of something like a corps a fortnight. No army can stand attrition at this rate for a prolonged period. In their latest advance the Russians found in the melting snow numbers of cannon and large quantities of ammunition abandoned by the Austrians in their retreat.

The Beskid mountains referred to form part of the boundary between Hungary and Galicia. They are a section following the Carpathian range, the natural barrier upon which Austria-Hungary relies to halt the Russian advance.

On the mountain heights and in the passes fighting has been in progress all winter, notwithstanding the snows and bitter cold. Recently the Russians have announced important successes in this struggle, although these claims hitherto had not been corroborated in Vienna. The fighting in the Beskids has been severe recently, as is shown by the official reports. The Austrian statement of Saturday said it had been ascertained that all the Russian divisions released by the fall of the Galician fortress of Permysl were now on the Carpathian front.

In Bessarabia the Austrian army of invasion was enveloped by Cossacks, who used the bayonet with disastrous results to the enemy, forcing a general retreat.

A Central News despatch from Amsterdam says:

"Reliable information from Belgium declares that the Germans intend this week to inundate the towns of Santvliet, Beerendrecht, Starbroeck, Mordepan and Wilmarsdonk. All of these towns are situated on or near the western bank of the Scheldt.

The following official statement was issued by the French War Office last night:

"The day has been calm on the whole front, save in the Woevre district, where our progress has continued. We have taken possession of the village of Regnieville, about two and one-half kilometres to the west of Fay-en-Haye, which we occupied on April 1."

OUTFALL SEWER WORK.

Owing to the light rainfall of March, the city engineering department feels rather hopeful that the work on the outfall sewer will not be held up because of water, to the extent as was previously anticipated. It is usual for the river to swell about May 1st but unless there is considerable rain during April the work will not be seriously affected.

A STORM ON EAST COAST

Steamer Prinz Mauritz Lost With Fifty on Board

COMMUNICATION CUT

NEW YORK, April 5.—Death and disaster rode on the terrific hurricane which swept the Atlantic coast, according to reports from many points received yesterday. Almost a dozen vessels of various kinds foundered at sea or were swept to their doom on the shoals, taking a toll of 74 human lives, of whom four were passengers and the remainder seamen. Other lives, dozens of them, were saved by the breeches buoy, and the "S.O.S." wireless call brought succor to more. The gale which wrought such havoc at sea accomplished its work on land, too. Telegraph and telephone wires are down all along the coast, so that only the most meagre details of the disaster are obtainable. When all the facts are learned the hurricane toll will undoubtedly far exceed its present known numbers.

Well founded conjectures that the steamer Prinz Mauritz of the Royal Dutch West Indies Co. Line had gone down, possibly with all on board, were expressed last night in a wireless message received from the steamer Algonquin, which Saturday went to the aid of the Prinz Mauritz, reported in distress off Cape Hatteras.

The message from the Algonquin said the last heard from the Prinz Mauritz were the words: "Sinking fast." The Algonquin's message added: "No later news was received from her, but all hands are supposed to have perished."

IRISHMEN LOYAL

Fifty Thousand Are Now at Front Says Redmond

DUBLIN, April 5. — Dublin presented all the appearance of an armed camp yesterday, the occasion being a review of the Irish National Volunteers by John Redmond.

Thirty thousand men, representing every county and town in Ireland came to the metropolis to take part in the display. Some of these were from remote parts like Donegal, and had been traveling all night, and about 7 o'clock yesterday morning were camped at Amiens station. The majority, however, were able to make the journey by leaving their homes in the early morning hours. They arrived by special trains, many bringing their bands with them.

The program included a great review and the marshalling of the combined forces in Phoenix Park, as well as a salute and a march-past in the city itself.

Shortly after midday all the roads leading to Phoenix Park were thronged with detachments of volunteers and immense crowds of spectators who cheered the troops lustily as they passed by and as each county from which they came was made known. The finest turnout undoubtedly was from Belfast, but perhaps for the best physique and greatest numbers the strongest detachment was that from Tipperary.

Mr. Redmond, in the course of his speech, said that of the Nationalist and Ulster Volunteers who had organized to fight one another more than 50,000 were fighting side by side on the continent or training to go there.

Limerick also has altered its opinion of the British army. Officers who during the week secured 300 recruits in Limerick, were heartily welcomed by the people, and the recruits were lustily cheered when they presented themselves.

RECESS FOR LIQUOR

French Deputy Describes the Habits of Dockers

PARIS, April 5.—Joseph Reinach a member of the Chamber of Deputies, contributes to The Temps another of his occasional articles on the results of intemperance. In this article M. Reinach gives what he declares is the usual course of the dock laborer's day, as follows:

From 7 to 8 a.m., work; from 8 to 8.15, morning lunch, with spirits; 8.15 to 10, work; 10 to 10.30, appetizer; 10.30 to 11, work; 11 to 12.30 p.m., lunch; 12:30 to 3, work; 3 to 3.30, afternoon lunch, with spirits; 3.30 to 5, work; 5 to 5.15, appetizer; 5.15 to 6, work.

By 5 o'clock, M. Reinach says, the greater number of the men are drunk. He says he has accumulated testimony of surgeons and nurses which shows that the temperate wounded recover quickly, while the intemperate recover from their wounds slowly, or not at all.

Things refuse to be mismanaged long—Carlyle.

SUSPECTS WERE SENT TO JAIL

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., April 4.—Carl Schmidt and Gustoff Stephens, arrested on suspicion of being German spies, pleaded guilty Saturday to carrying loaded revolvers and were sentenced to three months' imprisonment. After completing their time they will be charged with espionage. It is stated here Schmidt has offered to assist the authorities in getting full information regarding the source from which they were employed in the United States and sent across the border at Detroit. The men were arrested after acting in a suspicious manner along the Canadian Pacific lines.

Great Britain's intention of stopping all messages sent over cables under British control relating to trade in contraband or non-contraband "to which a resident in any enemy country is one of the parties" has been communicated to the United States Government.

ARCHBISHOP ISSUES CALL

His Grace of Canterbury Urges Suspension of Drinking

LONDON, April 5. — The Archbishop of Canterbury in his Easter sermon at Canterbury Cathedral said:

"Unless we can decisively destroy the insidious lure to intoxicating drink, the whole issues of the war, we are told, may be affected. Can it be so? Is it thinkable that for want of effort and discipline brought to bear upon ourselves at home, we shall let the splendid devotion of our brothers and our sons in the trenches and on the battleships be wasted? To every thoughtful man and woman such a notion is intolerable, and we have set ourselves to see whether there be any way in which, by example or by fellowship, we can help to ease the stress or temptation and to carry our part of the common burden. We are considerably assured that if in British households generally the use of alcoholic drink is voluntarily suspended during the continuation of the war, the effect would be so startling as to change the whole situation. If that be so, are there any of us who will, willingly, hold back?"

ARCHBISHOP OF CANTERBURY.

ITALY WILL ENTER SAYS BEVOINE

PARIS, April 5. — Guiseppe Bevoine, editor of The Turin Stampa and also a member of the Italion Chamber of Deputies, told the Associated Press yesterday that he had a deep conviction that Italy would begin war against Germany and Austria before the end of April.

"Signor Bevoine said Italy's military preparations were almost complete. The Italian Government, he declared, was not waiting for a decisive battle in favor of the allies, but desired to become engaged in the war before such a battle, as Italy would then be in a position to realize her aspirations in accord with the allies.

Fighting on Red Sea.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 5.—The following official communication was issued Saturday night:

"No changes have taken place in the Dardanelles or the other theatres of war. On March 31 a British cruiser bombarded the borough of Mowilah, at the head of the Red Sea, on the Hadjas coast, and attempted to land troops. After being repulsed the cruiser returned the next day and renewed the bombardment for five hours, damaging some houses.

"The enemy again attempted to land troops, but was repulsed by our troops and volunteers. The cruiser then retired. There was no loss of life on our side."

CANADA'S WAR BOOK A MINE OF INFORMATION

Relation of the Dominion to the Great Conflict and the Duty of Canadians to the Empire Are Treated Under Many Heads — Facts About Canada Are Full of Interest.

It is doubtful if a more intrinsically valuable work has ever been published in Canada than the Agricultural War Book, for which the Minister of Agriculture at Ottawa, is sponsor. On every one of its hundred and fifty pages there is something to be learned. It is distributed at the Government's expense and already its circulation has been very large.

The early pages are devoted to brief essays principally on agricultural matters, but also on the duty of all Canadians, by the Prime Minister, by the Finance Minister of the country, by the various Ministers and Commissioners of Agriculture of the Dominion and the Provinces, and by the professors of agricultural colleges and directors of experimental farms.

Following are given industrial and agricultural details in brief of each European country engaged in the war or affected by the war, and of the British possessions. From this it is learned that prior to the outbreak of hostilities, Belgium was not only the most thickly populated country in the world, but also one of the most industrious. In the first 82 days of the war, which has now lasted upwards of 200 days, damage to the extent of $1,059,836,000 had been done, of which $283,614,000 is attributed to agricultural injury. Northern France has suffered proportionately to an equal degree. Russia, while pre-eminently an agricultural country, producing nearly one-fourth of the world's wheat, fully a fourth of its oats, a third of its barley and a half of its rye, still possesses immense manufacturing industries. It also abounds in minerals, and its forests, of which there are 900 million acres, are the finest the earth knows.

Canada's interest lies in particular with the export trade of Germany, much of which this country has the right and expectation to secure. In 1913, the War Book says, Germany imported nearly one-eighth of all the world had to sell, and exported more than one-ninth of all the world wanted to buy. Her yearly output of manufactured goods ran up to between twelve and fifteen billion dollars, of which one-sixth at least found its way to foreign markets that are now closed to her and in many cases will never be renewed. "Made in Germany" and "Made in Austria," with which most Canadians had become familiar, will, it is hoped, be largely replaced by "Made in Canada."

It is of special interest that Germany in 1913 produced 2,720,000 tons of refined sugar from beets, mined 260,000,000 tons of coal and lignite, 29,879,000 tons of iron ore and that while using in that year of peace 225,800 tons of copper, she could only unearth 23,000 tons of her own accord. Germany normally imported one-sixth of the cereals she consumes, but exports enormous quantities of potatoes. Without doubt the surplus of the latter now in stock is being used for flour. Germany bought between seven and eight million geese from Russia annually, and sold Great Britain between eleven and twelve million bushels of oats. She also, in 1913, imported 160,000 tons — mark it, tons—of eggs. These statements will sufficiently show the vast disturbance that has taken place in German productive trade.

Austria-Hungary exported in bulk as many men and horses as it did of material, from [illegible] 250,000 emigrants crossing the sea every year. But the dual empire is exceedingly rich in minerals, and Hungary is one of the principal grain-growing regions of Europe, the average produce being 145,000,000 bushels of wheat, 46,500,000 bushels of rye, 53,500,000 bushels of barley, 65,000,000 bushels of oats, and 118,000,000 bushels of corn. Hungary, too, is rich in live stock, having in 1914, 21,300,000 horses, 7,300,000 cattle, 8,500,000 sheep, and 7,500,000 swine. From these figures it would seem that it will be a tougher job to starve out Germany than reports would make it appear.

Statistics are also given in the Agricultural War Book of the produce and trade of Great Britain, France, Italy, Serbia, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Roumania, and other countries, but the foregoing facts are sufficient to show the educational value and what may be called the international scope of the work.

Part IV. consists of articles with exact details of the live stock situation, by H. S. Arkell, assistant live stock commissioner at Ottawa; by C. M. MacRae, also of Ottawa, on horses; on the meat supply, by the Health of Animals Branch, Ottawa; on the Dairying Industry, by J. A. Ruddock, Dominion dairy commissioner; on seed, by Geo. J. Clark, of the Seed Department, Ottawa; on growing potatoes by W. T. Macoun, Dominion horticulturist, and on the World's Grain Situation, by T. K. Doherty, commissioner, Imperial Agricultural Institute.

Part V. deals with Farm Labor, with Flax Fibre—the Empire's need and our Opportunity, by A. L. McCredie; with the Sugar Beet Industry, by C. H. Hanson; "Too Much Wheat?" by Dr. C. C. James, commissioner of agriculture, Ottawa; "Britain's Bread Problem," by Edward Brown, and a variety of other matter, including in particular an article on fertilizers. Prof. C. A. Zavitz contributes a notable article on Canadian Root Seeds.

Part VI. is entitled "Feeding the Fighters," and gives statistics of exports, imports and produce of the most enlightening character, the whole constituting a handbook of invaluable worth.

THE MARKETS

Latest Quotations in Grain, Dairy Products, Live Stock, Etc.

CHICAGO, April 3.—After taking a downturn in response to peace rumors, the market today for wheat advanced, when developments failed to confirm hopes that a shortening of the war was in sight. Feeling at the close was unsettled, with quotations 1-8c to 1½c above Thursday night's level. Corn finished 1-16c off to a like amount up, oats unchanged to ¼c lower, and provisions at a rise of 2½c to 10c.

Corn swayed with wheat. A late rally was helped by exports clearances and by bullish estimates of corn reserves on farms.

Oats had only a narrow range. Trading was almost altogether local.

Gossip of foreign government orders put strength into provisions. Offerings, however, increased to a material extent on the bulge.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 3.—Various peace rumors caused a weaker opening on the wheat market, but there was a gradual strengthening of values, influenced by the good demand for spot wheat, and the later news on the uncertainty of operations in the Dardanelles. At 11.30 a.m. prices had an advance over opening figures to the extent of ½c to 2⅛c on May and July, with a strong undertone. The volume of business in futures was light. Wheat opened ⅜c to ⅝c lower. Oats were unchanged to ¼c higher.

Total inspections, 292 cars, as against 358 last year, and in sight today were 500 cars.

Wheat futures closed ⅝c to ⅞c higher; cash, 1⅛c to 1¼c higher; oats ⅛c lower, and flax 2c to 2½c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 3.—The demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat showed no improvement today, and business was dull. There was also a limited demand from outside and local buyers for coarse grains, prices being unchanged. Spring wheat flour in fair demand from foreign sources, the local demand being very slow. Millfeed steady. Butter steady, with a fair trade passing. Cheese firm, tho inactive. Eggs steady.

Stocks: Wheat, 341,441; corn, 116,105; oats, 771,474; barley, 221,106; rye, 14,720; buckwheat, 13,113; flour, 46,565 sacks.

Trust Goes Into Liquidation.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The International Mercantile Marine Co., organized by J. P Morgan & Co., and controlling a great fleet of steamships plying between the United States and Europe, was placed in the hands of a receiver [illegible] court.

The receiver named was P. A. S. Franklin, vice-president of the company. Action against the company was taken by the New York Trust Co., trustee of its $52,744,000 4 1-2 per cent. collateral trust bonds, interest in which has been defaulted.

The proceedings are understood to be friendly.

Mr. Franklin was placed under a $50,000 bond and empowered to continue the business of the company.

Shot Wife, Killed Self.

LONDON, Ont., April 5.—In a fit of jealousy, Levi Corcoran, aged 35, a colored barber, late Saturday night whipped out a 32-calibre revolver and shot his wife, Gertrude Corcoran, through the shoulder. Thinking the woman dead, he shot himself through the head, dying instantly. The woman will recover.

FLAX FIBRE PRODUCTION

Increased Growth and Improved Methods Required in Canada

The linen industry in Ireland and Scotland is in danger as a consequence of the war. Much of the raw material, flax fibre, has come from Belgium, France and Russia, and these sources of supply are, for the time being, closed. Representatives from the large mills of Great Britain have recently visited Canada in an endeavor to enlist the co-operation of farmers in a greater production of flax.

Here is an opportunity to develop the industry in this country, and by modern methods of production and handling, put it on a basis that will make it profitable under normal condition and prices.

Flax for fibre can be grown in Canada wherever mixed farming can be carried on. In some parts of Quebec and in Western Ontario, from the days of early settlement, flax has been grown and homemade into linen. In only a few sections of Ontario in 1904 some 700 tons of fibre were produced, which sold for $201 per ton. This fibre was of a poor commercial grade, owing to antiquated methods of preparation for spinning. A shipment to Belfast produced by slightly improved methods sold for $240 per ton. The average price for Irish flax fibre during the last five years has been $325 per ton, while Belgian flax has averaged $405 per ton. It is obvious that Canadian flax should supply the present deficiency and future requirements of the Empire's raw material for linen production, and that more remunerative prices will be received if improved methods of production are employed.

The average acre of flax grown for fibre, under normal market conditions, and using the new process, would yield at least $45 worth of fibre and seed worth $13, making a total of $58. This is about three times the usual export value of an acre of wheat. It will be three years at least before normal conditions can again be expected, and during this time higher prices are likely to prevail. The area in flax (mainly for seed) in Canada, in 1913, was 1,552,800 acres and, in 1914, 1,084,000 acres. This shows a decided decrease and it also shows that what is needed in Canada is a practical method of producing fibre.

Information regarding the growing of flax for seed and fibre purposes is contained in bulletin No. 59 of the Central Experimental Farm which can be had by applying to the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. —Conservation.

How Worth Started.

The noted Parisian dressmaker, Worth, owed his early success to the patronage of that famous personage of the third empire, Princess Pauline de Metternich, the wife of the Austrian ambassador to France. By her wit and numerous vagaries of dress and manner she created a sensation at the court of Napoleon III, and Eugenie. Therefore it was easy for Worth to become the most sought of the world's dressmakers when the princess approved his styles. Charles Worth, while so long the creator of French fashions, was an Englishman, born in Bourne, England, in 1825 and died in Paris in 1895.—Baltimore Star.

THE ERADICTION OF THE WEEDS

Co-operative Experiments by Farmers for this Purpose

During the past three years (1912-13-14) the Departemnt of Botany of the Ontario Agricultural College, in connection with the work of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union, carried on Co-operative Experiments in the Eradication of Weeds. Some forty-five farmers cooperated in this work. The weeds experimented with were Perennial Sow Thistle, Twitch Grass, Bladder Campion, Wild Mustard and Oxe-eye Daisy. Some very interesting and valuable results were obtained. Those who took part in these experiments profited by the experience. In nearly every instance they cleaned the field experimented with, and demonstrated to their own satisfaction the effectiveness of the methods tried, and at the same time the results furnish practical information to others.

1. That good cultivation, followed by rape sown in drills, provides a means of [illegible] Sow Thistle and Twitch Grass.

2. That rape is a more satisfactory crop to use in the destruction of Twitch Grass than buckwheat.

3. That rape gives much better results in the eradication of Twitch Grass and Perennial Sow Thistle when sown in drills and cultivated, than it does when sown broadcast.

4. That thorough, deep cultivation in fall and winter, followed by a well cared for hoed crop, will destroy Bladder Campion.

5. That Mustard may be prevented from seeding in oats, wheat and barley by spraying with a twenty per cent. solution of iron sulphate.

These co-operative weed experiments will be continued this year. The weeds to be experimented with are Perennial Sow Thistle, Twitch Grass, Bladder Campion or Cow Bell, Wild Mustard and Ox-eye Daisy. All who have any of these weeds on their farms are invited to write to the Director of Co-operative Experiments in Weed Eradication, O.A.C., Guelph, Ontario, who will gladly furnish information concerning this experimental work.

SAVED BY A TAIL.

An Incident of the Perilous Times in Paris in 1848.

On Feb. 24, 1848, when Paris was disturbed by the revolutionary mob, a Captain Prebois was sent by the government with orders to be delivered to the leaders of the troops that were defending the threatened points in various parts of the city. It was a dangerous undertaking, for the bitterness of the people against the government was intense.

Before starting out Captain Prebois was warned to take the greatest care if he valued his life, but he took the warnings lightly and said: "If you fellows knew my black horse as well as I know him you wouldn't worry about me. That horse has carried me through thick and thin."

The black horse of which the gallant captain was so proud was indeed a beautiful animal. But there was something very extraordinary about his tail. It was long and bushy, but it never moved or twitched, except with the movement of the animal's body.

When Prebois arrived in the disturbed section of the city he fearlessly delivered his message. He met with no resistance from the crowds in the streets until he reached the Place Vendome. Here a great crowd of revolutionists had gathered. One seized the bridle and cried in a fierce voice: "Hold! What message are you carrying?"

The captain refused to answer. "Put a bullet through him and get that message!" bawled out the man in a commanding voice. He was evidently a leader of the mob.

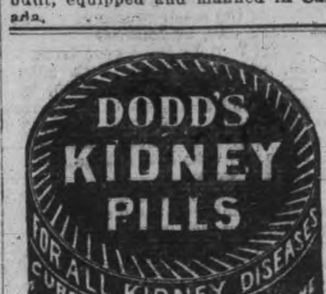
At this point the captain determined that quick action alone would save him from violence at the hands of the crowd. Quick as a flash he wheeled his horse and dashed off. Several bullets flew after him, but they went wild and then suddenly ceased altogether. He looked round and saw the mob crowding round one of their number, who held something in his hand. And then his eyes fell on the back of his horse and his heart sank in dismay.

It seems that as he whirled his horse about several men seized hold of the animal. But the powerful creature threw them all except one, a lad of fourteen, who seized the horse's tail. That tail was the object of interest that had caused the shooting to stop, for it had come off. There stood the boy, in the middle of the road, with his feet spread apart and an expression of grim determination on his face as he tightly clutched the fleeing creature's tail. The mob saw the humor of the situation and burst into a roar of laughter.

The explanation came out later. It seems that Captain Prebois' horse, while perfect in every other particular, did not have a very good tail, and so his master had an artificial one made for him. No doubt that artificial tail, and that alone, saved Captain Prebois' life.

To Organize Canadian Air Corps.

Capt. E. L. Janney, a Canadian aviator who has made a name for himself both before and in the present war, has returned from the front. He had been doing scout duty for the British army, but is returning to organize a squadron of aeroplanes to be built, equipped and manned in Canada.



A GENERAL'S BAGGAGE.

It Is No Indication of the Fighting Quality of the Man.

It may be laid down as a military axiom that a general's ability is not measured by the amount of baggage he takes to war.

It is said that when General Sir John French embarked to take command of the British forces fighting with the French against the Germans in northern France all the baggage he took was contained in a single suit case.

When "Stonewall" Jackson started out on a campaign he took along no personal baggage except a withered carpetbag of ancient pattern, and even this modest receptacle was but half filled. Both these generals bear distinguished reputations as successful leaders.

Contrariwise, when Napoleon III., emperor of France, left Paris in 1870 to take command of the armies which, he said, were going straight to Berlin he took along forty-eight trunks besides a most voluminous kitchen and bedroom equipage. The Germans got every scrap of it all at Sedan. His son, the prince imperial, escaped from Sedan and the beleaguering Germans with his personal effects, which filled a special train of five cars.—Washington Star.

BIG SMOKE IS KNOCKED OUT

Willard Puts Negro to Sleep in the Twenty-sixth Round

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

HAVANA, April 5. — Both Johnson and Willard were up early this morning, but took little or no exercise. Both professed themselves fit and ready. The champion appeared to be over 225 pounds, at which he said he would enter the ring. Hours before the pugilists appeared in the ring, the stands were black with spectators.

After an early morning of unsettled weather the sun burst through the clouds as the crowds began to arrive at the ringside.

Ringside. — Johnson entered the ring at 1.05 (1.40 Peterborough time). Willard entered the ring at 1.20. p.m.

Ringside. — The pugilists weighed in the ring, Willard 238, Johnson 225. Time called at 1.53 p.m. eNw New York time.

First Round.—Johnson feinted and landed on Willard's jaw. He repeated an upercut right to Jess' jaw. The later was very nervous. Johnson was laughing when Willard drove two lefts to Jack's body. Johnson drove a right to Willard's body.

Second Round. — Johnson easily blocked Willard's leads, feinting him out of position and scoring right and left to jaw. Willard replied by threshing his right to the body. Johnson then hooked his left to Willard's stomach. Johnson landed three lefts to the body. Willard laughed. Johnson drove Willard to the ropes with a tattoo of the left to the face.

Third Round. — After much feinting, Willard missed a right swing and both laughed. Johnson rushed and scored a left on body and right on the jaw. Johnson landed left on the body, Willard asking, "Is that the way you do it?"

Fourth Round. — Willard lunged ineffectually. There was much feinting. Johnson landed a left to the ribs and a swing to the right and left to the body and a left to Willard's face. Willard's lip was bleeding. Willard scored a left to Johnson's nose.

FIFTH ROUND ALL FOR JOHNSON.

Fifth Round. — Johnson poked a light left and right to Willard's face. The negro smashed hard on Jess' ribs and drove three blows to the cowboy's stomach. The champion rushed Willard to the ropes, scoring punches to the head and body. Willard was badly distressed. The challenger was rattled and boxed like an amateur.

Sixth Round. — The negro beat Willard to the ropes with a fusilade of lefts. On the break he landed and smashed the giant's left jaw. The negro rubed Willard's hurt lip at every opportunity. The negro landed three crashing blows to Willard's unprotected body. At the bell Johnson was hammering hard at Willard's body and the cowboy's left cheek was cut.

Seventh Round. — Johnson was using every artifice to force the fighting. He rushed Willard to the ropes, struggling with both hands repeatedly. Willard's long left was temporarily blinding the negro's left eye. Johnson came back with a series of swings to Willard's body. It was a very clean fight so far.

WILLARD GAINS CONFIDENCE.

Eighth Round. — Willard was gaining confidence and tried forcing the pace. Johnson accepted his challenge. The pugilists battered each other across the ring, the negro having the better of it. Willard landed on Johnson's mouth. Johnson uppercut Willard over the heart and Willard bounced off the ropes and landed a left to the jaw. The round ended with the negro swinging blows to the head.

Ninth Round. — Willard assumed the aggressive and Johnson's left started the cowboy's ear bleeding. The champion landed frequently, the blows appearing to lack their old-time power The crowd called "Kill the black bear." Johnson immediately started to rally, driving three hard hooks to Willard's stomach. A left by Willard started the negro's mouth bleeding. The latter struggled the white man to the ropes.

Tenth Round. — Johnson was slow in coming from the corner. Willard scored two lefts to the face. Jess was blocking better as his nervousness wore off. Johnson swung his left to Willard's ribs and rushed half a dozen hard blows to the body an djaw. The negro knocked Willard to the ropes with right and left swings to the stomach. A hard right chop staggered Willard.

Eleventh Round. — The crowd was deriding Johnson, who fought and answered the sallies at the same time. Willard drove a left to the mouth and took a right hook to the body. Johnson smashed the cowboy with a left to the jaw. Jess blocked several swings. Johnson then tried to rattle Willard by talk. The latter, angry, replied in kind. Johnson tapped the giant's shoulder at the end of a slow round.

Twelfth Round. — The negro opened with a left to the body and right to the jaw. In the clinch he smashed Willard three times with his left. Johnson drove a right to the body and a left to the head, but his blows appeared to have no effect on Willard. Johnson drove Wilard to the corner with a swing to the head. Willard's ear and cheek were bleeding.

Fourteenth Round. — The round opened with Willard rushing and missing a right uppercut. The challenger was aggressive and tried to force the fighting. Johnson slammed Willard on the mouth with a left. Jess only laughed. The negro was beginning to miss his leads. Willard drove a hard right to Johnson's ear and the negro smashed a hard left to the body at the bell.

Fifiteenth Round—The crowd kidded Johnson, who rushed Willard to the ropes and scored five hard swings. The bell found the pugilists fighting in the centre of the ring.

Sixteenth Round.—Jack missed a left to the head and cluiched. The challenger blocked the negro's rush. The black rushed Jess to the ropes, scoring two hard punches to the body and then the negro drove a terrific swing to Willard's side. The challenger went to his corner a trifle unsteady.

Seventeenth Round. — Johnson hooked a left to the jaw and a right uppercut to the same place. Willard landed a right to Johnson's body and a left to the head. Willard again scored a right to the body and blocked the negro's return. Jack drove Willard to the corner and landed two swings to the head. Johnson again hooked a right to the body, following it with two punches to the head.

Eighteenth Round. — Johnson drove Willard to the corner, where he smashed him twice on the jaw. Willard's leads were easily placed off by the champion. Jess, after trying landed a straight left to the face. He added a right swing to the jaw at the bell. Johnson landed a punch to the body and jaw.

Nineteenth Round. — Both men slowed up perceptibly. Wlllard was now the aggressor. Johnson stood in the middle of the ring and blocked blows for the first minute and not a hard punch landed. Johnson seemed able to divine Wilards' every ldae. The negro then started a rally, landing two lefts to the body and one right to the jaw.

Twentieth Round.—Willard opened with light blows to the negro's face. The latter laughed. Johnson said, "Kind again, kid." Persons in the crowd yelled, "Hurry up, we want to see a race." Willard jabbed and pawed the air until he landed a swing on the negro's jaw. The negro immediately cut loose and battled Willard across the ring. The crowd went frantic when Willard drove a hard right and left to the negro's body at the bell.

Twtney-first Round.—After a minute of posing and feinting Johnson hooked his left to Willard's body and a right swing to the head. Willard replied with a straight left to the negro's face. Jack rushed but Willard protected well. In a clinch Willard missed a right swing and both laughed. At the bell, both were fighting for an opening.

Twenty-second Round—Tht fight degenerated into a slow, sparring-clinching battle and Willard tried setting the pace. In a clinch, he battered the negro's body with rights and lefts, Johnson only grinning. Willard continued working for the negro's stomach. Jack grinned at the shrieking crowd nevertheless the pace showed the effect on Johnson.

23rd Round—Willard rushed into a clinch. Johnson held on until ordered to break by the referee. The challenger shot two lefts to the negro's face. The pair clinched and wrestled about the ring. Jess added two more lefts to Jack's face and clinched again. Up to this point Johnson had not struck a blow in this round.

24th Round—The crowd yelled to the fighters to fight but they clinched. Willard landed a right on Johnson at every opportunity in the clinches. Johnson missed two weak swings. The crowd howled with disapproval. Willard smashed the negro with a left to the face at the bell..

25th Round — Willard shook the negro with a right to the heart. Willard clipped Johnson on the jaw with a fast left and tried forcing the pace. Johnson conserved every bit of energy. Willard again landed on to the mouth and then repeated, Johnson stepping around backwards. At the bell he dropped heavily into his chair.

Johnson's Finish.

26th Round—Willard opened with a smash to Johnson's body. The referee forced them to break from a clinch. Willard rushed and slammed Johnson with a right and left to the body. In a clince the latter looked over Willard's shoulders to his wife's box and Willard smashed Johnson. Willard won on a knockout. The great crowd rushed into the ring and menaced Johnson. Several squads of soldiers hurried on to the platform and cleared the crowd away to protect Johnson.

BASEBALL PROSPECTS.

BASEBALL FANS in Peterborough who have been in a pessimistic mood since it was announced that this city would not be represented in the Canadian League should see a little brightness behind the cloud. They will be entertained this summer by a four team City League and looking over the lists we feel confident that a good class of baseball is to be presented. The Thistles were about the first team to get organized, then Vic Fowler founded the Classics. East City followed by getting a quota of ball tossers together and Knute Belting is at present building up a fourth team. Amateur ball in this city has not been exceedingly fast the past few years but players have been developed and the prospects for faster amateur ball than Peterborough has even witnessed, are very bright. The Mercantile League consisted of too many teams to provide fast ball but that trouble will be overcome by having the city league composed of only four teams. A meeting to formally organize the league and to arrange for having the schedule and constitution drawn up will likely be held the latter part of this week.

B. DIVISION IS CINCHED BY COLLEGIATES

Winners Had to Extend Themselves to Get the Decision at the Y.M.C.A. Gym

Two rattling fine basketball games took place on the Y. M. C. A. gym. floor Saturday night when the Collegiate boys stacked up against the National Emblems and the Beavers tackled the Hustlers. The Collegiate and Hustlers won out after the hardest kind of a game in both cases. The Collegiate won by three points while the Hustlers just crawled out with one. By wnning this game the Collegiate cinched their hold on B Division and by so doing gain the right to play the winners of A Division for the championship of the league. Saturday night's games were no exception to the rule, the league race all through having been close and interesting, B Diivision being tied up on two occasions. The Collegiate had the aid of Harold Hill, of the Queen's team, Jobbitt, their regular man, not being on hand, while the Maple Leafs substituted Claude Bartlett of the Cressman team. This evened things up pretty well, but Hill was a big factor in the Collegiate victory.

The game was close and kept the gallery on edge from start to finish. The Maple Leafs started off by securing three baskets in about as many minutes. Then the Collegiates made a wise move and put Hill on Bartlett at centre, shifting Stuart back to defence. This tended to hold the Maple Leafs' scoring machine down to some extent, but did not submerge them, and the Richardson aggregation came to the end of the first half leading by four points, score 18-14. In the second half somebody erred, for one of the Collegiate men was allowed to run lose, and he succeeded in doing the trick. Canniff and Hill were the high scorers for the Collegiate, while Bartlett and Horsfield were the topnotchers on the Maple Leafs. Eastwood and Lewis played a sterling game for the Collegiate on the defence, while Cowan and Ellis stuck like glue at the same post for the Leafs. Final score, Collegiate 31, Maple Leafs 28.

The Beaver-Hustler game was one good to drive away the blues. It was a game to give the down-and-outer courage to take heart and fight to the finish, for this is what Bill Heaslip and his aggregation did against the veteran leader Dobbin and his group of Beavers. Dobbin's team led right through the first half and well into the second, with their opponents trailing, when suddenly the Hustlers began dropping the pill into the asket, and they gradually pulled up and nosed out a winner. The first half ended with the Beavers leading, 14-6, but about the middle of the second half the Hustlerites took a brace with two minutes to play. Dobbin's team was leading by one point, but this was just enough time for Capt. Heaslip to score a basket and win the game.

The next big attraction in basketball will be Wednesday night, when Cressmans meet the Excelsiors. If Cressmans win, A Division will be tied up and a play-off necessary.

Our old friend John Lang was out on Saturday night and refereed both games in his old style form.

COMMENT — As You Like it

A POST CARD received from David Moore, who is in Havana, shows a picture of Jesse Willard boxing with one of his trainers. That Willard does not keep his mouth closed is clearly shown. Mr. Moore writes: "Willard, whom I saw the other day, is training harder than any man I ever saw and looks as if he will give the big black a real fight. Johnson looks good too but those who have seen him in fighting trim say he is a trifle too fat. Both give public exhibitions every day. Standing room at the race track will be $3. The betting favors Johnson, the odds being 2½ to1.

ACCORDING TO REPORTS Marmora has not as yet organized a lacrosse club. It canot be that Tommy Moffat has left the village to the east. The fans down there are generally among the first to plan for the season. Billy Whitty is putting forth big efforts in Stirling and if the hamlet near the C. O. junction doesn't soon awaken Whittyville will have it shoved off the timetable.

STAN CRESWELL IN TOWN.

Stanley Creswell, the local twirler, arrived in the city today after wintering in the northern woods. "Bones" looks in grand shape. Where he will perform this season is not known.

EASTER MUSIC AT THE CHURCHES

The Easter cantata. "The Saviour of Men," was sung at Charlotte Street Methodist Church Sunday evening, and the choir acquitted itself in an able and acceptable manner. Mr. Newton Staples took a numebr of parts, the singing of which did him great credit. The solo and quartette " 'Tis Midnight and on Olives' Brow" by Miss Ada Richardson, Miss Dorothy Hartshorn, Mr. Albert Lee and Mr. N. Staples, was highly pleasing to the congregation, while the solo, "Daughters of Jerusalem," was exceptionally well sung by Miss Richardson.

The cantata gives in musical numbers a chapter in the life of Christ. It describes the coming to Gethsemane, Calvery, the Resurrection and Ascension. The expression of sorrow, mourning, hope and joy is well carried out in the music, and to render it with these feelings constitutes a most difficult part of the singing and playing. This was well done in the solo, "Daughters of Jerusalem," and in the chorus, "Break Forth Into Joy."

Appropriate Bible selections were read by the pastor, Rev. J. P. Wilson, and also the words of the cantata.

At St. John's.

Of all the seasons of the church, there is not one so joyous as that of the "Queen of Seasons," Easter. At St. John's yesterday the choir of forty voices led three of the services, the last one, Evensong, being fully choral, with spirit and expression. Sir George Martin's anthem, "As it Began to Dawn," was finely rendered in the morning, and "O Death Where Is Thy Sting" (Simper) at Evensong. The choir sang the openng and closing hymns in procession through the nave, and the great day of the church's year wound up with the "Hallelujah" chorus, from Hendel's "Messiah," played as a postlude on the organ by Mr. R. J. Devey.

All Saints' Churcvh.

The spirit of Easter was evidenced yesterday in the services at All Saints' Anglican Church. Three celebrations of the Holy Communion were administered namely at 8.30 a.m., 11 a.m., and after the evening service, a very large number participating. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, was in charge of the services and preached appropriate sermons both morning and evening. The choir throughout the day responded to the exacting duties well. The anthem "Awake Thou That Sleepest," F. C. Maner, in the evening was particularly well rendered, and showed evidence of careful training.

The Te Deum set to music by Jackson was sung in the morning and an anthem, "Christ is Risen," Turner. The bass solo in this number was sung with good taste and expression by Mr. T. H. Boddy. The church was radiant with most beautiful flowers, daintily arranged and this lent an air of sanctity and beauty to the scene. The red carnations worn by the 19 choir boys were the gift of Mr. Thos. Dawson. Miss Flowers presided at the organ most acceptably for all services.

S. A. Temple.

Great crowds attended all the services yesterday at the Salvation Army Temple. Over one hundred people turned out to the prayer service at seven o'clock. Both senior and junior bands marched at 6.30 together with a number of others. In the afternoon 12 recruits were enrolled and addressed by Adj. McElhiney.

The building is getting to be entirely too small for the crowds that are gatherings on Sundays, and it has already been suggested the putting in of a gallery for the accommodation of the crowds.

A number knelt at the mercy seat yesterday.

DADDY'S AWAY ON ACTIVE SERVICE

The two-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. J. Swanger, 494 Bolivar street, died on Sunday after a short illness. The child was a twin to a sister. The father is now on active service and is at Valcartier. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at ten o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

In the fire ruins of the Hotel Kipling at Parry Sound was found the body of Storey Phillips, a timekeeper in the wood camp of the Standard Chemical Co., who had been in town since the camp broke up.

Local News in General

Recruiting.

Recruits for overseas infantry will be taken on at the Armouries at 10 a.m., 3 p.m., and 8 p.m. daily.

Board of Education.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education will take place at the secretary's office, 437 George Street, on Tuesday at 7.45 o'clock, p.m.

Business Girls.

The Business Girls' Club will meet tonight at seven-thirty in the Y. W. C. A. and every member is earnestly requested to be present as business of importance is to be brought up.

Buys a Shorthorn.

Mr. William Young of Ennismore has purchased the four-year-old shorthorn cow "Mauvourneen" from Allan B. Mann of "The Hawthornes," Smith. The price was $140.

Straight Things.

Mr. Thomas Black, of Fairhaven, Mass., will preach the gospel of the grace of God at Assembly Hall, 330 George Street. Subject tonight, "Straight Things." Doors open at 7.45 o'clock. No collection.

Marvellous Accuracy.

The electrically balanced scales that weigh the fresh young leaves for Salada Tea are acucrate to minute precision. If you are in the habit of buying tea in bulk you will have noticed the variance in weights. Remember just a teaspoonful makes two cups. Full weight of clean fresh tea inside the wrapper is what you get when buying Salada.

Notice to Orangemen.

The regular quarterly district meeting of the city district, Orange Lodge, will be held tomorrow evening, at 8 o'clock in Orange Hall, George St. All Orangemen are requested to be present. By order.

W. G. Morrow,
Dist. Master.

MANY RECEIVED HOLY COMMUNION

In all the Catholic churches yesterday the festival of Easter was fittingly observed. The various ceremonies of Holy Week had been largely attended and as a fitting concfusion exceedingly large numbers received Holy Communion yesterday. At St. Peter's Cathedral the eight o'clock Mass was celebrated by Rev. C. J. Phelan and at it, His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, D.D., gave the Papal Benediction to which is attached a plenary indulgence. At ten-thirty solemn pontificial high Mass was sung by Bishop O'Brien, assisted by Rev. Father Phelan, deacon, and Rev. Father McGinity, sub-deacon. Father Phelan preached the sermon on the Resurrection. Bishop O'Brien also spoke a few words wishing the parishioners all the joys and blessings of the Eastertide. In the evening Pontifical Vespers was sung and Rev. Father McGinity preached a sermon on lessons from the Resurrection.

At the Church of the Sacred Heart, Rev. Father McAuley celebrated the Masses and Rev. Father O'Brien preached. The numbers receiving Holy Communion at the eight-thirty Mass was very large. In the evening Rev. Father O'Brien sang Vespers and Rev. Father McAuley spoke on the Resurrection. At the Church of the Immaculate Conception Very Rev. Dean McColl celebrated the Masses and the sermons were preached by Rev. Mather McCarthy. Large numbers received Holy Communion. In the evening Father McCarthy sang Vespers and Dean McColl preached.

At St. Joseph's Church, Douro, Rev. M. J. McGuire, the pastor, celebrated both Masses and preached. The numbers receiving Holy Communion were very large. In his sermon on the lessons from the Resurrection, Father McGuire urged his parishioners to keep their Easter resolutions, not only for the few weeks immediately after the festival but for all time to come.

Over four hundred received communion at St. Martin's Church in Ennismore. Rev. Father Fitzpatrick celebrated both masses and preached sermons on the Resurrection.

The choirs in all the churches sang very well, bespeaking the fact that much time has been spent in practising. The altars were beautifully decorated by flowers and lights by the Sisters of St. Joseph.

SEPTEMBER MORN

Has Delightful Music, Songs That You Whistle and Latest Dances

Possibly one of the best and most unique productions that has been presented at the Grand will be that of September Morn, which is billed for Saturday next, April 10. It is a musical comedy, which has, since its first production in Chicago, been received most favorably throughout the country, and has been considered by critics generally, one of the best travelling organizations ever sent out to play the popular circuits. The title is the familiar one which made the painting of that name so famous, and which created such a furore in art circles and throughout the world because of its suggestiveness. The comedy, however, merely bears the name "September Morn," while its moral tone is absolutely free from any of the suggestive controversies that have arisen from time to time.

The story of the comedy is a most mirthful and amusing one, replete with complicating situations, and ludicrous moments, and throughout the entire presentation there are a great many catchy and tuneful songs, also musical numbers of the whistling kind, and of the character that linger. The scenic and costume effects are decidedly pretty and attractive and add to the general attractiveness of the comedy. More than fifty people are introduced, who present a varied programme of dancing and singing numbers. There are a number of well known comedians and singers in the cast, principally Frank Minor, Lou Kelso, Maude Potter, William Cameron, Arline Bolling, Kathryn Bowen, Clarence Nordstrom and Edgar Murry.

MOVING PICTURES ON MAKING A FORD

The general public have read much of Henry Ford and his famous factory but few have had the opportunity of seeing the great auto man and witnessing a Ford being made. J. J. Duffus, the energetic local representative is to provide citizens of Peterborough with such a favor. On the evenings of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday moving pictures of "making a Ford" will be shown in Duffus' Garage on Simcoe St. There is no charge and every citizen whether a car owner or not should grasp the opportunity of seeing the films. The evening's entertainment will begin each night at seven o'clock. The garage is being transformed into a theatre and fitted with seating accommodation.

STANLEY DANCEY

Witnessed Fourteen Battles And Was in Retreat From Mons

Mr. Stanley Dancey, war correspondent, has returned from the front, having spent six months on the firing line, two and a half months of which was spent with the German armies, under protection of American consuls. He was the only Canadian correspondent who ever succeeded in getting ehind the German lines and into the heart of Germany. Mr. Dancey witnessed personally 14 batties and followed the retreat of the Allies from Mons to the gates of Paris. He also witnessed the heroic resistance of the Belgians to stem the onward march of the Germans.

Mr. Dancey, who will lecture in Massey Hall, Toronto, has consented to visit Peterborough on Friday, 9th April, and will lecture in Victoria Hall (Bradburn's old opera house). Admission, 25c.

He has over two hundred lantern slides from personal pictures, and many from official drawings, and quite a few from pictures given him by German officers. Mr. Dancey returns to the front in a short time to resume his duties as correspondent.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

The trouble with soreheaded people is that they are certain to be entirely too generous with their grouch.

If any girl were to have the ill fortune to marry her ideal the fates would need to be kind to her.

Sometimes a dimple is worth as muck in the marriage market as a fortune.

Many a well meaning man in trying to cultivate friends has succeeded only in raising a fine crop of grouches.

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead, they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

TAIT OPTICAL CO.
410 GEORGE STREET

The Old Man's Share

Go with my blessing, lad most sweet;
No thought of me shall hold you back;
Be last in every fierce retreat,
Be first in every swift attack.
Your blood is up to meet the foe;
Braver am I—I let you go—
Old men as well must pay war's price;

I watched you on your mother's breast;
I stood on guard to see you walk;
I never gave the neighbors rest
The day you first began to talk.
I've seen you bathed, I've heard your prayers,
Sung you to sleep. But battle glares—
And old men, too, must pay war's price;
Well, here's your father's sacrifice.

For you I made myself a slave,
For you I put the takings by;
I said, "My bonnie boy shall have
This little business when I die."
I used to dream of days to be,
Your working here beside of me—
But old men, too, must pay war's price;
Go, here's your father's sacrifice.

There's awful silence in the shop;
At night I sit and watch your chair,
And often in the day I stop
To catch your footfall on the stair.
Ah, boy, if I could hear your voice,
Your whistle! but you've made your choice—
Then old men, too, must pay war's price;
Well, here's your father's sacrifice.

Lad, from my knees I rise, I rise!
The thought has come—If he had stayed
I might have feared to meet your eyes,
I might have thought, "Is he afraid?"
Go then, my brave, my precious boy;
Go, all my comfort, all my joy;
Go forth on duty's glorious track,
God in His mercy bring you back.

Harold Begbie.

OBITUARY

MRS. THOMAS BEATTY.

Annie Margaret Skuce, wife of Thomas Beatty, lot 13, concession 12, Otonabee, passed away yesterday afternoon at five o'clock. Deceased was aged forty-three years and six months. GERMAN SUB. IS CAUGHT IN NET

Will be Captured When She Comes to the Surface

CREW RESCUED WHEN STEAMER SINKS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 6 —The Petit Journal says a German submarine has become sec rely entangled in a net set off Dover and that the French naval authorities expect to capture her when she comes to the surface.

LONDON, April 6. — The British steamer Northland, two thousand tons, laden with iron ore, was sunk yesterday by a German submarine off Beachy Head.

The crew was rescued.

BLYTH, England, April 6. — The trawler Agantha was sunk by a German submarine yesterday off Longstone. The crew was rescued by a Swedish steamer.

BAND GRANTS PASSED WITH PROTEST FROM THE GALLERY

The recommendation from the Finance Committee to the Council that the 57th Regimental Band be granted $500 and the Salvation Army Band be granted $225 was silently adopted by the Council last night, but when the bylaw providing for the grant to the Salvationists was being read the second time a voice in the gallery interrupted and asked: "By what authority do you give those people money?"

Ald. Weir, who was in the chair, asked the Mayor to explain. His Worship stated that the precedent had been established before his time in the Council. It started at $25 and has since increased to $225. The money was paid for services in the park.

The bylaw passed without further remarks.

Members of the regimental band were present.

At the meeting of the Finance Committee on Thursday the following letter was received from Adjutant McElhiney:

A. H. Stratton, Esq.:
Chairman, Finance Committee.

Dear Sir,—It having come to my ears that the proposed division of the money granted bands this year is likely to cause a serious breakdown and a refusal to play on the part of the 57th Band if they do not get the usual amount granted to them, and fearing this will interfere not only with the music provided, but with patriotic musical affairs, we would like to withdraw the request formerly made and leave ourselves entirely in your hands for recommendation to the City Council, and will accept the ruling given without prejudice.

We are satisfied that the agitation will produce good results, and having found out to some extent where our practical friends are, we shall go happily and steadily on, grant or no grant.

Thanking you for past consideration and your former recommendation to the City Council, I remain,

Sincerely yours,
(Signed.) J. A. McELHINEY,
Adjutant.

HEBER ROGERS DESCRIBED SOME HOT TIMES IN THE TRENCHES

Another interesting letter has been received from Heber Rogers who is in France, which tells of the explosion of a trench mortar which killed several men near where he was lodged in the trenches. The letter to his brother George is as follows:

France,
March 5, 1915.

Dear George,—I suppose you will soon be having spring over in Canada now, and are looking forward to a little rain. It is spring all the time over here by the look of the rain.

Well we are at last into this elongated row of trenches, and long drawn out siege. The Canadians have now taken over their part of the trenches, and we are doing our four-day shift stunt. This is our last day and we go out tonight, to get cleaned up a little. We are mud from our feet to breakfast time. The first morning we came in we were working away with our gun and a trench mortar exploded just above our head. That was a great reception alright. It got one of the fellows and wounded nine, two of our gun men, too. Poor Ross Herman got it on the head and died that night. He was just standing about twenty feet away from us. There were five of us together but only two got hit. I don't know whether you know Lieut. Doxsee from Campbellford, but he was jumping over the trench and jumped onto a bayonet, running it through his groin. They took him to the hospital so I guess that he will come through alright. This is a funny warfare. At night the Germans and we both have working parties out in front of the trenches, fixing up, but no shots are fired or rather very seldom, but in the day time it is not wise to show yourself. The trenches are only a hundred and seventy yards apart here and we can hear the Germans whistling and singing at night. We have to go out every night to get rations, water and wood. Wood is as scarce as gold around here now. All the old buildings have been stripped. The fourth battalion came in tonight and I am going down to act as guide for No. 1. After that we get out till next Tuesday.

Well George I guess I will have to close. Hope Nita and the rest are all well. Love to all.

Your loving brother,
HEBER.

HORSES TRAMPLED CHILD TO DEATH

BELLEVILLE, April 6. — Little Fred Weaver, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Weaver, of Carmel, near Glen Ross, is dead as a result of being trampled on by horses in his father's barn.

He accompanied his father to the barn, and while Mr. Weaver was attending to some duties the little fellow got too near the horses which are said to be somewhat ugly, and was kicked and trampled on.

Boston, April 6. — Curtis Guild, former ambassador to Russia and for two years governor of Massachusetts, died today.

SPEED TO THE POLICE

Hawker Who Had no License is Quickly Taken

David Henry, a smooth tongued vendor of spectacles which he has been selling from house to house for $1.00 a pair, came to grief yesterday when his source of income was cut off by the police, who charged him with hawking without a license. He admitted this morning that he had been peddling all over the east without a license and this was the first place where such a step as taking one out had been suggested to him. Henry might never have been betrayed here had he not taken too much alcohol yesterday which led to his arrest. He carries no certificate that he is a manufacturer's agent. He gave Chatham, N.B., as the place of his nativity.

When informed by the Magistrate that he was to get an experience here that would thrill him, Henry got wise to the fact that he would likely have to either take out a license or pay a $50 fine. It was all he could do to keep the pot aboiling, he said, for a wife and family and invalid mother.

Chief Thompson had a lingering suspicion that Henry was a man who had been sent down for six months from here some time ago, so a remand was permitted to allow his record being looked up, and incidentally to have his finger print impressions taken. He was fined $2 on the charge of intoxication.

Harry Leahy With Medical Corps

Leaves Next Week for France With Queen's Men

Harry Leahy, son of Mr. W. J. Leahy, 520 Charlotte Street, who has been attending Queen's University, has been successful in being selected as one of the members of the Queen's Medical Corps, which will leave next week for France to be attached with No. 5 Hospital. Harry Leahy, who is home today saying farewell, was one of the most popular of the old P.C.I. students. His ability on the rugby field made him a valuable acquisition to the old team, many players of which are now in the trenches.

Mr. Russell Patterson, also of Peterborough, is also with the Queen's Corps.

STATEMENT FROM Y.W.C.A. BOARD REGARDING SICKNESS

M. H. O; Sanitary Inspector and Plumbing Inspector Issue Certificates

The board of management of the Y. W. C. A. wish to make the following statement with regard to the outbreak of typhoid in their boarding home on Simcoe street. Upon the first indications of the presence of typhoid in the building, the board, anxious to immediately locate the cause, telephoned the Medical Health Officer, requesting him to make a thorough inspection of the building and particularly asked for an examination of the drinking water, which had chiefly been procured from a well in the vicinity. Unfortunately it was close upon two weeks before any report from him on this head was available. The M. H. O. also had the source of the milk supply inspected. The board has had the smoke test applied to all plumbing in the building.

The following certificates have been issued by the M. H. O., the Sanitary Inspector and the Plumbing Inspector.—G. M. Stevenson, secretary of the board.

Health Officer's Report.

Peterborough, March 31, 1915.
Miss M. Dickson,
President, Y. W. C. A.

In reply to your request for a report of the outbreak of typhoid at the Y. W. C. A., I would say that from information that can be obtained I am inclined to think that the infection was otained from the drinking water.

A supply was obtained at different times from three wells. Two of these showed contamination and the other one, which is a shallow well, may be contaminated from time to time and show free from infection between times.

Yours very truly,
A. W. McPHERSON, M.H.O.

Sanitary Inspector's Report.

Peterborough, April 1, 1915.

The farms from which the Y. W. C. A. milk supply is derived have been inspected by me with the object of ascertaining whether the recent typhoid cases could be traced to that source. As a result of this inspection I have no hesitation in stating that in my opinion the milk supply is quite above suspicion. Exhaustive inquiries were made as to any cases of sickness around the farms and the water supply tested and found free from infection.

(Signed.) C. A. G. SPENCE,
Sanitary Inspector.

Plumbing Inspector.

Miss M. Dickson,
Care Y. W. C. A.

Having examined the plumbing work in the building, I find that since being first tested till final test, where leak was found, there was no chance of sewer gas as there is nothing but fresh air passes through those pipes from outside up through the roof. There is no chance for typhoid from that source. I guarantee your work is well and truly tested and found O. K.

Enclosed find certificate.

P. THOMPSON,
Plumbing Inspector.

ARE AFTER MR. SPENCE

Labor Council Want His Name Struck off List of Civic Officials

NOT A RESIDENT?

Also That By-law be Amended to Include School Teachers

Seems as though there is a little hard feeling between Sanitary Inspector Spence and the Trades and Labor Council. A few weeks ago they were taking passes at one another, and now the Council wants the City Council to strike Mr. Spence's name off the list of city officials. They had a recommendation before the City Fathers last night asking that the bylaw prohibiting non-residents to work for the city be altered so as to include city officials. When the letter was taken up Mayor Buller remarked that he didn't know of any non-resident officials.

Ald. Green thought it might be well for the city clerk to write the Trades and Labor Council and ask for a list of officials whom they claim to be non-residents. As far as he knew there were none under the Board of Works.

Ald. McIntyre ventured to give the name of one. He was a man named Cox, who had a team and worked for the city. Ald. Green and Weir pointed out that he was a ratepayer.

The Mayor contended that it wasn't only necessary to be a ratepayer. Employes should be residents. His Worship also referred to the fact that objections have been raised to Sanitary Inspector Spence.

Ald. Stratton remarked that the city is not paying Sanitary Inspector Spence enough money for him to live in the city.

Representatives from the Trades and Labor Council were in the gallery and on motion of Ald. McIntyre they were heard. R. Mitchell of the municipal committee of the Trades and Labor Council gave the name of Mr. Spence, and explained that the organization desired having the bylaw so altered as to include officials. They also desired to have it govern school teachers.

Mayor Buller referred the matter of Mr. Spence to the property committee, and the motion that the clerk write the Council for a list of non-resident officials carried.

The letter from the Trades and Labor Council enclosed the following resolution recently passed by that body:

"Resolved, seeing the heavy burden of taxation borne by the taxpayers of the city, the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council objects to non-residents being employed in official positions in the several departments of the city and calls upon the City Council to take steps to remedy a state of affairs that is unfair to resident taxpayers."

ELECTORAL CORRUPTION

Criminal Code Now Provides for Immediate Apprehension and Trial

SPEEDY ACTION IN ELECTION PROTESTS

(Special to the Review.)

OTTAWA, April 6. — During discussion of the new Controverted Elections Act, which was passed last night, the Minster of Justice said that the Criminal Code now provided for the immediate apprehension, trial and conviction by a magistrate without appeal, of those engaged in electoral corruption.

The new Act, he said, likewise makes procedure in election protests simple, swift and sure.

Mayor Among Men Guilty of Fraud

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Indianapolis, April 6. — Twenty-seven defendants including Mayor Roberts, in the Terrehaute election fraud case, were found guilty by a jury today. The trial has been going on since March eighth. Defendants who include many prominent persons together with eighty-nine who pleaded guilty, will be sentenced next Monday.

The 26th Battery used their horses this morning in an exercise ride in command of Capt. Carruthers. Lieut. Hilliard is in the city, and Major Hall now has all his officers, and this week will begin to give his battery some good hard work. — Kingston Standard.

RAIN AND MIST ON WHOLE FRONT

French Gain Footing on Enemy's Works and Also Take Prisoners

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 6. — The statement from the war office this afternoon says: "Rain and mist continue over the whole front.

"To the southwest of Vauquois we gained a footing in one of the enemy's works.

"In the wood of Ailly, southeast of St. Mihiel, our gain of three successive lines of trenches already announced was marked also by the capture of prisoners, a machine gun and a bomb-thrower.

"We made progress in the wood of Brule, eastward of the wood of Ailly. We have maintained our possession of positions captured to the northeast of Regnieville, already announced."

MILITARY PREPARATIONS IN ITALY.

LONDON, April 6. — A despatch from Rome says military preparations are being pushed with vigor. The significance of this is the presentation of a battle flag to the battleship Cavour by the Duke and Duchess of Genoa, accompanied by religious ceremonies and public demonstrations.

Negotiations are being continued, and there is yet hope of averting war.

The report of an important Russian victory in the Carpathians is doubted in Berlin, where it is believed the farther the Russians advance the more difficult their offensive movement becomes.

British Semi-Weekly Statement

LONDON, April 6. — There was given out in London today a British semi-weekly report on the progress of hostilities under date of April 5th. It reads: "The situation still remains quiet on our front. A change in the weather limited possibilities of activity on the part of our airmen.

"Early in the morning of April 3rd we exploded a mine under German trenches in the neighborhood of La Bassee. A length of one hundred yards of trench and part of a brickstack were destroyed, and as a result all German activity in the immediate neighborhood was terminated.

"German artillery, however, has subjected our front in that quarter to heavy bombardment.

"On our extreme left, superiority obtained by our snipers has been rewarded by comparative immunity with which the work on the front line of trenches has been carried out. In this connection it should be pointed out that although no reports have been sent since March 22nd owing to lack of any incidents worthy of special mention, yet individual activities have been of daily and nightly occurrence along the entire front. The general effect of thes activities, in which our troops continue to show marked superiority, as already recorded, is cumulative and of great military value."

GERMAN RAILWAYS TRANSPORTING TROOPS.

PARIS, April 6. — A Geneva despatch says that traffic with Germany has been delayed since Friday, German railways being occupied in transporting troops from Flanders to Austria via Munich.

It is also said that large bodies of Austrian troops have been withdrawn from the Italian frontier.

CASUALTIES REPORTED TODAY.

OTTAWA, April 6. — Latest casualties: 14th Battalion, seriously wounded, Pte. Edward James Coombes, Pontypridd, Wales.

Wounded, Pte. Michael Gould, Cork, Ireland.

15th Battalion—Lance Corp. William Matches, Stenners, Orkney, Scotland.

REPORT FROM CITIES WHERE OIL IS USED ON STREETS

City Council Decides to Use Oil Instead of Water

The streets will be oiled. This was decided upon last evening by the City Council. A few weeks ago it will be remembered the Board of Works went into the matter of oil and recommended to the Council that oil be used. The evening the recommendation came up however a large deputation of ratepayers was on hand to protest. It was decided to permit the matter to stand over until Secretary Keyes of the Auto Association could write to various auto associations in Ontario and ascertain if oil affects rubber tires. The following was the statement submitted to last night's council meeting by Mr. Keyes:—

	Years Used	Injury to Tires	Odor	Kind of oil
Niagara Falls	6	none	none	60p.c.
Berlin	4	none	little	—
St. Thomas	2	none	none	40p.c.
Stratford	5	none	none	40p.c.

This included all the replies that I have received to my circular letter and from this information our association will agree with your decision to apply oil to our city streets.

Apparently it does no serious harm to auto tires or the above associations would have known by this time.

Sincerely yours,
S. J. KEYES,
Secretary.

Ald. Green moved that the appropriation of $5000 for street watering be used for oiling the streets. The motion was seconded by Ald. Edgar. In answer to a question from Ald. Stratton, Ald. Green explained that the paved streets would not be oiled.

Ald. Weir moved an amendment

PETERBOROUGH, TUESDAY, APRIL 6, 1915

THE EXAMPLE OF KING GEORGE.

SINCE the war broke out, the King of England has been very much in the public affairs of the Empire. At the outbreak he figured in strenuous personal efforts with the rulers of Germany and Austria for peace. When that failed, he took an active part in military and political affairs, and now he has led the way in a temperance movement in Britain. His example will do more for temperance than all the laws that can be passed.

The curtailment of the powers of the House of Lords by the Asquith Government a few years ago will no doubt result in an expansion of the Kingship. That is a development that is not without dangers, but it is evident that King George has a well-balanced conception of his office. He has been forced prominently into political affairs by the war, and notably in the Irish question, yet in each case he has done credit to his office. He acts on the advice of his ministers, yet he makes, as is his right, suggestions to them, and can originate policies. He is popular, and the mass of the people know he has the welfare of Britain at heart.

Some may ask, why this temperance agitation now? Why did it not arise before? In times of peace it was not regarded as a vital national issue. In war time it is different. This is an exceptional time, when the whole Empire is put in training for the great task of defeating its enemies. It means abstinence, the curbing of anything that reduces the maximum of efficiency. This war demands the very best that the people can do. It demands sacrifices of the highest kind, the girding of loins for the war, both at home and in the field. Just as fasting and care in the kind and amount of food eaten is taken by an athlete so that nothing will militate against his strength, so the same kind of care and attention is required of the people of the Empire.

The striking development is that if it is well to do this in war time, a return to the old condition of things before the war will be impossible. A higher average of efficiency should be the result of King George's action in leading the way in practical temperance for the people of his world-wide Empire.

WHAT CAN THE UNITED STATES DO?

THE UNITED STATES was one of the subscribers to The Hague Convention and has recognized the accepted rules of international usage and law. To all intents and purposes these customs and laws are American as much as British, French, or German. In violating these rules, Germany has violated the laws of the United States. German war vessels have sunk American ships and caused the death of American citizens, yet the United States has not intervened. It has protested to Germany, but what does Germany care for protests now? She snaps her fingers at them. The one thing that Germany will respect now is the lash, and that is the thing the United States is least able to wield.

The United States has, it is true, a strong navy and a big population, but her navy is practically powerless beyond her own coasts because she has no European naval or coaling stations. Besides, her fleet is divided between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The army of the United States is quoted at only 80,000. Her financial organization, so far as war is concerned, is very bad—quite inadequate for the purpose. As a defensive country, the United States is very strong—it is doubtful if she could be subdued; as an offensive country, she is almost helpless. She has great resources, but they are in such a hopelessly disorganized or unorganized state that much invaluable time would be required before they could be effective. The loss of this necessary time would cause defeat. The Kaiser knows just how far, not he, but the United States, can go. The attitude of the United States over the sinking of the W. P. Frye and the death of Thrasher, an American citizen on the Falaba, would indicate also that this condition is self-realized.

A SCATHING REBUKE.

THE TIMES (London) says editorially: ". . . . the memory of the unhappy controversy which delayed Canada's contribution in dreadnoughts to the British naval strength still rankles . . . ." It is not wise to "rub in" the failings of one's friends, for, after all, we are all Canadians who, in our hearts, like to take pride in each other, but the fact remains, and, unfortunately, always will remain, that the Liberal Opposition at Ottawa scouted the menace and repudiated the loan of Canadian dreadnoughts. There is no getting away from that fact. The Times dwells at length on the circumstance in its issue of April 2nd, and feels indirectly that it is wise to recall a circumstance that should never happen again in a party that wishes to survive in the esteem of the people.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN WAS RIGHT.

HANSARD, the official report of debates in the House of Commons, sometimes develops some strange and extraordinary confessions and admissions. The following page from the report of debates the other day shows that the policy urged by the Conservative leader regarding the N. T. R. and G. T. P. was admitted to be the right one. One could hardly expect this from the ex-Minister of Railways and Canals, Hon. G. P. Graham, but it is true. Incidentally, Hon. G. P. Graham claims that he could have saved the country and the Liberal party had fortune and pull placed him in the Liberal cabinet sooner than they did.

"Mr. BURNHAM: Would not an arrangement of that sort be a practical surrender?

Mr. GRAHAM: It would not be a surrender because the road is not completed. If the road were completed it would be a surrender. The correspondence shows that it is not completed except for the purpose of operation, and it is not available for complete operation, in my humble judgment. As to taking over the road finally; I am glad that the correspondence does not indicate that the company has declined to take over the road. If the Government go about it in a peaceful manner I think some arrangement could be made for the operation of this line and for the use of the Superior Junction-Fort William line if necessary until such time as the Government have the undoubted right to say to the company: We have fulfilled our part of the agreement; are you going to execute this lease? I would go a little further. Speaking for myself as a private individual I do not know that I would object to seeing this Government operating the Grand Trunk Pacific in connection with the Intercolonial Railway. In that I am speaking for myself solely. If the time ever came that there should be a disagreement and the company should decline to take over the road, which I do not think it will do, a worse thing could happen to the Dominion of Canada than that the Intercolonial should be hitched up with the Grand Trunk Pacific and given its own line through to the Western Provinces. However, that is by the way. The point I was urging on the Government was, first, the necessity of operating the line in some way, and I was cautioning them that they were not going about it in the right way, because I believe the better judgment of the people will lead them to the conclusion, after seeing the correspondence, that under the agreement, the line is not completed, and that the Government is not in a position to execute a lease except of a temporary kind even if the company were willing to agree to it.

Mr. BURNHAM: May I ask the hon. gentleman why it is that this idea of his was not carried out before?

Mr. GRAHAM: My hon. friend and I were not in the House at the time or we might have had all these things provided for. Unfortunately, the Dominion was without our services and Parliament seemed to take another view."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

WELL, the Examiner tried to find something wrong in Belleville, and failed, ex ore suo.

WAS THE FAILURE to find anything frightfully bad in Belleville due to the fact that the "investigation" was conducted on the Sabbath?

WOULD IT NOT be well for our esteemed evening contemporary to make a few inquiries into moral conditions in Peterborough? It seems that it is afraid to do at home what it undertook to do in Belleville.

THE TORONTO STAR has a staff reporter in the trenches. It would not be at all surprising if he developed a trenchant style of writing.—Guelph Mercury. We wonder if they have a police force in Guelph — they certainly have no censor.

Something New in Warfare.

(London Times.)

The dramatic events at the Dardanelles and on the coast of Asia Minor continue to absorb public attention. Nothing in the history of naval bombardments has ever equalled the spectacle of the mighty battleship Queen Elizabeth throwing shells from the open sea clean across the Gallipoli Peninsula into the Turkish forts in the Narrows. This is a development never dreamed of in all the plans which soldiers and sailors have made during the last hundred years for taking the Dardanelles. It is inspiring, too, to hear of Grimsby trawlers sweeping away the mines far within the Straits, under cover of the fire of battleships.

Penalties for Outlaw Nations.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

This country realizes that England is battling with an enemy which has no use for what was once called international law. That enemy has not strengthened itself in our regard by wantonly sinking one of our ships. The new international law that will come out of the precedents of 1915 will provide stiff penalties for the outlaw nations or it will also take its course to the waste-basket.

A Contrast.

(l'Evenement.)

After having protested during many years against the methods of the Liberals when in power in refusing to allow any light to be shed on abuses denounced by the Opposition, we are proud to point out with what vigor and frankness Sir Robert Laird Borden seeks the whole truth in the matter of the purchase of matericls and equipment for the Canadian contingents.

Too Much Power.

(Greenwood Ledge.)

The experience of Germany should be a lesson to the world. Never give any man too much power. It invariably creates tyranny or insanity.

Take a Walk.

(Pittsburg Dispatch.)

If they get automobile rides down to a nickel a trip, walking ought to become fashionable. And the fashion of walking will give the practitioners increased supplies of good appetites and sound sleep.

The Way of Prosperity.

(l'Action Sociale.)

The patriotic work par excellence, after and with the accomplishment of the law of God, is agriculture and colonization.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

T. V. C. CLAIMS.

Editor, Review:

Sir,—We are, I hope, in the last stage with respect to existing claims for Trent flooding damages. This matter has been for years a source of worry to all concerned. Some claims have been settled. Others have not. As the difference of opinion between the engineers of the department and claimants cannot be settled legitimately, in my opinion, in any other way, it has been agreed by the department to give claimants a chance to show that their claims are just, whether wholly or in part, before an Exchequer Court.

This is the recognized proceeding, and the one alone which can satisfy the public that discrimination has not been used in the settlement of contested claims. If a claimant can satisfy the court that he has any foundation for his claim, he will be awarded damages accordingly, and of course the department will, in that event, have to pay the cost of evidence. The same principle will apply as in a court of law.

No other procedure will satisfy the public and the claimants, I am convinced. I will recommend that the County Judge of Peterborough constitute the Exchequer judge for the occasion. This will remove the remotest ground for criticism, or ought to do so. The court will be held at Peterborough.

The matter will be dealt with at an early date.

IS AN ELECTION COMING?

Editor, Review:

Sir,—On the editorial page of the Examiner of Saturday, Aprl 3rd, is a prominent advertisement of the Liberal Monthly. That is the monthly sheet sent out by Liberal headquarters at Ottawa when they are preparing for an election. The Liberals "charge" Conservatives with preparing for an election. What are the Liberals doing, according to the Examiner, and why? The Liberals have been demanding an election all along for the reason that the party leaders at Ottawa are in danger of being forgotten by the people of Canada altogether. They want an election, not because they expect to win, but to keep themselves before the people. In the meantime, read the Liberal Monthly. It's not a campaign sheet. Oh, no!

Yours,

READER.

MORE ABOUT ROLLER RINK.

Editor Review,

Sir,—What's all the smoke about regarding the roller rink? Who are the scribes, trying to get in this paper correspondence? It cannot possibly be the general manager of the rink, I am sure. To my knowledge Mr. McNish has run roller rinks in Hamilton, Guelph, and for three seasons in Cobalt, and left behind him a reputation that counts some. I have met the general manager and his lady repeatedly since he came into the city. There's no flies about him. I am positive Mr. McNish will wash his hands of anything tainted the "underworld." No license fee was asked in Hamilton or Guelph, and when the chief sent for Mr. McNish and put the matter before him the "bucks" were right there, and a simple apology made about the misunderstanding. If your correspondent "Ratepayer" is after Chief Thompson, more power to him. He will need it all, as the chief can stand a few "Jack Johnsons." I believe every stranger coming to our city ought to have a square deal, "a fair field and no favour," and this is where the lessee of the roller rink is going to shine.

NOT AN ANXIOUS PARENT.

(The above writer is in error when he states that the license for the rink had been taken out. No license had been paid for up to the time of receiving this letter, and none has been paid for yet, so far as we can learn.—Ed.)

It requires a hero ro a liar to declare that he likes to get up at 5 o'clock in the morning.

OBITUARY

MRS. NANCY MOORE.

At 154 Rubidge street, Nancy Moore, beloved widow of the late George James More, passed peacefully away at 11:15 this morning at the age of 82 years.

The late Mrs. Moore was one of the oldest members of Charlotte Street Church. She was known by a great number of friends who will regret to learn of her death.

She has left to mourn the loss of a loving mother, one son, Richard Moore, of Tonawanda, N. Y., and five daughters, Mrs. Wright, Mrs. Roberts and Mrs. Halliday, of Toronto, Mrs. Jean Bell, at home, and Mrs. M. Sucee, of East City.

The funeral will take place at 2:30 on Thursday afternoon, service at the house, 154 Rubidge street, conducted by Adjutant McElhiney.

Goderich and Port Neif papers please copy.

MRS. MARY BEST.

There passed away this morning at one o'clock Frances Mary Crawford, relict of the late James Best, and one of the city's oldest and most beloved residents. Fifty years of her life were spent in Peterborough, her husband and she moving here shortly after their marriage. She was born in Saratoga Springs in 1838, so that she was 77 years of age at the time of death.

The late Mrs. Best had been ailing for over a year, but she had been confined to her bed only for the past three weeks. Heart trouble was the cause of death.

Her husband, who at one time conducted a business on George street about where Robert Fair's store now stands, predeceased her some twenty-three years.

The deceased resided at 508 Water street, occupying part of the residence of Dr. Jessie Birnie.

Only one son, J. C. Best, of Fort William, survives, and a sister, Mrs. J. H. Dixon, of Peterborough.

The funeral has been arranged to take place tomorrow afternoon, the service at the house at 2 o'clock and a service at St. John's Church at 2:30, thence to Little Lake Cemetery. Owing to the illness of Canon Davidson, it is likely that Rev. Jas. Price of St. George's Church will officiate.

MATTERS MUNICIPAL

A cheque has been issued to G. N. Gordon for $73.92 for balance due on fees for the city's private bill.

A petition against a sewer on Ware street was received last night by the Council and referred to the Board of Works.

The demand of the Separate School Board will be paid in monthly instalments in accordance with the request of that board.

A bylaw to provide for the borrowing of $200,000 for current ordinary expenditure was read a third time last night.

Premier Borden and the Minister of Railways and Canals have acknowledged receipt of a resolution passed by the local City Council re subsidies to hydro-electric railways.

The appropriations for the central charity board, the Protestant Home, and House of Providence will be paid to the central charity board in equal monthly instalments.

The statement of the tax collector received last night by the Council was: Total amount on roll, $302,932.48; total amount deposited, $287,191.35; balance $15,741.13.

A cheque has been issued by the city to the King Edward Sanatorium for Consumptives for $275.10 for the maintenance of the young girl whose case was recently discussed by the finance committee.

Cheques have been issued for $200 and $100 to Mrs. Gagnon and Mrs. Murphy, respectively, for damage to land on Smith street by the raising of the grade.

The city will pay $210 for the electric signs expropriated from the Peterborough Light and Power Co. and will pay the balance of $516 owing to the company as it is collected from the lessees.

The Mayor was last evening authorized to apoint anyone he desires as Peterborough's representative to the ninth International Purity Congress in San Francisco from July 18 to 24. The delegate pays his or her own fare, but receives a reduction by representing the city.

Up in the Garret and Down in the Basement

Do you remember that rocker you took out of the sitting-room when you got the new one?

Where is it?

Up in the garret? Down in the cellar? Out in the servant's room?

Why didn't you sell it?

Why didn't you try to sell it? Don't you know that a few cents spent on a want ad. in THE DAILY REVIEW would have brought at least $2.50 or $3.50 for it? And there are chairs enough in the back of the house without wasting that one.

O! if people only knew by experience, as we do, what big things little ads. in THE DAILY REVIEW can do for them, they wouldn't tolerate the waste and ruin of the perfectly good household articles that are now relegated to the storeroom, to be covered with dust, and finally thrown away.

Think of the people who want them, who can use them, who have place for them. Owners of apartment buildings and flats might get a hint from this, also.

An Indication of Greatness

By OSCAR COX.

My uncle, Dr. James Pulsifer, was a great scientist and an original thinker. He died a bachelor and left me all his property. After his death I examined every paper of his I could find, especially his scientific writings, thinking to publish them. Among an earlier batch written very soon after he graduated in medicine I found a narrative which as I read on interested me intensely. Here it is:

"We all know that many things exist of which the human mind has not yet any conception. I go further than this. I believe that anything of which the mind can conceive, however improbable, may exist.

"Some years ago a certain noted author wrote a story—'The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde'—suggesting that two different personalities might exist in the same man. I believe that the day will come when it will be demonstrated to the world that some, if not all, of us are composed of more than one being. Indeed, I not only believe it; I know it. If you ask me why I know it, this is my reply:

"There was something about Jennie Hatch that impressed me the first time I met her. She was what most persons would call odd. Perhaps one reason for my becoming interested in her was that I was a recent graduate of a medical college and had taken a post graduate course on the physiology of psychical conditions. It seemed to me that Miss Hatch was abnormal—not that her body was abnormal, but the spirit within it. For I am not so given to materialism as to believe that our spiritual and physical parts are one.

"Whether Jennie Hatch mistook my scientific interest in her for love I don't know, but she came to look upon me as a lover. I did not either encourage or discourage her in this. I permitted the relationship between us to drift on without definition. One thing I noticed which I set down to a certain fickleness or apparent fickleness consequent upon the physical makeup of women. I would go to see her, say, on Saturday night, an evening I usually dodged my patients if I could do so without injury to them. She would receive me kindly and be a delightful companion. I would visit her the following Wednesday and she would look at me as though she wondered why I had called. During the first visit she would be a girl, during the second a woman. During the first I would seem to be a proper companion for her—that is, a person of about the same age. During the second she made me feel that I was a boy attempting to entertain a woman who had learned wisdom.

"My observations indicated to me that Jennie Hatch embodied two personalities. My deductions were not based alone on such differences as I have described. There was another and far more important symptom. I became convinced that Jennie sometimes loved me and sometimes did not love me. Not only this—I came to suspect that there were times when she loved some one else.

"On the theory that she embodied two persons it seemed to me that Jennie No. 1 might love me and that Jennie No. 2 might love another. It was not conducive to love, or, rather, comfort, to be interested in one whose other self loved some other person. Nevertheless, I found myself growing fond of Jennie. My theory did not admit of jealousy because I had no affection for Jennie No. 2. Yet, singularly enough, I was jealous of her lover. I suppose it was on account of the two spiritual personalities occupying the same body. Scientifically expressed, my jealousy should be represented by No. 1 (Jennie of the flesh) plus zero (Jennie No. 2, to whom I was indifferent), the product being one-half.

"Nevertheless I was in love, and one evening while thinking the matter over it occurred to me that I could study the case better as Jennie's—I refer to Jennie No. 1—fiance than as we were. On the impulse of the moment I went to her house for the purpose of making a declaration.

"I saw the moment she entered the room that she was her other self.

"I once heard a woman say that if a man has made up his mind to a proposal nothing that she can say or do will stop him. I had gone to Jennie's house to propose to her, and somehow I could not resist the impelling force. I asked her to be my wife. She hesitated, then refused me, telling me that she loved another.

"I had begun this affair with purely scientific motives. Here was an end to it, based on human reasons. I left the house feeling that for me the bottom had dropped out of the universe."

Here the paper ended abruptly. I was much disappointed, hoping to find some confirmation of my uncle's theory, based on his singular love affair. But not another word did I meet with on the subject. One day I was talking about him to a chum of his youth, whom I asked how the doctor came to be a bachelor. The reply was that when a very young man he had been in love with a Miss Hatch, who married an old fellow double her age.

This revelation gave a shock to my admiration for my uncle's scientific attainments until I remembered that when he mistook a girl's indecision between himself and another man for a duplex being he was very young. Nevertheless, the incident indicated his mental bent and foreshadowed his future remarkable career as a scientist.

Bureau Fully Equipped.

Lady Drummond, on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross in London, is making preparations for ensuring that the work of the information bureau shall be carried out with complete efficiency.

All hospitals receiving sick and wounded will at once notify the bureau of any Canadians among the recent arrivals and in case of missing Canadians enquiries will be instituted through Red Cross branches in Paris, Rouen, and Boulogne.

A corps of visitors to call upon Canadian sick and wounded wherever they may be lying is also being formed.

Milady's Mirror

Drink Plenty of Water.

If you would have a clear complexion drink plenty of water between meals and exercise out of doors every day.

Cold water stimulates the membranes of the stomach, and hot water soothes them.

Sipping either is better than swallowing rapidly, and when the taste of hot water is unpalatable a pinch of salt or a dash of lemon juice will improve it. A pinch of soda with the lemon juice is even better.

A rational habit of drinking water will not only improve the health, but will preserve it. Water and milk are both very good to keep the kidneys acting well.

For Tender Feet.

Carbolated vaseline, well rubbed into the skin, is said to be excellent for frostbites.

Where the skin is broken zinc oxide is sometimes very healing.

White cotton stockings should be drawn on the feet, when any cream is used.

Massage after a warm foot bath helps to stimulate the circulation where there is a proneness to cold feet and is a preventive of frostbite.

A little salt added to the foot bath will harden too delicate skin.

When Hair Darkens.

Light hair grows darker as one grows older. The woman who is troubled by her hair darkening might add the juice from half a lemon to next to the last rinsing water when she washes her hair. If her hair is not too dry it will not harm it to put a teaspoonful of borax in the shampoo bath.

A hair restorer is composed of twice as much Jamaica rum as castor oil and a few drops of either oil of roses or lavender. Rub it will into the scalp, being careful not to have any more than possible touch the hair.

Sties on the Eyelid.

Sties are occasioned by the irritation of the hair follicle out of which an eyelash springs. They should be opened as soon as the pus is formed, for they will not get well as long as the pus remains.

For inflammation of the follicles and scaliness add to an ounce of vaseline fifteen grains of precipitated sulphur. In applying this ointment it is well to warm it a little.

Unconscious Frowns.

Don't narrow your eyes when you wish to be impressive. If you draw your mouth into a button and allow deep lines to pucker between your eyes you will acquire a habitual cross expression. Is anything more unpleasant than an angry face with its features tied in veritable knots?

Hair Curlers.

Curlers of any description are none too good for the hair, but the kinds where the hot iron does not come in contact with the hair itself are best. Then the kid one, where no iron at all is used, is better still.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Backache.

Backache is seldom due to disease. Great fatigue causes it or great strain, as from lifting or tugging heavy weights. Exposure to cold and dampness will make the back ache. Tramping about the damp streets without having the feet protected by overshoes will give one a backache which is as painful as a throbbing toothache. Backache is often due to excesses. The common, everyday home treatment of the ordinary backache is all that is required. A hot bath, a brisk rubdown with a rough towel, followed by a ten hour rest in bed, vanishes the aching and pain of nearly every backache. This is especially true of the kind caused by exposure. If the muscles in the back have been strained (lifting, etc.) the bath, rest and a belladonna plaster over the most painful portion of the back is a good treatment. If backache is persistent in spite of all simple measures taken to relieve it, it is advisable always to seek advice from a physician.

Fine Excuse.

Wife (at 7 a. m.)—Now deny your condition last evening! Here you are lying in bed with your hat and shoes on. Don't tell me you didn't come home the worse for drink! Husband—Not a bit, dear. You know I have lately taken to walking in my sleep, and I thought I'd go to bed prepared.—Illustrated Bits.

Gallery Gods.

The occupants of the gallery have received the general appellation of the gods from the circumstance that the ceilings of theaters were formerly embellished with mythological deities surrounded by a sea of azure to represent the sky. The patrons of the gallery were consequently "among the gods."

Woman's World

A Practical Movement to Aid the Woman on the Farm.

MRS. BELLE VAN DORN HARBERT.

The International Congress of Farm Women is an organization of women who have caught the vision of an ideal life on the farm. They know the hardships which farm women have endured in the past, and they are anxious to brighten the lives and widen the horizon of all women similarly placed.

The American division of the farm women's movement was organized at Colorado Springs in October, 1911, coordinate with the Dry Farming congress. It is now united with many other great national congresses, making one great international union in which twenty-eight nations are represented.

The organization is interested in inviting the national and state governments to recognize the needs of farm women. The dangers of the rapid growth of cities, with the accompanying decrease of rural dwellers, is being studied. The doctrine of thrift and the nobility of labor are preached in the hope of encouraging a "back to the farm" movement. Unbiased experiments with modern inventions, calculated to save labor in farmhouses, are being carried out, and an effort is made to make it possible for farm women to discriminate between the useless and valuable ones. The congress is also interested in the development of consolidated schools and in encouraging teaching of domestic science and practical housekeeping.

The leader in this useful movement and the president of the organization is Mrs. Belle Van Dorn Harbert of Manzanola, Colo., a woman of charming personality and wide human sympathy. Mrs. Harbert has made a study of the questions affecting the welfare of women on the farm and has been wonderfully successful in interesting them in the movement.

BAMBOO EFFECTS.

Outing Hats In This New and Pretty Straw Prove Acceptable.

Lacquered straw in bamboo effect has been popular for midseason hats, and its acceptability for rough and ready outing hats cannot be gainsaid. Illustrated here is a model of brown

NOVEL SPRING HAT.

lacquered straw, woven in bamboo effect. The shape is a modification of the ever popular sailor, the narrow crown drooping to one side and flaring upward at the other. The trimming consists of grosgrain ribbon and felt flowers.

Colored Embroideries.

There is a great deal of embroidery worn—chiffon worked with a loose, coarse floss—with the happiest results, but we have to accustom our eyes to the bright colors. Red and blue are introduced together on tan and green, and purple on yellow, while yellow and red find favor.

A VETERAN WHO WAS WITH LORD ROBERTS

Laid Low With Rheumatism—But Cured By "Fruit-a-tives".

CHATHAM, ONT., APRIL 3rd, 1913.

"I am a veteran of the Crimean War and the Indian Mutiny, volunteering from the Royal Artillery into the Royal Engineers, and served under Lord Roberts during the Indian Mutiny, and am a pensioneer of the British Government. Fierce hand-to-hand fighting and continual exposure left me a great sufferer from Rheumatism, so much so that my legs swelled up, making it impossible for me to walk.

An Incident of the Chicago Fire

By JOHN TURNLEE

Kimball Burroughs came of age in the autumn of 1871. His birthday occurred on the 8th of October, and he celebrated the event by giving a dinner. I was present and have occasion to remember the date perfectly. The 8th of October that year fell on Sunday. How I happen to remember this will appear as I proceed with my story. Two other events in Burroughs' life were celebrated at that dinner. It was a farewell to his bachelor friends, for he was to be married the next evening, and he came into possession of $500,000 invested in negotiable securities.

The autumn of 1871 was a very dry season. Chicago, the city in which we were living, had experienced a series of fires. While we were dining fire engines went clanging by incessantly. Lifting a curtain of a west window, I saw a great yellow glare. In less than an hour every one of us had left the dinner table and gone out to witness the beginning of the great Chicago fire.

Burroughs' wedding did not take place the next day, for his home, the home of his fiancee and the church he was to have been married in were all either in flames or in ruins. What troubled Burroughs most was a fear that his securities might have been destroyed. They were in the keeping of his guardian, and his guardian was among those who were missing after the fire fiend had satisfied its hunger.

A soon as the ruins had cooled Burroughs began a search for his fortune. It was not found at the safety deposit company where his lawyer, Samuel Coolidge, had kept valuables. The office safe had tumbled from the fourth story of the building, and everything in it had been burned to powder. These two incidents taken together convinced Burroughs that he had lost his fortune, for the securities were not of the registered kind, but in the nature of a banknote. At any rate, if he recovered any of his inheritance he could do so only after a long process.

As soon as Burroughs was convinced of this he went to his fiancee and offered to release her. She wept and moaned and vowed that she could never love any one else, but did not give any definite answer to his offer. But when a month had passed and her lover was hard pressed for money to meet his immediate expenses she turned him down. We who had attended our friend's bachelor dinner felt that he had made a narrow escape. Miss Etherling, the lady in question, had in her own right something like $20,000. This gave her an income of but $1,000 a year, and she needed much more than that to enable her to keep up her position in society.

One day about three months after the fire I met Burroughs on the street. He approached me with a radiant countenance.

"You've found your fortune," I said.

"Guess again."

"Give it up."

"I've got a new sweetheart."

"You don't mean it."

He briefly told me how a girl who had loved him long had been grieved at his engagement with Miss Etherling and had consented to take him with his poverty. I congratulated him heartily, and we parted, each about his own affairs. Burroughs' new love—a Miss Tisdale—was poor as a church mouse, and I feared that since Kimball had been brought up to expect a fortune they would have a hard life.

We were all very busy after the Chicago fire, and I saw nothing of Burroughs for some time. On returning from a business trip I found on my desk an invitation from him for another bachelor dinner previous to his marriage with Miss Tisdale, to be given at the most expensive hotel in the city. I was too busy during the day to learn anything further about his affairs and went to the dinner with no knowledge of them except what I have stated. The guests were all seated at the table when I entered, and Burroughs stood at one end.

He beckoned me to a vacant seat beside him, but since he was standing with a glass of wine in his hand, as if about to give a toast, I remained standing, and a waiter filled my glass. It was evident from Burroughs' manner and that of his guests that something important was to be announced.

"My friends," he said, "perhaps some of you have not heard of my good fortune, so I will inform you. Recently the debris left by the fire has been cleared away for a building to be erected on La Salle street. Under the ruins was found a safe, the contents of which were in perfect condition. One bundle of papers turned out to be my securities.

"The remains of a man were discovered also and identified as those of my guardian, Samuel Coolidge. He had doubtless removed the contents of his firm's box from the safety deposit vaults and carried them out into the street. Driven by the fire into another building, he had found an opportunity to put them into a safe, but, penned in by flames, was unable to escape.

"I propose his memory, standing and in silence."

It is quite likely that there were many other cases of devotion to duty during that pandemonium, the heroes and the heroines of which were buried under the ruins, not to be exhumed.

Burroughs and his wife, their children and their grandchildren are living, a happy and united family. Miss Etherling died a disappointed old maid.

An Indication of Greatness

By OSCAR COX.

My uncle, Dr. James Pulsifer, was a great scientist and an original thinker. He died a bachelor and left me all his property. After his death I examined every paper of his I could find, especially his scientific writings, thinking to publish them. Among an earlier batch written very soon after he graduated in medicine I found a narrative which as I read on interested me intensely. Here it is:

"We all know that many things exist of which the human mind has not yet any conception. I go further than this. I believe that anything of which the mind can conceive, however improbable, may exist.

"Some years ago a certain noted author wrote a story—'The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde'—suggesting that two different personalities might exist in the same man. I believe that the day will come when it will be demonstrated to the world that some, if not all, of us are composed of more than one being. Indeed, I not only believe it; I know it. If you ask me why I know it, this is my reply:

"There was something about Jennie Hatch that impressed me the first time I met her. She was what most persons would call odd. Perhaps one reason for my becoming interested in her was that I was a recent graduate of a medical college and had taken a post graduate course on the physiology of psychical conditions. It seemed to me that Miss Hatch was abnormal—not that her body was abnormal, but the spirit within it. For I am not so given to materialism as to believe that our spiritual and physical parts are one.

"Whether Jennie Hatch mistook my scientific interest in her for love I don't know, but she came to look upon me as a lover. I did not either encourage or discourage her in this. I permitted the relationship between us to drift on without definition. One thing I noticed which I set down to a certain fickleness or apparent fickleness consequent upon the physical makeup of women. I would go to see her, say, on Saturday night, an evening I usually dodged my patients if I could do so without injury to them. She would receive me kindly, and be a delightful companion. I would visit her the following Wednesday and she would look at me as though she wondered why I had called. During the first visit she would be a girl, during the second a woman. During the first I would seem to be a proper companion for her—that is, a person of about the same age. During the second she made me feel that I was a boy attempting to entertain a woman who had learned wisdom.

"My observations indicated to me that Jennie Hatch embodied two personalities. My deductions were not based alone on such differences as I have described. There was another and far more important symptom. I became convinced that Jennie sometimes loved me and sometimes did not love me. Not only this—I came to suspect that there were times when she loved some one else.

"On the theory that she embodied two persons it seemed to me that Jennie No. 1 might love me and that Jennie No. 2 might love another. It was not conducive to love, or, rather, comfort, to be interested in one whose other self loved some other person. Nevertheless, I found myself growing fond of Jennie. My theory did not admit of jealousy because I had no affection for Jennie No. 2. Yet, singularly enough, I was jealous of her lover. I suppose it was on account of the two spiritual personalities occupying the same body. Scientifically expressed, my jealousy should be represented by No. 1 (Jennie of the flesh plus zero (Jennie No. 2, to whom I was indifferent), the product being one-half.

"Nevertheless I was in love, and one evening while thinking the matter over it occurred to me that I could study the case better as Jennie's—I refer to Jennie No. 1—fiance than as we were. On the impulse of the moment I went to her house for the purpose of making a declaration.

"I saw the moment she entered the room that she was her other self.

"I once heard a woman say that if a man has made up his mind to a proposal nothing that she can say or do will stop him. I had gone to Jennie's house to propose to her, and somehow I could not resist the impelling force. I asked her to be my wife. She hesitated, then refused me, telling me that she loved another.

"I had begun this affair with purely scientific motives. Here was an end to it, based on human reasons. I left the house feeling that for me the bottom had dropped out of the universe."

Here the paper ended abruptly. I was much disappointed, hoping to find some confirmation of my uncle's theory, based on his singular love affair. But not another word did I meet with on the subject. One day I was talking about him to a chum of his youth, whom I asked how the doctor came to be a bachelor. The reply was that when a very young man he had been in love with a Miss Hatch, who married an old fellow double her age.

This revelation gave a shock to my admiration for my uncle's scientific attainments until I remembered that when he mistook a girl's indicision between himself and another man for a duplex being he was very young. Nevertheless, the incident indicated his mental bent and foreshadowed his future remarkable career as a scientist.

Milady's Mirror

Drink Plenty of Water.

If you would have a clear complexion drink plenty of water between meals and exercise out of doors every day.

Cold water stimulates the membranes of the stomach, and hot water soothes them.

Sipping either is better than swallowing rapidly, and when the taste of hot water is unpalatable a pinch of salt or a dash of lemon juice will improve it. A pinch of soda with the lemon juice is even better.

A rational habit of drinking water will not only improve the health, but will preserve it. Water and milk are both very good to keep the kidneys acting well.

For Tender Feet.

Carbolated vaseline, well rubbed into the skin, is said to be excellent for frostbites.

Where the skin is broken zinc oxide is sometimes very healing.

White cotton stockings should be drawn on the feet, when any cream is used.

Massage after a warm foot bath helps to stimulate the circulation where there is a proneness to cold feet and is a preventive of frostbite.

A little salt added to the foot bath will harden too delicate skin.

When Hair Darkens.

Light hair grows darker as one grows older. The woman who is troubled by her hair darkening might add the juice from half a lemon to next to the last rinsing water when she washes her hair. If her hair is not too dry it will not harm it to put a teaspoonful of borax in the shampoo bath.

A hair restorer is composed of twice as much Jamaica rum as castor oil and a few drops of either oil of roses or lavender. Rub it will into the scalp, being careful not to have any more than possible touch the hair.

Sties on the Eyelid.

Sties are occasioned by the irritation of the hair follicle out of which an eyelash springs. They should be opened as soon as the pus is formed, for they will not get well as long as the pus remains.

For inflammation of the follicles and scaliness add to an ounce of vaseline fifteen grains of precipitated sulphur. In applying this ointment it is well to warm it a little.

Unconscious Frowns.

Don't narrow your eyes when you wish to be impressive. If you draw your mouth into a button and allow deep lines to pucker between your eyes you will acquire a habitual cross expression. Is anything more unpleasant than an angry face with its features tied in veritable knots?

Hair Curlers.

Curlers of any description are none too good for the hair, but the kinds where the hot iron does not come in contact with the hair itself are best. Then the kid one, where no iron at all is used, is better still.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Backache.

Backache is seldom due to disease. Great fatigue causes it, or great strain, as from lifting or tugging heavy weights. Exposure to cold and dampness will make the back ache. Tramping about the damp streets without having the feet protected by overshoes will give one a backache which is as painful as a throbbing toothache. Backache is often due to excesses. The common, everyday home treatment of the ordinary backache is all that is required. A hot bath, a brisk rubdown with a rough towel, followed by a ten hour rest in bed, vanishes the aching and pain of nearly every backache. This is especially true of the kind caused by exposure. If the muscles in the back have been strained (lifting, etc.) the bath, rest and a belladonna plaster over the most painful portion of the back is a good treatment. If backache is persistent in spite of all simple measures taken to relieve it, it is advisable always to seek advice from a physician.

Fine Excuse.

Wife (at 7 a. m.)—Now deny your condition last evening! Here you are lying in bed with your hat and shoes on. Don't tell me you didn't come home the worse for drink! Husband—Not a bit, dear. You know I have lately taken to walking in my sleep, and I thought I'd go to bed prepared.—Illustrated Bits.

Gallery Gods.

The occupants of the gallery have received the general appellation of the gods from the circumstance that the ceilings of theaters were formerly embellished with mythological deities surrounded by a sea of azure to represent the sky. The patrons of the gallery were consequently "among the gods."

Woman's World

A Practical Movement to Aid the Woman on the Farm.

MRS. BELLE VAN DORN HARBERT.

The International Congress of Farm Women is an organization of women who have caught the vision of an ideal life on the farm. They know the hardships which farm women have endured in the past, and they are anxious to brighten the lives and widen the horizon of all women similarly placed.

The American division of the farm women's movement was organized at Colorado Springs in October, 1911, coordinate with the Dry Farming congress. It is now united with many other great national congresses, making one great international union in which twenty-eight nations are represented.

The organization is interested in inviting the national and state governments to recognize the needs of farm women. The dangers of the rapid growth of cities, with the accompanying decrease of rural dwellers, is being studied. The doctrine of thrift and the nobility of labor are preached in the hope of encouraging a "back to the farm" movement. Unbiased experiments with modern inventions, calculated to save labor in farmhouses, are being carried out, and an effort is made to make it possible for farm women to discriminate between the useless and valuable ones. The congress is also interested in the development of consolidated schools and in encouraging teaching of domestic science and practical housekeeping.

The leader in this useful movement and the president of the organization is Mrs. Belle Van Dorn Harbert of Manzanola, Colo., a woman of charming personality and wide human sympathy. Mrs. Harbert has made a study of the questions affecting the welfare of women on the farm and has been wonderfully successful in interesting them in the movement.

lacquered straw, woven in bamboo effect. The shape is a modification of the ever popular sailor, the narrow crown drooping to one side and flaring upward at the other. The trimming consists of grosgrain ribbon and felt flowers.

Colored Embroideries.

There is a great deal of embroidery worn—chiffon worked with a loose, coarse floss—with the happiest results, but we have to accustom our eyes to the bright colors. Red and blue are introduced together on tan and green, and purple on yellow, while yellow and red find favor.

An Incident of the Chicago Fire

By JOHN TURNLEE

Kimball Burroughs came of age in the autumn of 1871. His birthday occurred on the 8th of October, and he celebrated the event by giving a dinner. I was present and have occasion to remember the date perfectly. The 8th of October that year fell on Sunday. How I happen to remember this will appear as I proceed with my story. Two other events in Burroughs' life were celebrated at that dinner. It was a farewell to his bachelor friends, for he was to be married the next evening, and he came into possession of $500,000 invested in negotiable securities.

The autumn of 1871 was a very dry season. Chicago, the city in which we were living, had experienced a series of fires. While we were dining fire engines went clanging by incessantly. Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

GREAT ACTIVITY SHOWN ALL ALONG WEST FRONT

French Are Pressing Eastward in Champagne District --- Steady Pressure is Being Maintained --- Germans in Belgium Very Busy

LONDON, April 6.—The Morning Post has the following from Champagne, France: The French advance in the Hurlus district and the Camp de Chalons, which is one of the great training grounds for the French army, has altered and is daily continuing to alter the entire aspect of affairs in the Champagne, while in other parts of the line we have been content to keep pounding at the Germans and wearing down their effectives in men and material, snatching from time to time local success as occasion may offer. Here it really seems the forward movement has been begun with promises that it will be continuous. We have now gained the top of the slope leading to a great plain of barren land rolling gently into the low hills and sprinkled freely with plantations of scrubby pine trees. Naturally it has been costly business, and the fighting, which continues unceasingly, is still sending back long trains of wounded to the bases, but the Germans have lost still more heavily. They have some of their finest troops here, including detachments of the Prussian Guard, whole regiments of which have been cut up.

So terrible has been the effect of the concentrated artillery fire, and so frightful from the German standpoint the French bayonet work at close quarters, that many of the prisoners who have been so fortunate as to be taken are insane. It is no mean force that the French have to face here, for, with recent reinforcements that have been rushed up to the danger point, full seven army corps are calculated to be in the district. In several instance; so desperate has been the defence offered by the subborn German infantry that they actually have built parapets of their dead behind which they have disputed every inch of the French advance. Now that they have been driven from what may be termed their prepared positions, the Germans are adapting themselves to warfare on the plains of Champagne, which consist, in the rapid fortification of each of the little pine plantations that dot the open country with trenches and machine guns.

These might well have proved formidable obstacles — but there is the "75." In the preliminary fighting towards the plains at the commencement of the second phase in the Champagne operations the famous French field gun is doing some of its most spectacular work. It is mowing down brittle pine trees in swaths.

The correspondent of The Daily Express telegraphs from the Belgian frontier:

Aerial raids on German aerodromes and submarine depots, a lively bombardment of the German coast defences from the sea, and renewed attacks and counter-attacks on several points in the Dixmude-Lombardyze sector are the principal features of the first Easter in Belgium under German rule.

Thousands of German soldiers passed the day in crowded troop trains traveling across Flanders, as a part of the widespread redistribution of forces between the eastern and western fronts, which has caused so much speculation during the last week. Some of the trains which halted at Liege on the way from Cologne on Saturday were so packed that the soldiers sat on the roofs of the cars.

The following official statement was issued last night:

"This has been a day of rain and fog along the whole front.

"At the woods of Ailly, southeast of St. Mihiel, we carried three successive lines of trenches. We also gained a foothold in part of the enemy's organization northeast of Regnieville."

A pleasing number in "September Morn," the excellent musical comedy coming to the Grand for matinee and evening, Saturday next, April 10th. The management promise a refined performance with an attractive chorus and elegant costumes and scenery. The sale will open Thursday morning.

SPECIAL COMMITTEE WILL FURTHER CONSIDER SCHEME TO INSURE CIVIC EMPLOYES

The matter of having civic employes insured so as to protect the city in event of an accident, which would result in compensation being paid according to the Workmen's Compensation Act, is still "being considered." For weeks a special committee have been dealing with the proposition, and yesterday afternoon held a short meeting so as to present a report to the council meeting. The committee were unable to arrive at anything definite and at the meeting last night Ald. Green, chairman of the special committee, entered the chamber armed with a fyle of communications and when the order of business was receiving reports of committees he proceeded to give a verbal report.

According to Ald. Green's remarks the special committee could not decide as to whether or not the $2000 placed in the estimates for the purpose of insuring employes should be used to pay premiums to a regular insurance company or whether to use the $2000 as a nucleus of a fund for the paying of compensation for accidents and having the city carry the risk. The $2000 fund would not protect the city in event of there being a large number of accidents but in view of the few accidents in former years and the great care which is being taken on work at the present time, Ald. Green thought it would be wise to use the $2000 as the beginning of a fund. A rate could be levied on all proposed works which would be equal to the amount paid for that purpose if the work be let by contract and this money added to the fund. If fortunate, the city would soon have a large fund, equal to meet such expenditures. In answer to a question by Ald. Edgar, Ald. Green stated that the rate offered by insurance companies was six per cent. of wages if all civic employes were insured and seven per cent. if only those on the outfall sewer were insured.

"Is there no way we could get the men to take on the insurance?" asked Ald. Edgar.

"The law will not permit it," answered the chairman of the Board of Works.

At this point Ald. Stratton remarked that he preferred having the special committee reconsider the matter and bring in a report as other committees.

Ald. Duffus pointed out how the special committee have been unable to get a report and for that reason the matter was placed before the council. Personally, Ald. Duffus was in favor of insuring the men this year in an insurance company and then possibly go into the matter more thoroughly next year.

Must Give Compensation.

Ald. Green pointed out how the city is not permitted to pay money into the Compensation Board as manufacturers, yet the city must give compensation for accidents according to the Compensation Act. The special committee was desirous of securing the opinion of the council as to whether the council thought it wise to spend a portion of the money set aside for this purpose and have the remainder go towards a fund. In his mind it would not be an unwise move to spend $1000 and have some of the civic employes insured. Ald. McIntyre and Ald. Weir favored the starting of a fund and using the $2000 as a nucleus.

Take the Chance.

Mayor Buller thought this municipality able to "take the chance" rather than paying $3500 out to insurance companies. He referred to a letter received from St. Thomas in which the idea of asking the government to provide legislation for municipalities as well as manufacturers. "Under present conditions," remarked His Worship, "I'm in favor of taking the chance. I know it's a chance but I can't see why Peterborough can't take care of any trouble unless a cyclone comes through."

The motion of Ald. Stratton and Dobbin to have the matter referred back to the committee carried.

EXCEPTION TAKEN BY MAGISTRATE

Magistrate Dumble showed very plainly this morning that he does not appreciate anyone usurping authority that rightly is vested in the magisterial chair. The case of Dan McDonald, who has failed to provide for his child which is at present being cared for by the Children's Aid Society, was to have come up, but Mr. Phoenix, representing the society, informed the Magistrate that McDonald and his wife had come to his office this morning and he had consented to postponing their appearance in court for one week.

Magistrate Dumble brusquely gave Mr. Phoenix to understand that if he took the matter out of the hands of the court, he could not expect the court to help him.

The Parliamentary Committee to which the matter was referred, has refused the application of the members of the C.M.B.A. for an injunction restraining the Grand Council from putting into effect the increased rates until a convention of the order can be held. The new rates go into effect on the 1st of July.

INVESTIGATION BY JUDGE HUYCKE

Council Approves Recommendation From Legal Committee

"We waited upon His Honor Judge Huycke who agreed that if the members of the Board of Education referred to in the resolutions asking for an investigation consented to accept and abide by his decision and laid the facts before him, he would hear them and give a decision.

"We communicated with the members of the Board of Education mentioned and received letters from Messrs. W. H. Hill, G. N. Gordon, and John Crane, which are attached to this report. Messrs. Hill and Gordon agree to abide by the Judge's decision in the matter.

"We recommend that copies of these letters be forwarded to His Honor Judge Huycke and that he be asked to hold the investigation in accordance with the suggestion made when your committee waited upon him.

Such was the report of the Legal Committee to council last night.

Before the motion to adopt the report was carried Ald. Green asked if it was right that Mr. Crane had not agreed. Mayor Buller pointed out how Mr. Crane was not mentioned when the matter came before the council before.

"How did Mr. Crane get into it?" was Ald. Green's next question.

"Judge Huycke said Messrs. Crane and Hill were in the same box," answered His Worship.

"Something he found out not through us?"

The Mayor replied in the affirmative.

Two Firemen Who Have Enlisted Are Given Morris Chairs

A jolly gathering took place last evening in the firehall, the occasion being a farewell banquet given to ex-firemen Ernest Munden and M. J. Clancy who have enlisted for active service and who were in the city on special leave of absence. They have enlisted with the 26th Battery.

The farewell assumed the tangible form when the two ex-members were each presented with a handsome quartercut oak Morris chair by their formem fellow members, the presentation being accompanied by an address.

Alderman Duffus, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee was chairman, while former chairman Ald. G. W. Green, made the presentation.

Both Fireman Munden and Clancy made suitable replies.

A eulogy of the two departing firemen was made by H. Johnston and Fireman E. Downton. This was followed by a patriotic address by Chief Howard who rung in many humorous incidents and had the gathering laughing most of the time. Adjutant McElhiney, fire department chaplain, gave the boys some good advice and "God Save the King" wound up the affair. The address read was as follows:

To Firemen Munden and Clancy,
Dear Comrades,

We, the officers and members of the Peterborough Fire Department, regret exceedingly the loss the department will sustain by you severing your connection with us. We feel, however, that you have chosen a higher calling, and trust that your services in connection with the military department, will be equally successful.

During your terms of employment in this department, you have shown yourselves to be manly men, and always faithful to duty. The consciousness of this fact ought to be a source of gratification to you; it is to us.

During the years that are past you have shown yourselves to be kind and considerate to your fellow firemen, and we wish you to know that we entertain the very kindest regards for you. Your actions have been such as to command our respect.

We will follow your future with a good deal of interest, as we are confident that you will not only do honor to your King and country, but that your future good behavior will be a source of pride to us.

We are taking advantage of your temporary leave of absence to express to you our good wishes and we ask you to accept these chairs as a slight token of our respect and esteem.

We sincerely hope and trust that you will be spared to return safely at the conclusion of the present war, and shall look forward to the coming of the time when we shall be re-united.

Signed on behalf of the department.

W. A. HOWARD,
Chief, Fire Department.
JOS. J. DUFFUS,
Chairman,
Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Fire Department Chaplain.

RELIEF FOR RESIDENTS

Householders on Lafayette Ave Have Suffered Long

Residents of Lafayette Avenue and Jackson Avenue, also residents for blocks around that section, will be mighty pleased to learn that something is to be done to improve the sanitary conditions of their neighborhood. At the meeting of the council last evening Sanitary Inspector Spence had a letter on the fyle pointing out the bad condition in which the lane between Lafayette Avenue and Jackson Avenue is at the present time. He recommended that it be taken into the area visited by garbage collectors.

Ald. Edgar had made a personal investigation of the lane and presented the aldermen with a verbal picture of it. Four residents of Lafayette Avenue were in the Isolation Hospital when he was down there, with diphtheria. He strongly urged that something be done. The streets should be taken into the garbage area and water provided. Jackson Ave. which at present has sewer facilities.

Ald. Stratton wanted to know why the Sanitary Inspector had not remedied the matter.

Ald. Edgar explained how Mr. Spence was down there but all the sanitary inspectors in the world couldn't remedy it unless the city took the necessary steps.

His Worship thought it best to have the matter left with the Board of Health and as to the sewer, there was some trouble in connection with that, the details of which he could not recall. He left the sewer matter with the Board of Works.

Ald. Green intimated that the matter would be taken up but wished to make it known that the matter of cleaning back lanes was not the duty of the Board of Works nor the Board of Works' chairman.

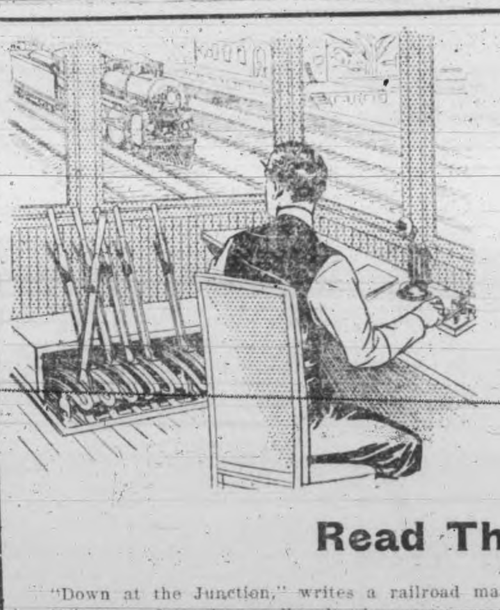
MIDDLEMAN TO MAKE HIS EXIT

Canteens at Summer Camps to be Handled by Commandants

OTTAWA, April 6. — General Sam Hughes has issued orders that all middlemen are to be eliminated in the future in the running of canteens for the Canadian soldiers in training camps. "There will be no more middlemen, such as were at Valcartier," said the Minister today. "The canteens, which will remain dry, will be administered and carried on under the supervision of the commanding officer, and all profits will be for the benefit of the funds of the soldiers. The boys will get all benefits whether in lower prices or in donations for regimental funds."

Dry canteens will be established at all military camps where units are in training for active service, such as Toronto, Kingston, London, Winnipeg, Calgary, Edmonton and other points. Later when the men are transferred to larger camps, such as Niagara, Sewell and Valcartier, the canteens will be run in the same manner.



Is Tea or Coffee After Your Job?

The average cup of tea or coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffeine, a poisonous drug that handicaps the efficiency and chances for promotion of many bright men and women.

"Down at the Junction," writes a railroad man, "where I am employed as Telegraph Operator and Towerman for a busy railroad, where every second counts and where I hold the lives of the entire train crew and passengers in my hand, I found coffee was making me dull and exceedingly nervous.

"My wife told me about Postum. I tried it and liked it. I never drink anything else now. I have a tin of Instant Postum in my pail. I feel fine, my brain is quick and active, and there's no delay at the Junction while I'm on duty. I really think coffee would have put me out of a job if I hadn't quit it for Postum."

BRITAIN'S HUGE DRINK BILL

The United Kingdom's liquor bill for 1913 was higher than in 1912, and the total for 1914 was above 1913, according to unofficial figures. The totals in 1913 and 1912 were:—

1913	$833,405,000
1912	807,766,650

In the latter year the expenditures on defence were: —

Army	$138,245,000
Navy	239,290,000

Thus the drink bill more than doubled the combined army and navy expenditures.

It appears from the Statistical Abstract of the British Empire, a government work, that the consumption per capita of spirits and beer in the last year under observation, 1909, measured in gallons, was ass follows in the United Kingdom, compared with other great countries:—

	Spirits.	Beer.	Wine.
United Kingdom	0.70	26.2	0.27
Germany	1.58	22.0	1.19
France	1.32	7.9	34.5
Russia	1.10	Not counted.	Not counted.
United States	1.14	16.5	0.49

In 1913 the average expenditure per head for the year for drink was $18.10. The average per family of five persons was $90.50.

The average per head is highest in England, lower in Scotland, lowest in Ireland.

The total consumption of drink, in gallons, in the United Kingdom in the year was as follows:—

Malt liquors	1,397,314,800 gallons
Wines	15,206,400 gallons
Spirits	40,078,000 gallons

The government revenue in 1913-14 from excise duties amounted in the United Kingdom to $197,950,000
For 1914-15 the duties are estimated by the government at 198,250,000

ON HIS WAY TO JOIN THE MILITIA

David Anderson, aged 22, a Lindsay youth, was among the prisoners locked up yesterday, his crime consisting of geteting drunk. He claimed to be en route to Ottawa to join the militia, so was discharged.

Robert Kellet, drunk in a public place, pleaded guilty. He lived in Toronto, he said, and came here looking for work; encountered some friends, who treated him so generously that he overcharged his capacity for whiskey.

"You'd better take the next train out of the city," advised the magistrate.

ALL SAINTS' CONGREGATION MAKE CREDITABLE SHOWING

Amount of Money Raised for all Purposes Was $8742

SUNDAY SCHOOL GROWS

The annual Easter vestry meeting of All Saints' Church was held last evening and was largely attended. The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, M.A., occupied the chair.

The financial statement was presented by Mr. H. P. Morgan, the people's warden and that of the missionary fund by the Rector's warden, Mr. C. E. Sisson. It was shown that during the past year the amount raised for all purposes was $8742, a most creditable showing for a year of such peculiar difficulty. The missionary statement showed a substantial increase in missionary giving, $425 having been contributed during the year.

High Water Mark.

The Sunday School report was very encouraging, showing an average attendance for the year of 252. The largest attendance was 350. This is the high water mark in the history of the school.

The choir report was presented by Mr. Chandler and was most satisfactory. The membership of the choir has grown almost to the capacity of the new chancel.

The reports of the other organizations were presented as follows:—

The Women's Auxiliary by Mrs. Gilbert.

The Junior Branch of the W. A., by Mrs. Blois.

The Women's Guild, by Mrs. Haskill.

The Chancel Guild, by Miss Cairns.

The Talent System, by Miss Rush.

Mr. Chas. Lacheur presented the auditor's report.

The Rector in his report took occasion to thank the many workers who had charge of the various branches of the church's activity and expressed his gratitude for the success which had crowned their efforts. He drew attention to the great change that had taken place in the church building. Last Easter the matter of chancel and vestries was still in the discussion stage. This Easter it is an accomplished fact and the congregation has the joy and privilege of worshipping in one of the most beautiful churches in the diocese. This change had been wrought during a year of wide spread financial depression and general discouragement and was therefore a cause for special thankfulness.

Election of Officers.

The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

Rector's Warden—Mr. A. Smeaton.

People's Warden—Mr. H. P. Morgan.

Vestry Clerk—Mr. R. E. Clarke.

Envelope Secretary — Mr. E. L. Davis.

Lay delegates to the Synod—Mr. W. G. Howden, Mr. Jas. Edgar, Mr. G. W. Worth.

Advisory of Committee—Mayor Buller, Mr. H. P. Morgan, Mr. A. Smeaton, Mr. C. E. Cisson, Mr. T. H. Hooper, Mr. T. H. Dawson, Mr. Jas. Mulholland, Mr. E. L. Davis, Mr. R. N. Jones, Mr. Robt. Cottrell, Mr. Rogers, Mr. R. E. Clarke.

Many votes of thanks were passed and a good deal of interesting discussion took place on several matters of interest which were brought before the meeting.

Owing to a new system of presenting the auditors' report at the annual Easter vestry there will be no adjourned meeting this year.

ST. LUKE'S PARISH IS PROSPERING

Church Wardens' Statement Found to be Very Satisfactory

The annual vestry meeting of St. Luke's Church was held last night in the Sunday school hall. A large number of the men of the congregation were present. The church wardens presented their financial statement for the past year, which showed a most satisfactory and prosperous condition of the affairs of the church. Mr. William Manlece was elected the people's warden, and the rector appointed Mr. R. H. Parsons as rector's warden. Messrs. E. A. Peck, Frank Adams and J. J. Turner, Jr., were appointed delegates to the Synod.

This being the first meeting at which the new rector, Rev. Walter White presided, he expressed the pleasure he felt at being present, and Messrs. Peck and J. J. Turner expressed the feeling of the congregation by saying how fortunate they felt on having secured the services of the Rev. Mr. White, and they looked forward to a continuance of the prosperity that had always been the lot of St. Luke's Church to enjoy.

The meeting adjourned till April 19th.

MEMORIAL WINDOW FOR YOUNG MEMBER OF KNOX CHURCH

A memorial window in memory of the late Richard Allan Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Foster, Wolfe St., was unveiled at Knox Church Sunday morning.

RUSSIAN FORCES ARE MAKING GREAT HEADWAY

Austrians Seem Incapable of Opposing a Successful Resistance to the Muscovite Advance

LONDON, April 6.—In the fighting on their southern fronts the Russians scored important successes at no less than four points, the War Office announced last night, and the unfortunate Austrians seem incapable of putting up a successful resistance anywhere to the triumphal progress of the Russian arms. Engines, coaches, an immense supply of ammunition, and part of a provision train were captured by the Russians through the occupation of the railway station at Cisna, on the Galician side of the Carpathians, about fifteen miles east of Lupkow. This loss is a heavy blow to the Germans and Austrians.

The second success by the Russians was gained in the region north of Bartfeld, a point upon which the Russians are converging, slowly but surely. Here the fighting was marked by fierce exchanges of artillery salvos and heavy bayonet charges, and as a result 20 Austrian officers, and over 1,200 soldiers were captured with two machine guns.

The Russians in the third place made progress on the front from Mezolaboroz and Uszok, carrying everything before them and taking prisoner 25 officers and over 2,000 soldiers. Three guns also fell into Russian hands.

The fourth scene of Russian success was in Bukowina. Desperate fighting took place near Okla Village, north of Czernowitz, and the Austrians were forced to retreat, leaving behind over 1,000 men, who were made prisoners.

West of the Niemen river continued progress is being recorded against the Germans.

Even the Austrian official report admits that fighting is now taking place in the Laborcza Valley, which is south of Lupkow Pass, while the Russians last night announced the capture of Cisna, an important station on the high mountains between Lupkow and Uzsok passes, where they captured a great stock of war munitions and provisions.

REPORT FROM CITIES WHERE

that only five miles of streets be oiled and the rest watered. "What five miles do you want oiled," asked Ald. Stratton, "all of East City?"

Ald. Weir thought there was no need of oiling some of the streets in the south end because of the sand. He said the streets would be swept away before it was fit for the oil. The amendment was seconded by Ald. McIntyre. The motion carried.

Ald. Edgar claimed the city should not "dry sweep" the paved roads when merchants are made to sprinkle their sidewalk. Ald. Green explained that owing to the cold weather it is thought unwise to place water on the roads at the present time.

Mayor Buller remarked that the by-law will have to be altered and to forbid sprinkling the sidewalks in cold weather.

Ald. Edgar launched the idea of having the firemen flush the streets early in the morning. He thought it would cut down expenses and give the fire firghters a little practice.

"Would you put white wings on them?" asked Ald. Stratton.

Those who caught the joke laughed.

The matter was left with Ald. Duffus and Green to consider before the next Board of Works meeting.

IN THE TRENCHES

It must not be forgotten than trenches advance towards the enemy in zig-zag fashion, while the actual trenches are formed as corrugated paper viewed edgewise. Even the front line, parallel to that of the enemy's, is dug this way, the idea being to arrest the ravages of a shell that falls in the trench itself. We were thus stationed one in each bend of the line, in easy earshot, but completely out of sight of each other.

On occupying the post, provided one's work is done conscientiously, with a sharp eye and an alert ear, one always feels that something is going to happen. It is far too quiet for a battlefield, one reflects. The Germans must be creeping up. After straining the eyes in the darkness for a few minutes the shadows begin to dance, the props to which the barbed wires are fixed a few yards before you assume human forms, while the uncollected bundles of hay become corpses of crouching "Booches," and to the right a suspicious beetroot patch arrests the eye with a jerk.

The wet black nights are the "nervy" nights. Impossible to see a yard before one, the least sound to the high-strung nerves suggests a horde of Germans creeping up on their elbows and knees armed to the teeth and ready to leap up to strangle you.

The German practice is to pot at us at close intervals day and night, especially the latter, and suddenly little —— at the far end, who was quite alone, started yelling out: "Oh, sergeant, sergeant! I can see a lot of Germans walking about with electric flash lamps!—they're coming our way!"

"The sergeant ran up and looked over his gunhole. "Can't see anything," he exclaims, after a while. "Yes, look—look there — all those little moving lights," goes on ——. "Now, don't be silly; can't you see they are the fire from the rifles. Don't get excited," and with this he shufles off to bed again.

For some while—perhaps fifteen minutes—no alarm is given. The sentinels stare over the gunholes into the grey indistinct void.

Our orders are to call "Haute la, qui vive?" and if no reply to fire. Suddenly I hear the next sentinel "quiviving" in a shaky voice the beetroot patch to my right. But the wind only nods the leaves; so it is promptly ordered to "Halte la." No response.

Five minutes later little —— horrifies the others by declaring that he had just seen a Prussian looking through his gunhole.

It is foolish to fret about the future. The present generally furnishes enough material to work that stunt on.

MEET NEXT AT OTTAWA

Master Horseshoers Complete Business and Elect Officers

The seventy-five delegates who return to their respective homes after attending the fourth annual Master Horseshoers' Association convention will undoubtedly go on record testifying to the successs which attended it. Certainly many problems peculiar to their business were threshed out and valuable information advanced that will assist them in settling them. The liveliest interest was exhibited during all of yesterday's session and this spirit was maintained at a grand farewell banquet held in the Empress hotel after nine-thirty last night which was graced by the presence of His Worship Mayor Buller and members of the City Council.

The Horse-Shoers' Association should be congratulated on having as their president for another year such a capable man as T. C. De Geer. His masterly handling of the convention yesterday convinced all that he was in the right office, a fact which was demonstrated by the enthusiastic manner he was re-elected to the position by acclamation.

Officers were elected as follows for the ensuing year:—

President—Mr. T. C. De Geer of Toronto.

1st Vice-Pres.—M. S. Donoghue of Peterborough.

2nd Vice-Pres.—Mr. Summerhayes of Brantford.

3rd Vice-Pres.—Mr. F. Heaslip of Hamilton.

Secretary—E. T. Hicks.

Treasurer—Mr. John Gardner.

At the afternoon session an opportunity was allowed for general discussion on topics of interest to the horseshoers. Speeches were also made by various delegates.

Congratulated Officers.

Mr. M. S. Donoghue paid tribute to the officers of the association. He figured that this year with $200 in the treasury they would be able to accomplish a great deal of good. Money was an absolute necessity if the work of the association was to be pushed.

He thought that Mayor Buller had given the assosciation great encouragement. Mayor Buller knew that the horseshoers were not making a great deal of money. He knew the cost of running a shop, buying material, et.c

As far as the local union was concerned, it was in pretty good condition. The agreement made that all local shops would close on Easter Monday was a good idea in his opinion.

Confidence should be created among the members of the local in each other. The provincial depended largely upon the success of the locals.

Mr. Keller.

Mr. Keller of Campbellford, said they had eight shops there. Six of them were adhering to the union prices and the others were bucking them

President De Geer said the association should be proud of Campbellford for it was invariably represented at conventions. "If all the locals were as good as Campbellford there would be 1,500 people in the hall." There was not another local that would stand what Campbellford had in the past two years, and if there was anything the association could do, Campbellford was going to get the benefit of it.

Mr. Flems of Warsaw said there were three shops where he came from. Everything was going along pretty well although one man had cut prices for a while.

The meeting was thrown open for a general discussion and an opportunity for airing complaints given.

A farmers' club shop which was organized at Campbellford came in for considerable censure as it encroached upon the rights of the horseshoers, and created a monopoly in restraint of trade.

The secretary read a telegram from the editor of The Horseshoers' Journal, Detroit, wishing the association all success and extending congratulations.

Mr. R. B. McGill, of the Peterborough Hardware Company and formerly a master horseshoer, was called on and brought up recollections of the first convention he took part in. In 1902 he had tried to organize the local horseshoers and with Mr. Jos. Succee, succeeded. Mr. McGill was appointed secretary of the local. Later he went out and did quite a bit of organizing and organized Toronto, Ottawa, Barrie, Orillia, Trenton and Campbellford, and had always sought to raise the standard of horseshoeing out of the mud and mire in which it formerly lay.

He congratulated the association and believed it was on the eve of progress, and in a flourishing condition financially. The motto of the association should be "Onward, forward, raise your standard high, with T. C. De Geer leading the procession."

Mr. Gallagher of the Seed Clover Company put in a word for organization. Mr. Smith of the Belleville Rolling Mills described the Belleville local and how much good a little organization work would accomplish there.

Evening Session.

At the evening session Financial Secretary Hicks was asked to state what he felt should be his yearly remuneration. About $50 a year he figured would not be exhorbitant. Other figures were submitted and on motion $50 was agreed upon.

The question of whether the executive should receive $4 a day for their time while attending conventions was given considerable discussion. The president was inclined to urge that the executive give their time gratis and be paid only their railway and transportation expenses. Mr Fred Roblin of Brighton strongly opposed this idea.

J. W. Slack of Merivale thought the executive should receive $2.50 a day and their expenses.

The president was agreeable to allowing the executive $2.50 provided there were sufficient funds in the treasury at the close of the year, after all expenses and debts were redeemed.

Mr. Slack, the originator of the suggestion, made the motion that the executive board receive $2.50 per day railway and hotel expenses, provided there were enough funds, his motion carrying by a large vote.

President De Geer suggested that the association empower commercial travellers calling on the trade, with authority to organize locals wherever there was no organization, and that their expenses be charged up to the association.

Mr. Slack said that the president's suggestion could not be beaten. The matter was left in the hands of the executive.

Mr. John Gardiner, the treasurer, declined to accept any salary as he felt the duties of the position scarcely warranted a salary.

The next order of business was election of officers. T. C. De Geer wanted to be relieved of the office of president for personal reasons. He felt he had done one year's good service and if he could withdraw without hurting the association he would prefer to do so. He thanked each and every delegate for their assistance and services.

Mr. J. W. Slack could not see how they could possibly part with the president's services. He moved he be re-elected by unanimous vote, which was forthwith done amid enthusiastic applause, and the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." Mr. De Geer promised to put into the association the very best that was in him, since they had decided to re-elect him. He looked forward to seeing one thousand horseshoers at the next meeting.

Nominations for Officers.

The nominations for vice-presidents were next as follows:—

M. S. Donoghue, Peterborough.
John McLaren, Toronto.
F. Heaslip, Hamilton.
Mr. Summerhayes, Brantford.

Mr. Donoghue was elected by a large majority.

Nominations for second vice-presidents were:—

Mr. Summerhayes, Brantford.
Mr. J. Wilson, Toronto.
Mr. F. Heaslip, Hamilton.
Mr. Keller, Campbellford.

Mr. Summerhayes was elected.

Nominations for third vice-president were:—

Mr. Drummond, Smiths Falls.
Mr. F. Heaslip, Hamilton.
Mr. J. Wilson, Toronto.
Mr. Fred Roblin, Brighton.
Mr. Keller of Campbellford.
Mr. Kelly of Kingston.

Mr. Heaslip of Hamilton was elected.

The secretary and treasurer were re-elected by acclamation.

The only nomination for provincial organizer was Mr. J. W. Slack of Merivale who was elected and who thanked the association for the honor placed upon him.

Mr. Kennedy of Peterborough, Mr. J. McLaren of Toronto, and Mr. P. Wherry of Hamilton were elected managers.

Mr. Drummond of Smiths Falls and Mr. J. Wilson of Toronto were elected auditors. Mr. George Church, a past president, was unanimously elected honorary president.

Mr. Samuel Groves of Hamilton was made an honorary member of the association.

Mr. E. T. Hicks on behalf of the Master Horseshoers' Association was presented with a beautiful Waterman fountain pen.

Mr. J. S. Slack of Ottawa moved that the Association hold its convention in Ottawa next year which was agreed upon, largely to please veteran J. W. Slack, one of the most popular members of the association.

It was decided to hold the next picnic at Brantford, August 9th.

HOLD MEETINGS FOR FARMERS

Secretary of Farmers' Organizations to Give Addresses

Arrangements have practically been completed for the meetings to be held in Peterorough county this week which are to be addressed by Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, and of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co. Limited. During the past few months Mr. Morrison has addressed meetings in all parts of Ontario and has had wonderful receptions at every point. Already several thousand farmers of Ontario have identified themselves with the United Farmers of Ontario as a result of the meetings which have been addressed by Mr. Morrison.

The United Farmers' Co-operative Co., Limited, is a co-operative concern which is enabling local farmers' clubs to buy thir goods co-operatively and thus save large sums of money. The United Farmers' Co-operative Co., Limited, this year for instance united with the Grain Growers' Grain Co., of Western Canada, and gave an order for binder twine to a firm in Ireland which supplied the twine last year for the grain growers in Western Canada. In ways such as this the company is working to advance the interests of the farmers of the Province. Mr. Morrison has some startling information relating to the methods being employed by various combines in Canada to control prices and bleed the public. At several meetings he has had documents with him showing private circulars sent out by these combines and revealing how they manipulate prices.

Mr. Morrison is to speak at Zion in Smith township at 2:30 o'clock on Thursday, April 8th, and at Stewart's Hall in Otonabee at 8:00 o'clock the same evening; at Selwyn Friday afternoon, April 9th, at 2:30, and in Temperance Hall, on the 4th Line of Smith, the same evening.

TO GET AFTER ABSCONDERS

Ontario's Attorney-General Preparing to Bring Back Malefactors

It is a notorious fact that very many of the big swindlers, for whom Ontario has proved a happy hunting-ground in the past few years, have been successful in "making their get-away," as soon as they found the game was up. For instance, the manager of the Sovereign Bank left on that bank's failure. So did Monro, the company promoter, when his affairs were in a way to being exposed. So did J. W. Moyes, whose dealings with the West Shore Railway brought him into such prominence. In fact, to move to some other place where he may pursue the even tenor of his way, undisturbed by the law's myrmidons, seems to have become almost second nature with the Ontario malefactor. Pollman Evans, wanted to stand his trial in connection with the Union Life scandal, is believed to be basking in France, where, even if he is nearer the battlefield, he certainly has the arvantage in climate (and other things) over Symons.

"There can be no question," said a lawyer of wide criminal experience the other day, "that fugitives from justice have, in the past, in the Province of Ontario, been treated with too great leniency. It rests with the Attorney-General's Department to decide if any steps are to be taken to bring back a fugitive from justice, and there are signs that the new Attorney-General means to use every means to bring Pollman Evans back. But if it is true that he is in France, I may mention that, in normal circumstances, extradition from France is a matter of considerable difficulty, which is, of course, immensely enhanced now by the war. But, speaking generally, if a Government is in earnest, it is usually possible, with society organized as it is to-day, to trace and bring back a fugitive criminal.

"On every ground the question of expense should not be taken into consideration, though I believe that officialdom has inclined to the view that if (in a case of fraud, for example) the person defrauded has been wronged largely by reason of his own neglect to observe proper precautions, and has put the law in motion to get his revenge, he shall not be helped to do so out of public funds. Fugitives from justice can be traced more easily than the public imagines. Their descriptions and pictures are circulated throughout any country whither they are likely to have fled, if it is seriously intended to bring them back.

"By internatonal practice criminals are surrendered by a country only in consequence of some special treaty with the country which demands them. But extradition treaties exist between Canada, as part of the British Empire, and practically all civilized foreign countries. The offences which are known as extradition offences comprise all the more serious crimes. Thus fugitives from Canada will be given up by the country to which they have fled, if accused or convicted of (among other crimes) murder, attempt or conspiracy to murder, manslaughter, forgery, embezzlement, larceny, false pretences, rape, arson, robbery with violence, and threats with intent to extort money."

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 5.—Wheat futures opened ⅛c to ⅞c up, oats ⅝c up and flax ½c to 1½c higher. Following the opening further advances occurred on wheat, while oats and flax were fairly steady. Before noon wheat had sold at $1.53⅞ for May, $1.52 for July and $1.17¼ for October. The volume of trading in futures was light.

The strength was attributed to reports of dry weather in certain portions of the winter wheat states, war news and heavy world's shipments were offset by the dry weather talk.

The demand for Nos. 1, 2, 3 and 4 northern wheat was good, but only a few cars were placed on the market. Oats of all grades were in fair demand, but only light offerings were on the market. While no new business on export sales was reported, exporting houses were buying futures freely.

Wheat futures closed ⅝c to ½c up, cash 1¾c to 1⅞c higher, oats ¼c to ½c higher and flax ½c to ⅝c higher.

MONTREAL GRAIN MARKET.

MONTREAL, April 5.—There was only a holiday business in grain today. No price changes occurred and the sales put thru showed firmness.

Butter advanced about 2 cents per pound, but eggs were easier, chiefly owing to the falling off in demand and large receipts.

Flour was stationary.

MONTREAL, April 5.—At the Montreal Stock yards, west end market, receipts of live stock for the week ending April 3 were 600 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 1800 hogs and 1400 calves. The offerings today were 450 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1150 hogs and 250 calves.

Cattle were quiet and steady, milkers and packers had ample supplies on hand for another week. Sheep and lambs were scarce and firm. Calves were quiet and steady.

Hogs were strong at an advance of between 30 and 60 cents per hundred pounds. The supply was small, but ample to fill all requirements, and sales of selected lots were made at from $9.30 to $9.60. Sows sold at $7.50 to $7.60, and stags at from $4.30 to $4.60 per hundred pounds weighed off cars.

Export cattle, choice, $8 to $8.25; do., medium, $7.50 to $7.75; do. bulls, $7 to $7.25; butchers' cattle, choice, $3.50 to $6.75; do. medium, $6 to $6.25; do. common, $5 to $5.50; canners, $3.75 to $4.50; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.40 to $6.75; do. medium, $5.90 to $6.25; do. bulls, $5.40 to $5.75; feeding steers, $4.75 to $5.25; feeding bulls, $6.65 to $7; stockers, choice, $6.15 to $6.50; do. light, $5.65 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $70 to $75; do. common and medium, each, $60 to $65; springers, $50 to $55; sheep, ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and culls, $5.25 to $5.50; lambs, $8.50 to $9; hogs, fed and watered, $9.30 to $9.60; calves, $2.50 to $10.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 5.—Cattle—Receipts 16,000. Market strong. Beeves, $6 to $9; western steers, $5.60 to $7.45; cows and heifers, $2.80 to $7.80; calves, $6 to $8.50.

Eitel's Crew Recalled.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 6.—All the members of the crew of the Prinz Eitel who were on shore leave were suddenly recalled to the ship yesterday. At the same time Capt. Thierichens said to a group of newspaper men:

"You won't have me to worry you much longer."

Dark Period Passes.

Vancouver reports say that while that city commercially has passed through a dark period, a wave of optimism is being felt. There is some reason for this as indications of renewed activity are present. The shipping trade is reviving, the lumber industry is to get under way more approaching a normal basis shortly, and mining, which had a good year in 1914, is being resumed. A good deal of construction work is booked for this year. The output of salmon last year on the coast is estimated at 6,300,000 cases. The Okanagan Valley fruit crop was large last year, plums, crab apples and prunes being about double the year before taken together. Grocers in the city are only moderately active now, but most of them report a fairly satisfactory profit and loss account for 1914.

COMMENT

As You Like it

CITIZENS WHO EVINCE an interest in the gymnasium work of the Y. M. C. A. will have an opportunity of witnessing what has been accomplished during the past season when the annual gymnastic exhibition will be staged for two nights, April 8th and 9th. It is being given on two nights this year so that the public may avail themselves of the opportunity. The exhibition this year is to be considerably different from that of other years, inasmuch as the program wil include special work not hitherto shown at any local exhibition. For instance, there will be fancy drills and dances, the latter being a comparatively recent innovation in the curriculum of Y. M. C. A. gymnasiums. One of these will be the ridiculously funny "oxen step." A squad of junior boys will dance the "sailors' hornpipe" to the accompaniment of suitable music, and attired in the costumes of Jack Tars. The Highland Fling will be another feature number. Then there will be what is known as a fancy maze parade, in which the lights are turned out and the boys perform evolutions with lanterns, the effect being remarkably novel and pretty. Wrestling by skilled lightweghts and apparatus work on the parallel bars and human pyramid building will also be introduced. The members have been practising faithfully for these special attractions, and something unusually clever is to be shown. The members of both junior and senior departments are included in the program, and the development of physical strength and skill and the training which the boys receive in the gymnasium wll be demonstrated.

WHEN ONE commences to think of a baseball league he is at once confronted with the niches left in sport circles by the departure of former players. Bob Carson, who was always in the limelight, is with the C. G. E. forces at Quebec and will not be available, "Waddy" Kenealley, who threw away more games than any other man in the Mercantile League and yet held his job, is in Detroit; Sid. Smith the coach and "big noise" of the De Laval team is with the C.M.R. at Ottawa and Bill English is with the Ross Rifle Co. at Quebec. The latter was secretary-treasurer of the Mercantile League last year and also short stop for the De Laval. "Billie" made a host of friends by the keen executive ability he showed in executing his duties as secretary-treasurer last year.

GEORGE MINORGAN will be a familiar figure missing in amateur ball this summer. The golden haired Tinker who has been prominently before the fans for a number of years is fighting with the first contingent in France. Although George didn't always come through with a bingle when a hit meant a game, he was a valuable man on infields. Here's hoping he will be on hand next year.

A LETTER has been received asking where Art Primeau, the ball player, will perform this season. We have no record of an Art Primeau who is a ball player but Art Primeau, the hockey player, is in the city. Whether or not he intends trying out with any of the baseball teams is not known.

DAN McCABE will manage the team from Brooklyn in the City League. The old owl has perhaps more real baseball stored away in his head than any other follower of the game in the city, this together with a few good players should warrant the "east side gang" being considered seriously.

KNUTE BELTING will manage the team being entered by Louie Yeotes. It has been stated that Belting will twirl. That is incorrect as the amateur standing of the other players must be protected.

HORACE WALKEY, the John McGraw of the Thistles, can be depended upon to place a good team in the field. Roy Smythe will likely be his leading heaver and "Mrs. Murphy" is quite equal to the task. Manager Walkey's loss was big when Meredith Huycke decided to enlist.

VIC FOWLER has a couple of good pitchers signed for the Classics in Bush O'Connell and Lornie Rose. Both made their presence felt in the Mercantile League last year. Bennie Taylor or Bob Ross will do the receiving.

NO PAULINE. Frank Barrie will not be playing for the Classics, he will be with East City.

WILLARD'S VICTORY OVER NEGRO, WAS COMPLETE

Back to the Farm is the Song of the Negro

HAVANA, April 6.—Jack Johnson, exile from his own country, yesterday lost his claim to fistic fame as the heavyweight champion of the world, the title being wrested from him by Jess Willard, the Kansas cowboy, the biggest man who ever entered the prize ring, and a "white hope" who at last has made good.

To-morrow Johnson, his wife, and a little group of friends, will sail for Martinique, there to await passage back to France, where Johnson proposes to settle down and lead the life of a farmer, raising pigs and chickens. There is no doubt that he is through with the ring.

Willard, who is being acclaimed as the new champion, is going back to the United States to win the fortune which was denied him yesterday, when Johnson got $30,000 before the fight started, Willard taking only a small share of the net receipts. Just what his share was is not known.

Yesterday's fight probably has no parallel in the history of ring battles. For twenty rounds Johnson punched and punched at Willard at will, but his blows grew perceptibly less powerful as the fight progressed, until at last he seemed unable or unwilling to go on.

After twenty rounds Johnson stopped leading, and for three or four rounds the battle between the two big men was little more than a series of plastic poses of white and black gladiators. So it was until the 25th round, when Willard got one of his wildly-swinging, windmill, right-hand smashes to Johnson's head. This was the beginning of the end.

When the round closed Johnson sent word to his wife that he was all in, and told her to start for home. She was on the way out and passing the ring in the 26th round when a stinging left to the body and a cyclonic right to the jaw caused Johnson to crumple on the floor of the ring, where he lay partly outside the ropes until the referee counted ten and held up Willard's hand in token of his newly-won laurels.

KNEW JESS WOULD WIN.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 6—"I knew all along that Jess would win," said Mrs. Jess Willard, when told of the outcome of the fight at Havana. She appeared pleased but not at all surprised. Her only other comment was made to Jess Willard, Jr., 16 months old.

"Your daddy is champion of the world," she said to him, and kissed him.

Troops Massing On the Border

CHIASSO, Switzerland, April 6.—The assembling of Italian troops on the Austrian frontier is continuing with the greatest activity. All houses of peasants in the districts bordering the confines affected have been occupied by soldiers.

This information reaches Chiasso from Italian sources. It is learned from the same sources that still more important military activity is under way. Information on this point is refused transmission by the Italian censors.

All Are Pledged to Abstinence

LONDON, April 6. — Teetotalism will be enforced in all the King's households, beginning Wednesday. An official announcement just issued, dated to-day says:

"By the King's command, no wines or spirits will be consumed in any of his Majesty's houses after to-day."

The Chronicles says: "We are enabled to state that the members of the Government have decided to follow the King's example and banish alcoholic beverages from their tables. Mr. Lloyd George has the heartiest support of his colleagues in the course he has taken with reference to the necessity of limiting the consumption of alcohol. His mail bag, during the last two days contained 70,000 letters, some of them with many signatures, pledging their writers to abstain from alcohol during the war."

French Artillery Fire Was Horrible

PARIS, April 6.—Combats at the Eparges, in the Department of Meuse, on March 18, 19 and 20 were no less brilliant and successful than the preceding engagements, according to the French official Eye-witness, in a report giving further details of the battles on this part of the front.

"The most recent success," says the report, "was due to the intense artillery preparation, the very prompt assault and violent hand-to-hand fighting. In the trenches captured from the enemy, in which our heavy artillery fire caused great excavations, we found bodies cut up and half-buried in earth.

"Survivors who were captured declare that the French artillery fire was horrible. Others say that the Eighth Bavarian Regiment was decimated, having lost two thousand men and sixteen officers during February. One battalion was reduced to 87 men.

Would Abdicate First.

PARIS, April 6.—According to a despatch to The Temps from Petrograd, the latest German attempts to induce the Austrian Emperor to make territorial concessions to Italy have been met with a declaration by Francis Joseph that he would rather abdicate than cede territory to his former ally. The aged Emperor's resolution seems unshakeable. Government circles in Vienna are awaiting the result of the present battle in the Carpathians, which will finally determine Austria's future attitude.

The woman who prides herself on telling people just what she thinks of them often finds it hard to distinguish between malice and candor.

Should Re-instate Hockey Players

THE ONTARIO Hockey Association, the greatest amateur organization of the present day, has honestly won a name for itself for the straight forward and business like manner in which the officers have always executed their duties. On no page of its history since November 27th, 1890, the date of its birth, can be found a blot caused by any action, of officers, which was contrary to the fundamental rules of amateur sport. By times the association has had to show an iron arm as this year in the Allan Cup squabble but invariably when the sky cleared sport writers throughout the Dominion sanctioned the course decided upon by the executive. Considering these facts it is difficult task to object to rulings the O.H.A. hands out, but in our minds there has been an injustice done to Peterborough athletes and it is just possible that this injustice is the result of an oversight.

The officers and players of the Peterborough Intermediate O.H.A. team have been suspended by the O.H.A. The Association found that the club had played a professional under an assumed name and suspension followed. The association decided that rule five, reading "Any club convicted of having in its membership professionals of any kind shall forfeit its membership in the Association" should be felt by the Peterborough Intermediates. Not only was the membership of the club forfeited but the players suspended. The fact that the players are susupended means that they are barred from all amateur sports. Walter F. Trivett, secretary of the Ontario Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada has handed out the following ruling in this regard:

"The Athletic Union have always upheld suspensions and disqualifications by all its affiliated associations, and any man who was under suspension by an affiliated organization is not considered by us to be in good standing in any other branch of amateur sport. Therefore, while the members of the Intermediate hockey team of Peterborough are under suspension by the Ontario Hockey Association they are not deemed in good standing and cannot be permitted to compete in other branches of amateur sport."

We are not making known our opinion as to whether the Peterborough Hockey Club deserves suspension or not but the alleged breach of the constitution of the O.H.A. was perpetrated by certain of the officers of the Peterborough Club and therefore the players are innocent of any wrong doing. It doesn't matter a great deal whether or not some of the officers of the club are to remain out of amateur sports in the future but it hardly seems right, it hardly seems in accordance with the history of O.H.A. fairness that the players should be kept out of amateur sport because of a "bone" pulled by the officers of the club. Undoubtedly most of the players under suspension will be reinstated; in fact Secretary Hewitt has stated that he felt sure the suspension would be raised if formal application was made to the O.H.A. for re-instatement. If this is the case why does the O.H.A. not consider the players' side of the case immediately and not bar them from participating in amateur sports during the summer?

Several of the suspended players play other games as well as hockey. Grover Halpin is needed on the Peterborough lacrosse team, Harold Knapman usually figures on baseball and rugby teams, Ray Rose is expected to perform in the City Baseball League as is Joe Dwyer. Orv. Kenngalley is another who takes part in amateur sports. For the good of amateur sport these men should be re-instated by the O.H.A. before the coming of the baseball season. In asking for re-instatement they are not asking for a favor, they are only asking for that to which everyone is entitled—justice.

NEW TONE IS GLOOMY

German Writer Talks Now of Protecting Homes

MUCH DISCONTENT

LONDON, April 6. — The Daily News has the following from Rotterdam:

Paul Michaels in the weekly review of the war in The Berliner Tageblatt is evidently in an exceedingly gloomy mood regarding the present position of the German armies, and speaks of the spirit of modesty that now reigns in Germany. To-day he says: "We only see how tremendously difficult it is made for us to preserve our national unity and freedom. Many dreamed too easily of our victory over our enemies. The people thought to gather in the harvest when really the first preparations for the final result still had to be created. In the meantime we have become more modest, and it becomes clear to us that even with the greatest self-sacrifice it will only be with difficulty that we shall be able to conquer the opposition of a world of enemies. Everybody already has long abandoned expectation that between to-day and to-morrow the world could be healed by the German spirit. We have had to be convinced unwillingly and by hard facts that in this war it is not a question of putting through a fantastic world-policy, but a question of protecting our house and home.

"The war was not begun to lay a new yoke upon the world. It certainly will have to be carried on for the self-preservation of the German empire. It would be idle to try and fix the details of what the final peace will be, but in any case our object must be the making certain of our national existence for the longest time possible."

After referring to the course of the submarine war, the writer continues: "We are confident that this winter of our discontent will be followed by a glorious summer."

TO PREVENT CORRUPTION.

Hon. Mr. Doherty's Elections Bill Discussed In Committee.

OTTAWA, April 6. — The House yesterday passed a number of Government bills of minor importance and debated at considerable length in committee of the whole Mr. Doherty's bill to amend the Controverted Elections Act. The bill is designed to expedite the trial of election protests by cutting off preliminary objections and appeals. Curiously enough, the Minister of Justice yesterday introduced a bill permitting provincial elections trials to be further extended than at present by appeals to the Supreme Court of Canada. The legislation will apply to the cases growing out of the recent provincial elections in Manitoba.

The principal discussion yesterday was upon an amendment proposed by Hon. Wm. Pugsley. It provided that, in the trial of Dominion election cases, the court might not only deprive the successful candidate of his seat if corrupt practices were proved, but award the seat to the candidate receiving the next highest number of votes, provided the latter were able to prove that neither he nor his agents had been guilty of any corruption.

There is no encouragement, he said, for a man to be scrupulously clean in election methods. If he was beaten by corruption and spent thousands of dollars in proving that fact, he got nothing in return and the candidate corruptly elected was re-elected usually as a matter of course.

Sir Robert Borden objected that such a provision would work great injustice to a constituency. The people might overwhelmingly prefer John Smith to John Jones and, yet because some friend of Smith's had been guilty of a corrupt practice they would be compelled to accept John Jones as member of Parliament.

The amendment was voted down and the bill itself was left in committee.

Cannot Admit Britain's Right

WASHINGTON, April 6. — The United States Government yesterday made public its note to Great Britain, announcing that "it could not admit" either the right of the allies or their claims for justification in placing an embargo on all commercial intercourse between Germany and neutral countries.

"To admit it," says the communication, "would be to assume the attitude of unneutrality toward the present enemies of Great Britain, which would be obviously inconsistent with the solemn obligations of this Government in the present circumstances, and for Great Britain to make such a claim would be for her to abandon and to set at naught the principles for which she has consistently and earnestly contended in other times and circumstances."

Ambassador Sharp at Paris was instructed to present a copy of the American note to Great Britain to the French Foreign Office, with the statement that although the French Admiralty decree had not been officially received in Washington, it was understood here to be identical with the British order-in-council.

Heavy Indemnity Demanded.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The note of the United States to the German Government, demanding indemnity for the sinking of the American ship William P. Frye, by the German raider Prinz Eitel Friedrich, given at the State Department yesterday, asks an indemnity of $228,059.54. The State Department's note to Ambassador Gerard at Berlin, also directs Gerard to request "that full reparation be made by the German Government for the destruction of the William P. Frye by the German cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich.

Netherlands' Warning.

WASHINGTON, April 6. — The Netherlands Government has notified the United States that any foreign ship misusing the Dutch flag or using other means to make a pretence of possessing Dutch nationality will not be allowed to depart from or pass through waters under the jurisdiction of the Netherlands.

Gerald Conroy has returned to Toronto, after a visit with his parents.

Mr. Harry Corrin has returned to Beaverton after visiting with his parents over Easter.

Miss Sadie Gamble is spending her Easter vacation with Miss Stillman, Campbellford.

Mrs. S. Trotter of Vancouver is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dawson, Donaccord St.

Mrs. Alex. J. Robertson, 366 Simcoe street, will receive tomorrow (April 7th) and not agan this season.

Mr. Jimmy Rheve, who has been spending his holidays with Gerald Conroy, has returned to Toronto.

Mr. Jack Lynch of Orillia has returned home after visiting with Gerald Conroy.

Miss Edith Blondon, of Cornwall, left yesterday for Toronto after spending Easter with her sister, Mrs. Bruce Law, Sherbrooke St.

Miss Eva Sauriol, of Toronto, who has been spending the past few months with her cousin, Mrs. Bruce Law, Shrbrooke St., left yesterday for her home.

At Bridge street Methodist church, Belleville, on Easter Sunday morning the infant daughter of ex-Mayor H. W. and Mrs. Ackerman was baptized by the Rev. H. S. Osborne in the presence of the congregation. The ceremony was performed with water brought by a friend from the River Jordan in Palestine.

Mr. John Laing, of the Montreal Daily Star advertising staff, spent Easter at his home.

The Easter Monday night "at-home" held last evening in St. Alphonsus Lyceum under the auspices of the amalgamated Total Abstinence Societies, was perhaps the most thoroughly enjoyable social function ever held in the spacious club rooms on Simcoe street. The attendance was not quite as large as at other "at-homes," but for an evening to be really enjoyed does not necessarily call for a large crowd. Cards was pursued in one hall, while in the other the dancing was held. The winners at the cards were Miss A. Grady and Mr. P. Lafavre. At intermission dainty refreshments were served. The dance music was all that could be desired. The pianists, Misses Marion Gorman and Margaret McDonald, added more to their long list of admirers, and the fact that their efforts were appreciated was shown by every number being enthusiastically encored.

BLEWETT—McKIBBON.

The wedding was solemnized this morning at George St. Methodist parsonage of William Wellington Blewett, son of Mr. John S. DRUM MAJOR GIVEN PLEASING PRESENTATION

Local News in General

Graduate Nurses.

The Graduate Nurses will meet on Wednesday afternoon at the Public Lirary to work for the local Red Cross Association.

Choral Society.

The Peterborough Choral Society will rehearse tonight at eight o'clock in the Collegiate Anditorium the "Banner of St. George." A full attendance is requested.

Gladys Seward.

Miss Gladys Seward, who will return to this city after five years' absence, wil hold a recital on Friday evening, April 9th, in Conservatory of Music Hall. Tickets on sale at Madill's Drug Store, Robert Fair's, Cressman & Co.'s, and Richard Hall & Son's Stores.

FORDS TO BE SEEN IN MOVIES TO-NIGHT

The general public have read much of Henry Ford and his famous factory but few have had the opportunity of seeing the great auto man and witnessing a Ford being made. J. J. Duffus, the energetic local representative is to provide citizens of Peterborough with such a favor. Tonight and the evenings of Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday moving pictures of "making a Ford" will be shown in Duffus' Garage on Simcoe St. There is no charge and every citizen whether a car owner or not, should grasp the opportunity of seeing the films. The evening's entertainment will be given each night at seven-thirty. Thursday will be reserved for the Ford car owners and ladies. The garage is now transformed into a theatre and fitted with seating accommodation.

A SOCK SHOWER.

The regular meeting of the Canadian Kitchener League will be held at the Y. M. C. A. at 8 o'clock this evening. All ladies are requested to be present. Friday evening, April 9, the Canadian Kitchener League is holding a sock shower from 3 to 10 p.m. at the home of Mrs. Thos. Barrie, George street north. All the ladies of the city are invited to be present. The league is working hard to obtain five hundred pairs of socks, as there is a great demand among the boys at home and overseas. A good program during the afternoon and evening.

The Mayor's Request.

Being desirous that Peterborough assist in every possible way the boys who are so bravely fighting our battles at the front, I urge that as many citizens as possible assist the Canadian Kitchener League sock and handkerchief shower to be held Friday afternoon and evening at the home of Mrs. Thos. Barrie, George street north.

WILLIAM BULLER, Mayor.

Mr. Stewart Laing of the engineering corps, Ottawa, was home over Easter visiting his parents.

Mr M. H. Staples, M.A., has completed his course at Knox College, Toronto, and is among the students who will receive diplomas at the closing exercises tonight.

Members of Orpheus Society Responsible for Some Clever Work

The able manner in which the Orpheus Society presented the musical comedy The Drum Major, at the Opera House last night won praises on all sides. It was a surprise in being much better than expected, although anticipations were high. The staging was good, the choruses and dances were well carried out, the costumes well chosen. The reception given it by the audience was enthusiastic and this no doubt stimulated those taking part to play well.

Miss Lettie Drope as Clarice was leading lady and had the heaviest part in the play. She was well suited to the role and performed her part with distinction both in the acting and singing. Miss Drope makes a very charming general's daughter.

Mr. Ed. Hanrahan as Jean appeared to excellent advantage and sang and acted like a professional. He was well assisted by Mrs. A. A. Perrin as Babette in the accompanying role. Mrs. Perrin had a difficult part to play which was performed with merit and captivated her audience. Several curtain calls were received by Mrs. Perrin and Mr. Hanrahan in a pretty song "One Little Bird Built a Cozy Nest."

Miss Helen Rush was perhaps the best in the chorus. Her green costume and splendid dancing singled her out but all the chorus was very pleasing.

Mr. Harold Lee acted and sang to advantage in the character of Sergeant Leroux, but if he put a little more life and vim in his acting and expression his role would be much improved. This could be done although the character is somewhat serious, and a second performance ought to make this easy to attain.

While the play was well performed it would have been better if more volume had been given to the choruses and if the dances had been performed more precisely and easily. This would no doubt have been attained with further practice. Self consciousness was very little in evidence, and, considering that this was an amateur performance, it was very creditably performed.

A great amount of the success of the performance is due to Mr. J. Edward Fisher, the conductor, who was untiring in his efforts. No doubt the Orpheus Society will receive better public support in future performances if the same effort is made to do the work well.

Others who took part were:—

Julien, F. Hartshorn; Gaspard, P. Naish; Pierre, Norman Laing, as recruits; Antoinette, Mrs. J. Lock; Suzanne, Miss Ruby Quartermaine; Jacqueline, Miss Helen Lytle, as village girls; Victor, a boy of the village, Mr. Fred Jamieson; Marcel, an "Orator of the Day," Mr. Donald Shook.

The chorus was composed of:

Misses A. Bickersteth, H. Black, E. Derrick, R. Derry, A. Graham, B. Heard, A. Heron, E. Jubb, M. Lyle, B. M. Lytle, G. Montgomery, V. Neill, A. Pollard, L. Rippingale, M. Richardson, Helen Rush, M. Smith, Ida Wesley, Shirley Wesley, Mrs. J. A. Morgan, Mrs. R. W. Davidson, Mrs. Tucker.

Messrs. A. B. Burrows, W. Derry, J. Howland, C. Lapp, A. Lapp, H. M. Marshall, S. J. Ridyard, C. Walton, T. Hamel, H. Shuttleworth.

The costumes were designed and executed by Misses L. Drope, R. Quartermaine, H. Rush and S. Wesley, and Miss A. Bickersteth directed the dances.

The story of the play was: Sergeant Leroux visits Passy to recruit for the army. But it is the village fete day, consequently the men have small interest in the needs of their country. He is meeting with no success, when Clarice Dupre—daughter of the general of that name, and the prettiest woman in Paris—comes to his assistance. She is on her way to the South, and learning of the fete, decides to remain. Her arrival draws his audience from Leroux. Clarice meets Leroux, and being an ardent patriot herself, induces the young men to join the army. Jean is completely enthralled by her charms, and in spite of the remonstrances of Babette, he enlists. Leroux, delighted with the number who have joined the ranks, and much in love with Clarice, leaves for Paris accompanied by fifty-seven recruits.

The second act opens with the celebration of the Fall of the Bastile, on the 14th day of July, two years later. No word has come from Leroux, Jean or any of the recruits in all those months, and their sweethearts fear they are either dead or have forgotten their homes. Clarice returns to Passy, hoping to hear news of Leroux. She learns nothing of the warriors. The soldiers return — tired, hungry and well sickened of war. Babette forgives Jean and promises to marry him. Clarice waylays Leroux and assures him of her affection for him. All ends happily.

The drum Major will be repeated this evening at the Opera House. Those who have not seen this show should not fail to see it tonight. It it worth seeing, pleasing and the work of local people.

The Advantage

of the Toric lens is, that it is ground exactly to fit the curve of the eye, thus saving the strain of accommodating the vision, which has to be done with a flat lens when looking anywhere, except straight ahead, they are also neater in appearance and cost very little more.

"September Morn"

Here Next Saturday—Returns to Toronto for a 2nd Engagement Direct From Here

The attraction at the Grand, with matinee on Saturday next, will be the musical comedy "September Morn," with all its tuneful, catchy songs, girls of the pretty kind who can sing, and a cast of musical comedy artists far above the average, including such recognized fun-makers as Frank Minor, Lou Kelso, Maude Potter, William Cameron, Arline Bolling, Kathryn Bowen, Clarence Nordstrom and Edgar Murray.

Among the song hits are "When a Little Boy Loves a Little Girl," "In Berlin," "Oh, You September Morn," "Everybody's Tango Crazy," "A Spare-rib from the Butcher Shop of Life," "Beautiful Dreams I'm Dreaming," "The Sun Shade Girl," and "Where Is the Pleasure in Wine and Song if the Woman Is Not There?"

This pleasing production goes back to Toronto for a return engagement direct from here.

BERLIN ADMITS LOSS OF SUBMARINE U29

ANOTHER ATTEMPT TO FORCE THE DARDANELLES

BELGIANS DISLODGE DETACHMENT OF FOE

Enemy With Three Machine Guns Crossed Yser River but Were Driven Back

FRENCH GAIN MASTERY OF HILLS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 7. — This afternoon's statement: "A German detachment with three machine guns succeeded in crossing to the left bank of the Yser south of Diegrachten. It was attacked yesterday and dislodged by Belgian forces.

"An attack made by us in the vicinity of Etain, rendered us masters of Hills No. 219 and 221, in addition to Haut Bois and Hopital farms.

"In Eparges we gained ground and maintained our advances at the same time taking sixty prisoners, including three officers.

"In Ban-de-Spat we mined and blew up a German position."

BERLIN, April 7. — Today's official statement says: "The village of Diegrachten, which was occupied by our troops Monday, and which the enemy bombarded with his heaviest artillery and mine throwers, was for this reason again abandoned by us last night.

"Northeast of Verdun the French advance approached only as far as our outer positions.

"To the east and southeast of Verdun, a series of attacks made by the enemy failed, with extraordinary heavy losses.

"In Combres Hills two French battalions were driven off by our fire."

BERLIN PRESS ON AMERICAN NOTE.

BERLIN, April 7. — The newspaper Kreuzzetitung, commenting on the American note to Great Britain, says that if the telegraphed summary is correct, it means the far-reaching retreat of America and permits Great Britain to carry out its blockade measures against American ships, even though carrying goods which are not contraband, if they are bound to or from hostile ports. America thus surrenders to the principle that every blockade must be effective in order to be recognized.

French Official Review

LONDON, April 7. — The sixth and seventh instalments of the French review of the war have been given out. These deal with the equipment of the French army and with the situation of the German army. The French field gun, the famous 75, is everywhere acknowledged a superior weapon, and the experience of this war shows that, after the extraordinary use they have been put to, the guns are in as perfect condition as when the war began.

Although the French army was taken at a disadvantage when the war broke out, being then engaged in reorganizing heavy artillery, the activity of cannon foundries and the employment of reserves of big guns kept in fortresses, has resulted in the French establishing superiority over the Germans in this arm, as is admitted by the enemy.

In ammunition of superior quality for heavy and light guns, in machine guns, in military stores and in food, there is abundant supply. The Germans by January 1st, according to the review, had put into the fighting line sixty-nine army corps, or approximately three million men, and fifty of these army corps were pitted against the French, British and Belgian armies in the battle of Flanders.

By the middle of January they had lost, without counting the sick, at the lowest estimate, eighteen hundred thousand men.

With her failure in the battle of Flanders, Germany lost her initiative and direction of the war. She had put all her eggs in one basket, and, owing to the precipitate and fruitless use she had made of her resources, she could not regain superiority of numbers.

Allowing that half a million slightly wounded have rejoined, there is left a net wastage of thirteen hundred thousand men, or two hundred and sixty thousand a week.

The review calculates that Germany's resources in men at the beginning of the war were eight million five hundred thousand. Of these, four million are now at the front; thirteen hundred thousand have been lost, and reserves therefore at the beginning of January totalled three million two hundred thousand. Deducting from these, men over forty and an admitted proportion of inefficients, the reserves yet to be called on cannot exceed two million, and if the same wastage rate as heretofore be maintained for 1915, there will not be enough to fill the gaps of war. Moreover, their military value has already been proved to be limited. It is therefore abundantly proved that Germany has reached her limit and cannot form any new divisions.

SOLDIER DIES AT BELLEVILLE

Pte. Driver Enlisted With 45th of Lindsay

Belleville, April 7.—Private Driver, who enlisted with the 45th Regiment of Lindsay and came here a few days ago with the contingent of that town to mobilize with the 34th Battalion, died in the hospital here last evening. He was a young Englishman without relatives in this country. This is the second death in the camp within a week.

Representative of Government Here

Receive Applications From Farmers and Unemployed

Mr. T. Howell, special representative of the Ontario Government is now at the district office of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, at room 12, Bank of Commerce building, and will receive applications of persons desiring to secure work on farms. Farmers in need of help should make application to Mr. Howell. Mr. Howell informed the Review today that there is great need of farm help and the placing of men on farms would do much to help the various municipalities to solve the unemployment problem.

Lessen Dangers at the Moving Picture Houses

Toronto, April 7.—To further lessen dangers from fire and accident at moving picture theatres Hon. T. W. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, has announced important changes in the Provincial regulations that it is expected will result in a material improvement of conditions of operation, and thus insure the safety of the patrons of these places. Hereafter apprentices will have to serve a period of twelve months before an operator's certificate is granted. The time now required is six months, and this is not considered sufficient. Where proficiency is demonstrated within the twelve months' period the Chief Inspector may at his discretion grant the certificate.

The regulations are also to be amended to recognize the certificates of other Provinces or States where similar recognition is extended to Ontario operators. Opportunity of appeal to the Provincial Treasurer in person is granted to any operator whose license has been suspended for cause.

The restrictions regarding the use of 10-ampere machines by churches, schools, fraternal organizations, etc., without a cabinet are removed, but not with respect to any machines in a theatre.

In future all moving picture licenses are to be issued by Chief Inspector Robert Newman, and not by the Treasury Department direct. This will entail added work for the Chief Inspector, and it has therefore been determined to appoint an assistant, who will confine his labors to Toronto district entirely.

SECOND PERFORMANCE OF THE DRUM MAJOR

Another fairly good audience attended the second presentation of "The Drum Major" last evening in the Grand Opera House by the Orpheus Society under the direction of J. Edward Fisher. The company, as might be expected, performed with a greater freedom, and the slight feeling of stage nervousness which was exhibited the first evening was entirely absent. Mr. Ed. Hanrahan and Miss Drope and Mrs. A. A. Perrin were again given hearty ovations in their respective roles. "The Drum Major" is a tuneful light opera and its presentation by the Orpheus Society was considered to be generally successful.

PETERBOROUGH BOYS ON BATTLE GROUND WHERE BRITISH FOUGHT ENEMY

Mere Handful of Kitchener's Men Hold Out for Twenty Days and Finally Won — Stripes for Dick Boone

PTE. ODELY TAYLOR.

"Things have been breaking for the allies all along the lines and the Germans are being rudely thrust back," writes Pte. Odely Taylor in a letter just received.

The outside world have not the slightest idea of the damage and havoc wrought in the numerous French villages and towns. Every place passed by the enemy, is a wreck. Churches with their lofty spires presented a grand mark for their artillery, resulting in practically every church within range being a mass of ruins. Any buildings near the firing line that would afford billets for troops are shelled every day or so, although the Germans have of late, been busy looking after their own skin.

Stripes for Dick Boone.

Speaking of artillery, nearly all the Peterborough boys are around here. Several of them have been over to visit us. Dick Boone is now the possessor of three stripes due to his energetic and hard work. He is in charge of a battery near here. Lieut. Matthews is farther down the line. Already they have played a prominent part by putting a few transport wagons and guns of the enemy out of commission. Their guns are so well concealed that you would walk by withing being attracted by any thing unusual about the place.

Heavy Artillery Duel.

Yesterday evening the Allies were engaged in a heavy artillery duel somewhere to our left. They raised cain far into the night. It's nothing unusual now for a shell to pass with a screech. At first we would duck but a few hours of ducking was sufficient. When they open up on the buildings and about our quarters, we get busy with the glasses and watch for the game. You can see them breaking in circles around where our guns are supposed to be but they seldom touch one. The Germans often waste round after round on our aviators as they circle about the trenches. The coolness and daring of one of these airmen is remarkable. Several times we have seen him fly directly over the enemy's trenches, then swoop down and swing about as he dodged the dozens of shrapnels fired at him. The work of the British Flying Corps has been of the greatest help to the allies.

Its all strange this mode of warfare. It's a case of ordained silence, immobility under a rain of shrapnel and days of deafening roar of artillery. Parapets, earthworks and breastworks are being used far more extensively than the deep trenches. Trenches of all shapes and zig-zag lines can be found all over France. At night the shells sent up by the Germans give one an idea that you are enclosed in a circle with the enemy. Such was nearly the case at one stage of the game but not now.

Show Your "bean"—Pink.

Show your hand or "bean" above the parapet and it is another case of more work for the stretcher bearer and digging party. Dugouts are constructed in the trenches and one can live fairly comfortable in these dugouts. It's almost an impossibility to sleep. The boys can always sing "I'm never alone now."

During our turn in the line we were engaged in looking after rations most of the time. It's more of a risk than fighting in the front line. One company does the work for the battalion. It's nothing strange to get chased to cover by machine gun fire. One shell knocked a large block off the wall in our guard room one night. Talking of close shaves, Bill Gibson, George Minorgan and I with a few others were back of the trenches with the rations when the splitting of the air by bullets made us drop like lightning. We lay flat on the road for fully fifteen minutes while the machine gun put the bullets over and through our cart.

The same night we had to take hasty cover behind a few boxes of "bully beef." Such small incidents make the game worth going after and one can generally manage to have a good laugh while doing the "sprawl" act. We have been fortunate and pretty lucky so far by not losing a single man. Sergt. Victor

A MAD DOG

Officer Was Called to End It's Days

The peculiar antics of a fine-looking collie dog yesterday were responsible for it being sent to the dog heaven by a bullet, and the city is consequently minus the price of another dog license. This particular canine was a hot-blooded specimen, judging by its fondness for water. It was first noticed in the morning prowling around the Children's Shelter by Superintendent Henry, who drove it down towards the river. He was taken aback, however, when he saw the animal deliberately swim out into the river and start paddling upstream. The river is shallow in places, and the dog came to anchor upon one of these places, and remained there for four hours until the rising waters gradually crept up until it stood breast high in the eddying current. Mr. Henry saw something was wrong, and surmised that it was mad. This conclusion prompted him to summon the police, and Acting Detective Blade, ever on the alert for a little gun practice, went up and paddled out in a punt to the animal.

Unlike a human being, the sight of a myrmidon of the law had no terrors for this dog. It merely surveyed the officer with clear, glassy eye, and the detective also came to the conclusion that only a dog that was mad could look at him in that fashion. Consequently he pulled his automatic and sent Mr. Dog to the land where dog meat is plentiful and where such sordid, worldly things as tags and licenses don't exist.

The owner of the dog is unknown, but it is thought it came up from Murray street.

AN INCREASE IN ATTENDANCE AT WEEKLY DRILL

C. Company of 57th Led the Way With Largest Turnout

An increased attendance was noticed at the drill of the 57th Regiment last night.

The left half of the battalion was addressed by Captain McPherson.

C. Company, Capt. Park, was to the front with the best showing in strength

Over 275 men were on hand. A goodly number of recruits were received and put through drill by the various color sergeants.

NEWSPAPER CRITICISM.

THERE IS a danger that newspaper criticism in regard to the inquiry over the supplying of war equipment, particularly with regard to boots, will overstep itself. This is pointed out by the Montreal News, which says:

"The fact that the shoe manufacturers advertised in the Canadian press is part of the evidence of the value of the industry they represent to the country. The boot and shoe industry helped the newspaper business. It is also the sole means of support of thousands of workmen. Any criticism, therefore, which tends to hurt the industry without being essential to a fair and impartial notice of the immediate case of the boot inquiry is wrong and unfortunate in its effects."

However, the News should be more precise. It is difficult to see how the inquiry can be without some adverse effect on the industry, but that is not the point. The point is that criticism which one might consider adverse another would not. Mr. George A. Slater suggested that the phrase "too light in substance" might have been used instead of blazing abroad that the boots were like blotting paper. That, in our opinion, would be evading responsibility or covering up wrongdoing. The fact is that any concern which produced goods, such as some shoe manufacturers did, in the face of strict regulations, the public safety and the national need shows that the industry requires some regulation, and severe treatment should be meted out to the offenders.

At the same time, the shoe industry should not be attacked. The News has advanced a timely warning in this regard. It is not the industry that is to blame, but some persons engaged in it, and the thousands of wage-earners who are innocent of blame should not be made to suffer. Besides, the industry is a very valuable department of Canadian trade, and the object should be to improve it and to correct anything derogatory to it. It is to be hoped that the inquiry will result in a higher standard of business ethics, and a better product will undoubtedly follow.

LOCAL INSPECTION OF FOOD.

THE REVIEW has had occasion to criticize Magistrate Dumble, but at the same time we feel like giving a word of commendation when it is deserved. The severe manner in which a meat vendor was handled the other day for not having meat properly covered was in the public interest. We saw recently a driver taking a load of half-covered meat to East City in an open waggon with no sides, and the wheels throwing up a copious supply of road dust over what was later to appear on many dining-room tables. If there is a bylaw that says meat must be covered and protected from dust and dirt, it does not mean half covered, but wholly covered, and should be rigidly enforced. It is our opinion that the inspection of food offered for sale in Peterborough is very lax, and a few stringent actions are necessary to convince people that regulations for the protection of the public health must be respected.

THREE STUMPS FOR THE GRITS.

AT THE COMING general election it will be interesting to see how the Liberal spell-binders will duck the following facts:

1. Lt.-Col. Hurdman, brother of the Liberal M.L.A. for Ottawa, who figured so conspicuously in the "boot" department of the militia, is a Liberal left in office by the Borden Government.

2. Lt.-Col. Brown, the chief director of contracts of the Militia Department, is a Liberal appointee, and was secretary to Sir Frederick Borden for eight years.

3. Mr. Burns, of the same department, was the inspector and the man who "passed" all the material used for socks, clothes, etc., in that department.

Who is to blame? Those who left them there or those who put them there?

MONEY FOR THE FARMERS.

THE FARMERS in the House of Commons seem to be highly delighted with the amount in the estimates this year for agriculture, viz., $3,308,000.00.

This amount is, of course, in addition to the immense grant of ten millions of dollars to the provinces, which enabled the provinces to begin courses of practical instruction and to institute school fairs and other practical demonstrations of that sort. No other branch of government has been so well provided for. The sum of $798,000.00 is to go to demonstration farms, that is, local experimental farms. Farming is the best-paying vocation in Canada today. The movement citywards has been overdone. It is coming to an end. The movement countrywards has already begun, and the prices of farm land may be expected to rise. The Government has foreseen what must inevitably happen, and has been forehanded in providing for it.

WOULD USE DISTILLERIES TO PRODUCE ALCOHOL.

IN VIEW of the decision of the Saskatchewan Government to abolish the spirituous liquor trade, the agricultural and manufacturing committees of the Regina Board of Trade are engaged in an effort to promote the manufacture of denatured or commercial alcohol. These committees thought that the distilleries of the country could easily be used for this purpose to great advantage. The committees were of the opinion that commercial alcohol could be sold at 20 cents a gallon after a good profit had resulted to the manufacturer. As denatured alcohol is manufactured from beets and potatoes, the farmer engaged in raising these vegetables would be assured of a return of over $50 per acre. Denatured alcohol is now being used in the United States and Germany very largely as a substitute for gasoline. In the former country the retail price ranges from 18 to 20 cents per gallon, and in the latter 16 to 24 cents per gallon, according to figures secured. The opinion has been expressed that the manufacturing of commercial alcohol would overcome the unemployment resulting from the closing of the hotel bars. If Saskatchewan closes the bars, it is well to have something in view by which distilleries can be utilized.

FEARS INVASION.

THERE IS evidence that Germany is in great fear of an invasion of her territory. The special correspondent of the Standard in Copenhagen telegraphs that a Danish manufacturer who has just returned from a business trip to Germany, undertaken for the purpose of securing various profitable contracts for the supply of articles needed there, gives a detailed account of the elaborate preparations made in the provinces of Schleswig-Holstein to repel a British invasion of that part of the German empire.

Something like 250,000 German troops, he says, are concentrated along the west coast mouth of the Kiel canal to the Danish frontier, and particularly beyond such parts of the coast as are suitable for landing large bodies of men and ammunition. In Germany, says this Danish manufacturer, it is contended that Capt. Trench and Lieut. Brandon, two British naval officers, were caught while gathering details of possible landing stages for British troops on the coast of Schleswig-Holstein. Capt. Trench and Lieut. Brandon had taken soundings and noted all piers and landing stages and so forth, and the mere fact that they risked their own safety and ultimately exposed themselves to capture for this purpose shows that the British Government, even at that date, contemplated the possibility of invading Germany in these regions. How much more necessary is it now, say the Germans, to redouble all precautions to forestall any surprise attack on Schleswig-Holstein.

THE WORLD AWAKES.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

The world awakes from her sleep,
The soft, sweet coverlet of white
Slips down her breast, to creep
Where morning mists, as light
As visions, cloud the sea,
And leaves her naked, land and tree.

The southern wind steals by
Arousing life, and at the dawn
The birds, with joyous cry,
Sweep past and on and on;
Love stirs to touch the earth
With flowers, dreams, and all new birth.

Industrial Progress.

(Hansard Report.)

According to the latest census returns, there was no less a sum than $1,200,000,000 of capital invested in industrial concerns in Canada; there were no less than 500,000 artizans and employes supporting themselves and their families by the products of their labour in those industrial establishments; and those men were paid no less a sum than $250,000,000 per annum. —Hon. W. T. White, March 10, 1915.

* * *

In 1901 there was $446,000,000 of capital invested in industries of this country; in 1911, $1,247,000,000. In 1901 the output of our industries was $481,000,000; in 1911 the output was $1,165,000,000. The wages in 1901 were $113,000,000; the wages in 1911 were $241,000,000. The employes at the first date were 339,000; the employes at the second date were 515,000.—Sir George Foster, March 15, 1915.

"Willie, run over and see how old Mrs. Smith is this morning."

Willie departed, but in a few moments he came running back, and said:

"She says it's none of your business."

"Why, Willie!" exclaimed his mother, "What did you ask her?"

"Just what you told me to," said Willie; "I said you wanted to know how old she was."

The Right Spirit.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Eric Billington, for several years the star halfback of the McGill University football team, and one of the finest players of his day, now a mining engineer in the West, wrote applying for a commission in the McGill company of the Thirty-Eighth Battalion. A reply had to be sent that the list of officers was full up. Billington sends word that he is coming along to enlist as a private. That's the right spirit.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To ensure the publication of letters, the name and address of the writer must accompany the communication, not necessarily for publication but as a guarantee of good faith.

THOSE RINK LETTERS.

We have received the following explanation from the author of the letters which recently appeared in The Review, signed by "A Ratepayer," and "Anxious Parent," which speaks for itself.

Editor Review,

Dear Sir,—Having been informed by The Review that my letters of April 1st, 3rd and 5th, are complained of by Mr. John Meharry, through his solicitor, Mr. R. R. Hall, as accusing him of criminal offences and meaning that he is "the owner or occupier of premises used for immoral purposes and meaning that his roller rink is used for the purpose of procuring girls or women for immoral purposes and is a resort for and only used by parties who are vagrants within the meaning of the criminal code, as claimed by the solicitor" I wish to say I did not intend to accuse John Meharry of any criminal offence or to say that his premises are used as above described in his complaint, and I did not expect or intend that anything in my letters should be understood by readers to have the meaning Mr. Meharry complains of. I have no malice toward Mr. Meharry and regret that the meaning above complained of, was so understood by any reader of my letters. And I further regret that my mention of Helen Brown or the words in that connection could be supposed in any way to apply to Mr. Meharry, for I did not so intend them.

I especially regret the use of the word "underworld," not having in mind or intending the serious meaning attached to it and now complained of by Mr. Meharry.

And I wish to withdraw all words or statements, in these letters that imply or seem to imply the charges or accusations complained of by Mr. Meharry. And as I did not intend any such charges or accusations, I wish to fully apologise to him for any offence resulting from unfortunate construction or use of words and to say in the plainest way I can that I did not mean or intend to make the accusations he complains of.

A RATEPAYER,
ANXIOUS PARENT.

In reference to the publication of these letters and the apology above. The Review published the letters in good faith believing they were in the public interest. This feeling appeared to be warranted by the source from which we received them, the writer of the letters being a law-abiding, respectable citizen. No names were mentioned and the attack appeared to be entirely directed against a public institution and was a matter of public concern, but it appears that some readers have taken a different meaning from that which the writer intended. We are now satisfied that charges with the immoral meaning alleged, are wholly unfounded and we hereby withdraw and contradict them.

LET'S HAVE PURE AIR.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Much has been said and written about beautifying our city and very properly so. Reference has been made to the lawns and preservation and pruning of the shade trees, to the weather beaten and grim visaged board fences and ramshackle sheds and outbuildings necessary and unnecessary, to the unshapely and unsightly poles that disfigure and disgrace our otherwise public thoroughfares, and to the improvement and extension of our parks system. But the importance of all these things combined sinks into insignificance when compared with that of the dust nuisance which is ever recurring with the ides of March. There can be no beautifying of the city to make it attractive as a residential and business centre so long as the laying of the dust is left in the hands of our incompetent council, who seem to have no knowledge of the death dealing properties of dust, although with the return of every spring our local press has, with hammer and tongs, been trying to beat it into their impervious craniums. Every year, instead of being ready to cope with the dust nuisance, it is generally about the first of May before they start to water the strets. It is true they are talking about it, as they have done in the years that have gone, but it is only talk. This year like a former one, they are discussing the respective merits of oil and water while we are breathing two months of dust, and as before, they are going to try the oil again with, no doubt, the same result that they will fall back on the old water cart again. How much longer will a long suffering public stand for such nonsense?

Yours, etc.,
PURE AIR.

THE EXAMPLE OF KING GEORGE.

Editor Review,

Sir,—Let's petition the Mayor to give an order to have no drinking at the city hall or other civic buildings whilst the war continiues, and why not stop smoking in public—it is worse than dry sweeping. Stop smoking. I am going to stop mailing letters, until the war stops. "On the Side" in the News refers to "the Review," and the day before he said that I had referred to the soldiers at the front as looney—the wicked prevaricator. Is "On the Side" a "he" or a "she?" I might think the soldiers are unwise, but should never deprive anyone of reason.

Yours, etc.,
OFF-SIDE.

CASUALTIES

OTTAWA, April 7.—The following casualties were given out by the Militia Department:

Fifth Battalion—Reported wounded, Pte. John A. Luton.

Tenth Battalion — Wounded, Pte. James McWhirter.

Fourteenth Battalion — Reported wounded, Stretcher Bearer Reginald H. Drake.

Casualties announced yesterday afternoon were:

SUBMARINE IS CAUGHT.

German Craft Is Reported To Be Fast In a Trap Off Dover.

PARIS, April 7.—A German submarine has become securely entangled in a net specially designed for that purpose and placed off Dover, according to The Petit Journal's Dunkirk correspondent, who adds that the French naval authorities expect to capture the submersible when it comes to the surface.

The sinking of two more British craft by German submarines was reported yesterday. The steamer Northlands sank in ten minutes, after being torpedoed off Beachy Head in the English Channel on Monday morning. The crew of 24 was picked up by a Belgian steamer.

The Northlands, which had a cargo of iron ore, was of 2,000 tons, and was owned by a Cardiff firm.

The trawler Agatha was sunk on Monday off Langstone. A Swedish steamer picked up the crew of 13 men.

Stockholm reports that the Swedish steamer England, from Buenos Ayres for Gothenburg, was seized by Germans in the Baltic and taken to a German port.

Denial of the report that the Italian steamer Luigi Pavodi was sunk by a German steamer comes from Genoa.

Ask Hydro Radial Subsidy.

LONDON, Ont., April 7.—Following up the appeal of the big provincial hydro radial deputation to Toronto recently, the Board of Control yesterday adopted a resolution asking the Ontario Government to assist the scheme by granting a subsidy of $3,500 a mile. The resolution is to be forwarded to Premier Hearst.

Troops Occupy Warmbad.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, April 7.—Troops of the Union have occupied Warmbad, a town in German Southwest Africa, 20 miles north of the Orange river, without opposition.

Announcement to this effect was made officially here yesterday.

Sent News to Germany.

PARIS, April 7.—The Ministry of the Interior, The Matin says, has issued a decree of expulsion against the Swiss newspaperman, Edward Behrens, who is charged with taking advantage of his neutral nationality to act as Paris correspondent of The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger.

Mr. Adam Ritchie of Hamilton, whose son, Pte. S. Ritchie, was reported killed, has received word that his son was wounded. A mistake had been made.

Up in the Garret and Down in the Basement

Do you remember that rocker you took out of the sitting-room when you got the new one?

Where is it?

Up in the garret? Down in the cellar? Out in the servant's room?

Why didn't you sell it ?

Why didn't you try to sell it? Don't you know that a few cents spent on a want ad. in THE DAILY REVIEW would have brought at least $2.50 or $3.50 for it? And there are chairs enough in the back of the house without wasting that one.

O! if people only knew by experience, as we do, what big things little ads. in THE DAILY REVIEW can do for them, they wouldn't tolerate the waste and ruin of the perfectly good household articles that are now relegated to the storeroom, to be covered with dust, and finally thrown away.

Think of the people who want them, who can use them, who have place for them. Owners of apartment buildings and flats might get a hint from this, also.

How Jim Donnelly Made a Success

By EVERETT P. CLARKE.

Jim Donnelly, agent at a small suburban railway station, not seeing promotion where he was, asked to be transferred to some more promising position. The system was a long one, penetrating into what were then the backwoods of North America. The company needed men on the frontier, but unfortunately those positions were so unattractive that the employees there could not be made to hold their places. Jim was told that he might have a passenger train in this region, but was advised that the people traveling there were hard to manage, and it was feared that he would give up the job after learning the conditions.

Jim had commenced railroading as a brakeman. The salary of conductor was much better than that of agent at an inferior station, and he decided to accept the position. Another inducement was that if he succeeded in running his train through the lawless district with regularity he would be advanced to a higher position.

The main trouble Jim's predecessors had experienced was collecting fares. The people of the country made all sorts of excuses for not paying their way, and if the conductor tried to put them off the train they would make a fight. One conductor had been killed, another severely wounded, and others had been too frightened to insist on getting the fare. All this was explained to the applicant.

Jim thought the matter over and made up his mind that he would fight his way to a mastery of the situation. He would not undertake the job without seeing it through. The fights the conductors had experienced were with individuals, and so long as he was not called upon to fight several men at once Jim saw no reason why he should not stand as good a chance as the other fellow, though he was not a large man nor especially muscular. He was quite ingenious and relied on his thinking powers to provide ways of collecting fares.

Jim had been running his train several days without trouble when a wild looking man got on at a wilderness station, and when Jim asked him for his fare the passenger, feeling through his pockets, finally took out a dirty paper on which he had himself written a pass. Jim handed it back to him with the laconic remark, "No good." The man began to berate the conductor with his tongue for insulting him, at the same time putting his hand to his hip for his revolver. Jim put his hand into his outside coat pocket and, pulling out a rubber bulb, repeated his request for the fare. The man was getting his revolver in position for a draw when Jim placed the bulb before the rascal's face and, pressing it, filled his eyes with red pepper.

There was a howl, the passenger putting his hands to his eyes. Jim, taking advantage of his blindness, made a grab for his revolver and secured it. Then, pulling the bell rope, he took the man by the collar and hustled him to the door, giving him a kick as he dropped him off the train.

The next man who refused to pay his fare was a countryman, who relied on his muscle to protect him from being put off the train by the conductor. The fellow was certainly very strong and prided himself on being able to take care of any man without the use of arms. When Jim asked him for his fare he searched for his ticket or pretended to do so, then said that he had lost it. Jim, who understood the man's game, passed on collecting. When the train reached the next station he got out, went to the baggage car, took a new punch out of a bag, and when the train started on went through the cars again. Coming to the man who had lost his ticket, he told him that he must pay his fare or get off the train, whereupon the passenger told him that if he was strong enough to eject him he was welcome to do so.

Quick as a flash Jim gripped the man's nose with his punch, which held by means of a couple of sharp projections. The nipped man fought like a tiger, but every time he struck a blow Jim pressed the nipper, and in a very few minutes his prisoner ceased to struggle. Jim pulled the bell rope, but before the train came to a full stop threw his prisoner into a ditch beside the road.

Stories of the conductor's novel methods of putting off travelers who refused to pay their fare were spread broadcast by passengers who witnessed them and lost nothing by repetition. The countrymen along the line were used to fighting with their fists or their revolvers and were entirely put out of their reckoning by such unprecedented methods of warfare. It required but these two instances to stop the refusal to pay fares, for after the second ejection no one else cared to take the risk of running up against some new plan of the conductor of accomplishing his purpose.

Meanwhile the railroad was civilizing the people who lived beside it. A respect for law and order was creeping in, and public sentiment was turning against the carrying of weapons. In other words, the people were becoming a peaceful farming community. Jim Donnelly's success in collecting fares was noted in the general offices of the railroad company, and one day he received the appointment of division superintendent.

The country through which the line passes is now thickly settled, and Mr. Donnelly is vice president of the road.

Tiflis a Modern Babel.

Tiflis, which the czar has been visiting and terming "a pearl of the Russian crown," was described by James Bryce some forty years since as "a human melting pot, a city of contrasts and mixtures, into which elements have been poured from half Europe and Asia and in which they as yet show no signs of combining." The description holds good today, for there are said to be seventy languages spoken in the streets of the ancient city by representatives of as many nationalities.—London Daily Chronicle.

ARAB AND TURK.

The Fierce Enmity Between Them Is Both Racial and Political.

Aside from their political differences, the enmity between the Arab and the Turk is proverbial—a racial, deep rooted enmity which the new regime instead of overcoming or, at least, tempering has brought successfully to a head. And still the effendi of Constantinople refers to the son of the desert as "that dog of an Arab," and still the desert Arab, who will rime even on his way to Juhannam, pours out his hatred and contempt in couplets like this:

Three things naught but evil work—
The locust, the vermin and the Turk.

There is such a thing as the fatality of hate, which seems to be a part of the cosmic scheme. Indeed, some people are born to hate each other and the sooner they know it the better. The Young Turk, for instance, when he can neither knife nor poison nor despoil an Arab aspiring to power, will invite him to Stamboul and make him a pasha—that is, a sublime porte instrument of murder and plunder.

That is why the Arab chiefs as well as the leaders of thought in Syria and Egypt have always resisted these baleful seductions, for to the Arab, whose pride and magnanimity are those of the barbarian, the patriarchial rule of Ibn ur-Rashid of Nejd or the theocratic government of the sherif of Mecca, with all its open air tyranny and justice, is far better than the statocratic abominations of Constantinople.—Ameen Ribani in World's Work.

Olympic Games of 1916.

Those interested in athletics feel that the 1916 Olympic games, which were to be held in Berlin, are not likely to be held there or anywhere else. The countries of Europe, even if the war should end soon, have suffered such awful losses of men and money, and business and sport have been so interrupted, that the public will have little heart for such games as Stockholm knew in 1912 and London in 1908. And for the United States to hold the games here and win them in such circumstances would be a barren victory.—Youth's Companion.

MEN WOUNDED IN THE BATTLE

Military Hospitals Do Not Kill Them as in the Old Days

Easily two-thirds of the pain and suffering endured by the wounded in war is not due to the wounds themselves or to the process of healing, but to suppuration and infection, and all this has been absolutely wiped out by antiseptic surgery.

What military hospitals were like in the pre-antiseptic days beggars description and can hardly even be imagined, let alone believed, at the present day.

Marlborough's surgeon in the famous Blenheim campaign declared that hospitals were the most important cause of death. And a famous French surgeon in 1741 declared that he had known vastly more men to die in the hospitals from lack of care than to lose their lives in combat, and that "hospitals are an unfathomable gulf; the source of their horrors appears to be inexhaustible." Two patients in each bed was the rule and often three or even four. The hospitals were literally breeding places for disease. The deadly typhus fever used to be known as hospital fever, while typhoid, dysentery, erysipelas and gangrene fairly ran riot in them. Browning's characterization of the medieval hospital as "that good house that helps the poor to die" was painfully accurate.

Even as late as our war between the states, when the dreaded hospital gangrene once put in an appearance in a ward it was a sentence of death to be sent into that ward with an open wound, and in some instances from 40 to 60 per cent of all the inmates actually died. Up to and indeed during the Napoleonic wars anywhere from 20 to 60 per cent of the wounded died. Today any army medical service that loses more than 5 to 6 per cent of its wounded considers itself disgraced.—Woods Hutchinson in Saturday Evening Post.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Skin Eruptions.

For the relief of those persistent skin disfigurements arising from some derangement of the stomach and intestinal canal magnesium sulphate (epsom salt) is a very serviceable medicine. Two teaspoonfuls dissolved in a tumblerful of cold or hot water (as may be preferred) and taken half an hour before breakfast every morning for three or four weeks will restore the skin to its normal smooth condition. Finely pulverized epsom salt (it can be rolled with a rolling pin and made into a dust) makes a valuable dusting powder for a red and swollen surface such as is seen in acne rosacea.

SPRING TAILLEUR.

Black and White Is a Combination Which Finds Much Favor.

A NATTY CREATION.

Black and white continually aspires for favor in the feminine sartorial world. The gown here pictured is one of the season's nattiest offerings. The skirt is not strikingly flaring. The cutaway fronts of the coat, the belt and the pockets, arranged in a slanting fashion, are all good style features. The little Tam straw hat is trimmed only with a gay, red coq feather. Buttoned boots are worn with this girlish costume.

NEW SHIRT WAIST.

It Buttons Right Up Under the Chin. Sleeves Are Long.

The new shirt waist has no longer a decollete. It buttons up right under the chin in a high stock collar. The sleeve is set in either raglan or in a rather large armhole, and if it is a blouse model the sleeve attaches to the lining and not to the little bolero-like outside blouse.

Georgette crapes, linens, voiles and embroidered batiste all make the most delightful waists. Little vests of plaited lingerie, organdie or net are often set in the front. Odd china buttons give a new touch to the more tailored types and Slavic embroideries a bit of color to the light white and sand colored voiles and linens.

Sleeves are long and in the shirt waists lightly gathered into a tight cuff. In the blouse models some of the imported styles show ruffled sleeves, some with a series of small puffs, others with a high puff at the shoulders, with a transparent loose sleeve that gathers into the wrist underneath.

Tailored morning skirts are of linen, crash and ratine, a corduroy stripe on a net ground. They are about three yards around the hem and cut two or three gored circular. Their style comes in this flare and in the smart way they are belted in at the waist.

Beautiful Tea Tray.

A beautiful tea tray can be made at home by getting from a picture shop the foundation for a glass bottomed tray. Ask him to give you a plain wooden frame with glass and back. The molding should be deep enough to form a good rim on the tray. You can set in this gay little bits of cross stitch embroidery yourself and cover the back of the frame with felt. Put in four little rubber headed tacks for feet, attach brass handles and you have a lovely gift.

HELPS FOR HOUSEWIVES

Baking Hints.

Do not cover rising bread in bowls and tins with a dry cloth. Instead cover with a damp cloth which has been wrung out in warm water. In cold weather the damp cloth should be placed over a dry cloth.

As a result the dough will not dry on the top, and the loaves when baked will be much more uniform. To prevent holes appearing in brown bread prick twice with a needle, once when loaves are placed in tins and once immediately before the loaves are placed in the oven.

For Bread Makers.

Bread must always be made in a warm place, and all the ingredients must be warmed before they are combined. This is particularly important when you are making yeast bread.

Yeast is a little plant which begins to grow when it finds itself in a warm, damp place, and as it grows it puffs up the flour and makes the bread light. If you let it get cold you will stop its growth.

Eggs En Cocottes.

Butter fireproof cups and put two tablespoonfuls of cream into each; then on this carefully break a newly laid egg. Sprinkle a little salt, pepper and chopped parsley on the top. Place the cups in a pan of water which comes halfway up the cups and put a piece of buttered paper over the top. Allow them to steam till the eggs are just set; then serve immediately in the cups.

Potatoes For Rheumatism.

A noted Danish food expert claims that an exclusive diet of potatoes is excellent for eliminating the uric acid responsible for the pangs of rheumatism, but he says that to be curative the potatoes must be well chewed and also well buttered to supply the fat needed by the patient.

When Cakes Stick.

When cakes stick to the pan stand for a few moments on a damp tea towel or dishcloth, and the cakes will then turn out easily without breaking.

NORFOLK SUITS.

For Morning Wear They Are Exceedingly Chic and Becoming.

In style the trig morning costume for spring affects Norfolk lines. The skirts are undoubtedly wider, but not in the exaggerated mannish characteristic of some of the models of the winter. Generally the skirts are gored and flare gradually from hip to ankle. Of course they are short, and in many instances the yoke is a feature.

The great majority of these skirts are furnished with pockets or at any rate with a single pocket cut in patch effect and of generous proportions.

White mother-of-pearl buttons are used with decorative effect to define the seam down the center of the skirt when such a seam is used. It may be said that the three gore and four gore skirt models are making a decided bid for popularity.

Rather Heartless.

"That fellow earns $10 a week and spends $8 of it on you."

"He is rather reckless," admitted his girl carelessly.

"I shouldn't think your mother would want you to receive his attentions."

"Oh, mother knows that a financier of his type will never be able to talk matrimony."—Kansas City Journal.

Misunderstood.

"What would you do if I turned you down?" asked the maiden. A full minute passed and yet the man sat in silence.

"Didn't you hear my question?" she asked, somewhat petulantly.

"I thought you were talking to the gas," he responded firmly.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

RUSSIANS SYSTEMATICALLY EXPELLING THE AUSTRIANS

Notable Successes Have Occurred at the Rostok Pass, Where Advance Guard Has Crossed Principal Range and Occupied Villages---Austrian Encircling Movement at Chotin Has Proven a Failure.

PETROGRAD, April 7. — In their fight for the roads to Hungary the Russian armies have started on a systematic expulsion of the Austrians from the whole mountain chain of the Carpathians, and, having captured Lupkow and Uzsok Passes, they turned their embattled strength against Rostok Pass, where they scored a series of their most signal successes Sunday and Monday. Here they captured the main sector in the southern slope of the principal mountain chain, and their advance guard crossed the southern slope of this chain and occupied the villages of Smolnik and Oroszrusska.

In the hope of checkmating the Russian advance the Austrian forces delivered counter-attacks on certain sectors of the Russian front, but all these movements were repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy. Twenty Austrian officers and 1,500 men were captured by the Russian forces in the course of a day's fighting. The Austrians are now retreating as best they may, and are burning their bridges and provision depots to retard the Russian progress.

Fighting elsewhere in Poland and Galicia has been confined to partial engagements in the environs of Mariampol, Ludvino, and Kalwarya, on the Niemen front, and to the intermittent cannonades, fusillades and reconnaissance operations in the other sectors.

Despatches from Chotin received in Petrograd tell of the development and failure of extensive Austrian operations in Bukowina, near the Russian frontier, by which the Austrians hoped to achieve a coup similar to the German feat of cutting off the Russian 20th army corps during the last advance into East Prussia.

The Austrians, it is said, attempted a lightning advance in two directions from Czernowitz, which was used as a base. The first of these, striking northward to Zale Szczyky, to the west of the Russian frontier, attempted an encircling manoeuvre, while the other group proceeded direct to Chotin, across the Russian border. Thus exerting pressure from the north and west the Austrians hoped to catch the Russian left flank along the River Dniester in a vise, cutting them off from their main forces. Three and one-half Austrian columns were employed in these manoeuvres.

An Austrian brigade of cavalry led an attack upon Chotin, where, according to reports, two columns of Russian cavalry in smaller numbers than the Austrians engaged them in a fierce battle, driving the Austrians from the frontier.

Despite the failure of the direct attack upon Chotin the Austrians continued to develop the encircling movement, attacking the Russian fortifications covering the line on the Dniester, near Zale Szczyky. Although the Austrian offensive in this region as still continuing, it is regarded here, in view of the retreat of the other group from Chotin, that the success of the venture is not likely.

An important factor in the great battles now raging in the Carpathians is the artillery brought up for Russian forces. Last month they were short of guns, but it is stated, that now they are well supplied with heavy and small calibre guns, presumably brought from around Peremysl. Owing to lack of these and shortage of men their offensive was not effective before but having now conquered these two difficulties the Russian offensive cannot but be successful.

REASON FOR LIMITING HORSE MARKET GUARDED

It Was Deemed Best For French and British Buyers to Withdraw From Canadian Field, But Government Will Pay Higher Prices For Remounts.

OTTAWA, April 7.—At yesterday's sitting in the House, respecting the policy pursued by the Government in the purchase of horses for military purposes. It was charged that the British and French Governments had been requested to purchase their horses in the United States, so as to time the exportation of horses to the Dominion Government. At the same time the exportation of horses to the United States had been forbidden.

The Prime Minister said in reply that for certain reasons he conuld not disclose, it had been deemed best for the British and French buyers to withdraw from Canada, but he was in hopes that in the near future the British and French Governments would re-enter the market. Meanwhile, in view of the fact that the Canadian farmers had been holding their horses over winter at a heavy expense, the Dominion Government would be inclined to pay higher prices.

Several members objected to federal inspection of meats being restricted to abattoirs engaged in export and interprovincial trade, insisting that some efficient system of inspection should be established to safeguard all the consumers of Canada. Mr. W. F. Maclean of South York, in this connection, said that the municipal abattoir of Toronto might suggest a solution for the problem with which many localities were confronted.

The House put through committee stage yesterday morning the bill conferring jurisdiction upon the Supreme Court of Canada to entertain appeals in controverted election cases arising out of provincial elections in the Province of Manitoba.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said he would not oppose the bill, although he thought it was wrong in principle. Provincial matters, he said, should be decided by provincial courts.

Hon. J. C. Doherty said he questioned the wisdom of the Manitoba legislation, but as that province had seen fit to provide for an appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, the Dominion Government had no choice but to implement such legislation by conferring jurisdiction upon the Supreme Court. The bill did not create any new right of appeal, but merely permitted the Federal court to decide ultimately provincial cases so far as Manitoba was concerned at the request of that province.

The estimates of the Department of Agriculture were then taken up, and Hon. Mr. Burrell explained the demonstration farm scheme now being inaugurated. That scheme provided for a farmer cultivating forty acres of land with seed furnished by the Department and under the expert direction of the Department. All the farmers in the neighborhood could then see for themselves the advantages of scientific farming.

Mrs. Mary Gamble, of Brockville, is dead, aged 91 years.

Adolph Pegoud Scores Once More

PARIS, April 7.—Another daring exploit has been added to the long list of those successfully carried out by Adolphe Pegoud, the famous French aviator, who is reported to have attacked and brought down a German Taube near Saint Menehould while he was alone on patrol duty April 2.

The report of the incident says that when Pegoud saw the German approaching he flew rapidly towards the hostile aircraft and sent it to earth with a few well placed shots. Pegoud then landed beside the Taube and took prisoner the German pilot and observer, neither of whom was injured.

Earlier in the same day Pegoud is reported to have driven off three other German aeroplanes, one of which had dropped nine bombs on a railroad station.

Germans Repulsed In Congo.

HAVRE, April 7. — Fresh attacks by German forces against the Belgian Congo have been repulsed, according to a report made by the deputy governor-general of Katanga to the Belgian Minister for the Colonies. An assault made on Mount Hebu, north of Lake Kiva, was driven back with heavy losses to the Germans, who were pursued into their own territory (German East Africa).

DISCLAIM ALL RESPONSIBILITY

Germany's Excuse for Loss of Life

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Government officials took under consideration yesterday a statement from the German embassy, quoting official messages from the Berlin Foreign Office, in which responsibility was disclaimed for the loss of any neutral lives on board the British steamer Falaba, recently sunk by a German submarine.

The claim is set up by Germany that the Falaba, as well as other British merchantmen, was armed, and that military necessity made it impossible for the submarine to give any longer time than was allowed for the passengers to escape.

State Department officials say that the death of Leon C. Thresher, an American, lost with the Falaba, constitutes a complicated case.

If the view that all merchantmen are armed is accepted, the rights of neutrals to travel aboard belligerent craft of any kind would be circumscribed.

GERMANS ARE ROUSING KURDS

Much Money Spent in North Western Persia

JULFA, Province of Erivan, Transcaucasia, Russia, April 7.—After several days of investigation in the Urumiah district of northwestern Persia, a correspondent of the Associated Press made his way to Julfa, over the frontier in Russia, to file this despatch.

It is the opinion of well-informed observers that the situation of Christians in Urumiah especially will become more dangerous in a fortnight or so. When the rainy season comes to an end, in about two weeks, large numbers of wandering tribes of Kurds will pour down into the valleys to the west of Lake Urumiah.

Already there have been some collisions between Kurds and Christians at a point near Kotur, which is to the west of the river. It is currently reported that Turco-German emissaries have been active in rousing the Kurds. One rich Urumiah land owner has received $90,000 for his work in organizing the natives.

ALLIES START NEW ADVANCE

Operations Which Are Intended to Clear Lorraine of German Forces and Force a Path to the Rhine, Begin With the Advance of Two Columns---Fierce Fighting is Reported From the Yser.

PARIS, April 7. — Verdun is the base of a new advance eastward that has begun by French armies close to the Lorraine frontier and about forty miles as the crow flies from the great German fortress of Metz. The ultimate object of this movement is to drive the Germans out of Western Lorraine, to provide for the surrounding and laying siege to Metz, and to prepare the ground for an invasion of Germany by way of Mannheim on the middle Rhine. The first move in this campaign was the capturing of the Village of Gussainville and the ridges dominating the course of the Orne river yesterday morning. Progress here may be slow, but each mile gained is of great importance.

The French forces in the forest of Le Pretre also recorded additional progress.

The War Office incidentally mentions that six German battalions were destroyed in succession in the course of recent attacks in southern Woevre.

A fresh offensive has begun from Hartsmanns-Weilerkopf in southern Alsace. A small peak which served as the headquarters of a German colonel during the recent fighting for the possession of the mountain was captured, and progress was made beyond this peak with the capture of many prisoners.

The rest of the front was generally quiet and it rained throughout the day.

The effect of the new offensive in the eastern part of France and Alsace-Lorraine is expected to force the Germans to thin out their lines on other portions of the front and give the British and Belgian troops another opportunity to strike a decisive blow in Flanders. It will also stop the sending of many German troops to fight the Russians in the east, movements of which have been noted.

Germany is thought to be pouring troops into Hungary, even to the extent of weakening her forces in Flanders, and last night's Austrian official communication notes the presence and claims the success of German and Austrian troops in the Laboreza valley.

During the last twenty-four hours violent fighting has been taking place in the Yser district, according to an unofficial despatch from Boulogne.

Monday evening an extremely violent bombardment occurred at Dixmude, and the guns boomed without cessation all during the night. Little is known of the result of this fighting.

The towns of Ostend, Bruges, Thourout, Courtrai and the surrounding villages are like vast open-air hospitals, and all are packed with German wounded.

Despite their terrible losses the German troops do not seem to advance an inch. They apparently are determined to take Ypres, but thanks to the Belgian army the enemy's attempts so far have met with nothing but failure.

SMYRNA IS BOMBARDED

Forts Again Shelled by British

LONDON, April 7. — The Reuter Telegram Co. has received a despatch from its correspondent at Athens, saying that British warships again bombarded the forts at the entrance to the Gulf of Smyrna, Monday, according to the report of the captain of the Greek steamer Arcadia. Hydroplanes of the allies dropped a number of bombs, the captain declares, and the Vali of Smyrna ordered Europeans to leave the town.

A British hydroplane first reconnoitred over the Smyrna forts Saturday morning, dropping several bombs, according to reports brought here. A destroyer passed in close to the harbor, while warships engaged the forts at long range.

Later in the day a British battleship, accompanied by several destroyers, convoying a transport, appeared off Chios Island and bombarded the Turkish towns of Kastro and Diodelfia. The transport carried several aeroplanes and several thousand troops, according to reports received here. When last seen she was steaming toward the entrance to Smyrna Gulf, convoyed by the battleship and destroyers.

The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Copenhagen telegraphs:

"I learn on high authority that as soon as the Dardanelles is taken there will be a question of peace overtures from the German, Austrian and Turkish side. The civil population throughout Germany believe the war will be ended in June."

BRITISH LOST MANY OFFICERS

But Casualty List of Foe is Greater

LONDON, April 7. — An officers' casualty list for the fortnight ended March 23 shows that the British army since the beginning of the war has had 1,844 officers killed and 3,301 wounded, while 732 have been reported missing. This is a total of 5,877.

During the fortnight in question 301 officers were killed and 468 wounded, while 27 were reported missing.

In some regiments the casualties were particularly heavy. For instance the Cameron Highlanders had 16 officers killed and 17 wounded; the Gordon Highlanders, 9 killed and 23 wounded; the Northampton Regiment, 11 killed and 10 wounded; the Rifle Brigade, 10 killed and 14 wounded; the Royal Irish Rifles, 9 killed and 11 wounded, and the Worcester Regiment, 13 killed and 11 wounded.

An official compilation of the losses of the German officers corps since the beginning of the war to March 15, taken from German official lists, gives a grand total of 31,376 men in killed, wounded and missing. Of these 9,925 were killed. The dead include 43 generals.

GIRL SHOT

Party Failed to Answer Challenge

CORNWALL, April 7. — Because none of the party answered the challenge of a guard on the Ottawa and New York Railway bridge and the guard fired in the darkness, Sarah Oke, aged 13, who was on her way home from a visit to Cornwall Island with her mother, Mrs. Mitchell Oke, a sister and a baby brother, was shot in the thigh. The guard then investigated and hurried the girl to the General Hospital, where the wound was dressed. Mrs. Oke said that they did not hear the voice of the guard, and that the first thing she knew of his presence was the flash of the rifle.

Von Der Tann To Aid.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 7.—Reports that the German battleship Von Der Tann was on her way to America to assist the Prinz Eitel were revived yesterday, but this time it was rumored that the battleship was accompanied by two submarines. Smoke poured from both stacks of the Prinz Eitel yesterday, showing that all her fires were going, but there was no other indication that the ship was preparing for a dash to sea.

ENQUIRY ASKED BY GERMANY

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Investigation of the circumstances under which the American forts at San Juan, Porto-Rico, opened fire on the German steamer Odenwald, and alleged undue detention of the vessel by the port authorities, has been requested of the State Department by the German embassy here.

The embassy yesterday issued a statement charging that no warning shot was fired as a signal for the vessel to heave to, as is customary in such cases. A report to the Treasury Department from the collector of customs directly contradicts this, saying a warning shot was fired and was unheeded. Secretary Bryan said yesterday that an investigation began when the incident was first reported, but was not completed.

TO ENSURE A SUPPLY

Kitchener Selects Committee to Provide Enough Labor

LONDON, April 7.—The War Office announced last night that Lord Kitchener had appointed a committee to take necessary steps to provide such additional labor as may be required to make it certain that the supplies of munitions of war shall be sufficient to meet all requirements.

Lord Kitchener has appointed Geo. Maccaulay Booth, son of the Right Hon. Charles Booth, to take charge of his munitions committee. Mr. Booth is a partner in the big shipping firm of A. Booth & Co., a director in the Booth Steamship and other companies. According to rumor Mr. Booth is likely to be elected a director of the Bank of England, to replace the late Charles Herman Goschen.

Although Mr. Booth has not been appointed to the actual chairmanship of the committee, it is presumed that he will occupy that position. The Times and other newspapers assume that he is the "strong business man" whom David Lloyd George, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, foreshadowed in the Government scheme to mobilize the industrial resources of the country.

In an interview granted The Daily Mail, Mr. Booth modestly disavowed these assumptions. He expressed the view that the committee is a special one and was concerned with munitions alone and that Mr. Lloyd George had in view a larger scheme. Therefore, he thought it wrong to describe him as the "strong business man."

Canuck Uniforms Worn by Germans

MONTREAL, April 7.—How a German sniper enjoyed a brief immunity from death or capture by using a maxim "silencer" and how the betrayal of his whereabouts in a little pit between the contending forces was innocently effected by his little dog, which had been in the habit of taking him food, is described in a letter by Mr. C. D. B. Whitby, of the Royal Montreal Regiment, at present somewhere in Flanders. Both sniper and dog were killed.

Whitby also reports that the Canadian division has, curiously enough, been utilized by the Germans for their own nefarious ends. Before the contingent had even landed in France, Teutons were stealing through the British lines wearing Canadian uniforms and posing as officers of the advance party. Several were captured and shot.

HALL'S GLEN

(Special Correspondence.)

Hall's Glen, April 7.—Mr. Thos. Miller, Camp No. 1, of White Lake, entertained a lively bunch of about 15, last Wednesday night. They reported a good time.

Every one is busy now making maple syrup but the weather hasn't proved very favorable so far.

Mr. Willie Matthews, veterinary surgeon of this town, has been busily engaged the last few weeks.

Mr. Dave Little after consulting several doctors about his sick horse found Dr. Matthews as competent as any. We are glad to see that the horse is improving.

Business at McCracken's Landing mill will soon be in full swing again. Daddy Pickens expects a full house and perhaps will add new sleeping apartments.

Mr. Jno. Dewart of Warsaw spent Sunday with his aunt, Mrs. M. E. Crowe.

Rev. Mr. Lewis of Peterborough in assisting Rev. Mr. Hinton in his Easter services happened with an accident. On his return to Warsaw, from some unknown cause, the horse became frightened and Mr. Lewis was thrown out but not seriously hurt.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Carveth left Sunday for Brussels to attend the funeral of his only sister, Mrs. Wm. H. McCracken.

We are sorry to learn that Mrs. Crowe's brother, Mr. Geo. Madill of Saskatoon is dead. His remains will be brought to Dummer.

We are sorry that the street cars are only allowed to carry a limited number of passengers and the conductors find great difficulty in the "pay-as-you-enter" system. Summer time will bring a greater demand for the extension of the car line to McCracken's Landing.

The game they played and played it well,

Mr. M. Brown of Peterborough was home for the week end.

Miss Wilson was at Mr. D. H. Smith's for the holidays.

The many friends of Mrs. Lewis Frye are pleased to see she is greatly improved in health.

Mr. J. Andrew visited friends in Peterborough on Sunday.

Miss M. Whitfield has returned to Belleville after a visit with friends here.

APSLEY LOSES TWO BRIGHT YOUNG MEN

Apsley, April 7. — There passed away on Sunday, March 28 in Chandos, the eldest son of Mr. Alexander Woods, in his eighteenth year after a very short illness. Deceased had been in his usual good health up to a couple of days previous to his demise. The funeral took place from his late home on Tuesday to the Anglican Church, Apsley, where service was conducted and the remains laid to rest in the Anglican cemetery. The bereaved relatives have our deepest sympathy in their sad bereavement.

Our village was again cast into gloom on Wednesday morning when death claimed as its victim another promising young man in the person of Charles Grant, youngest son of the late Dr. Grant, at the age of 23 years. Deceased was noticed to be failing for some time but his death came very suddenly the result of a bad cold. The funeral was held on Good Friday to the Anglican Church where a very touching and appropriate sermon was preached. Deceased was a young man of extraordinary character, the work of God being always foremost in his heart. He was known to take charge of Sunday School work when a mere boy. About three o'clock in the afternoon his body was laid to rest in the Anglican Cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. W. Musgrave, H. Smith, H. Jones, L. White, H. Tanner, R. Tanner. He leaves to mourn his loss, a sorrowing mother, one brother and an aunt, to whom we extend deep sympathy.

There is no death! An angel form
Walks o'er the earth with silent tread;
He bears our best loved things away,
And then we call them dead.

And where he sees a smile too bright
Or heart too pure for taint and vice
He bears it to that world of light,
To dwell in Paradise.

And ever near us, though unseen,
The dear immortal spirits tread;
For all the boundless universe
Is life—there are no dead.

DESTRUCTION OF SHADE TREES.

That the value of trees is not appreciated is an oft repeated statement, but there is an ever-widening circle of our citizens who recognize their value and are prepared to defend them:

In Toronto, Mr. Justice Middleton recently allowed judgment for $500.00 for sixteen willow trees which had been cut on private property on Toronto island, by corporation labourers.

While trees are, to a great extent, private property, there is also associated with them a corporate interest, in that the general effect of their presence adds materially to the comfort of the people and to the beauty of their surroundings. It may be too much to expect that all owners of property containing trees will recognize their value from this standpoint. There is no authority to protect trees from wanton destruction by their owners, but education on the subject may secure the results aimed at. Horticultural societies should include the protection of trees in their spheres of activity, though, unfortunately, municipalities can not prohibit, by by-law, the removal of trees from private property. To maintain a nuisance on private property is a contravention of the law and the destruction of trees, with their beauty, shade and comfort, though legally permissible is not less blameworthy.

LA GRIPPE RAGES AROUND HASTINGS

Asphodel Man Sustains Ugly Gash Over Eye

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, April 7.—Easter Sunday was duly observed in the different churches of the village. The morning service in the Methodist Church was in the interest of the Mission Band, which provided the musical part of the program and which showed that great pains had been taken in their training. The address by the pastor was directed principally to the young people [illegible] intently. The collection went into the funds of the band. In the evening, the address was given by Mrs. R. G. Lawlor, of Norwood, who took for her subject, "Our responsibility to Missions, in the present war crisis." The speaker dealt with the subject in a very able manner and showed that considerable thought had had been given to its preparation. The church choir rendered some select Easter anthems and altogether the service was quite in keeping with the occasion. The annual Easter thankoffering was taken up and handed over to the treasurer of the W.M.S. under whose auspices the address was given.

The ballot for election of officers in the league last week resulted in the following being elected for the ensuing year:

President—Miss Ethel Collins.
1st Vice-Pres.—Mrs. D. Scriver.
2nd Vice-Pres.—Miss Mae Beavis
3rd Vice-Pres.—Miss Myrtle Hess
4th Vice-Pres.—Mr. V. German.
Secy.—Mr. J. Parsons.
Treas.—Miss E. Tate.

Good Friday was observed as a general holiday, all the places of business being closed, and friends coming and going. In the evening a lecture, illustrated by lantern views was given in the Presbyterian Church by Mr. Walter Carter. A goodly number were in attendance and enjoyed the evening.

Rev. T. H. J. and Mrs. Anderson left on Monday for a visit with friends in Toronto and Aurora.

Mr. Staples is holidaying at his home in Cavan.

The schools are closed for the Easter vacation, and the boys and girls are amusing themselves in various ways.

Miss Elizabeth Wilson, of Toronto a former resident of Hastings, spent Easter with friends here.

Mrs. Hayden and children of Port Hope, are guests of her sister, Mrs G. Hormel.

Mr. Preston Armstrong, of New Ontario, has been visiting friends in and around Hastings.

Mrs. D. Fife spent Saturday in Peterborough.

Miss Mary Tate of Toronto, is holidaying with her sister, Miss Ella Tate, town.

Mrs. Jack Collins, of Otonabee, spent the week end with her parents.

Mr. G. Mikel, of Ottawa, is renewing acquaintances here.

Mr. J. Clarke, is at his home in Cobourg.

Mr. Tom Hill, of Peterborough, spent Sunday with his parents.

Miss Hawkins of Percy, is spending a week at the parsonage.

Miss Ella Tate was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mrs. W. Gould is visiting with her parents near Campbellford.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Hatherly took an auto trip to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Reg. Plant of Roseneath, is home for a short vacation.

The local chapter of the I.O.D.E. held an Easter tea in their rooms on Monday evening for the purpose of raising funds to purchase comforts for the soldiers at the front.

Miss Phyllis Honey is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Honey of Percy.

Mr. E. J. Laing, of Norwood, was in the vicinity on Tuesday last.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Lynn, of Peterborough, spent a few days during the week with friends here.

Mr. Wm. Warner has purchased a motor car and is taking lessons in the duties of chauffeur.

Mr. C. Tench, of Toronto, spent the holiday with Hasting friends.

Miss J. Collins of Peterborough was in town last week, attending the funeral of her aunt, Mrs. John Collins.

Mr. Julian Carter, of Havelock spent Thursday with his mother.

Miss Montgomery of Roseneath, is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Baker.

Miss Hazel Humphries of Campbellford, is home for a holiday.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Armstrong, of Havelock, attended the funeral of the late Mrs. J. Collins, on Wednesday last.

Mr. M. Walsh, of Asphodel, was unfortunate in being upset out of his buggy last week, thereby sustaining an ugly gash over the left eye which bled very profusely. He is, however, according to latest reports, doing as well as could be expected.

Mrs. Jas. Stevenson, Miss Gladys and Master Stanley, spent Easter Sunday in Norwood, guests of the former's mother, Mrs. J. W. Beavis.

La grippe is still raging, and many are confined to their homes in consequence.

Hamilton oard of control has assured the members of St. John's Ambulance Corps, who have volunteered for overseas service and who are not provided for in the government's scheme of pensions, that they will be looked after by the city in that respect if the government fails to provide for them.

A REGION OF NO LAW

That in Reality is What is Meant by Martial Law

What is martial law? Some people have a vague idea that it is military law, but this is a mistake. Military law has nothing whatever to do with martial law. Military law is simply that branch of the laws applicable to military service and duties, consisting of the statutes, regulations and principles by which the army and its affairs are governed. The misunderstanding has arisen partly from the name given to it and partly from the fact that it is the military which frequently carry out the regulations, while often the military forms of courts are held.

The police, however, if duly authorized, may carry out martial law.

It is difficult to define the meaning of martial law in nontechnical words. The dictionary definition of martial law is that it is military authority exercised in accordance with the laws and usages of war when the civil authority is wholly or partly suspended, either by proclamation or by the actual presence of a hostile force. But the best definition given has been that of "no law."

It means that the supreme authority is empowered to do as it wills and that all ordinary laws, for the time being, have no operation whatever. There are no laws dealing with its application, those in command possessing entirely arbitrary power.

This means that there will be a complete revolution in the ways of the people wherever martial law is proclaimed. All ordinary life will be affected, and it will no longer be the case that "an Englishman's home is his castle."

As a rule, when a place is under martial law its inhabitants must clear out of the streets before a certain time every evening, say 8 o'clock. Then all places of amusement, public houses and so on are closed entirely.

Even during the daytime a limit is made as to the number of people who may assemble, so that a party of people—numbering above, say, half a dozen—would be liable to instant punishment. Also certain places and certain streets are forbidden to the people, who may be compelled to keep beyond a certain radius from the specified places.

Those in authority may take any object they like from anywhere, entering houses as well as shops to commandeer whatever they wish without any control. Any person may be compelled to give a complete account of his movements, past, present and projected, and may be searched or even arrested without a warrant.

Crimes are dealt with very severely. Thus suppose a man breaks a window. Instead of being hauled up before a magistrate and subjected to a small fine, the policeman would be perfectly justified in shooting him immediately.

So in the case of robbery. A man stealing a purse need not be arrested, but could be shot, this being a perfectly justifiable action on the part of those in authority.

Every person might be compelled to carry a passport, giving full evidence of his identification. Passports would be necessary in the case of those using horses or vehicles of any kind, including cycles.

All persons who were compelled to be out at night would be provided with special night passes signed by the one in authority. No person would be allowed to leave one town for another or travel beyond a certain distance without being the possessor of a properly signed passport given for this special purpose.

The object, of course, is to keep the people within certain districts and also to prevent foreign spies and the like from moving into the country and so gleaning information of value to our enemies.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Imperial Rome.

There are various estimates of the population of ancient Rome. The figure given by Gibbon is 1,200,000. Baker, in his notes to Montesquieu's "Grandeur and Decadence of the Romans," gives good reasons for thinking that Rome's population was 2,000,000. The city had within its walls in the time of Theodosius 48,332 habitations, built, as a rule, with several stories.—New York American.

The Word "[illegible]"

Literally the word rajah means king, and maharajah the great king or ruler over several kings, but generally speaking the titles rajah, maharajah and nawab have no greater significance than the words feudal lords as used in mediaeval times in Europe. Many of them have been made by the will of the reigning chief, many bestowed for meritorious acts and deeds.—Exchange.

Foreign Decorations.

The various decorations that have been given to American officers and officials by foreign governments are deposited in the state department, where the recipients may see them and show them to their friends, but may not take them away or use them as having possession.

SUPERVISED PLAYGROUND AT THE CENTRAL SCHOOL

Board of Education Co-operate With Council of Women

SWIM AT THE "Y"

The Board of Education members who met in regular session last night were on their very best behavior which was enhanced by the fact that they entertained several ladies, or rather the ladies entertained the Board of Education. The former were a deputation from the Women's Council who were present to solicit the support of the Board in the supervised playground project.

Mrs. Mowat was the first spokeslady who said she represented the Women's Council who were advocating supervised playgrounds and had engaged an expert to look over the school grounds and to all appearances the central school grounds offered the most advantageous and suitable facilities. They hoped to secure the Y. M. C. A. for swimming purposes, also a swimming pool on the river. They solicited the co-operation, influence and support of the Board for with that, the success of the project would be assured.

Mrs. W. R. Morris said supervised playgrounds were past the experimental stage even in Canada. She enumerated the names of several Canadian cities where they had been inaugurated and had been successful. They intended to secure competent and experienced instructors if they succeeded in starting playgrounds here. They did not anticipate calling upon the Board for funds.

Mrs. (Dr.) Neal put in a plea for the children whom the supervised playgrounds would help morally and physically by keeping them off the streets and affording them pleasant healthful diversion. She thanked the Board for so kindly receiving them.

Request Was Granted.

Mr. G. N. Gordon in responding said the ladies' request should receive the sympathetic consideration of the Board and he was rather surprised there was no request for money attached to it. He moved "That the Board of Education permit and allow the Central school grounds during vacation for purposes of supervised playgrounds under direction of the Council of Women with the conjunction of the public school inspector but that the Board have the privilege of terminating their use of the grounds at any time.

Col. Miller seconded Mr. Gordon's motion, which carried unanimously.

More Uniforms.

A request for more uniforms for the Collegiate Institute cadets was referred to the Supervision Committee. About thirty new ones are required, as the larger boys' uniforms have shrunk from washing.

Mr. John Crane in speaking along playground lines felt it would be a good thing if the school grounds could be thrown open during the summer months for children and any other persons who desired to get out and have a little healthful recreation up to six o'clock in the evening. Mr. Crane thought many older people often felt like going out and having a little game of ball. On motion this matter was also left in the hands of the supervision committee.

Fire-fighters.

Trustee Smith advanced a suggestion that the Collegiate pupils organize a fire fighting brigade among themselves. Mr. Hill supported this idea and moved that the supervision committee take it up and bring in a report.

The following report was adopted:

HEALTHY SEED POTATOES.

Not only do unhealthy tubers decrease the yield of potatoes, but they may start an epidemic in the field, that will result in a total loss of the season's crop when the weather is favorable for the growth of disease. New York State alone has reported a loss of $10,000,000 in one year due to the ravages of late blight, while in the United States the toll of this disease has amounted to $36,000,000 in one season's crop. Had the loss in Canada during the summer of 1912 been estimated, its enormity would have been appalling. Much of this waste can; however, be prevented by planting healthy tubers and spraying with Bordeaux mixture.

Most growers know the peculiar odor emanating from a field of potatoes affected with late blight and can easily discern the wilted, spongy condition of the leaf, but as a preventive measure it is more important still to be able to identify the disease in the tuber itself, for there it winters and is conveyed to the field again in the spring. The affected tuber shows a surface slightly depressed, while the healthy, white color of the flesh is changed to a dirty brown. If, the soil is dry, dry rot results, but if wet the tuber decays and becomes a slimy, offensive smelling mass. The disease continues after they are put into storage, and those showing only a slight discoloration in the field may later be entirely destroyed.

Bordeaux mixture sprayed on the plants during July and August will prevent the development of the disease, but it is wise to select seed in the spring that shows no sign of an unhealthy color and thus forestall the introduction into the field of the disease to await only favorable climatic conditions for a hasty development.

Some varieties show more resistance than others, and amongst the resistant kind may be mentioned Carmen No. 3, Rural New Yorker, White Beauty, Rural Blush, Green Mountain and Delaware. No variety is altogether immune from the disease, and unless precautions are taken any kind is liable to fall a victim to the blight and rot, but if healthy seed is planted and the plants sprayed and a rotation followed, much can be done to allay destruction from this disease.—Maritime Farmer.

School Teachers Now in Session

TORONTO, April 7.—The 54th annual meeting of the Ontario Educational Association opened yesterday at the University of Toronto with about 1,000 members in attendance. This attendance is larger than usual, and the meetings yesterday were marked by bright papers and spirited discussions. Especially is this so of the public school teachers' section. About a dozen meetings are held simultaneously concerning the various departments of school work.

Rural school work received much attention yesterday, and it is evident from the addresses that much progress has been made in the rural sections. The main point brought home by the speakers was the necessity of teaching the country boy and girl for the country and not for those vocations that take them from the land.

IN MEMORIAM

A tribute to the late Mr. Lazarus Payne, who died January 3, 1915. Written by Mrs. Mary E. Crowe, Zion Methodist Church, Warsaw Circuit:

Death has visited our community again
And taken another faithful brother to rest.
We are assured the late Brother Payne
Is gone to that beautiful "Home of the Blest."

He was a faithful soldier of Jesus,
Always stood up for the true and the right;
Oh! what an example of patience,
As he fought the battles of life.

When our new minister came to our circuit
It would not be long till he learned
He had surely a faithful steward
On whom he could always depend.

In our good old prayer meeting then
If a timid brother or sister took part,
They knew that fervent "Amen"
Came from a true and honest heart.

When to our pulpit he was appointed,
The good seed of the Word for to sow,
I think sometimes he was discouraged;
In pleading, his sympathy would o'erflow.

Don't be discouraged, dear brother,
O'er the work of the Master don't mourn;
The "Bread that is cast on the water,
After many days will surely return."

In our Communion service we will ne'er forget
Those hymns Mr. Payne would raise;
And keeping our hearts so uplifted
In those beautiful songs of praise.

Now when we hear of his praises
Sounded on every tongue,
We know his life must be an inspiration
Both to the old and the young.

ARBOUR DAY IN ANADA.

In Canadian schools it has been the custom for years to observe Ar[illegible] greater or less degree. This custom should receive increased attention from educational bodies and the general public, for the country has a great need for the planting of more trees and shrubs, both in school and residential grounds. Canada is so dependent upon her forests that any measures which may be taken to extend the knowledge of the pupils respecting trees and the need for their protection will serve a useful purpose.

In each of the provinces, with the exception of British Columbia, provision is made for the celebration of Arbour Day. In most provinces it is a public school celebration only, the regulations requiring its observance by the planting of trees and shrubs in school grounds. It should be made a public holiday, instead of being confined to the schools, and the scope of its observance should include the annual clean-up, particularly as it is usually celebrated early in May. In this way, more general interest would be aroused in the work, and greater results, secured from an arboreal as well as an artistic and sanitary standpoint.

MRS. WISENEIGHBOUR says:
"I should have told you the other day, when I was speaking of 'Eddy's' Washboards, that it is just as necessary to have an Indurated Fibrewear Tub to hold your clothes, if you want to make a success of wash-day."

MRS. NEWLYWED says:
"I've heard of 'Eddy's' Indurated Fibreware. What's the difference between fibre and wooden ware?"

"Fibreware is made from compressed fibre, baked at extreme heat. All in one solid piece. It cannot warp or fall apart. No chance of splinters, wears much longer, looks better, and is light to carry. The latter point you should always take into consideration," concludes Mrs. Wiseneighbour.

MOBILIZING MONSTER ARMY WHENWAR IS DECLARED

Rapidity With Which the Reservist Responds to the Summons and is Equipped for Action — Concentrating the Troops at the Seat of War

Putting a modern army like that of Germany in the field involves two separate processes, mobilization and concentration. Mobilization consists not only in fitting out the men already with the colors, or the standing army, but more particularly of re-enlisting and equipping the additional men that are necessary to bring the standing army to war strength, which is, roughly speaking, about twice its peace strength.

The details of mobilization are very simple. Every reservist or landwehr man has a soldier's pocketbook containing explicit instructions as to what he has to do when called to the colors. He is moreover practiced in doing it at maneuvers in time of peace. Various means are employed for transmitting the call to individual men, but it is usually spread by rumor or by the press and anticipated in execution.

The young clerk, artisan, student or teacher drops his vocation and betakes himself by a prescribed route to the depot, where he is furnished a brand new uniform and set of equipments. Here he has perhaps a few hours in which to renew his military acquaintanceship and to linger with his civilian friends, his parents, brothers, sisters or sweetheart, if any of them have followed or joined him there. As a reservist of the first class he is not likely to have a wife.

The mobilization being completed, the next step is the concentration. The assembly is sounded, the roll called—the last time on that ground for many a loyal name—the battalion is formed. It breaks into column and, following the band to the strains of some foreign equivalent of "The Girl I Left Behind Me," escorted by throngs of youths and maidens, cheered and saluted with voice, flags and handkerchiefs from doorsteps, windows and housetops, tramps impressively—aye, how impressively to many a heavy hearted witness—through the town or city to the railway station.

A few minutes for parting words, looks, embraces, and the embarkation begins. In perhaps twenty minutes more it is completed, the interval between trains is attained, a whistle, the train moves, is off, is out of sight.

This process is repeated until the whole field army is under way or at its destination. The unit of embarkation is what one engine will draw, which, expressed in infantry, is about a thousand men. The distance between trains that is necessary to safety and efficiency may be taken as ten minutes.

Under favorable conditions trains follow one another at this interval, with only necessary halts for refreshment and rest or exercise. The officers and some of the men ride in passenger coaches. The rest have to put up with improvised seats in freight cars—board benches built across the cars without backs.

Both the point of debarkation and the zone of concentration must be at a safe distance within one's own territory and protected by troops which in peace as well as in war are on the frontier in full war strength. These are called covering troops.

At the end of the railway journey comes the debarkation. If this does not take place as fast as the trains arrive—and it is not likely to when they follow one another at intervals of ten minutes—allowance must be made for it in calculating the number of trains to be dispatched per line of railroad per day, or the rate of concentration.

On debarking the troops, or many of them, are stiff and sore from long cramping on a hard seat and in poor condition for marching. So only after a rest are they moved by short marches into the zone of concentration. It is apparent from these general considerations that the railroads are factors of capital importance in seeking the advantage of the initiative, of determining the general course of operations, for the enemy as well as for oneself. To secure and to keep this advantage both in strategy and in tactics has long been a first principle of good generalship.—Major John Bigelow, U. S. A. Retired, in Century.

Life Insurance in a Crisis

Every time a great Crisis occurs LIFE INSURANCE has an opportunity to show what a giant of strength it is: Tremendous burdens are placed upon its shoulders, but it never shirks, never hesitates or groans.

When the Titanic took its awful plunge, carrying 1,500 human souls into the deep, thousands of widows and orphans were left throughout the world. LIFE INSURANCE accepted the burden without the quiver of a muscle, and spread its protection around the Globe.

When seven years ago the financial world was laboring under an attack of indigestion due to undigested securities, and people could not get even their own money out of the Savings Banks, LIFE INSURANCE furnished spot cash to its policyholders upon application.

Today, when a gigantic struggle wages across the Seas, and it is difficult to get loans from banks or money lenders, they find the solution again in LIFE INSURANCE.

It is to-day saving thousands of men all over the world, not only embarrassment, but actual failure.

LIFE INSURANCE protects your wife and family.
" " will meet their needs when you are gone.
" " is always a resource.
" " contributes to your estate.
" " increases your savings.
" " increases the savings habit.

Money invested in LIFE INSURANCE is sure to come back to you or your family.

Your credit is made better by the amount of LIFE INSURANCE you carry.

The need of LIFE INSURANCE to every man with a family is as fixed as the daily need for bread, and that need is well met by a policy in Flour and bran unchanged.

DULUTH GRAIN MARKET.

DULUTH, April 6.—Wheat—No. 1 hard, $1.56⅝; No. 1 northern, $1.55⅝; No. 2 do., $1.48⅝ to $1.51⅝; May, $1.52⅝.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, April 6.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 941 cattle, 792 hogs, 25 sheep and 401 calves.

A few odd cattle of choice quality and several loads of good steers and heifers were on sale, but the bulk of those offered as fat were common and medium. Trade was fairly active at Monday's values. Nearly everything was cleaned up before noon.

Heavy cattle, that is steers and heifers, 1300 to 1400 lbs., are slow sale between $7.75 and $8, and it looks as tho the farmer will have to take lower prices for this class of cattle, as buyers are slow at purchasing them after the $7.50 mark is passed; in fact, this price is hard to reach, and the cattle that bring it have to be extra choice.

Fat cows were good property to have these two days and sold rapidly at values given below.

Milkers and springers sold readily at prices ranging from $50 to $95 each.

Veal calves were more plentiful and values were lower in all classes of them.

Sheep and lambs were very scarce and values as high as the public are prepared to go.

Hogs were firm at Monday's values.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers, $7.50 to $7.75; good to choice butchers, $7.25 to $7.50; good, $7 to $7.25; medium, $6.50 to $6.90; common, $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good cows, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $4.75 to $5.25; canners and cutters, $4 to $4.75; bulls, $5.25 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $6.50 to $6.85, and in one instance $7 was paid; steers, 650 to 750 lbs., sold at $6 to $6.25; stockers, $5.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a better demand for milkers and springers and prices, while no higher, were very firm. Values ranged from $50 to $95.

Veal Calves.

Choice veal calves sold at $9 to $10; good at $8 to $9; medium at $5.50 to $7, and common at $4.50 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes of light weight, sold at $7 to $8.50; heavy ewes and rams, $6 to $7.50; lambs at $10.50 to $12; spring lambs sold at $8 to $12 for the bulk, but there were some very small lambs sold at $5 each.

Hogs.

Selects sold at $9.15 to $9.25 weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 2000; market, firm; beeves, $6 to $8.80; cows and heifers, $2.80 to $7.80; calves, $6 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; market, weak; light, $6.65 to $6.95; mixed, $6.60 to $6.95; heavy, $6.45 to $6.90; rough, $6.40 to $6.55; pigs, $5.50 to $6.50; bulk of sales, $6.80 to $6.90.

Sheep—Receipts, 8000; market, firm; native, $7.40 to $8.50; lambs, native, $7.85 to $10.45.

Japan Not Yet Satisfied.

PEKIN, China, April 7.—The expressions of satisfaction with the Chinese attitude in regard to the present negotiations with Japan, attributed to Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier, were not voiced at the conference yesterday by M. Hioki, the Japanese Minister here, who is conducting the case for his Government. On the contrary, M. Hioki warned Lu Cheng Hsiang, the Chinese Foreign Minister, against continuing to refuse compliance with those demands against which China is holding out.

The questions of Manchurian immigration and the advancement of the interests of the Hanyehping Mining Co., together with the article in group five of the demands providing for China's purchase of arms from Japan, were again discussed at the conference yesterday, but no conclusion reached.

A, BALKAN EPISODE

By LOUISE B. CUMMINGS.

The Balkan states are half a dozen little kingdoms that have been fighting one another from time immemorial, and all of them have been fighting the Turk. If the many occurrences in the Balkans of a romantic nature could be gathered together there would be enough of them to supply story tellers for hundreds of years. The following is a sample:

Not far from Adrianople there lived a country girl named Tarissa. She was a Christian inhabiting a region ruled by the Turks. Tarissa's home was just south of the border line between Turkey and Roumelia. One day a party of Roumelians headed by a young man, Boris Lovatz, came down the valley of the Maritza river in pursuit of a band of Turks who had carried off some Roumelian women. Before his return he had met Tarissa and there had resulted a love affair. Lovatz was successful in rescuing the women he had come for and went back into Roumelia.

Had it not been for having met Tarissa he might never have come into Turkey again and been safe from the revenge due him for the rescue. But there is no risk a man will not take for love, and it was not long before he was again across the border on a visit to his sweetheart. Indeed he came so often that it got out among the Turks that this enemy had been captivated by a girl and was making periodical visits to her. So a watch was set for him.

One day the spy who was selected for this service went to a Turkish officer who was on duty in the neighborhood and told him that Boris was with Tarissa. The officer directed several of his men to mount their horses, and, placing himself at their head, he rode toward the hamlet where Tarissa lived. Dusk was falling, and the Turk, before reaching the hamlet, directed his men to remain where they were and rode forward alone to reconnoiter, for he knew that Boris was as slippery as an eel and if he was aware that a force was coming to take him he would be off like the wind.

When near Tarissa's home the officer approached cautiously, and since it was dark he reached a window without being seen. In the room into which he looked were Boris and Tarissa. Boris was trying to induce the girl to go back with him and become his wife. She hesitated since he was marked for destruction in Turkey and could never come back with her to her home. So intent were they with each other that they did not notice the appearance of the Turk at the window till they heard a click and, looking up, saw him leveling a pistol at Boris.

The Roumelian realized that he was doomed and, preferring to die by a bullet without being tortured, as he doubtless would be if he were captured, put his hand to his hip for a weapon. But he had unclasped his belt and laid it on a chair. Tarissa saw his eye turn toward the chair, and, anticipating his intention to die defending himself, she threw herself between him and his weapon.

This placed her between the officer and her lover. Since the former could not shoot without killing her he sprang in through the window and, covering Boris, called on him to surrender. There was nothing else for the captive to do since he had nothing with which to make a defense except to induce his captor to shoot him.

The next move of the Turk was to get his prisoner to his men or his men to his prisoner. The latter was not an easy thing to do, for the men were beyond call, and he had no one to send for them. Keeping his pistol pointed toward Boris, he glanced out through the window to see if any one was near, for he was in a Christian hamlet, and if he attempted to drive his captive to his men he might get a bullet from some one of the little clump of houses.

During these few moments in which he was obliged to keep so many things in his mind there were two very important matters that he failed to grasp. One was Tarissa and the other Boris' belt, to which was slung his pistol, though he may not have seen the latter. The Turk's glance through the window enabled Tarissa to take a step backward so that by placing her hand behind her she might reach the weapon.

Not seeing any one without to send for his men, he ordered Boris to precede him through the doorway and out of the house. Boris obeyed, and as the men passed out, the Turk keeping his eyes fixed on his prisoner, Tarissa possessed herself of Boris' pistol.

She now had every advantage, for she was behind the Turk. Only the knowledge that her lover would die a frightful death enabled her to kill a man in cold blood. Stealing up close to the Turk, she shot him through the head.

Boris turned, saw the Turk fall and Tarissa with a smoking pistol in her hand.

"Go," she said. "There must be others near."

Without a word he sprang on to the horse on which he had come, and as he passed out of sight the Turkish soldiers were heard coming.

Boris escaped. Tarissa hid in the darkness for a time, then set out to join him.

Neither of them ever entered Turkey again, for they knew that Boris would be killed and Tarissa would meet a worse fate. In their home in Roumelia they were safe.

Harold Foster, who, when arrested at Waterbury, Conn., a week ago, under the Mann White Slave Act, admitted being wanted in several Ontario towns for cashing worthless cheques, was arraigned in the police court at St. Catharines.

YOUR OWN PORTRAIT.

How Do You Suppose It Is Verbally Drawn by Your Friends?

Did you ever experience the sensation of hearing yourself physically described by another who did not happen to know that you were within earshot? If so, you may have heard yourself pictured as "that short legged man with the scraggly gray mustache, you know."

You may have been pained or amused. It all depends upon your sense of humor or the fitness of things. But do not despair at your portrait. Just listen some time to a pair of men when one of them is trying to recall to his companion a third individual, the latter seen perhaps only once years ago by the auditor. The gentleman jogging the other man's memory is likely to sketch the absentee in a few bold strokes something like the following:

"Oh, sure, you remember him—the fellow with long yellow teeth! He parted his hair near his ear, and he had a scar on his chin."

"Now, I do," cheerfully replies the other at this piece of graphic description and then adds his own touch, "He was with a little chap who stuttered and wore big spectacles of tortoise shell."

And the interesting question it brings up is, Why do people, generally speaking, remark defects and singularities rather than perfections and beauties? A man with long yellow teeth might have had fine eyes and a noble head set upon his shoulders, and a begoggled chap with a stammering tongue might have had a Greek profile and an artist's hands.

We are assured that beauty is everywhere, yet people seem to take particular note of the ugly. No doubt it is easier to see the ugly than the beautiful in humanity, but why take the easier way?—New York Sun.

Y.M.C.A. BOYS WILL HAVE GOOD TIME

No boy who takes out a membership ticket for the Y.M.C.A. need lack amusement this summer, judging by the extensive summer program that has been drawn up. The itinerary for a series of observation trips to various local factories has also been compiled. On Thursday afternoon, April 15th, the boys will visit in a body the Matthews-Blackwell company's plant, and gain an understanding of the processes under which a hog goes from the time it is unloaded till it comes out cured and dressed ready for the cook. On Thursday, April 22nd, the Auburn Woollen Company will be visited and on Thursday, April 29th, a tour of the Brinton Carpet Company will be made.

From May 3rd to the 8th, a boys' swimming campaign for members only will be inaugurated.

On Thursday afternoon from May 13th to May 27th, observation trips will be made to the Bonner-Worth Company, and the De Laval Company. Members will meet at the building not later than 4.15 on the afternoon of the trip.

From April 24th to the 30th Bible study examinations will be held, and every member passing the local examination will be presented with a beautiful Y.M.C.A. pin.

Bicycle clubs will be organized for all grades of boys, older boys, school boys and business boys, and all who wish to join should leave their names at the boys' office.

BASKETBALL

All the lovers of the indoor sport will be out tonight to see one of the most important basket ball games of the season when Cressmans, runners-up for A. division clash with the Excelsiors who are leading the league. If Cressmans win it will mean a play-off between the Unknowns, Cressmans nad Excelsiors; if Excelsiors win, they have the championship of A. division, and will play off for the championship of the league. Game starts 8.15.

Militia orders received at Brantford announce the promotion of Lieuts. Fred W. Miller, T. P. Jones, of the first contingent, and Finley Fraser, third contingent, all of the Dufferin Rifles, to be captains.

PROVINCE IN DISTRICTS FOR AMATEUR BASEBALL

Local Fans Are of Opinion That Association Could be Formed

The thinking departments of a few Peterborough baseball fans have been quite busy of late. Although the action of the Peterborough Club in dropping out of the Canadian League almost crushed the game from the minds of all, a few followers of the great summer pastime have been turning over and over in their minds a proposition to have an amateur baseball organization, which would embrace teams from all over the province of Ontario. At first glance this proposition looks almost impractical. The scheme seems too mighty to materialize but history of baseball in Ontario reveals success of plans, just as extensive.

Away back in the fall of 1892, numerous ball fans in Ontario had dreams of a huge organization which would cover the province. The usual obstacles had to be fought but they were fought successfully and in the spring of 1893 the plan materialized. The province was divided into four districts. In this district, the towns represented were Cobourg, Lindsay, Oshawa and Peterborough. The teams from Toronto and two from Hamilton composed the district west of us and the middle west consisted of Brantford, Galt, Dundas and Guelph. Cobourg won this group, one of the Toronto teams won its district, Dundas cleaned up the middle-west and London the western. Cobourg won from Toronto in the semi-finals and London put Dundas out. At this stage of the game the teams were being spotted with professionals. London and Cobourg played home and home games and the result was a tie. The play-off for the championship went to Toronto. Both teams were practically pro. organizations by the time the final game was played. "Doc" Sheppard was on the mound for London and Pat Hall twirled for Cobourg. The latter won.

The next year, 1894, the big organization branched out into what was almost a professional league. The Guelph Maple Leafs won the championship. From it developed what is now known as the Canadian League. The late J. J. Ward, first president of the Canadian League, tried to get the amateur organization going again after professionals had taken over the plans of 1893, but the efforts were not successful.

The plan being considered by local fans is something similar to the plans of the fall of 1892. Amateur baseball in Ontario is gradually being placed on a sound foundation and it is thought that some scheme should be arrived at whereby the amateur championship could be played for. The dopesters propose to launch an Ontario amateur baseball association. The various towns and cities all have city leagues. It is the idea to have the winners of one city league, play off with the winners of another town or perhaps do as they did with the lacrosse in years ago, that is to have all the teams go to Toronto and play off. The idea of having the winners play home and home games, however, appears the better one. It would be possible in this section of the province to have a district composed of Kingston, Belleville, Cobourg, Port Hope, Lindsay and Peterborough. Similar groups could be organized in other parts of the province and then the winners of the groups play-off. In this way the amateur championship of Ontario could be decided.

A Governing Organization.

It would be necessary to have a governing organization and for this reason the local promoters of the idea will lay their plans before the annual meeting of the Toronto Amateur Leagues to be held in Toronto next week. The fact that the Ontario Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union is putting forth such efforts to purify and cleanse baseball of all professionalism and the fact that many O.H.A. hockey players want to play baseball in an organization which would be purely amateur, so as to retain their amateur standing, should greatly assist the new movement. The result of the steps being taken by the local enthusiasts will be awaited with interest.

ROCKEFELLER A FAN.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., April 7. — Since witnessing an exhibition game played by the Brooklyn Dodgers at Daytona, Fla., last month, John D. Rockefeller has become an ardent fan. This week he gave the use of three acres of land at Pocantico Hills to the Pocantico Hills A. C., and he will aid it in bulding a diamond and grand stand. Manager Kerrigan expects to have a speedy team in the field, and later in the season hopes that Mr. Rockefeller will come out and root for it.

Curling Rink Company Officers Re-elected

On Monday night the annual meeting of the Curling Rink Co. took place at the rooms, for the election of officers. All of last year's board of directors were re-elected. They are: T. Brightman, Robert Neill, W. G. Morrow, R. M. Waddell, Robert Hicks, J. E. A. Fitzgerald, John A. Cameron, Dr. T. N. Greer, S. T. Medd and James Bogue.

At the meeting of the board, last year's officers were all returned to office. Mr. T. Brightman is president; Robert Neill, vice-president, and R. M. Waddell secretary-treasurer.

COMMENT As You Like it

DAN McCABE is launching something new for the benefit of the sporting element of the city. Each day in the south window of his tobacco store at he corner of Charlotte and Aylmer Streets he will present a picture and complete record of famous men in baseball, hockey, rugby, lacrosse, in fact athletes of every description who are before the public eye. The service is being secured from the Sporting Record Publishing Co., of Chicago, and the editor of the articles is George L. Moreland, the man who brought out Honus Wagner, Nap. Lajoie and a host of other baseball stars. The records will be kept on fyle in Dan McCabe's store and are at the disposal of fans for settling arguments, etc.

THERE IS a movement on foot in T.A.S. circles to re-organize an athletic branch and have represented in it every line of sport. It is to be hoped the boys get together and push the proposition which would certainly bring about good results. Let's see some signs of life within the next few days.

G. A. CARSON, the physical director of the Y. M. C. A. has bright dreams of the lacrosse in Peterborough this summer. Mr. Carson is at present busily engaged in making arrangements for the annual gymnastic exhibition in the "Y" on April 8th and 9th but after that work is over he intends to put forth efforts to boost a city lacrosse league.

ED. DONOGHUE may not pose as a prize fight fan but he surely had the dope on the Johnson-Willard batle. Several times during the week preceding the bout he expressed himself as believing that the Kansas cowboy would drop the Smoke in the twenty-fifth or twenty-sixth round.

THE ANNUAL gymnastic exhibition on the nights of April 8th and 9th in the Y.M.C.A. should be well worth attending. Those interested in the "Y" will have an opportunity of seeing what has been accomplished during the past season.

NEW CHAMPION HAS LIVED RIGHT

Has Never Used Liquor of Any Kind or Tobacco

Jess Willard, the new heavyweight champion of the world, was born in Pottawatomie county, Kansas, on Dec. 29, 1887. His father was a ranchman, and Jess with his three older brothers worked in the father's ranch. He was an expert bronco breaker, and continued at this work until he became too heavy.

In December, 1910, Willard joined an athletic club in Oklahoma, and announced that he wanted to learn to fight, so that he could whip Jack Johnson.

Although he was 6 ft. 6 in. and weighed 230 pounds, the members of the club looked on Willard as a joke, and did not pay much attention to his fighting possibilities. The manager of the club, however, was impressed by his enormous strength, and signed a contract with him.

At this time the big cowboy was a crack rifle shot, an expert swimmer, and could run a hundred yards in 11 seconds.

He never drank liquor of any kind, did not smoke or chew, and was in wonderful physical condition all the time.

Lost First Fight.

In February of 1910 he was matched with Louis Fink in Sapulpa, Okla. He lost in the tenth round. The cowboy was not disheartened, and in three weeks was ready for his second battle. He knocked out Ed. Burke in three rounds, and was matched again with Louis Fink. In his second encounter with Fink he finished his conqueror in three rounds.

In 1911-1912 Willard drew with Arthur Pelky and Luther McCarthy, and knocked out Soldier Kearns and Sailor White.

In 1913 Willard was kept busy fighting, and won ten out of eleven contests, only losing a decision to Gunboat Smith in 20 rounds. In 1914 he beat Tom McMahon, Dan Daly and Geo. Rodel.

Never Knocked Down.

While Willard was never considered by ring followers to be a serious contender for the heavyweight title, his ring record was nevertheless a very notable one.

The young giant was never knocked down in any of his bouts, never appeared to be groggy at any time, and was never seen to have a bloody nose.

The fighting world for a long time overlooked these important features in the big man's make-up, and when after a whole year of constant training, Willard stepped into the ring to fight Jack Johnson, with many things in his favor — his youth, strength, long reach and ability to take punishment — all helped the Oklahoma giant to conquer the fading black champion, and restore the heavyweight crown to the honor of the white race.

A FRIENDLY VISIT.

Why the New Resident Called Upon His Neighbor.

Congressman James C. Cantrill of Kentucky was reminded of a story the other evening when reference was made to the way in which Bertha bangs the piano. Some time since, he said, sweet sixteen sat down at the piano in a pretty little suburban home and started to bat at the keys. That was 8 o'clock. At 8:30 she was still on the job. The same at 9. At 10 a man who had just moved into the neighborhood came over and gently pushed the buzz button.

"I heard your daughter playing," explained the new neighbor as girlie's papa came to the door, "and I thought I would drop in for a minute or two."

"Fine, fine!" enthusiastically cried girlie's papa, trying to haul the new neighbor into the house. "Glad you did! So you are fond of music, eh?"

"Not exactly that," responded the new neighbor, peering into the parlor. "In this particular case I had an irresistible desire to see the person who was possessed of such a wonderful power of endurance."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Rev. Dr. Symonds is ill at Montreal.

Mr. Donald MacNaughton of Norwood and Miss Mae MacNaughton have returned home after visiting over Easter with the former's sister, Mrs. Learmonth, Stewart street, city.

A special meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held at the residence of Mrs. T. W. Whalley, Engleburn avenue, at 3:30 tomorrow afternoon to hear reports of delegates to the Dominion Alliance convention.

The Canadian Kitchener League requests all the ladies who are knitting to kindly turn in all completed work by next Monday or Tuesday as the League is sending a box to the boys oversea. Gentlemen of the city are requested to be present at the sock shower.

Rev. R. Pogue who has been sick for a couple of weeks left this morning for Clifton Springs where he will spend three weeks recuperating his health. It is hoped he will receive the benefit desired. The committee are making arrangements for a substitute but have not yet made definite plans.

The last regular meeting this season of the Morning Musicale Society will be held tomorrow in the Greene studio at 10.30. Mrs. Allan, the president, will conclude her series of papers on the history of music with one entitled "Music and War." It is hoped that all members will be present.

The Easter Monday night at home held under the auspices of St. Martin's T.A.S. in the parish hall at Ennismore was a great success. The crowd, which was very large, included many visitors from surrounding parishes. Cards, refreshments and dancing formed the ordero f the evening's entertainment. The music for the dancing was rendered by the Ennismore orchestra.

SMITH—McNEILL.

Frazerville, April 7. — A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McNeill, "Sunny Brae," Cavan, on Wednesday, March 31, when their second daughter, Sarah Kathleen, was married to Mr. Leonard Wesley Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Smith, Millbrook. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Allan in the presence of the immediate relatives of the bride and groom, Mrs. W. C. Allen playing the wedding march. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white silk meteor over satin with bridal veil, caught with orange blossoms and carried a bouquet of roses and lily of the valley. Little Miss Florence Larmer, niece of the groom, acted as flower girl, in a dainty lingerie frock with pink sash and carried a basket of sweet peas and carnations.

The bride and groom left later amid showers of rice and confetti, for a short trip, the bride travelling in a military serge suit with hat to match. They will be at home to their friends in May.

LE WARNE—COURTNEY.

At St. Luke's Anglican Church, this morning, the rector, Rev. W. White, M.A., united in marriage, Mr. George Francis Shuter Le Warne of Mount Forest and Miss Winnifred Annie Courtney of this city. They were unattended.

Mr. and Mrs. Le Warne left on the 7.50 train for Toronto and Mount Forest.

Invitation to Shower.

An invitation is extended to all citizens to be present at the sock and handkerchief shower to be held at the residence of Mrs. Thomas Barrie, George St. north, on Friday afternoon and evening of this week.

Remember always that if a dealer offers you a substitute for Salada, he has only one object in view and that is greater profit. If you have ever used Salada it is natural that you should always want it. Don't accept any substitute.

Foresters, attention.

The members of Court Chemong, 530, I. O. F., are asked to attend the meeting in the Woodmen's Hall, George street, tomorrow (Thursday) evening, at eight o'clock. Bro. W. Grabill, of Toronto, is in the city, and wishes to interview the majority of the members.

DOG LICENSES

Dog owners are hereby warned that they must get busy and take out their licenses and get tags, else police court prosecutions will result. May 1st is the limit allowed for these licenses to be secured, so that a word to the wise should suffice. The police are also after a good many stray dogs that are patrolling the streets and if the owners can not be found some practice for their automatics will ensue.

CHICKENS AT LARGE.

Complaints have been received by the police that some people have been allowed their chickens to roam off their premises and annoy neighbors. Action will be taken if the practice is not stopped.

A WAR PICTURE.

A stirring war picture produced by the London Film Company is to be exhibited at the Tiz-It Theatre Friday and Saturday. It features a gallant charge by the Scottish Highlanders, and is one of the most realistic and exciting pictures of war ever produced.

"Who is the happiest of men?
He who values the merits of others,
And in their pleasure takes joy e'en
As though 'twere his own."
—Goethe.

Won't you join this Happy Man's Club and make the children of Peterborough happy by helping to give them supervised playgrounds?

The proposal to loan vacant lots throughout the city, to those willing and anxious to lessen the cost of living by growing vegetables, etc., during the summer months, is most commendable, and we hope to see the movement become a big thing.

We must remember though, that even in this movement for good, we are lessening the play area at present open to our children. One has only to stroll by a few vacant lots during the summer days and evenings to see how they are appropriated by the young people from the smallest children to youths of sixteen.

But is it not quite possible to protect the interests of the children and young people, while also helping their elders to provide for the material needs of old and young?

Play is a natural instinct with all young [illegible] and the enthusiasm and energy displayed in all forms of play should be regarded as two most valuable qualities of youth.

Herein lies the great value of supervised playgrounds and recreation centres. In a supervised playground our children under sympathetic and trained leadership, will develop physically, mentally and morally.

Let us by all means investigate the benefits of supervised playgrounds and do it soon.

An Ottawa branch of the Ontario Association for the care of feeble-minded children has been formed by the local Council of Women of that city. Is Peterborough doing anything for the mentally deficient in our midst? These people are the children of the world and must be cared for.

A Spot Made Famous.

Near this particular spot the British, a mere handful, held out for twenty days, up to their waists in water and mud, in the most extreme part of the winter. They were shelled with shrapnel every day but the old spirit of the Briton won out. Last December the British regiment we relieved here, lost over four hundred men in a little over five hours, such was the fighting. All along the lines the British have certainly been doing great work.

A MESSAGE FROM THE RECTOR.

Words fail to express my sense of the loss sustained by St. John's congregation in the passing from us of Mrs. James Best. For over 25 years Mrs. Best has been a central figure in the congregation and one of its leading and most faithful workers, an earnest Sunday School teacher for many years, a leading worker and officer in the Woman's Auxiliary, a most helpful member of the Chancel Guild, and for many years the faithful choir mother—such are a few of Mrs. Best's gentle activities.

But quite as much shall we always think of her as a bright centre of cheer and kindness.

It is a great grief to me not to be able to be present to do honour to my old friend and most loyal parishioner. I am glad indeed to know that Mrs. Best has received constant strength, refreshment and spiritual training in the church which she served so well.

J. C. DAVIDSON,
St. John's Rectory.

OBITUARY

MRS. MARGARET BURSTOW.

Margaret Burstow, aged seventy-eight, a widowed lady residing on Prince street, died in the Nicholls Hospital last night. She had been ill but a short time. She was born in Bala, Wales, and came to this country early in life.

The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at two-thirty to Little Lake Cemetery.

DIED IN ROCHESTER.

Michael Hayes, a former resident of Otonabee, who moved to Rochester about two months ago, died there yesterday, and his body will arrive in Peterborough on the midnight train. He had been ill a long period and went to Rochester to secure medical treatment.

He was unmarried and leaves three brothers, John, of Peterborough, James, of Otonabee, and Richard, of Rochester.

The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 9:30 to Sacred Heart Church and St. Peter's Cemetery.

CHARLES SCOTT.

Mr. Charles Scott passed away at an early hour Friday morning, April 2nd, 1915. He was 75 years of age and was born in Ernesttown, but lived the most of his life in Odessa. A few years ago, his health failing him he came to Belleville to reside with his daughter Mrs. (Capt.) Fagan, George St. He was a blacksmith by trade and was well known in this city. He was a member of the Methodist Church. The funeral was largely attended, and was conducted by Rev. W. G. Clarke of the Tabernacle. The floral tributes were very beautiful. The bearers were J. Duesberry, P. Cote, T. Callaghan, E. Quinn, H. Smith, C. Bell. Death was caused by heart failure. He leaves to mourn his loss, a widow, one brother who resides in Odessa and one sister, Mrs. Spicer, of Adams, N.Y. Three daughters, Mrs. (Capt.) Fagan of this city and Mrs. Wellington Serlinshaw also of this city, and Mrs. Maynard Campbell of Sunburg and two sons, Miles of Ingleton, Alta., and William of Peterborough. — Belleville Ontario.

Ford Automobile Pictures At the Duffus Garage

The innovation of moving pictures at the Duffus Garage, showing the construction of the Ford car, proved very interesting to a large crowd of citizens last night.

Mr. Duffus feels well repaid for the trouble and expense which have been incurred to show these to the citizens of Peterborough. His show room, which consists of samples of Ford cars, supplies and accessories, has been beautifully decorated for the occasion. The garage in the rear of the show room, where the pictures are being put on, has been cleared of all cars, etc., and comfortably seated, and during the next three evenings a large crowd is expected to take advantage of seeing these interesting pictures.

While all are welcome at any time tomorrow (Thursday) evening is especially reserved for all automobile owners and their friends.

Very many ladies attended, which shows the deep interest they are taking in motoring.

Mr. Smith, the travelling representative for the Ford Motor Company is present and making acquaintance with many owners in the city.

The pictures will be put on each evening until Friday evening, and it is expected that in the meantime Mr. Fox, manager for the Ford Motor Company, Toronto, will spend a day in the city.

"THE WRONG GIRL."

"The Wrong Girl," a two-reel comedy film being shown at the Royal Theatre, is one of the greatest mirth provokers ever brought to this theatre. It describes the adventures of Wally Van, who disguises himself as a girl sought by a certain count for purposes of abduction. The count abducts the supposed girl, who puts up a fight of amazing vigor and escapes from him. Wally Van, who takes the leading role, is a comedian of the first water and stands third in a popularity voting contest now being conducted in the United States.

Mr. Jas. E. Parnell, a prominent fruit grower of the Niagara peninsula, appointed two years ago chief government fruit inspector for Western Canada, died at St. Catharines.

WAS BORN IN PETERBOROUGH

The new president of the Civil Service Federation which recently held its convention in Ottawa is R. S. White, collector of customs of the port of Montreal. He is a son of the late Hon. Thomas White and was born in Peterboro, Ont., and educated at the Hamilton grammar school and McGill University. He entered the service of the Bank of Montreal in 1872 and four years later became a member of the Montreal Gazette staff. He was connected with the management of that paper until 1895, when he received his present appointment as collector of customs of the port of Montreal. He was elected to the House of Commons for Cardwell in 1888 and re-elected in 1891. For several years he was president of the Junior Conservative Club of Montreal, and was also president of the Parliamentary Press Gallery at Ottawa for a number of years. He is the author of the annual Review of Trade of Montreal and is recognized as quite a Canadian authority on financial affairs in Canada, the Gazette, with which he was so long associated, being the recognized journalistic authority in trade matters pertaining to the Dominion.

Was a Rebel of '38.

The death at Watertown, N.Y., of N. H. Truax, aged 98, recalls the famous battle of the windmill, fought at Prescott, Ont., in 1838, in which he was the sole surviving participant. Truax was only 20 years of age when he joined the "patriot" cause. The invasion of Canada was a total failure. He made his escape back to the United States.

Kipling's Scots Vernacular.

The Scots (Scottish or Scotch) of "McAndrew's Hymn" is so accurate that one is surprised to find Mr. Kipling representing Scotch soldiers as saying "mon." "Mon" is, of course, the conventional symbol of what a Scot utters for the word "man," but I am assured that no Scot says "mon," though there are in the north several variations of the accepted English pronunciation. Some Scots say "maun," and others "mahn." "Mon" is reserved for pantomimes and pleasantries in Punch.—London Chronicle.

ALL ABOARD FOR FRISCO VISIT THE WORLD'S FAIR AT EXPENSE OF REVIEW

An Ideal Trip Has Been Arranged for the Young Women of Peterborough and District Who Collect Subscriptions --- Peterborough to San Francisco Returning Through the Canadian West---Twenty-one Days of Travel and Enjoyment

California this year is the centre of world-wide attraction. There the greatest engineering work will be celebrated by the greatest Exposition the world has ever known — the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

This Exposition will not only portray the beauties of knowledge and genius in the way of beautiful buildings, plants, etc., but will also be a great factor in an educational way. People representing practically all nations of earth will be there, and you will be brought face to face with these people.

You want to go to the Exposition, don't you? Well, then, The Review offers you the opportunity to go without a cent of cost to yourself. In other words, The Review says, "Come with me, and leave your purse at home." Four young ladies will visit the World's Fair at the expense of The Review. The trip has been all arranged at great cost, and after you have visited the Exposition, you will return home through the Canadian Northwest. Think of the glories of this splendid trip. You will visit enterprising cities of the West that are monuments to the enterprise and ability of Canada's nation-builders. The vast fertile stretches of the "Granary of the Empire," the inspiring scenery of the Rockies, the sunlit plains of British Columbia, the Pacific Ocean trip; — and you have the opportunity to see it all. The invitation is open to all young ladies, married or single, of good reputation, in Peterborough and district. Will you join in this great campaign and enjoy this trip at the expense of The Review?

How to Win.

The advertisement in the paper today gives all necessary information regarding this big contest. Votes are allowed on all subscriptions to the paper, and the candidates who secure the most will be the fortunate winners. A vote coupon will appear in each issue of the paper, and subscribers can help their favorites by sending them in to the contest office. The nomination blank is good for 5,000 votes, but only one will be counted for each contestant. A one year subscription to The Daily Review gives 4,000 votes, and a two-year subscription 12,000 votes. Votes are also given on subscriptions to the Weekly Review. Votes are given on old and new subscriptions alike. The Review has printed a number of receipt books to be used by the candidates, and the young ladies who want to join in this great contest should do so now. Send in your name at once, or, better still, call and talk it all over with the contest manager. Do it now—an early start means much.

Something About the Exposition.

The site of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition is described as wonderfully well chosen for natural beauty and accessibility and suitability for the purpose.

Imagine an amphtheatre some two miles long and about one-half mile wide, backed by low hills and fronting for its entire length on the blue waters of the famous San Francisco Bay. Across a mile or more of smiling blue water rises the picturesque Marin hills topped by cloud-capped Mount Tamalpais. Beyond to the west, is the famous Golden Gate. Beyond that the broad Pacific.

ROD. CAMERON WINS THE PONY

Secured Highest Number of Votes in Contest Just Closed

Roderick Cameron, son of Mrs. Alfred J. Cameron, 708 Stewart St., is the winner of the Dunlap pony and outfit.

The following statement has been given out:

As official judge in the counting of the ballots for the Pony Contest, I find that while there are a few ballots of the smaller denominations yet to be counted, I can declare that the majority of votes will undoutedly be in favor of Rod. Cameron. The counting has been a much greater task than I had anticipated, and knowing that the interested ones will be anxious, I make the above statement. The total count and result of my audit of the merchants' books will be made public in a day or two.

FIVE YEARS IN THE PEN

Self-Confessed Crooks Who Stole From Store Are Sentenced to Kingston

One Blames Love of Liquor as Cause of His Downfall

David Rousselle and Frederick Mitchell, two men arrested for burglarizing Zacks Bros'. store and Nixon's liquor shop, were sent down to Kingston penitentiary for five-year terms, today, by Police Magistrate Dumble.

Rousselle took his sentence hard, while Mitchell also received a considerable jolt, judging from the expression which came over his features. It was not so much the offence itself which caused so stiff a sentence as the damaging records of both prisoners, which told heavily against them. Rousselle, a tall French Canadian, with a pronounced French accent, gave every indication of being a clever, wily and dangerous criminal and had admitted, the police say, to being a friend of Alphonse Foucault, the man who murdered a constable and who is still at large. Rousselle's record is as follows: Arrested April 30, 1903, for theft, sentenced to six months; arrested November 16, 1908, on suspicion of theft, sentence suspended; arrested June 9th, 1909, sentence suspended providing he left the city; arrested at Fort William for shopbreaking, sentenced to eighteen months; arrested at Sudbury for shopbreaking; sentenced to twelve months.

Escaped Prison.

Mitchell's record is just as bad, and he is still wanted for breaking from Central Prison. Both have followed a criminal career and have travelled all over the country. Mitchell has received leniency at the hands of the courts in the way of suspended sentences. He was arrested in Ottawa for housebreaking and sentence was suspended. He was arrested on a similar charge later in Ottawa and sentence suspended, and still a third time, on May 17th, for housebreaking again, he was given six months.

Broke Parole.

He broke his parole and escaped. On Oct. 23rd he was sent down for two years, but again escaped before the expiration of his term. On Dec. 5th, 1913, he got two years in the Ontario Reformatory, but escaped on March 15th this year. The superintendent of the Ontario Reformatory in a letter to Chief Thompson says that Mitchell abused kindness and deliberately entered a life of crime. He was also convicted in Calgary for housebreaking.

Before the cases of the two prisoners came up this morning, Rousselle asked permission to talk with Adjutant McElhiney privately. The outcome was that when he came back into court he asked permission to enter the stand and make a statement. He put in a plea of guilty of stealing one suit and one raincoat. Upon entering the stand he had an explanation to make.

Booze the Cause.

"I am guilty, your Worship," he said, "and booze is the cause. I was almost in the blues. Only for that I wouldn't be here now. I have done some good in the world in my life. I went through the South African war. I propose to make a better future. I hope you will be lenient. I will cut out this life and leave whiskey alone, but I wish you would be lenient this time."

Prosecutor Hatton then read his record and questioned Rousselle as to its accuracy. He admitted it all somewhat reluctantly and in low voice. Rousselle denied ever having

Drink Question In Great Britain

No Settlement Expected Till Parliament Meets.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, April 8.—The cabinet having failed to come to a decision on the drink question, no settlement is expected until Parliament meets next week. The impression is growing that the government will content itself with bringing in a measure prohibiting the sale of spirits.

Conservative leaders are believed, already, to have given privately their assent to whatever action may be taken, provided no measure for total prohibition be considered at this time.

SON ACCUSED OF FATHER'S DEATH

Aged Parent Was Fastened in Cow Stable

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Gladstone, Man., April 8. — Henry Dulkey, a farmer near here, is held for trial at Portage la Prairie, for the death of his aged father, eighty-nine, who it transpired at the coroner's inquest, was fastened in a cow stable and died from neglect.

LAD KILLED

Rifle Was Accidentally Discharged

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, April 8.—While shooting yesterday with a young companion, Cecil Glass, Richmond Hill, aged thirteen, received a bullet in the head from the accidental discharge of his twenty-twe-calibre rifle and died early this morning.

CONFIRMATION AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH

Confirmation will be held in All Saints' church next Sunday evening, with Bishop Reeve of Toronto, officiating. The rector has a large class of candidates.

BILL IS WITHDRAWN.

Ottawa, April 8.—In the Commons yesterday the bill to incorporate the Catholic Truth Society, over whose title of "Catholic" there was strong objection in committee, was withdrawn. The private bills committee wanted it called "Roman Catholic."

MAINTAIN OUR GAINS

French Efforts Continue With Great Activity

CAPTURE TRENCH IN BRULE FOREST

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Paris, April 8.—(The afternoon's official statement)—In Belgium, the day was marked by artillery engagements.

In the valley of Aisne and district to the east of Rheims, our efforts in spite of abnormally bad weather continue with great activity and we have maintained our gains between the Meuse and Moselle in their entirety while at the same time, we are proceeding to make further progress.

In Brule forest we captured a German trench, at the same time, taking a large number of prisoners on this section of the front.

Rains of the last few days have soaked through the clay soil of the Woevre to great depths rendering difficult movements of artillery and preventing the explosion of shells.

Our troops have consolidated progress made on previous days.

We maintained all our advance in spite of counter-attacks of extraordinary violence.

At Les Eparges, especially the last German counter attack was carried out by a regiment and a half, and was completely repulsed. The enemy sustained enormous losses. Corpses of their men covered the field. Three hundred men who momentarily were able to advance from a German position were mowed down by our machine guns. Not one of them escaped.

BERLIN STATEMENT.

Berlin, April 8. — German army headquarters gives out the following: Fghting between the Meuse and Moselle continued yesterday. French attacks resulted in failure in the Wovre district, on the heights of the Combres, near the Forest of Selouse, north of St. Mihiel, in Ailly forest, near the forest of Apremont, to the north of Flirey and in the Forest of Lepretre.

French losses on the entire front again were enormous without obtaining the slightest success.

On the eastern front there have been no developments.

BOMBS KILL WOMEN AND CHILDREN

Forty-Eight Others Injured When Austrian Aviators Attack Town

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 8. — Twelve women and children were killed and forty-eight others injured by bombs droped by Austrian aviators in the market place at Podgoritza, Montenegro, yesterday afternoon, according to a Cettinje despatch to the Havas agency.

Many buildings were destroyed by seven bombs dropped.

PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, APRIL 8, 1915

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION LABEL PETERBOROUGH

WILL THE MAYOR LEAD THE WAY?

A CITIZEN of this city, who owns considerable property here, has an idea that Peterborough could be beautified and private property increased in value by a comprehensive scheme of tree-planting. His idea is that the City Council should contract for a number of trees, hire men to do planting, and plant them where property holders desire them, and then charge the owner for the work of planting, or a proportion of it. The plan has this advantage, that great savings in the cost of trees and planting could be made by adopting some organized plan like this.

There is much popularity and public thanks coming to the alderman or citizen who succeeds in launching some settled plan for beautifying this city. Peterborough has some wonderful resources in this regard that have not yet been developed. It has one of the most beautiful rivers in Canada running through it, yet no attempt has been made to utilize the Otonabee for beautifying the city. The banks of a river lend themselves easily to this purpose, as Ottawa well knew when the banks of the Rideau were utilized for several miles of its famous driveway. Peterborough has not only neglected this opportunity, but has degraded and spoiled the banks of the Otonabee with tin shacks and railway sidings!

But that is only part of a general plan. Tree-planting is another part. Improvement of private property, such as the planting of flowers, painting where necessary, removal of old sheds that are of no use, fixing fences, is another part. What is wanted is some organized plan whereby a general scheme for improving and beautifying the city will be laid down, and on these lines a certain amount of work or development done each year.

The City Council need not fear the expense. It will cost money, but the citizens, particularly the property holders, will support it, because, while it will cost money, it will improve each man's property. A fine elm or maple tree on a man's lot is worth fifty or a hundred dollars to it. A general improvement in property, increasing its value, would permit an increased assessment, although this should not be done except in case of necessity, or where obviously needed. But, at any rate, any feasible and comprehensive plan will have the support of the press and citizens.

Everybody in this city is desirous to see it grow and improve and become a desirable place to reside in and to visit. Placed at the gateway to the Kawartha Lakes region, Peterborough should be a beautiful city if it is to take advantage of its opportunities and location. Improvements are being made, but they are haphazard and are not as great as they could be. If the whole city was enlisted in a general improvement scheme, in which some prominent citizen led the way, or preferably Mayor Buller, it would surprise everybody to see the change that would be brought about within a very short time.

SAVE THE PENNIES.

WHEN a number of school teachers were being shown over the estate of John D. Rockefeller, they had the pleasure of an interview with the famous American Croesus. Naturally the conversation drifted to money matters. We may say there were no teachers from Peterborough there at this particular time, so far as we have been able to find out, but that would not alter the case. These teachers were human, and showed a lively interest in everytihng, until the matter of money was touched upon. They then became doubly interested. Possibly they thought John D. would hand each of them a little scrap of paper—possibly a thousand-dollar bill—a cheque would have been just as acceptable—or the great magnate might have given them a tip that would be worth a small fortune. John D. didn't, however, but he gave them some advice free of charge. He told them to save their pennies.

The advice was good, and should be held in greater respect than it is. Too many people do not want to earn or save a competence. They want it given them. They would be like a western man of wealth who died worth $100,000. In writing his obituary the versatile reporter stated that he started in life with fifty cents, and owed the balance of his fortune to thrift and industry and to the kindness of an old uncle who died, bequeathing him $99,999.50. Most everybody could be wealthy by that process. The best way is to save part of that which is being earned now—your pennies, as John D. advises.

THREE STRIPES FOR R. BOONE.

THE NEWS that Mr. R. Boone has received three stripes for conspicuous gallantry in working his battery will be a pleasure to the citizens of Peterborough. Mr. Boone was employed when in Peterborough in the Canadian General Electric Company, and was an enthusiastic tennis player. He made many friends here who will be highly pleased at his success. He was among the first to go to the front from this city, and has the best wishes of all for a continuance of the marked success he has received.

CANADA AT SAN FRANCISCO.

THE CANADIAN BUILDING and the Canadian Exhibit at the Panama Exposition at San Francisco is said by American newspapers to be the best thing of the whole exhibition. Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture in the Borden Government, naturally comes in for a great deal of praise. It is well that Canada did put her best foot foremost on this occasion, not only because we desire to show our goodwill, but for Canada's own sake as well. To do what we are doing, with some little difficulty in equipment it is true, for the Empire in Europe, and at the same time in the arts of peace at 'Frisco, is not a bad year's record.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

IF ANY MAN is out of work and wants work, the office opened under the auspices of the Patriotism and Production campaign of the Dominion Government for supplying jobs should be the means of helping a great many men. Mr. Hall, who is starting the office here, was in Hamilton two or three days, and succeeded in placing forty men. Any able-bodied man out of work is eligible.

THERE IS this to be said in favour of Jess Willard — in his fight with Johnson, he was the whole works — and he and Johnson cornered all the glory and notoriety from the fight. Over in France a man could put ten brawny Germans to sleep and not even get in the newspapers.

THERE'S a store on Hunter street with black chickens in the window. There is also a chicken's nest with brown and white eggs in it. We presume the reason for this is to prove that the chickens laid the eggs very recently, but does it?

THEY SAY Austrians, particularly those in Vienna, are starving. This should not be. All they want is some bright young fellow to advise them to make Buckowina cakes or use Vienna loaf.

THE ATTEMPT of the Liberals at Ottawa in forcing an election, in fanning the bilingual question, and in calling for a Canadian navy, may be an effort to surpass the British aviation corps.

THE LIBERAL SENATE destroyed three Canadian first line battleships, and now Sir Wilfrid wants to start a Canadian navy, and the Senate may be relied on to sink it, too.

THE UNITED STATES takes as much interest in a prize fight as the rest of the world does in war. "To what base uses may we return, Horatio."

The War Prisoner's Lot in Great Britain.

(New York Sun.)

Toward the end of November of last year the German Foreign Office made an inquiry, through Ambassador Page, about the treatment prisoners of war and interned civilians receved in British camps. A Parliamentary White Paper recently issued contains the information, which was supplied by Sir Edward Grey. It will be a surprise to those who associate prisoners of war with more or less hardship and neglect to learn that German army and navy officers in England are provided not only with comfortable quarters in barracks and country houses, but, according to rank, with half the pay of British officers. Out of the money given them it is expected that they will purchase clothing and such extras as they desire. Medical attention and medicines are free. The officers live apart from their men. Servants are found for the officers among the prisoners of war in the ranks. In certain cases officials are interned in officers' quarters, and have the same accommodations, but receive no money for clothing and extras. No work of any kind is offered these first-class prisoners or required of them.

The German soldiers are housed during the winter in well-heated and lighted barracks and other buildings, also in nine merchant steamships leased from private owners. By the middle of April all these prisoners will be accommodated on shore. They, of course, have no expenses, and clothing is found for them. When they work, it is for "pay at English (army) rates," and canteens where they can buy tobacco, fruit and other minor luxuries with their earnings are provided. In all respects, except liberty leave, they receive the same treatment as British soldiers in barracks and camp. . . . All prisoners are encouraged to organize their own entertainments, amusements and athletic exercises, and co-operation from the outside is welcomed. Gifts, subject to inspection, are permitted. Every prisoner may write two letters of two pages (censored) a week. Letters to prisoners, in either German or English, are regularly delivered after passing under the censor's eye.

It will be seen that if the camps are properly managed the lot of German prisoners in England must at least be endurable. They would be envied by many a poor devil in the trenches who has had his fill of fighting. If invention has made wars more horrible, the conditions of prisoners' camps have vastly improved, in England, and, it is to be presumed, on the Continent, outside of impoverished and backward Servia and Turkey.

The English Way.

(London Times, March 8.)

Judgment was given at West London police court yesterday in the case in which Messrs. Lyons & Co., of Cadby Hall, Kensington, were summoned at the instance of the Hammersmith borough council, the allegation being that meat which had been sent to the White City for troops quartered there was bad. Mr. Fordham, the magistrate, fined the firm £50, with £70 costs. There were three summonses, all relating to 12 cwt. of meat seized on December 3rd by Dr. Howell, medical officer of health for Hammersmith, and after having been taken before the magistrate condemned as unfit for human consumption.

More Sunday Criticism.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Evangelist Billy Sunday made it a condition of his Paterson, N. J., contract that all Protestant churches in the city must be closed while his evangelistic campaign is on. When petitioned to permit Easter services in these churches he at first resolutely refused to grant permission, but weakened and withdrew his refusal when he learned that the collections at the Easter morning services were needed to meet the expenses of his campaign. "Business is business" in evangelism as in recognized commercial activities.

GLADYS SEWARD RECITAL.

Editor, Review.

Dear Sir,—May I, through the columns of your valuable paper, appeal to music lovers and public spirited citizens of Peterborough for a large attendance at the Gladys Seward recital tomorrow evening. Gladys Seward was born in Peterborough and comes back home to her native town, having won praise from some of the greatest musicians of the world and having made a name for herself in several of the largest cities in Europe. Let Peterborough show tomorrow that it is proud of this fair daughter.

Yours truly,
MUSIC LOVER.

STOP SMOKING.

Editor Review,

Sir,—One of your yesterday's correspondents in advocating the curtailment of strong drink, incidentally remarked upon what is of far more importance to women and non-smokers. "And why not stop smoking in public—it is worse than dry sweeping." In walking along our public thoroughfares, as is the privilege of all pedestrians, nothing is more nauseating to the non-smoker and it is well for the nation that they are on the increase, than to be obliged to breathe into our lungs the poisonous fumes of such rank stuff. Even if you can escape by a spurt, it is only to land where you frequently fare worse. In other public places we fare similarly. The law provides that no one shall cause a public nuisance, even on his own premises. It would therefore be an easy matter for our authorities with their large staff of police to enforce the law.

Yours, etc.,
ANTI-NUISANCE.

Britain To Reply To Note.

LONDON, April 8.—Although the American note concerning the plan of the allies for cutting off trade to and from Germany does not ask specifically for a reply, an answer will be sent by the Foreign Office in the near future. The note invites further discussion of several points concerning which the rights of neutral commerce are not fully defined, and these points will be taken up by the British Government in its communication. This reply probably will be made upon the return of the Foreign Minister, Sir Edward Grey, in about two weeks.

Provincial House Closes To-day.

TORONTO, April 8.—The Ontario Legislature prorogues to-day. Lieut.-Governor Hendrie, accompanied by a small retinue, will enter the Legislative Chamber, and from the Speaker's dias will grant his sanction to the 100 odd bills which enter this year on the statute books of the province. The ceremony will be purely formal, and the only item of business will be the submission of the printing committee's report, which was unusually delayed.

It is not expected that much social atmosphere will be attained, the pomp which formerly attended this custom having gradually dwindled of recent years.

Sweden Angered by Seizure.

STOCKHOLM, April 8.—The seizure by the Germans of the Swedish steamer England is expected by ship-owners to meet with greater activity by the Government in defence of Swedish rights, particularly since the vessel belongs to Naval Minister Bronstroem. Urgent representations have been made to Germany as to the desirability of releasing the vessel. The newspapers express indignation over what they term "This inexplicable blockade of a neutral country."

More Successes For Botha.

CAPE TOWN, Union of South Africa, April 8.—It was announced officially here yesterday that troops of the Union have occupied without opposition the railway stations at Kalkfontein and Kanus, German South-west Africa. This follows the capture of Warmbad, 20 miles north of the Orange river, which was announced yesterday.

FRUIT GROWING IN ONTARIO.

Ontario orchardists are quite hopeful of solving the question of a possible over-production, judging by the prevailing tone of the discussion upon that subject as given in the forty-sixth annual report of the Fruit Growers' Association of Ontario, just issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture, a copy of which may be had free upon application.

The matter of marketing fruit, both by co-operative associations and the more common method of commission men and retailers, is also very fully dealt with in the report, and considerable information is given regarding the latest methods of precooling and transportation.

In addition practical hints are given concerning the selection of nursery stock for orchards, and the spring and fall planting of fruit trees—the latter mode is increasing in favor—together with considerable other matter of a cultural nature. Results of experiments with peach canker are also presented.

Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

CHARGE IT TO THE WEATHER

THE silly season is at hand,
The time for catching fish,
And it's legitimate to say
Most anything you wish.
To swallow every claim set forth
There always will be men,
And that explains why some folks think
That Jeff will fight again.

When he was gently laid away
At Reno by the spade
That was supposed for Mr. Jeff
To end the fighting trade,
But now the silly season comes
And leads his friends to state
That he will don the boxing gloves
For one more round with fate.

Vain hope, he never will come back,
This [illegible] in the [illegible],
And if we might express it so
His last fight was his last
Till water gurgles up the hill,
Till debt will pay itself,
The white but battered fighting hulk
Will still adorn the shelf.

Some other fighter will arise
To toy with Johnson's frame,
To be the best that ever was
In that discounted game,
And, thinking what he did to Jeff,
To do the same to him,
To make the world to Jack look dark,
But it will not be Jim.

Expert Advice.

"I have a regular white elephant on my hands."

"Mercy!"

"Yes. Can you advise me?"

"Certainly. Employ an Indian mahout with a white turban on his head to drive the elephant off."

Not Reversible.

"Thinking is everything," said the man with a message. "I can think myself into any sphere or position I may desire or I can think myself wherever I want to be."

"Could you think yourself in jail?" asked the credulous one.

"Undoubtedly, if I cared for such a thing."

"I bet you couldn't think yourself out."

Not Long.

"Does he drink?"

"Yes; he is a regular drinker."

"I wonder how long it will be?"

"How long what will be?"

"Before he will be irregular."

Watch Him.

The frosty days and nights have come,
The saddest of the season.
The plumber comes around to plumb
And charges out of reason.

Explained.

"How do people fall in love?"

"Any old way."

"And how do they get out of it?"

"Some of them hire an expensive lawyer to get them out."

Query.

"She keeps him under her thumb."

"Does she?"

"That's what they say."

"I wonder where she keeps her thumb."

Quite So.

"Isn't the country romantic?"

"That depends."

"Upon what?"

"Whether you have to live in it or not."

More Conventional.

"He swears by his mother-in-law."

"It is different with Bronson."

"In what way?"

"He swears at his."

Safe So Far.

"Is he an honest man?"

"Well, he has never been investigated."

A MYSTERY SOLVED

By SARAH BAXTER.

Mathewson was standing during a social function before a mantel with his thumbs in his waistcoat pockets and his legs at an angle of about ten degrees gaping at the crowds of men and women passing and repassing. He had tired of the disconnected, choppy, aimless conversation which is the only possible kind in such places and stood alone rather than endure any more of it. But he did not tire of watching others who were hunting for something to say to one another that would fit in with a possible interruption at any moment.

Presently turning, there stood a lady beside him, evidently passing the time discontentedly like. She was about twenty-four years of age and at least, so far as her appearance was concerned, very attractive.

Suddenly the lady put her hand on his arm and said as familiarly as if she had known him: "It is stifling in here. I must get some air."

Mathewson had met the surprise of his life. What was her object in appropriating him thus he could not divine, but he was not minded to throw a straw in the way of anything she might intend. Being a man of the world, a well bred man, a considerate man, he manifested no surprise; neither did he presume upon an acquaintance that was not his.

"You are quite right about the air in there being stifling," he said. "I was thinking of getting out of it myself."

This commonplace remark seemed to put the lady at her ease, and, guiding her companion into a cozy nook where they were not likely to be interrupted, she conversed not in the bits of nothing to be expected, but gradually led the way into topics of interest.

Mathewson spent a charming half hour, expecting the while that the lady before parting with him would make known her reason for having appropriated him. But presently an old lady came and remarked, "I have been looking everywhere for you," and the younger woman, arising, nodded to Mathewson, and the two ladies walked away together.

Later Mathewson pointed out the lady who had appropriated him, asking who she was, and was told that she was a Mrs. Olcott. Having expressed disappointment, his companion remarked:

"She's a missus, but not married. She's a divorcee."

"Do you know her?" asked Mathewson.

"I do."

"Then introduce me."

There was no opportunity at the time, for the lady, together with the elderly woman who had joined her, was going upstairs preparatory to leaving the house.

A few days later Mathewson met Mrs. Olcott at another function. She passed him in company with others but did not look at him. At this he was not surprised. Having an appointment to call upon her the next evening with the friend who was to introduce him, he found her kindly disposed; but, though he sat with her for some time, she made no mention of the matter of her appropriation of him. She discussed any subject that Mathewson proposed or toward which he led the way; but, although he several times gave her an opportunity to explain why she had used him, she refrained from an explanation.

Whether it was the lady's personality or the mystery attending their first meeting, it was not long before he was enthralled. She accepted his attentions not with the fickleness of a young girl, but with the experience of one who had been married. Mathewson, at first having a knowledge that she had been a wife, was somewhat chary of falling in love with her, for he argued that if one man could not live with her possibly another might find it difficult. But after awhile he cast precaution to the winds, threw up his hands and was ready to marry her if she were a devil in human shape.

There is but one ending to a story wherein its hero is madly in love. He proposes and is either accepted or rejected. If he is rejected the story ends nowhere; if accepted, in marriage. Mathewson was accepted.

"And now," he said to his fiancee, "I suppose it is in order for me to ask why you saw fit on a certain evening when you and I stood side by side, utter strangers, to put your hand on my arm and lead me away as if we were acquainted."

"I fear to tell you," she replied.

"Why?"

"I did it to avoid meeting some one. You may think the day may come when I will put my hand on some other man's arm to avoid you."

"Please cease to speak in riddles."

"While I stood beside you I saw two men elbowing their way through the crowd making toward me. It was evident that one was bringing the other to introduce to me. This other I knew only too well, though his friend was not aware that I did. To have him thus presented to me in a room where we were both well known would have been a terrible contretemps. I avoided it by walking away with you."

"I see," said Mathewson, "but pardon my curiosity—we men are sometimes curious as well as you women—why were you so averse to meeting this man?"

"Because he had been my husband."

Woman's World

Mrs. Blatch Thinks Women Are Born Diplomats.

MRS. HARRIOT STANTON BLATCH.

Mrs. Harriot Stanton Blatch made a ringing speech at Cooper Union, in New York, when 5,000 women met to protest against war. Her words were rewarded again and again with applause, but these brought forth tumult: "Men don't go into powder magazines carrying lighted matches, because they know the nature of powder. But they don't know human nature.

"All the diplomatic posts of the world should be filled with women because they are natural diplomats. The reason for their diplomacy is that they know human nature and, knowing it, have the grace and patience to handle it. Men are blind on the human nature side. When they attempt to handle questions involving men they handle them as they would cattle—by force or terror. With women they have a softer hand, though that is under protest. It is a concession to what men have long tolerated, though with a poor grace, woman's 'touchiness.'

"Women provide the curves of human nature, men the angles, and it is a curious comment that the curves understand the angles, but to the angles the curves remain to the last a mystery. Men have a glimmering sense of this extra knowledge of women, but not one of them has been clever enough or gallant enough to give it its right name. They have talked of women's intuition, their strange, half childlike, half animal scent of the true character, but not once have they applied the term that fits that rare and needful character. The word is 'penetration.'

"A man and woman stand beside the stream of human nature. Man sees the bright surface of it. He notes the swiftness or slowness of its current. A woman sees the mud and the pebbles at the bottom."

Take Care of Shoes.

The care of the shoes is an absolute necessity with the new fashion of short dresses. The laced shoe has come in again for both morning and afternoon wear, though the type varies.

For morning the vamp has a finish of dull tan or black leather, with a light fawn or tan top. For afternoon the vamp is of patent leather and the top is of paler shade, is trimmed with a bit of the patent leather and is altogether a more decorative type of boot.

Cleaning Marble.

Marble is cleaned as follows: Pound together two ounces of washing soda, an ounce of powdered pumice stone and an ounce of whiting. Sift them through muslin. Make these ingredients into a cream with sufficient boiling water. Apply thickly with a brush, allow to dry, then wash off with hot water, dry and rub up with a soft cloth. All porcelain yellowed with iron sediment may be cleaned with muriatic acid.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 7.—Liverpool market was fairly steady this morning, which caused a firmer opening here. Winnipeg opened unchanged to ⅜c higher, but eased off again on report of rain in the districts which were previously reported dry in the winter wheat belt and the United States Government report, which was construed as somewhat bearish. The demand for cash wheat was less urgent than for some days past, but offerings were very light of spot stuff, which were readily absorbed.

Total inspections on Tuesday were 367 cars, as against 694 last year, and in sight today were 240 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1⅝c to 2c lower; cash, 1⅝c lower; oats, ⅛c to ¼c lower, and flax, 1c to 1¼c.

What Are Good Manners?

Many definitions have been given from time to time, but one of the best is the sort of manners which are guided by kindness and consideration for others. If you keep this in mind you need not be afraid of criticism. If you let your actions be guided by motives of kindness, if you consider others before yourself, you are bound to do the right thing—which is the kind thing—at the right time.

Of course there are various forms in social usage which can only be acquired by association with refined persons, but if this is denied one the seeker after good manners cannot go very far astray if he or she remembers to let kindness and consideration rule.

In these days when the average person is "out for himself," when selfishness is the predominant note of social and business intercourse, the man or woman who thinks of others and acts according to their wishes will soon be marked for a kindliness of manner which cannot be equaled by those who have been called to higher places in life.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 7.—At the C.P.R. live stock market a very limited supply of cattle was offered, but demand was very backward and trade in consequence was dull. Prices showed no important change, however. There were no choice steers on the market, but a few odd sales of good steers were made at $7.50 to $7.75, and the lower grades from that down to $5 to $5.50, while cows brought from $4.75 to $6.75, and bulls from $5.50 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

Demand for calves was fairly good and sales were made at from $2.50 to $10 each as to size and quality. A few spring lambs sold at $2.50 to $5 each. Yearling lambs were scarce and firm at $8.50 to $9, and ewes at $5 to $6 per cwt.

The tone of the market for hogs is very firm, but prices show no further change. Supplies were small but ample to fill all immediate requirements, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.30 to $9.60 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Cattle—Receipts, 12,000; market strong. Beeves, $6 to $8.90; western steers, $5.65 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.90; calves, $6 to $8.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 22,000; market steady; light, $6.65 to $6.95; mixed, $6.60 to $6.92½; heavy, $6.45 to $6.90; rough, $6.40 to $6.65; pigs, $5.50 to $6.50; bulk of sales, $6.80 to $6.90.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 15,000; market firm; native, $7.40 to $8.50; lambs, native, $7.90 to $10.50.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C. — "For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish." — Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

A MYSTERY SOLVED

By SARAH BAXTER.

Mathewson was standing during a social function before a mantel with his thumbs in his waistcoat pockets and his legs at an angle of about ten degrees gaping at the crowds of men and women passing and repassing. He had tired of the disconnected, choppy, aimless conversation which is the only possible kind in such places and stood alone rather than endure any more of it. But he did not tire of watching others who were hunting for something to say to one another that would fit in with a possible interruption at any moment.

They have talked of women's intuition, their strange, half childlike, half animal scent of the true character, but not once have they applied the term that fits that rare and needful character. The word is 'penetration.'

"A man and woman stand beside the stream of human nature. Man sees the bright surface of it. He notes the swiftness or slowness of its current. A woman sees the mud and the pebbles at the bottom."

Take Care of Shoes.

The care of the shoes is an absolute necessity with the new fashion of short dresses. The laced shoe has come in again for both morning and afternoon wear, though the type varies.

For morning the vamp has a finish of dull tan or black leather, with a light fawn or tan top. For afternoon the vamp is of patent leather and the top is of paler shade, is trimmed with a bit of the patent leather and is altogether a more decorative type of boot.

Cleaning Marble.

Marble is cleaned as follows: Pound together two ounces of washing soda, an ounce of powdered pumice stone and an ounce of whiting. Sift them through muslin. Make these ingredients into a cream with sufficient boiling water. Apply thickly with a brush, allow to dry, then wash off with hot water, dry and rub up with a soft cloth. All porcelain yellowed with iron sediment may be cleaned with muriatic acid.

OWES HER LIFE TO "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Cured Both Stomach Trouble and Headaches

PALMERSTON, ONT., JUNE 20th. 1913.

"I really believe that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives". Ever since childhood, I have been under the care of physicians and have been paying doctor's bills. I was so sick and worn out that people on the street often asked me if I thought I could get along without help. The same old Stomach Trouble and distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Sometime ago, I got a box of "Fruit-a-tives" and the first box did me good. My husband was delighted and advised a continuation of their use.

Today, I am feeling fine, and a physician meeting me on the street, noticed my improved appearance and asked the reason. I replied, "I am taking Fruit-a-tives". He said, "Well, if Fruit-a-tives are making you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can".

MRS. H. S. WILLIAMS.

"Fruit-a-tives" are sold by all dealers at 50c. a box. 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 7.—Liverpool market was fairly steady this morning, which caused a firmer opening here. Winnipeg opened unchanged to ⅜c higher, but eased off again on report of rain in the districts which were previously reported dry in the winter wheat belt and the United States Government report, which was construed as somewhat bearish. The demand for cash wheat was less urgent than for some days past, but offerings were very light of spot stuff, which were readily absorbed.

Total inspections on Tuesday were 367 cars, as against 694 last year, and in sight today were 240 cars.

Wheat futures closed 1⅝c to 2c lower; cash, 1⅝c lower; oats, ⅛c to ¼c lower, and flax, 1c to 1¼c.

What Are Good Manners?

Many definitions have been given from time to time, but one of the best is the sort of manners which are guided by kindness and consideration for others. If you keep this in mind you need not be afraid of criticism. If you let your actions be guided by motives of kindness, if you consider others before yourself, you are bound to do the right thing—which is the kind thing—at the right time.

Of course there are various forms in social usage which can only be acquired by association with refined persons, but if this is denied one the seeker after good manners cannot go very far astray if he or she remembers to let kindness and consideration rule.

In these days when the average person is "out for himself," when selfishness is the predominant note of social and business intercourse, the man or woman who thinks of others and acts according to their wishes will soon be marked for a kindliness of manner which cannot be equaled by those who have been called to higher places in life.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, April 7.—At the C.P.R. live stock market a very limited supply of cattle was offered, but demand was very backward and trade in consequence was dull. Prices showed no important change, however. There were no choice steers on the market, but a few odd sales of good steers were made at $7.50 to $7.75, and the lower grades from that down to $5 to $5.50, while cows brought from $4.75 to $6.75, and bulls from $5.50 to $6.50 per 100 pounds.

Demand for calves was fairly good and sales were made at from $2.50 to $10 each as to size and quality. A few spring lambs sold at $2.50 to $5 each. Yearling lambs were scarce and firm at $8.50 to $9, and ewes at $5 to $6 per cwt.

The tone of the market for hogs is very firm, but prices show no further change. Supplies were small but ample to fill all immediate requirements, and sales of selected lots were made at $9.30 to $9.60 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 7.—Cattle—Receipts, 12,000; market strong. Beeves, $6 to $8.90; western steers, $5.65 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.90; calves, $6 to $8.75.

CRITICAL TIME OF WOMAN'S LIFE

From 40 to 50 Years of Age. How It May Be Passed in Safety.

So. Wellington, B.C.—"For a year during the Change of Life I was all run down. I was really too weak to walk and was very despondent and thought I was going to die, but after taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier my health and strength returned. I am very thankful to you and praise your medicine. I have advised several women who suffered as I did to try your remedies. You may publish this if you wish."—Mrs. DAVID R. MORRIS, South Wellington, Vancouver Island, B. C.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. We know of no other medicine which has such a record of success as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For more than 30 years it has been the standard remedy for woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and we believe it is unequalled for women during the period of change of life.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

"Feminine gender," was the answer.

"No, no," said the teacher. "It is neuter gender."

"Well, it ought to be feminine," replied Harry, "because it repeats everything it is told."—Chicago News.

Modest Request.

A rather fussy man traveling from New York to Philadelphia had been much annoyed by his opposite companion, a tall, lanky fellow whose bony knees troubled him not a little. There was a stop of several minutes at Trenton, and the tall traveler rose from his seat and said with a yawn, "I guess I'll get out and stretch my legs a bit." "Good gracious," exclaimed the other; "don't do that unless you are prepared to pay double fare or to take a compartment all to yourself!"—Chicago News.

GERMAN COUNTER ATTACKS AGAINST FRENCH IN VAIN

Kaiser's Staff Anxious to Recapture Hartmanns-Weilerkopf.

PARIS, April 8. — Getting under way with great momentum, the new French advance towards Metz won success between the Meuse and the Moselle, near Pareid, east of Verdun, where two lines of trenches were captured from the Germans, and at Eparges, where an important success was recorded, the French War Office reports last night in an official communique.

The French advantages were gained in the early part of the day, and the rest of the time was spent in beating back the counter-attacks of the exasperated Germans, who came on time and again, finally launching a particularly heavy onset which made an excellent target for the French artillery, machine guns and rifles.

A repetition of the German tactics in Aillywood was noted. Here they came forward in their traditional mass formation and were shot down. Many prisoners were also taken in a French counter-charge before the defeated Germans were able to regain their own trenches and reform.

The German staff is regarding the capture of Hartmanns-Weilerkopf, in Lower Alsace, in a serious light, for men of the Prussian Guards were captured in this region, having been transferred to this point from another section of the front. Whenever there is desperate work to do the guard is sent for.

Admission of a compulsory retirement of German troops between the Meuse and Moselle rivers is noted in the German official statement from Berlin last night. Evidently to counteract an adverse public opinion at home, the statement says that it was the German outposts that retreated from Regniervillc and Fey-en-Haye, to their main positions, and that this was according to a pre-arranged plan. Applying their knowledge of actual conditions of trench warfare in France, critics point out that this is a virtual admission of being driven from their lines of trenches in direct contact with the French armies before the French advance was begun.

The statement further admits that the severest fighting took place between the Meuse and Apremont, where the French, it says, were able to approach close to the German positions, and it further says that the French were received by an annihilating fire at close range. The Germans, it continues, served their guns with tremendous effect, and the critics point out that this remark is evidently thrown in to counteract the effects of statements of the allies about the growing inferiority of the German artillery. It then says that the French reserves were in a short time in full flight.

Serbian Towns Bombarded.

NISH, April 8.—(Via London.)—The Austro-Hungarian artillery Tuesday bombarded Serbian towns on the Danube and the Save. Twenty-eight heavy projectiles fell in the central quarter of Belgrade, killing three and wounding six.

The Serbian artillery shelled the Austro-Hungarian positions, but avoided shelling the towns on the Austro-Hungarian banks of the rivers, which are inhabited exclusively by Serbians.

Turks Driven From Artvin.

PETROGRAD, April 8. — The Novoe Vremya's Batum correspondent reports the entry of the Russians into Artvin, Russian Armenia, without firing a shot. This, the correspondent adds, consummates the trans-Tchoruk operations, the entire Batum province having now been cleared of the Turks.

FLEET SAILS

Italian Squadron oft Under Sealed Orders

ON THE ITALIAN FRONTIER, April 8.—The warships of the Italian fleet departed suddenly on Monday from the Mediterranean naval stations at Spezia, Gaeta and Madalena Island. They concentrated at Augusta, Sicily and at Taranto. They are thus within a few hours of the Adriatic.

The departure of these warships caused a profound impression, particularly at Spezia, where until last Sunday the harbor was crowded with dreadnought cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers, while the town was filled with officers and sailors.

Italy has now the finest fleet in her history. tI is headed by several new dreadnoughts, of which the most formidable is the Conte Di Cavour, which corresponds in the Italian navy to Great Britain's Queen Elizabeth.

The future movements of the fleet are veiled in absolute secrecy. It is asserted that only the King and one or two of the highest Government officials are acquainted with the plans which have been decided upon.

Archbishop Makes Appeal.

LONDON, April 8.—"In view of all that is now happening, and following the unprecedented lead of His Majesty the King," writes the Archbishop of Canterbury in an appeal just published, "we desire to press seriously upon the minds of those whom we can influence, the duty and privilege of bearing a voluntary part in the nation's self discipline and self-sacrifice by abstaining from all alcoholic drink during the continuance of the war. Some definite act on the part of all is due our brave men, the nation at large and to God."

French Government Prepares to Settle for Dacia's Cotton

PARIS, April 8.—[illegible] Minister of Marine, the Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Minister of Finance are preparing a bill jointly which will be submitted to the French Parliament authorizing the Government to pay for cargoes belonging to neutrals, which may be taken by the French Government in transit to belligerents.

The bill will contain an authorization to pay for the cargo of cotton on board the former Hamburg-American Line steamship Dacia, which was seized by a French cruiser while on a voyage from Galveston, Texas, for Rotterdam, and which was taken into Brest on Feb. 27. The Cabinet Ministers desire a free hand in dealing promptly and liberally with seized cargoes.

PRINZ EITEL IN TO STAY

German Commerce Raider Waits in Vain for "Relief"

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., April 8.—Commander Max Thierichens of the German auxiliary cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich asked the United States Government through port authorities here last night to intern his ship and crew for the war. Up to the last moment the German skipper kept up the appearance of being ready for a dash to sea and when the time for decision finally came, he explained that failure of "expected relief" to arrive had made it necessary to intern rather than "deliver crew and ship to fruitless and certain destruction by British and French warships waiting off the Virginia capes."

To-day the commerce raider will make her last cruise of the war. She will be taken to the Norfolk navy yard, across Hampton Roads from the shipyard here, where she has been laid up since limping into port on March 10, after the remarkable commerce destroying voyage from the Orient, during which she sent the American ship William P. Frye to the bottom.

Collector of Customs Hamilton boarded the Eitel shortly after 7 o'clock last night with an imperative notice from the Washington Government that the time for his stay in this port would expire at midnight last night, and that he must leave American waters by 4 o'clock on the morning of April 8. Before the customs collector could deliver the message, Commander Thierichens handed to him the written announcement of his decision.

Commander Thierichens himself declared that the actio he had been forced to take made him sick; that he was heartbroken to be compelled to resort to such a step. Unofficially, he stated that he had never intended to intern if it were possible to prevent it, that he had hoped for the arrival of German forces to do battle with the British and French warships off the American coast, and thus clear the way for his return to the open sea.

They now have five children, four boys, the eldest being nine years of age, and one daughter.

BIG PROFITS ARE ALLEGED

Eastern Horse Traders Boast of Beating Government

EVIDENCE CONFLICTS

OTTAWA, April 8.—At the sitting of the public accounts committee yesterday, in the largest room in the Parliament Buildings outside of the chambers of the House and Senate, standing room for a time was at a premium. Members of Parliament and sessional employes flocked in to hear the testimony given by the Nova Scotia horse traders who sold horses to the Militia Department in King's County, N.S., last September. The Militia Department commissioned Dewitt Foster, M.P., (King's, N.S.) to purchase horses at the outbreak of the war, and he had associated with him W. P. McKay and Mr. Keever. Mr. McKay is at present the private secretary of Chief Whip John Stanfield.

According to statements made yesterday and on a previous sitting Mr. Keever, who has all the vouchers, checks, and memoranda of the purchases, cannot be found.

The principal witness was A. B. Harvey, who testified that old, decrepit and spavined horses were passed by the veterinaries and purchased by Mr. McKay. Harvey admitted he was a horse trader, and as the Government had a veterinary surgeon on hand to examine every animal sold, he saw no reason why he should volunteer information or why he should not accept whatever was offered him.

Some of the Government members of the committee expressed the utmost astonishment at the testimony. Mr. Davidson (Annapolis) said the witnesses had been interviewed by Mr. Wickwire, the Liberal member for King's in the Nova Scotia Legislature, and that their testimony was not to be credited. Three witnesses were produced who testified that the veterinary made a careful examination of their horses and that the prices paid by the Government were fair and reasonable.

Examined in chief by Mr. Kyte (Lib., Richmond, N.S.), Harvey testified that he sold one horse which had the heaves, was sprung in the hind legs and was of very uncertain age.

Under cross-examination by Mr. Rhodes (Con., Cumberland), witness said that when he found that the Government buyers were so easy and observed the kind of horses that were being purchased from others, he determined to make a little more money. He bought horse after horse, fell into line and sold them at a fairly good profit. One of them was over 20 years old, and all of them had spavins, ring bones and heaves. One horse, however, did not get by the "Doc," as in addition to spavins on both hind legs, he had a huge swelling on the right foreleg.

This last named animal Harvey said he traded for another which he sold to the Government. This horse, he said, had been offered for sale to the Government at the time of the South African war, but was rejected upon the ground that it had at that time already passed the age limit.

Somewhere about 1905, he declared, it had been sold for $15, and subsequently for $10. The man from whom witness got it had traded for it one drake and pair of ducks. The Government took it from him for $90.

S. S. Selfridge of King's County corroborated Harvey to a considerable extent. He declared that the majority of the horses offered for sale and purchased at Berwick and Kingston were old, broken-winded, and with visible blemishes. He personally had heard of the sale and drove to Berwick with a fine team of horses, which he sold for $350. A neighbor of his took down quite a fine horse and was unable to do any business. He, therefore, telephoned home to send down the "old mare." The old mare, aged 17, was sold without difficulty.

J. W. Selfridge gave testimony along the same line as the preceding witnesses.

The investigation into the boots supplied the Canadian soldiers is concluded, and the work of preparing the report of the committee is in progress. There will be a debate on it in the House. It is possible that there will be a minority report, but there is no certainty.

WINES AND SPIRITS TO GO.

Britain Likely To Bar Out All But Light Beers.

LONDON, April 8. — Several more Cabinet meetings will be required, according to The Times, before the Government is able to place definite proposals before the country for dealing with the drink problem, but already it is possible to indicate in what direction the Ministers are moving. They have ruled out total prohibition as impracticable. The Times continues, "and so far as the discussions have gone, favor the following measures:

"First, prohibition of wines and spirits; second, encouragement of lighter beers by compulsory reduction of their strength; third, further restrictions in the sale of intoxicants in the military areas, and in districts where munitions of war are being manufactured."

Would Buy U. S. Off.

LONDON, April 8. — The Cologne Gazette, publishes conspicuously, a malicious article entitled "America, What Will It Cost?" Suggesting that if nothing else will induce the United States to stop supplying munitions of war to the allies, the German people might be willing to buy America off by paying her in cash "the billion or two" she is making out of the unholy traffic in German and Austrian lives."

REINFORCEMENTS FOR THE EAST

Austro - German Generals Strengthen Their Forces

PETROGRAD, April 8.—The arrival of large German and Austrian reinforcements, taken from their other armies, on the scene of battle in the Carpathians, is announced by the Russian War Office in its official communique last night, but it is further said that the Russian offensive continues, and fortific. this assertion with the statement that on April 5, the day that the fresh arrivals of troops made themselves felt, 2,900 prisoners, three cannon and several machine guns were taken.

The coming of new troops was made manifest by the frequency and renewed violence of the enemy's counter-attacks. The Russians then directed their attacks on the sector between the River Toplit and the region in the direction of the Uzsok Pass.

All the summits of the principal chain of the Beskid Range have passed into Russian hands west of the village of Ustzyki Garina, and the Muscovite troops are now engaged in capturing the southern spurs on these mountains, one after another.

Definite abandonment of their offensive in the region of Rosiouvka and Rozanka, after eight weeks of continued attacks by German armies, with the suffering of heavy losses, is recorded by the War Office. No detailed estimate of the German casualties in this region is given, beyond the fact that their losses were enormous.

The Army Messenger gives details of the Carpathian operations for March 31 to April 3, states that a series of successes has been achieved by the Russians in the direction of Mezotabares, Baligrod and Sriysk, and that bold attacks on the steep, icy heights in the Lutovisk region resulted in the capture of the whole of the Bolonin ridge. In the fighting during these three days over ten thousand prisoners were taken, as well as rich booty in the form of artillery, ammunition and transports.

A CHIMNEY FIRE.

A chimney fire at 101½ Stewart Street, a house owned by Thomas Hetherington and tenanted by Wm. McKinley, gave the fire department a run at 4.45 p.m. yesterday. It was the result of a dirt clogged flue, but no damage was done to the house.

TALK OF PEACE IS UNTIMELY

A Mistaken Movement Says Mrs. Pankhurst

LONDON, April 8—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst announced yesterday that the Women's Social and Political Union and the other suffrage organizations in Great Britain and France has decided not to participate in the forthcoming women's conference at The Hague to consider the question of peace.

In this connection the British militant leader said: "This movement is well meaning but mistaken. Those running this conference have no political influence. Pro-Germans are working hard in this direction here and in neutral countries and much German money has been circulated in America, but this is not the time to talk peace."

SULTAN SAYS HE IS CONFIDENT

Thinks Dardanelles Cannot be Forced

[illegible]NOPLE, April 8.—(Via The Hague and London.)—"I am convinced that the Dardanelles cannot be forced. The brave conduct of the Turkish troops in the recent operations against the straits permits me to conclude that although the allies bend every effort and use every means at their disposal they will be unable to achieve their purpose."

Thus spoke Mehmed V., the Sultan of Turkey, and first calip of the moslem world, yesterday in the course of an audience which he had granted an Associated Press correspondent. The Sultan throughout the audience showed and expressed the greatest confidence in Turkey's ability to withstand the onslaught of the allied forces, and followed with the keenest interest a description of the operations by the allies on March 18 against the Dardanelles' forts, given by a correspondent of the Associated Press.

Duncan Merkley, of Casselman, was yesterday chosen Liberal-Conservative standard-bearer for Russell county in the next Federal election.

GREAT BRITAIN DEFENDED BY HUNGARIAN

Famous Statesman Defends British Nation From Charges

ZURICH, April 8.—(Via London.)—Count Julian Andrassy, the famous Hungarian statesman, has just written a book called "Considerations on the War," in which, while ardently supporting the cause of his country, he brushes aside with contempt the charges now being levelled against England in Germany and Austro-Hungary.

"People," he says; "who know English history cannot accept the thesis of the Oxford professors as to the generous and absolutely disinterested role that England has assumed in this war, but I do not believe, on the other hand, that England knowingly worked for a general war, a belief wrongly diffused in Germany and in Austria-Hungary. During the last Balkan wars, Great Britain never ceased to give moderating advice to her friends of the triple entente. She played in a happy fashion the role of intermediary."

"Responsibility for the war," he concludes, "rests on Russia, and on those who encouraged her attitude."

Hampered By Germany.

TOKIO, Japan, April 8.—The Asahi has published a news despatch saying that Count Okuma, the Japanese Premier, while addressing a group of Government officials at Kozu, said the negotiations of Japan with China had been complicated by the attempt of Germany to make China believe that Japan was designing to annex China as she had done Korea. This Chinese illusion was being dispelled, the Premier declared. The negotiations will not be so difficult as has been rumored, he said, and he expected to see their conclusion some time during the month of April.

Cologne Gazette Is Sore.

AMSTERDAM, April 8. — Commenting on the published summary of the American note to Great Britain The Cologne Gazette says:

"It appears to be a note against Germany rather than against England, and it is so framed that England may leave it unnoticed without having reason to fear any serious steps from the American Government."

Redpath SUGAR

The inherited preference for Redpath Sugar that exists in so many thousands of Canadian homes to-day, is based on genuine satisfaction for three generations. Satisfaction first with "Ye Olde Sugar Loafe", made in Canada by John Redpath 60 years ago—then with Canada's first Granulated Sugar, made by the Redpath Refinery in 1880—now with the modern 2 lb. and 5 lb. Sealed Cartons of Redpath Extra Granulated—

A Philosopher in the Trenches

"All well so far," writes a member of the first contingent, "and what there is in store it is impossible to foretell. One thing I know and that is if God sees fit to allow me to return I shall more than ever love my Canada, shall more than ever realize her beautiful, her glorious characteristics. If this reaches you on a cold, shivery day with a bit of a blizzard raging perhaps you will be disposed to laugh when I tell you that there is no climate equal in its blessings to that of Canada. As you know I have travelled fairly extensively and I have lived, yes, lived is the term, for my stay has usually been of months, in half a dozen countries, but Canada beats them all. When we return, that is those of us who do return, we shall not regret our experience, we shall be proud of the fact that we gave the best that is in us in defence of the mother country and the empire to which we belong, but we shall more than ever be disposed, at home and in church, to lift up our voices and to say "Thank the Lord I'm a Canadian." This is the feeling that is deep down in the hearts of us all. It inspires us to fight the harder, to cheerfully endure the hardships of the trenches and of exposure, as we feel we are fighting in a measure out of gratitude to the country that gave us birth, but even more for the credit and honor of our own beloved land."

The writer of the foregoing may also be termed "A Philosopher in the Trenches." He is clearly a patriot of the intense order. But his words should sink deep into the hearts of his countrymen. They should nerve and strengthen all of us like him to dedicate the best that is in us to the service of our country. It is with inspiration of this sort that the Patriotism and Production campaign is being carried on throughout the country. It is to impress this idea upon the people that conferences are being held in various districts and that literature on two hundred different subjects referring to agriculture can be had free by dropping a letter to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

At the conferences is explained by men of experience, men of practical ideas, how we stay-at-homes can best second and support the efforts of those who are enduring all the horrors of modern war. All that we are asked to do is to serve ourselves with extra care and attention, to be painstaking to the utmost of our power in husbandry, in tilling the soil, in selecting the seed, in methods of breeding and rearing our live stock — in short in doing these things that while benefitting ourselves will enable the mother country and our sons abroad to realize how thoroughly and how efficiently we are behind them.

IS SENT TO JAIL FOR ONE MONTH

Man Who Assaulted Wife is Punished

In Police Court this morning Thos. Jackson, living on Sherbrooke street, was charged with wife-beating and assault, from the effects of which his wife is still in a delicate conditon.

Jackson was alleged to have so abused his wife that she had to be taken to Nicholls Hospital. The evidence against him given by Dr. Kings was that Jackson had called upon him on March 6th and asked him to go and see his wife. Mr. Jackson was drunk, so the physician said. When he arrived at his home he found Jackson's wife in bed in a very serious condition, and she told him that her husband had choked and kicked her. He had her hurried to Nicholls Hospital, from where she was discharged on March 26th.

Relief Officer Miller also testified against Jackson in a way that was most damaging.

Magistrate Dumble sent him to gaol for one month, and warned him that if it happened again he would make it six months.

LOSS TO CHURCH IN DEATH OF TWO MEMBERS

The Late Geo. Needler And Wm. Fair Are Missed at St. Thomas' Church

Millbrook, April 8.—At the annual vestry meeting of St. Thomas' Church, the People's Warden, Mr. A. A. Smith, presented the report of the receipts and expenditure for the year, showing gross receipts of $1895.94 and expenditure of $1978.95. It was unanimously decided that special efforts should be made to bring up the revenue to an amount sufficient to meet the expenditure.

Reports were read from the Sunday School and different Church organizations, all of which seemed to be in a flourishing condition and to be doing effective work.

The Rector feelingly alluded to the great loss the Vestry and congregation had sustained in the death of Mr. Geo. Needler, who had always been so faithful in attendance at the Vestry meetings and church services, and so zealous in everything pertaining to the work of the church, and also to the loss sustained in the death of Mr. William Fair, who for many years had been a faithful and devoted member of the church. He also referred to the loss recently sustained by St. John's Church, Ida, in the death of Mr. Robert Vance, one of its oldest and most valuable members.

The following officers were appointed for the current year: Rector's Warden, Mr. J. C. Kells; People's Warden, Mr. A. A. Smith; Synodsman, Mr. A. A. Needler; Vestry Clerk, Mr. Chas. Needler; Sidesmen, Messrs. H. B. Allen, T. A. Campbell, Morgan Carry, A. J. Fallis, D. Fallis, L. Fallis, G. Fowler, G. F. Harrington, C. Needler, R. Stone, J. W. T. Todd, C. H. Winslow and W. T. Wood. Ushers, Messrs. T. H. Bradley, John J. Clarke, G. Fowler, T. G. Harkness, T. J. Lang, W. D. Leach and C. F. Thompson.

Cemetery Committee—Messrs. T. A. Campbell, James Fee, James Mitchell, Charles Needler, and H. A. Turner.

Laymen's Board — Messrs. David Fallis, (Convener) W. T. Wood, T. A. Campbell, Morgan Carry, J. C. Kells, George Fowler, J. J. Clarke, Robert Stone, Septimus Lamb and L. Fallis.

Auditors—Messrs. William Vance and Charles Needler.

Hearty votes of thanks were passed to Mrs. W. C. Allen and the choir for their faithful and efficient services during the year, and also to the Woman's Auxiliary, the Girl's Auxiliary, the Church Guild and to the Superintendent; Officers and Teachers of the Sunday School, and also the Church wardens.

Rec. Secretary—C. Lacheur.

Orator—Bro. J. M. Greene.

Inside Guard—Bro. W. Montgomery.

Outside Guard—Bro. R. N. Jones.

Trustees — Bros. Buller, Greene and Micks.

Bro. Wm. Buller acted as installation officer and after the business was completed a social evening was spent.

FORCE GERMANS FROM BELGIUM BY END OF MAY

Is the Opinion of S. W. Dancey Returned From Theatre of War

That the German military machine, at one time the greatest military machine the world had ever seen, now possesses but forty-five per cent. of its former efficiency, that the Germans will be forced out of Belgium before the end of May, and that the war will be over by the end of September because of the great lack of food and munitions, are a few opinions S. W. Dancey, the Canadian journalist, has brought back from Europe, and these opinions are not based on what others say, but upon what Mr. Dancey has personally observed. After witnessing fourteen battles, being with the Brtish, Belgian, French and German forces, and in the retreat with the allied troops from Mons, Mr. Dancey has returned to America, accompanied by two Belgian ladies, Mme. Yvonne Tenaerts, his fiancee, and Madame L. Tenaerts, her mother, and is making a tour, giving lectures on the war and showing views which he took while in the war arena. Mr. Dancey will speak in Victoria Hall on Friday and Saturday evening of this week. Tonight he speaks in Guelph. Yesterday he visited this city, and last evening entertained a Review scribe in the sitting-room of his hotel.

Mr. Dancey, who by the way has the build of a wing man of a rugby team, possesses a sheaf of passports and official papers, which, together with his American slang, enabled him to get in on some sights and incidents where it meant death if it was known that he was a Canuck. He had travelled the United States very extensively and passed as an American correspondent. The fact that he spent some eleven or twelve years in Europe previous to the breaking out of the war left him "right at home" when in the centre of the theatre. He doesn't enlarge upon what he has been through personally, but rather upon what he has witnessed. He tells of the fighting ability of the various troops, the work of the Munster fusiliers, the heroic Belgians, the dashing French regiments, the courageous and daring "Tommy," the feeling of the German private and that of the Prussian, in fact all of which the general public has heard a little, and much that has never been told. Little is even yet known of the retreat from Mons. Mr. Dancey was in it. He saw the gameness of the British and pathetically described how the enormous losses were sustained. He tells of the pathos which touches the hearts of all. Letters from the front tell of some. Mr. Dancey explains it all. The fact that he was with the German army for months puts him in a position to speak with authority.

After speaking with Mr. Dancey for an hour, one could write volumes. To do so might cause readers to think they could learn little more by hearing him speak. For that reason only a few points are touched upon. Citizens who are at all interested in the present war—and they are many—should hear Mr. Dancey not only on one night, but both nights.

In the course of a few weeks Mr. Dancey intends to return to Europe. He will fall in line with the British forces, and expects to be with them when they march into Berlin.

FUNERAL HELD TODAY.

The funeral of the late Michael Hayes, of Otonabee, who died in Rochester, was held this morning at 9 o'clock to the Church of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's Cemetery. It was very largely attended by friends of the deceased in Otonabee, as well as many residing in this city.

The late Mr. Hayes was unmarried. Three brothers survive, namely, John, of Peterborough, James of Otonabee, and Richard, of Rochester, N. Y.

MILITARY NEWS

Lindsay Post:—Mrs. J. J. Perrin, St. Peter street, whose son, Private Russell, was injured at the front, is in receipt of the following letter from Private G. White:

March 23rd, 1915.

Dear Mrs. Perrin,—Just a line to let you know that Russell has been wounded in the leg, but is progressing favorably. He is being sent down to the base, where he will have the best of treatment, and we also hope a speedy recovery. He is quite cheerful and in good spirits and is already asking when he will be fit to join his company again. He will be writing himself in a day or so and will then give you all particulars. He also sends his best love to all.

I remain his comrade,
G. W. WHITE.

Posted Letters to Buckhorn Lady

Writer Now Regrets Her Action Toward Recipient

Magistrate Langley had a case to deal with this afternoon in which a Harvey township woman was to have answered to a charge of posting scurrilous letters through the mail to a Buckhorn lady. Upon the undertaking of the counsel for the defendant and costs would be paid, the case was withdrawn, and the following letter will be sent to the complainant:

"Miss Margaret Eastwood,
Buckhorn:

I regret very much that certain offensive and scurrilous communications were posted to you. I assure you that I will not either mail or cause to be mailed to you in the future any communications of any kind, and I regret the annoyance caused you by the letters you have received.

Yours very truly,
Emma Jane Guthrie."

G. N. Gordon represented the private prosecutor and W. H. Moore, K.C., the defendant.

VESTRY MEETING AT ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

The vestry meeting for St. George's Church was held last night with a good attendance of members. The retiring church warden, Mr. F. Holmes, read the financial statement which with all things considered, was very satisfactory. The church starts the new year with a clean sheet.

After a general discussion on the activities of the church, the proceedings were brought to a close.

Officers were elected as follows:—

Church wardens—Messrs. H. Wilsan and Hake.

Sidesmen—Messrs. Jay, Lee, Holmes, and A. Pickford.

Vestry Clerk—H. Rew, Jr.

COLUMN FOR THE BOY SCOUTS

The report of the first annual meeting of the Canadian General Council of the Boy Scouts' Association, held in the railway committee room of the senate on March 20, has just been published, including the minutes of the meeting with the report of Mr. Gerald Brown, it also contains a list of the awards made by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, president of the association and Chief Scout for Canada, for life-saving and other gallant conduct, accomplished by scouts throughout the Dominion during the year.

A complete list of these awards follows:

John Hope, Lachute, Que. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Silver Cross, October 31, 1914.

Allan Hovey, Standstead, Que., Saved life from drowning. Awarded Letter of Commendation, October 31, 1914.

W. J. Barrie, Montreal, Que. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Silver Cross, October 31, 1914.

Eric Braund, Winnipeg, Man. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Scroll of Honor, October 31, 1914.

Earl Scovil, St. Stephen, N.B. Stopped runaway horse. Awarded Scroll of Honor, January, 1915.

R. M. B. Small, Ottawa, Ont. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Silver Medal, January 28, 1915.

F. D. Bliss, Ottawa, Ont. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Silver Medal, Januar 28, 1915.

Robert Thayer, Kelowna, B. C. Had skin grafted to little girl (burned.) Awarded Gilt Medal, February 1, 1915.

J. M. Sowden, Souris, Man. Saved life from drowning. Awarded Gilt Medal of Merit, February 1, 1915.

Red Feathers.

Sir Robert Baden-Powell says of the new Red Feather movement:

Yes, the boys can be just as plucky as the men; and they can be equally efficient, too, if they like to try.

I am very glad to see that so large a number of the older scouts have set to work to do this, and to train themselves for undertaking the defence of their country, their homes and their womenfolk against the Germans, should it become necessarysary.

I held my first parade of these Defence Scouts in the South-West London District recently, and there I saw a full company of 140 smart lads ready equipped and drilled for their duties. The larger proportion of them had passed their tests in musketry and platoon drill, and were therefore qualified to receive and to wear the Red Feathers which I handed out to them. Another company had been inspected a few hours previously in Edinburgh, and apparently were equally smart and efficient.

Already the names of considerably over 2,000 Scouts have been registered as being in training for the Red Feathers. This shows a splendid spirit on the part of our Brotherhood, and no doubt a large number more would be doing the same if they were only old enough.

Of course, those who are able to play the drums or bugles are being admitted to the corps, even though under fifteen; but they must also be good at first aid work, because the duty of bandsmen in action is to look after the wounded.

Value of Staves.

The reason why scouts carry staves was given long ago, when I explained how when scouting on active service I always carried a staff myself, and I found it invaluable in many different ways, more especially in finding the way at night.

I have just had a letter from the front in which the writer says that the officers have given up wearing swords and taken to using staves.

Even staff officers can be seen here carrying a broomstick, or stake cut from a tree—the Scout's staff—to use at night in approaching trenches over mud-covered fields and pathways. The Boy Scout's staff has come into its own! "They shall turn their swords into—Scout staves!"—Chief Scout.

Lt. Gallaugher Shot by Sniper

Chatham, April 8.—In a letter to Lieut.-Col. Smith, of this city, Major George Smith, of Chatham, who is serving at the front with the first contingent, tells of the manner in which the late Lieut. Gallaugher, of this city, came to his death. It was previously reported that Gallaugher raised his head above the trenches and was shot. Major Smith, however, states that Gallaugher was engaged in inspecting his outposts in the early morning of March 20th, when the Germans sent up a flare lighting up the locality, and Gallaugher was picked off by a sniper. He was buried 1,500 yards behind the firing line.

HERE'S A SAMPLE OF TURKISH WAR NEWS

Worthy of the style of the "Arabian Nights," at its best is this delightful item which "The Literary Digest" culls from the pages of the "Hanumlar Gazettassi," a ladies' paper published in Scutari.

"The harem of his Islamic Majesty Wilhelm II., the principal officers of the harem, and the general staff are expected in Constantinople early this spring. Ten powerful captured British dreadnoughts will escort the Imperial harem."

Contest Closes Saturday, June 5th

The Trip of a Lifetime

COMMENCING MONDAY The Review will inaugurate one of the greatest circulation campaigns ever attempted by a newspaper in this section of Ontario. Four young ladies are going to have the trip of a lifetime next June. Twenty-one days of solid enjoyment and pleasure, without a detail lacking, not a thing overlooked, that can be done to insure them all the comforts the most modern methods of travel can supply. Three whole weeks of travel amid the most luxurious appointments and surroundings. And all this as a guest of The Review. It is easy to win a trip, so send in your nomination today and get full particulars.

THE CONTEST PLAN.

The selection of the party in this great contest is put squarely up to the readers of The Review. Votes will be allowed on all subscription payments to the paper, and the candidate in each district securing the highest total of votes will be declared the winner. The trip is well worth working hard for, and the readers of The Review are urged to assist their favorite ladies who want to go to the World's Fair. The return trip will be through the Canadian Northwest, and all of the principal cities will be visited.

The Panama-Pacific Internatonal Exposition is a national undertaking. It will exhibit the resources and achievements of all the peoples of the earth, and will represent an outlay of over fifty million dollars.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition will be the "last word" in expositions. It celebrates an event of world importance — the completion of the Panama Canal, the greatest physcal accomplishment in history — one that will affect the commerce of all the world and the relations of all peoples. No celebration of this event would be adequate unless it surpassed in dignity, grandeur and importance and previous affair of its kind.

It is with this fact in mind that this wonderful Panama-Pacific International Exposition has been planned and will be carried out.

Many circumstances and conditions combine to give this Panama-Pacific International Exposition fundamental differences and advantages — to increase its educational and its commercial importance — to make it more than ever before an exposition demanding the attention of manufacturer, consumer, student, art-lover, nature-lover, and sight-seer — in short, to make it above all others in history one that should be seen.

It is the first international exposition to be held on the shores of the Pacific. It is the first to be held in a seaport. It is the first that has celebrated a contemporaneous event. It is the first that has celebrated an event of world-wide importance. It is the first that has been held in a spot where the climate permits its being open for ten months and where flowers grow the year around. These factors, and many more, have been considered in the plans of this exposition and will be found reflected in the beauty, dignity, attraction and brilliancy of the finished result.

California Trips De Luxe in Every Respect

The Review's De Luxe Trips are just what the word De Luxe implies.

De Luxe means something better than the ordinary, something extremely fine and superior. The De Luxe trips mean that you will travel like a millionaire travels. Your berth will be in the most luxurious solid steel Pullman car; your meals will be the finest the best dining-car service on the earth can provide. You will have rooms at the best hotels; you will have free access to the expositions; you will have free auto trips, free sight-seeing excursions.

Four Free Trips

ONE FOR EACH DISTRICT

DIST. NO. 1. All that territory inside the city limits east of Aylmer street.

CAMPBELLFORD NOW HAS A SOCIAL AND ATHLETIC CLUB

Strong List of Officers in Charge of New Organization — No Booze at the Club Rooms

Campbellford, April 8.—Below are the officers, of the newly-organized Social and Athletic Club of town, composed of young men. It is understood they have a strict set of rules, among which is the prohibition of using liquor or being intoxicated about the premises. They have a large membership, and intend moving into renovated quarters in the Irwin Block, Front Street, shortly. The colors adopted permanently by the Club are red and white.

President—W. R. Twigg.
Vice-President—Verne Mells.
Treasurer—L. B. Frada.
Secretary—W. H. Roe.

Executive Committee—E. A. Stuart, chairman; F. S. Keller, H. J. Clark.

Social Committee — P. J. Rellis, chairman; A. W. Field, H. E. Nancarrow.

Athletic Committee—R. H. Cole, chairman; L. A. Betts, F. Menzies.

DAVEY ROWAN IN HAMILTON

Former Manager of Petes Pays a Flying Visit

Hamilton, April 8.—Dave Rowan, formerly manager of the Peterborough Club of the Canadian League and last season a member of the Dubuque, Iowa and Springfield Clubs of the Three Eye League, paid a flying visit to Hamilton. The object of his visit is unknown.

'HARD LUCK" FORGUE WITH ST. THOMAS

St. Thomas, April 8. — Manager "Dad' Stewart has signed Gil. Forgue, former backstop for the Saints and afterwards with the Brantford Club.

The "sun kissed kid" has been employed in the city all winter with the E. T. Wright Shoe Company, and latterly as a Pere Marquette brakeman.

Forgue hails from Providence, R. I., and was the class of the Canadian League the opening year around the short field. Severe injuries have impaired his work more or less the last couple of seasons.

COFFEY BEAT MORRIS.

Jim Coffey the Irish giant, made it quite clear that he has the right to challenge Jess Willard by defeating Carl Morris of Oklahoma last night in New ork. Coffey led all the ten rounds. Reports state it was the greatest heavyweight battle ever fought in Gotham.

MEETING TOMORROW NIGHT.

The meeting in the Oriental Hotel tomorrow night to organize a City Baseball League should be attended by every fan in the city. Prospects are very bright for a successful season and a good beginning should be made. The meeting is called for eight o'clock.

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

If we could recognize our own foolishness as easily as we can recognize that of our next door neighbor it certainly would help some.

There are people who get on rapidly in the world because it always seems to them that theirs plus yours equals theirs.

A thick purse has a long range and is easily and accurately aimed.

Loafers are geniuses out of a job.

Torpedo Nets.

Under the direction of Commander John K. Robison, U. S. N., commanding the naval torpedo station at Newport, R. I., a test was recently made which seems to prove that the torpedo net is no longer a secure defense against the torpedo. In the experiment a torpedo with a heavy charge of guncotton was fired from the torpedo boat Morris while she was running at eighteen knots at a steel net which was moored to protect the target. The torpedo went through the net, struck the target and exploded.

"OUTLAW" TRACEY.

Ken Tracey, the former Peterborough pitcher, who has been forwarded a contract by Manager Cristall of the Hamilton Canadian League team.

EAST CITY IS NOW ORGANIZED

Enthusiastic Meeting Elects Dan McCabe as Manager

The East City baseball team was organized last night at the meeting of baseball enthusiasts held in St. Luke's club rooms on Hunter Street. Over forty young men were present and judging from the eagerness to "do things up brown" the team from across the creek will be in there battling for the lead from the first "play ball." Dan McCabe was elected manager amid great applause. The veteran will have the hearty support of all. The complete list of officers elected was:—

Hon. Pres.—E. A. Peck, ex-M.L.A.
Hon. Vice-Pres.—G. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.
President—S. Gibbs.
1st Vice—G. Cox.
2nd Vice—G. Logan.
Sec.-Treas.—A. Moffat.
Assist. Sec.—F. Whitehouse.
Executive—J. Dillon, R. Long, J. Ellis, C. Gould.
Representatives to league meetings—S. Gibbs and J. Dillon.

All In the Bill.

"I have sent for you," said the man of the house, "because these pipes need looking after. There's a leak somewhere and a lot of gas going to waste."

"No, sir," replied the gas company's inspector meditatively. "Maybe there's a leak, but there ain't any gas going to waste—you'll find it all in the bill." —Milwaukee Journal.

Fame of Varennes.

The little French town of Varennes is memorable as the scene of one of the most dramatic episodes in all history. It was there, in the summer of 1791, that Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette were stopped in their attempted flight from France. From there they were carried back to Paris and the scaffold.

A Healthy Heart.

Albert Albu, Germany's greatest authority on nutrition and on the hygiene of sport, says: "A healthy heart, after strong but not excessive exertion, ought to return to its normal number of beats within fifteen minutes after the exercise ends. If it takes much longer then overexertion may be assumed."

COMMENT — As You Like it

DAVEY ROWAN was in Hamilton this week and the dopesters on the Herald staff opine that his visit was in connection with baseball. Where Billy Cristall would use the former Peterborough pilot is hard to state. He has just succeeded in landing Tiffany, the big first sacker from the Wisconsin-Illinois league, so the first base problem is solved. Rowan was always a favorite in Jungle Town.

FANS ARE already talking of the proposed amateur baseball organization which would embrace towns and cities from all over Ontario. Peterborough seems to favor it but how it appeals to outside fans remains to be seen. The Ontario Branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada could do worse than take the proposition up.

JULE KUSTUS, the husky outfielder of the Saints, will likely be traded. Dad Stewart is almost certain of landing Bullock of the Senators and the St. Thomas manager figures he can get along without Jule's timely hits. Kustus ranks among the best outfielders in the league.

THE MEETING called for Friday night in the Oriental Hotel to organize a city league should be well attended. It looks as though four good teams will be entered but to make the league a success there should be a strong body of officers elected. If you know of the right man for the right job bring him along.

IT'S EASY for Knute Belting and Stanley Creswell to talk of quitting baseball but when the hot sun begins to shine and the reports of games starts coming across the wires each evening they will forget the Melba dope. There are a lot of hockey players who quit every summer.

KEN TRACEY will likely be with Hamilton this year. The "iron man" has a few games left in him yet and he has the best wishes of a host of Peterborough friends and admirers that he will win a goodly portion of them.

CAMPBELLFORD is to be congratulated upon the organization of the Social and Athletic Club. It has been made very plain that no intoxicating liquors are to be brought to the club rooms. Success should be the result.

LACROSSE is coming back. This morning a large number of sticks were dumped off a G.T.R. train at the local depot.

EAST CITY has organized. Appears to be lots of "pep" across the bridge.

Just What She Wanted.

Mr. Simpel—Will you be mine, darling? Miss Strongmind—You must first ask papa's consent, Harold. Mr. Simpel—But—but I dread to do it. I am extremely nervous and, so to speak, so easily sat upon that— Miss Strongmind (hurriedly)—I'll be yours, Harold. Never mind about papa.—Stray Stories.

Load of a Camel.

A camel is never relieved of its load from the beginning of the journey to its end. It eats, walks and sleeps under its burden, often for weeks at a time. The training of a camel is no easy matter, as it takes about three years to teach it to bend its knees in order to be loaded and unloaded.

Wisdom of the Babe.

"What do you suppose makes that baby cry so awfully loud?"

"Why, both its parents are hard of hearing, you know." — Boston Transcript.

EXCELSIOR FIVE LED ALL THE WAY IN DECIDING GAME

The Excelsiors played like world-beaters last night in the deciding game of the A Division of the "Y." Basketball League. There was simply nothing to it from start to finish but Excelsiors. They shot from all angles and got away with it. But this is not taking anything from their honor for they certainly played gilt-edged ball. For a deciding game it was exceptionally free from fouls, only four being called during the game. There was a big crowd of fans on hand, as many had hopes of Cressmans pulling off a win, thus making a three-cornered tie between Excelsiors, Cressmans and Unknowns but the top-notch boys were in such fine trim and had their eye glued on the basket so tight that nothing could stop them. Long and Knapman at forward for the Excelsior played the finest game seen on the local floor this season. Long scored nine askets and Knapman got seven. Stuart played his usual consistent game at centre, while Hamilton and Darling played a cast-iron defence and checked their opponents so successfully that they held them down to 19 points, while their team-mates were piling up 47. Bartlett and Cressman did practically all the scoring for their team.

The question is now whether the Excelsiors are champions of the city. This question should be answered by some good fast quintette of players. How about the Veterans? We wonder if they couldn't make it interesting.

The teams were:

Excelsiors — Long, Knapman, Stuart, Darling, Hamilton.

Cressmans — F. Cressman, Bartlett, Raynor, H. Cressman, Palmer.

Referee, Dobbin. Timer, Preston. Scorer, Thackeray.

The Value of Wood Waste.

The value of most of the wood waste produced to-day in Canada is limited to its fuel value for the production of power at the mill. In some cases, methods of closer utilization have been worked out, but, compared with the total amount of wood waste produced, the amount of material so utilized is almost negligible. Furthermore, most of the large lumber mills produce waste greatly in excess of the amount necessary for power production and the waste burners are still in use, involving not only a loss of large amounts of wood, but also a definite, fixed charge to get rid of it. It has been possible in the past to utilize only a small percentage of this material, but the problem is being attacked from a number of different angles and there is reason to believe that, within a short time, a much larger percentage of such material can be utilized at a profit. Laboratory experiments are being made looking toward the commercial production of ethyl alcohol from the distillation of sawdust, shavings, edgings, etc.

A study of the motor fuel problem will show that the production of mineral fuels, such as gasolene, motor spirit, etc., is not keeping pace with automobile production.

Alcohol appears to be the only solution of the problem, for, if it can be produced from wood waste at a reasonable figure, a tremendous supply of raw material is available from a natural, growing raw material which is not a foodstuff.

The meanest kind of a friend is the one who gives you his opinion of the motorboat you have just built.

LOCAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN

The matter published in this column will be supplied by the local Council of Women and in the interest of their work.

The people generally get what they want and the people of this city want not only Hydro Radials but supervised playgrounds. The local Council of Women have secured the permission to use the grounds of one of our public schools for this purpose and are now inaugurating a campaign whereby these grounds may be ready to be used by the children of the city during the summer months

Under trained supervisors, these grounds will be a boon not only to the children, both to many tired mothers who can feel that their children are not only playing healthfully but safely as their playgrounds will be carefully kept and looked after by professionals. Any citizens who are interested in this subject will do well to watch the press where, from time to time, items regarding this new venture by the local Council of Women, for the good of all in the city will be published.

FOUR WERE NOMINATED

For Seat in Council as North Ward Representative

William Langford, Jr., nominated by J. T. Thornton and W. J. Johnston.

W. S. Dodd, nominated by James Kendrey and A. E. Coulthard.

W. T. Holloway, nominated by R. J. Kidd and G. O. Cameron.

G. O. Cameron, nominated by D. H. Kerneghan and J. T. Braund.

The above was the result of the nominations held today in the north ward. One of the four will fill the vacancy in Council caused by the resignation of Ald. W. J. Johnston. The nominations were held at noon hour at Lee's shop.

What They Say.

Interviewed by the Review this afternoon, ex-Alderman Langford said that as he had been nominated he intended to go to the poll if necessary. He had represented the ward and had gained some experience from his term in the Council, and in this he had the advantage of others who had been nominated. If elected, he would end[illegible] to serve his constituents to [illegible] best of his ability and would tak[illegible] [illegible]rm stand for economical admin[illegible] [illegible] of the city's business, as had always been his endeavor.

Dr. Holloway stated that he intended seeking election. He feels that his election would mean good representation of the north ward on the Board of Aldermen.

This afternoon Mr. Cameron had not decided whether or not he would remain in the field.

Mr. Dodd said he has qualified this afternoon and if elected would endeavor to do his best to faithfully represent the electors of his ward.

The nominees have till tomorrow night at nine o'clock to qualify. The election will be held next Thursday, April 15th.

FIVE YEARS

borne the name of David McCarthy, which police records show as one of his aliases. He said that while he was tatooed with the initials "D M.," they stood for David and Mary, the last being the name of a girl he once had. He said he was once arrested in Sault Ste. Marie for deportation when the authorities were looking for a murderer.

Mitchells' record was read to him also, and he admitted it to be all true. The letter from the superintendent of the Reformatory where he was confined went against him heavily.

Magistrate's Remarks.

In sentencing the prisoners, Magistrate Dumble said:

"From your appearance one would not assign you to the criminal class, but the story of your life is not a good one. You have deliberately entered into a life which has made you outlaws, and you are stigmatized as professional criminals. You have both been treated with consideration, but have abused it. To let you loose would be but to turn you on the people again. You, Rousselle, may have been a soldier in South Africa, but it's a pity you did not confine yourself to that land. I can do nothing less than give you something that will effectually cure you of your habits. The limit of years I could give you is fourteen. The judgment of the court is that you each be confined in Kingston penitentiary for five years."

Rousselle urged the magistrate to make it a lighter sentence.

"I did it all for whiskey. I have done some good in this life, and this sentence would break my mother's heart."

"Oh, you cannot have much respect for your mother after your life," was the magistrate's terse rejoinder.

All Mitchell managed to say was: "Can't you make it any lighter, your Worship?" Mitchell took his sentence very much to heart, and his face plainly showed what a shock it was to him.

All Aboard for Frisco Visit the World's Fair

On this site the greatest architects of America, with unlimited funds, assisted by the msot prominent artists, sculptors and landscape gardeners of the world are building an Exposition City which will live in the memory of those who see it as long as memory itself exists.

The products of every clime, the triumphs of every industry, and the best in every handicraft, will be placed in effective and competitive display to be viewed by the people of all nations. In its amusement district, some three hundred of the country's most famous purveyors of fun will prepare their latest novelties for the visitor's recreation.

The wonders of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, like the wonders of the sea, or of Niagara, or a great mountain range, cannot be conveyed by word or even pictures. It is the official national celebration of the completion of the Panama Canal. It is a celebration in which every state in the Union and every nation in the world will take part.

The responsibility for the preparing of this great national and international celebration, providing a site and buildings for it, has been entrusted to California, and Californians alone have contributed nearly $20,000,000 to carry out that trust in a way to reflect credit on themselves.

The Exposition is planned to be the greatest the world has ever seen, and it is likely to be the last. Every detail of its plans have been entrusted to men of life-trained experience who have been given carte blanche. The success is such as to give assurance to the statement that the person who fails to visit this last and greatest Exposition will miss the greatest opportunity of this generation for liberal education, amusement and artistic gratification.

Party Will Go in June.

The Review party will leave about June 10th and will be away for about 21 days. Call us up, 'phone 189, and get full particulars.

PRESENT THE PONY.

Rod Cameron, the lucky winner of the pony in the pony contest, which has been on for the past few months will be presented with his prize tomorrow evening at seven-thirty in front of the Empire Theatre by Mr. Horace Walkey. A full report of the standing of contestants and the number of votes secured, etc., will be furnished to all the stores taking part in the contest.

A Selection of Seed Potatoes

Of all the factors in potato growing, selection of seed is by far the most important. Had we bred our Shorthorn cattle as many of us have been in the habit of selecting and breeding our seed potatoes, we would now have no breed of Shorthorns. If we used only the culls and scrubs to breed from, our breeds of stock would soon run out. It has been careful selection and the application of scientific principles of breeding that has brought our pure bred live stock up to the present high standard. One reason why potatoes on many farms in this country have degenerated is that culls, screenings and small potatoes have been planted.

If no method of selection has hitherto been followed, the seed for this year's crop will have to be taken from the bin. Potatoes which are of medium size, smooth, free from disease and true to the type of the variety being sown, should be selected. During the late summer or early autumn when the vines are beginning to die down, the best and most vigorous hills should be marked by putting down a small stake or twig. The hills showing most vigour of vegetation will usually give the best yield of tubers. When the crop is harvested, any poor hills among those marked should be discarded and the rest saved for next year's planting. One farmer doing illustration work for the Commission of Conservation planted potatoes thus selected and ordinary potatoes side by side. When harvested four rows from the selected seed yielded ten bushels per row, while the four rows on either side of the ordinary seed yielded seven and one half bushels per row. This was a gain in yield of 33 per cent.

This method of selection does not take much time and, as repeated experiments have shown it to be the means of substantial increases in yield, it should be more generally practised.—F.C.N.

FRENCH OFFENSIVE ON THREE FRONTS

BRITISH REPEL NIGHT ATTACK---FOE FAILS IN COUNTER ATTACKS---EXCLUSIVE CABLE FROM COL. CURRIE

WORK OF THE CANADIANS IS PRAISED

Commander of 48th Highlanders Says British Dominate Every Section

SUPERIORITY OVER ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

TORONTO, April 9. — The Toronto Daily News today received the following cable from W. A. Willison, a staff correspondent in London:

LONDON. — Col. J. A. Currie, M. P., commander of the 48th Highlanders, has sent me the following exclusive statement regarding the operations of the Canadians at the front:: "The Canadian division was welcomed by British regulars," he says. "Officers of the regiments with which we were serving were not slow in congratulating us on the excellent conduct of our men and their coolness under fire. The Canadian division is the equal of any in France, with the exception of one or two crack British divisions, the famous 'Seventh,' for instance. Incidentally, we have been in the trenches alongside the Seventh, and we have taken over their trenches; and we feel confident that we can do our work on any occasions just as well as any division of the British army. The first division of the Canadian troops is bound to show up well in the annals of war. Nothing has been omitted from our training. We have every confidence in our auxiliary arms. In their shooting, the artillery forces have been wonderful, and the infantry, rely on them absolutely and cheerfully, allowing them to register on German trenches barely one hundred yards away, knowing the shooting will be accurate and that there is no danger to themselves.

RATIONS AND MEDICAL SERVICE PERFECTLY HANDLED.

"The system of handling rations and stores isperfect, as is also the medical service machine, which could not be improved upon. While the division has lost quite a few men in the trenches, mostly through their own carelessness, or curiosity, or, one might say, because their time had come, we are nevertheless satisfied that we have inflicted far greater losses on the enemy, for on the persons of prisoners taken at Neuve Chapelle were found copies of general orders warning them to be careful, stating that the British troops were continually finding their loopholes and that greater efforts must be made to hide them. This battle is now ancient history so that there is no harm in telling that the Canadian division was on the left flank and that our brigade was held in reserve within three-quarters of a mile of Rue Denfer. Doubtless the orders which appeared, mentioning the accuracy of the shooting had some reference to our troops.

MANY DARING DEEDS WERE DONE.

"Many daring deeds were done by Canadians while in the trenches." Dealing with his own battalion, the Colonel says: "Piper Miller and Lance Corporal Rose were both wounded by a shot from a sentry the other night. Rose was shot through the hip, and the same bullet tore through Miller's back and drove a piece of bone into the lung.

"Piper Corporal Thompson died very suddenly the other day. He was sick only two days. Sergt. Jones received nasty wounds in the stomach and one hand from a dum-dum bullet. He was out sniping in a cabbage patch in front of the trenches. It appears the German sniper saw the patch too, and the German got wise first.

BRITISH DOMINATE EVERY SECTION.

"The battalion left the trenches on April 5th for a few days' rest."

Of the general operations, Col. Currie declares: "The British on the line of battle now dominate every section. The quality of their infantry is much superior to that of the enemy. I have seen hundreds of German prisoners, and know what I am talking about. A large proportion is composed of old men and boys. The men of their first army were entirely different from the present lot. We are superior to them in rifle fire. We have always been superior in that respect. We are much better than they are in artillery fire also. Our fifteen-pounder field guns and howitzers are far superior to theirs. Half of their shells fail to burst. I know this from experience, or I would not be writing." In this connection, Torontonians will remember the shelling of Col. Currie's quarters some weeks ago.

"We are also superior in air craft," continues the Colonel. "I have seen only one German balloon and two aeroplanes since we have been here. The German aeroplanes had to dive to cover when we opened fire on them with our rifles." The German machine gun bugbear has been worked to death in the English press. It is very much like the "pom-poms" in South Africa. Nobody ever hears anything of pom-poms int his war. "We have more machine guns than they have. Further, the British gun fires two shots to their one. Sometimes our troops have suffered from machine gun fire, but they have suffered twice as much.

GERMANS WOULD LIKE TO MAKE PEACE.

"Don't be disappointed if this war lasts until fall. The Germans would like to make peace now if they were allowed to hold Belgium, but the Allies now have the preponderance, both of men and of all those things which go to make war possible.

'When the fields become dry and the troops can manoeuvre; when the days get longer and brighter so that the artillery can see what it is doing, then the German trenches along the whole line will be rushed. Then will occure the series of field combats which we hope to win. Then the cavalry will come into its own again. In trench work the aeroplane is everything."

FRENCH GO BACK THOUSANDS OF YEARS TO FIND IDEAL TRENCH WEAPON

The catapult, hurling missiles by means of a spring much on the order of a boy's slingshot, is a modern weapon of war. The device was the artillery of the ancients and was used with effect even up to the middle ages. The French find that in close trench work the catapult of the kind in this picture beats field artillery. When this picture was taken German trenches were only thirty yards distant, and the machine hurled hand grenades and small bombs down upon the foe. With the two lines this close, field guns behind the French would cause almost as

FRENCH DOMINATE THE ORNE VALLEY

General Joffre's Forces on Fronts Many Miles Long Have Occupied New Ground

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

London, April 9.—The French movement between the Meuse and Lorraine frontier is developing a distinct offensive, with General Joffre pushing his advance while the Germains are making fierce counter attacks. This is the substance of the latest despatches reaching London from the continent.

According to an anaylsis of the situation by the French general staff, the French offensive movement of the last few days has been on three sectors.

The first is on a front of fourteen miles to the east of Verdun, the actual line running southeast from a point near Etain.

The second is on a front between St. Mihiel and Pont-a-Mousson, where the French are attacking.

The third is in the vicinity of Gussainville where the French now dominate the valley of the Orne and are threatening the railroad beyond the river with attack.

PRESS ADVANCE FROM THREE BASES.

The French advance, is thus being pressed from three bases in three different directions.

According to Paris official reports, French forces on fronts many miles long have occupied new ground measuring from several hundred yards to two miles deep.

That German resistance to these advances has been stubborn is strikingly indicated by a French report that Germans on one point of attack left one thousand dead on the field.

From a diplomatic standpoint, interest is again centering in Greece, where former Premier Venizelos, apparently despairing of obtaining the support of King Constantine in his efforts to secure a retraction of the repudiation of his policy by the present cabinet, has decided to retire from politics and may leave the country.

RUSSIANS TRY TO SEVER HUNGARY FROM AUSTRIA.

Special despatches from Hungary express the belief that Russians are fighting their battles in the Carpathians for deliberate political ends, chief of which is to sever Hungary from Austria. Some confirmation is given this theory by the reported alarm in Italy over the possibility of Austria concluding separate peace with Russia.

MURDER CASE ?

Body of Man is Found in Sands at Creek

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, April 9.—A case of murder seems to be inevitable in the finding of the body of a man buried in the sand at Mimico Creek, west of Toronto yesterday. An autopsy establishes that death was not due to drowning and an early supposition that the body was washed ashore and buried by the sands have given way to conjectures that the man was either sandbagged, and the body dragged to the beach and buried in the sand or that the crime was committed at some distance and the corpse conveyed to the spot in a motor car.

THANK OFFERING OF $135.49.

The annual thank offering service of the Woman's Missionary Society of the George St. Methodist Church was held on Wednesday evening. After the opening exercises Mr. Joseph Wearing gave an address on missions. Miss Hill and Mrs. Pearson gave a duet. Mrs. James Kendry was in the chair and the offering amounted to $135.49.

FOE FAILED IN NIGHT ATTACK

French Capture New Trenches in Wood of Ailly

CAPTURED GUNS AND TRENCH MORTARS

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 9. — (This afternoon's statement) — "British troops repelled during the night of April 7-8 a German attack.

"We left unoccupied, German trenches at Eparges which were completely choked with corpses, and we repelled at the close of the day two counter attacks made by the enemy.

"In the wood at Ailly we captured new trenches and repelled two counter attacks, as already reported.

"We also secured six machine guns and two trench mortars. The enemy ceased his counter attacks after mid-day."

SAY FRENCH FAILED.

BERLIN, April 9. — The official statement says: "The Belgians have again been driven out of the demolished hamlet of Dreigrachten on the Yser canal, leaving a number of prisoners.

"We have again bombarded Rheims with incendiary shells in retaliation for the bombardment of villages in the rear of our lines. We took several trenches north of Beausejour last night. Two counter-attacks during the night were repulsed.

"A French infantry attack in the Argonne forest, during which the French employed asphyxiating bombs failed.

"Battles between the Moselle and the Meuse continue with increased fierceness. The French suffered the heaviest losses, but were again completely unsuccessful in their attacks.

"In the plain of Woevre they also unsuccessfully attacked. During the morning and evening they continually brought up new forces for the occupation of the Meuse hills near Combres.

"An attack from the forest of Selouse, north of St. Mihiel, broke down before our entanglements.

"In the forest of Ailly we are progressing slowly.

"A French advance to the west of Apremont failed.

"French attacks to the west of Flierry died out under our fire, but north and northeast of this place they led to bitter hand-to-hand fighting in which our troops gained the upper hand and drove the enemy back."

SUBMARINE WAS ELUDED

Liner Was Chased Fifty-seven Miles

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Liverpool, April 9.—The liner Theseus from here March twenty-ninth for Java has sent back word that on March twenty-ninth, she was chased for fifty-seven miles by a submarine which fired seven shells at her, five of them taking effect.

The submarine finally gave up and went after a small Norwegian steamer.

CASUALTIES AT NEUVE CHAPELLE

Another List of 1100 Names Issued To-day

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 9. — Another extended list of casualties totalling eleven hundred names was issued by the British war office today and it emphasizes the fierceness of the battle of Neuve Chapelle last month. The killed in this latest list numbers 336. The total casualties so far published number 4,058 men either killed, wounded or missing for this battle. Out of this number, 1,331 were killed.

THE GREAT TRIP CONTEST WILL OPEN NEXT MONDAY NOW IS THE TIME TO JOIN

Splendid Summer Vacation Trip to California and Western Canada Offered by the Review, Meets With Much Approval — Young Ladies Who Want to go to the Pacific Coast Should Enter Now — Every Item of Expense Will be Paid by the Review — Send in Your Name at Once

Yesterday's issue of The Review carried the news of the great World's Fair contest to all parts of the city and district and from present indications this campaign will be the biggest thing that has happened in this section of the country in a long time. The opportunity to visit the greatest of Expositions ever known and to see Canada's "Golden West" is too good to let go by and the young ladies who have been planning on a summer vacation trip should not fail to take advantage of this unparallelel offer.

All Expenses Paid.

In planning this big trip The Review has made provision for every detail. Every item of expense will be paid by this paper and everything will be first-class in every respect. Chaperons and a competent tour conductor will accompany the party which will be an exclusive one and no trouble or expense will be spared to add to the comfort or pleasure of our fair guests while en route.

The Important Point Now.

But the most important point right now is to get started. The contest will open Monday and the young ladies who want to win should get busy right away. Every day a vote coupon good for twenty-five votes will be published and you should urge your friends to send them in for you. It will also be well for you to ask your friends and neighbors to give you their subscriptions to The Review because you will secure many more votes in this way. And your friends will all be glad to help you. It is easy for them to realize the glories of this great trip and they will want to see you enjoy it. Send in your name today or nominate some friend. The receipt books are ready and you can start to work at once.

Any young lady who can qualify, and who has any ambition to see some of this great world, should not wait, but should see that her nomination is sent in at once. Being skeptical of success in any adventure where one knows that well applied effort is bound to be productive, is sometimes the incentive to greater endeavor, assuring the achievement one is seeking. It is a well-established fact that among those successful in public life a feeling of timidity or hesitation often goes before greatest accomplishments.

Emma Eames, the noted prima donna, has said that often before a public appearance in which she scored her greatest success, she was tempted by a nearly overwhelming desire to run away.

MR. G. O. CAMERON OUT OF THE RACE

Declines Nomination as North Ward Representative

Mr. G. O. Cameron, yesterday nominated for alderman of the north ward, has decided not to enter the field. This will leave Dr. Holloway, Mr. Dodd and ex-Ald. Langford in the ring.

AUSTRIANS AT CARPATHIANS IN COLLAPSE

Invasion of Hungary by Russians Now Being Considered

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PETROGRAD, April 9. — With the Russian forces in possession of all the main summits and slopes of the mountains, army officers here assert that Austrian operations in the Carpathians have collapsed. The Russian general staff is now considering the best approach into Hungary, for this invasion is regarded as a foregone conclusion. Unless the Germans are able, which seems improbable, to transfer a formidable force of first line troops to stiffen the Austrian armies, no German division in Poland will affect the Russian offensive in the Carpathians. Possibilities of separate peace with Austria are freely discussed, with the opnion that Russia will insist on the concession of all demands. The Bourse Gazette says the Hngarians who were all for war with Germany have appealed to the Pope for aid in securing peace.

RUSS. SUCCESSES DEPRESS ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Bucharest, April 9. — Despatches from the frontier of Galicia, describe the Austrians as much depressed by the reported Russian successes farther north. Austrian attempts to cross the river Pruth near Boyan have failed. The troops are demoralized for lack of food.

Three Months for Stealing a Purse

Joseph Findlay's Friend Did Him an Ill Turn

Who steals my purse does not steal trash is a new version of the old adage, composed by Joseph Finlay, an elderly bachelor who lives in East City. Just to prove the fallacy of it, he had James Nelson, a friend of his, arrested on a charge of stealing his purse which contained all his worldly wealth to the extent of $3.75.

Finlay figured that base ingratitude marked the actions of his quondam friend. He had taken him in and housed him when he was broke. He had given him a good bed and never charged a dime, and in the face of such kindness for his friend to then steal his purse, as Finlay charged him with doing in police court today was the last straw.

Nelson was found guilty by Magistrate Dumble after an all morning session and the next three months of usually beautiful weather will be passed by Nelson doing time in the mansion of gray on the hill.

PRISONERS TAKEN TO PENITENTIARY

Rousselle and Mitchell Were Quite Cheerful

David Rousselle and Frederick Mitchell sentenced in yesterday's police court to Kingston penitentiary for five years, were taken to Kngston this morning under guard of Detective Meagher and P. C. Deannard. Turnkey Rae saw the prisoners off at the station.

Both men put on a cheerful front and chatted freely with the officers. Rousselle is a big man and presents quite a contrast to Mitchell, who is of slight build and the younger.

PETERBOROUGH, FRIDAY, APRIL 9, 1915

THE MAYORALTY ELECTION IN CHICAGO.

THE RECENT mayoralty campaign in Chicago brought out some interesting results. The two candidates were Robert M. Sweitzer, a Roman Catholic, and William Hale Thompson, a Protestant, and the voting of the women was a new and interesting feature. There was no big overshadowing civic issue in the campaign. Both candidates favoured about the same things in the way of municipal improvements. Injection of the religious issue into the campaign aroused the voters more than anything else, and the fact that approximately 60 per cent. of the vote in Chicago is Catholic would be an indication that the election would be one-sided. It is unquestioned that Sweitzer received the Democratic nomination because he was a Catholic, and would be expected to poll the Catholic vote. If he could have done that, his election would have been certain. Hence the appeal to religious motives was definitely made to arouse religious prejudices and to serve political ends.

In spite of these facts, Thompson was elected by a plurality of nearly 140,000, which shows that a large number of Catholics must have voted for the Protestant candidate. Whether there was any real religious feeling in the election is doubtful, but it shows that a large number of Catholics were above and independent of an appeal to make their votes turn on their religious affiliation. Sweitzer was, apparently, not the better candidate. Apparently he was supported by the bowery element and interests which had something to gain from his election. But it is refreshing to know that in any event the majority of voters in Chicago were independent of an appeal to prejudice, and probably voted according to the dictates of reason and morality for the better candidate. That is as it should be. As a usual thing, religion has nothing to gain from party politics. Political questions or issues seldom involve religion, and to bring in religion into a campaign clouds the issue, arouses prejudices, and thereby prevents the voters from judging sanely and dispassionately of the questions before them.

The voting of the women was, as we have said, an interesting feature. The total registered vote was 769,017, of which 486,534 were men and 282,483 were women. The returns indicate that Thompson received 66 per cent. of the women's vote. Not only did the Republican women strongly overcome the lead which the Democratic women had in the recent primary, but also many Democratic and Progressive women appear to have voted for Thompson, and 77 per cent. of those registered, voted. In the February primaries of 1914 only 30 per cent. of those registered voted, and the registration was 125,000 smaller than at the present time. That indicates the increasing interest the franchise has for women.

The Socialistic vote did not exceed 20,000, while the Prohibition candidate, John Hill, was much farther behind. The election shows that prohibition, as an issue, aroused very little interest, that women took a keener interest this time than a year ago, and that the electorate was not to be swung by a distorted appeal to religious motives and prejudices.

"THE INVESTIGATION WAS APPROVED."

WE ARE PLEASED to know at this late date that the Examiner's investigations at Belleville were undertaken in the public interest. After a special study on the field, involving deep researches into kitchens, soup-kettles, bunks, etc., including a microscopic examination of bayonets, heads, bully beef and bully things, it came, substantially, to the same conclusion that Alderman Dobbin came to several days before in the latter's account of the Belleville camp, yet it has made no retraction of a violent letter libelling Mr. Dobbin. It asserts it was not a muckraking expedition, and its conclusions justify, apparently, that assertion. However, that is not the main matter here. The point is that at last—at last, let us repeat—the Examiner has taken upon itself the task of conducting an investigation. Now, it is generally conceded that there are several things around Peterborough that should be stirred up, and PERHAPS our esteemed evening contemporary may take one or two more faltering steps in the public interest of Peterborough.

DEFINITENESS AIMED AT.

IT IS CLAIMED in some quarters that the Patriotism and Production Campaign is being conducted on too indefinite lines. The bulletins obtainable free on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa, treating each of one subject, and written by acknowledged expert authorities, are especially definite. Readers in occasional cases may think they know as much as is there set down, or even that they know better, but to the vast majority there cannot fail to be something helpful. At any rate, send for the bulletins and see.

UNDERGROUND OPERATIONS BEFORE PAVEMENT IS PUT DOWN

Superintendent Dobbin of the Waterworks Department submitted a report to the Utilities Commission yesterday afternoon on work that should be done on Hunter street west of Aylmer street before it was paved. He recommended that the five-inch main from Aylmer street to Park street and the four-inch main from Park street to Belmont avenue be taken up and relaid with eight-inch pipe; that the four-inch main on Walton street be taken up and a six-inch pipe laid, and that an eight-inch main be laid on Hunter street from Belmont avenue to Walton street. He estimated the cost, less the value of the pipe taken up, at $3339.45.

A communication was received from the John McDougall Caledonian Iron Works Co., accepting the offer of half of the amount of their account. It was resolved that a cheque be issued to that company for the sum of $209.20 to settle the account.

GREAT BATTLE NOW RAGING

Austrians Made Last Effort to Stem Russian Tide

LONDON, April 9.—Austria-Hungary is making a last desperate effort to press back the Russians from Hungarian soil, but already the Muscovite hordes are deploying along the southern side of the Beskid range and converging on the Hungarian valley. German and Austrian reinforcements are rushing to the support of the defences on the southern slope, where a large number of fortifications have been thrown up to protect the roads leading to Budapest. A great battle is developing along a front of 100 miles, the separate Russian columns endeavoring to form a junction at the base of the mountains. The Russian armies having forced the Dukla, Lupkow and Rostock Passes, are now pouring into the region of the Uszok Pass, where a gigantic struggle for the mastery is now in progress.

The Petrograd correspondent of The London Daily News, Frederick Rennet, cables:

By bringing strong forces along the southern forks of the Beskid Mountains, the Russians have converted the operations of the separate columns invading Hungary into a general battle, which is now developing across a broad front. Great masses of infantry are pressing slowly forward into the Hungarian valley.

During the last eight weeks desperate and unsuccessful efforts have been made by the Germans to force the pass leading into the Stryj valley.

They have had to substitute entirely new attacking forces three or four times, so great were their losses from rifle fire, the bayonet and suffocation in the snow-covered ravines.

The Russians are now approaching the broad roads which converge to the best farming land in Hungary.

Great reinforcements, both Austrian and German, are filling the prepared defensive positions. A large number of fortifications have been thrown up to protect the southern roads.

SUNDAY SCHOOL BUILDING.

The preparations being made to have two new Sunday school buildings for the branches of the Salvation Army Sunday school at Byersville and Brayley's school house are progressing favorably, says Adjutant McElhiney. It may be that some friends would like to help with the work, either at carpentering, digging or at stone mason work. If some friends have any stone which would help with the foundation, it would be gladly received; in fact anything that would assist the children to have a comfortable place to meet in.

WILSON CABLES TO KING ALBERT

Greetings of Friendship and Goodwill

WASHINGTON, April 9.—Birthday greetings to King Albert of Belgium were sent by cable to Havre yesterday by President Wilson in the following message:

"Let me extend on this occasion of the anniversary of your majesty's

KING ALBERT OF BELGIUM.
(Born April 8, 1875.)

birth greetings of friendship and good-will.

(Signed) "Woodrow Wilson."

Argentine Honors Birthday.

BUENOS AYRES, Argentina, April 9.—Members of the Belgian, French and British colonies in Buenos Ayres, together with a number of Argentinians, united yesterday in observing the anniversary of the birth of Albert, King of the Belgians. A telegram of homage carrying several thousand signatures and wishing the prompt freeing of Belgian territory was despatch to the king.

FRENCH TROOPS ARE IN EGYPT

To Assist the Allied Fleets Against Turkey

LONDON, April 9.—French troops from Africa are ready to assist the allied fleets and British expeditionary forces against Turkey. The following official statement was issued by the French War Office last night:

"The expeditionary corps of the Orient, which was placed under command of Gen. A. G. L. D'Amade and concentrated at Bizerta (a fortified seaport of Tunis, Africa) to perfect its organization, effected the voyage of the Levant under the best of conditions. It had been ready since March 15 to aid the allied fleets and British expeditionary corps.

"In waiting it was deemed advisable not to prolong the stay of the troops aboard the transports, and for this reason the hospitality of Egypt was accepted. The French forces have been debarked at Alexandria, and are resting and perfecting their organization and cohesion. They are ready to proceed without delay to any point necessary."

Alexandria is about 600 miles from the Dardanelles, or two days' easy sail.

The Town Council of Galt fixed the municipality's tax rate at 28 mills.

Be Fair to Your Watch

Try to run your car or your sewing machine for several months without oil, and see how stridently they will screech forth protests against your neglect.

Yet it is, perhaps, years since your watch was cleaned or oiled. Though it cannot even squeak its protest, it is slowly but nevertheless surely, wearing itself out. A few drops of oil and a good cleaning will work wonders, as well as add years to its usefulness. Bring it in.

FRENCH ARE STILL MOVING

Drive on Metz Continues With Unabated Vigor

LONDON, April 9.—Surging forward like the menacing tide the waves of the French advance between the Meuse and the Moselle reached a higher point Wednesday than the preceding day, at Eparges, near Lamorville, in the Ailly wood, and in the forest of Montmartre where German positions were stormed and German counter-attacks were repulsed, a night attack early yesterday landed the French soldiers a step in advance of their position on the preceding day and they clung tenaciously to their newly-won ground, beating off three violent enemy attacks. The Germans left many dead on the field, for more than a thousand bodies have already been counted. A German company of 250 men was wiped out near Lamorville in a brilliant and spirited infantry action and the ten survivors were taken prisoners. Several more trenches were captured from the enemy in the Ailly wood and two counter-attacks repulsed. North of Fliry, Montmartre forest, the fight went disastrously for the Germans also, for the French troops, after gaining a footing in the hostile field-works, held their ground in spite of German attempts to dislodge them. Northwest of this point a lucky French shell cut the cable of a German captive balloon and it drifted across the French lines in a south-westerly direction.

WAR TAX NOW LAW

Will not Come Into Force Till Next Thursday

OTTAWA, April 9.—The special war revenue act received the royal assent yesterday and is now the law of the land. Its provisions, by the terms of the act, come into force on Thursday, April 15, so that on and after that date a war tax postage stamp of one cent or a one cent postage stamp in lieu thereof will have to be affixed on all letters and post cards before mailing. The extra cent will not, however, have to be placed on circulars.

If the stamp is not affixed to a letter or postcard the only penalty is that the letter or card goes to the dead letter office.

While special inland revenue stamps with the words "War Tax" upon them have been prepared, and will be found on sale with inland revenue offices and with postmasters in many centres, postage stamps will serve the purpose, if the war stamps are not readily available.

Attempt Made on Life of Sultan

Egypt's Ruler Narrowly Escapes Assassination

LONDON, April 9.—An attempt was made at three o'clock yesterday afternoon to assassinate the Sultan of Egypt, Hussein Kemal, according to a Reuter despatch from Cairo. As the Sultan was leaving Abdin Palace a native fired a shot at him. This went wide, and the native was immediately seized.

The Sultan paid his intended visit to various officials, and a crowd assembled around the palace and gave him an ovation when he returned. His assailant, in a statement, described himself as a native Egyptian, 25 years of age, and a merchant hailing from Mansurah. He was perfectly composed.

Liquor Barred In Vosges.

PARIS, April 9.—The general in command of the army of the Vosges, with the consent of Gen. Joffre, has forbidden the purchase or sale of spirituous liquors in the territory occupied by his army. Violators of this order will be court-martialed and punished severely.

WINNIPEG GRAIN MARKET.

WINNIPEG, April 8.—Wheat opened ⅛c to 1⅛c lower; oats were unchanged, and flax was ⅛c higher to ½c lower. Wheat declined further to the extent of ¼c to ⅝c previous to noon, while trading in futures was of the lightest volume for some considerable time. The news generally was bearish, but there was little inclination to trade. Exporters were inactive, and there was practically nothing doing.

Total inspections yesterday were 266 cars, as against 260 last year, and in sight today were 400 cars.

The weather has been mild with scattered showers.

At the close there was a rally from the low points of the day. Wheat futures closed ¾c to 1⅛c lower; cash, ⅞c to 1½c lower on contract grades; oats ⅛c lower and flax ⅛c to ¼c lower.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, April 8.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Yards were 389 cattle, 1843 hogs, 40 sheep and 167 calves.

Notwithstanding the fact that the run of cattle was light trade was slow and prices were from 10c to 15c lower for the heavy steers and heifers. Cows sold at steady values.

The stocker and feeder trade was dead for want of buyers, after three days of activity. Several dealers had stock on hand ready for sale, but had to hold them over.

Milkers and springers, calves, sheep and lambs, as well as hogs, sold at steady values, with Wednesday's quotations.

Butchers' Cattle.

Choice heavy steers, $7.50 to $7.75; good to choice butchers, $7.25 to $7.50; good, $7 to $7.25; medium, $6.50 to $6.90; common, $6.25 to $6.50; choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; good cows, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $4.75 to $5.25; canners and cutters, $4 to $4.75; bulls, $5.25 to $6.75.

Stockers and Feeders.

Steers, 800 to 900 lbs., sold at $6.50 to $6.75, and in one instance $7 was paid; steers, 650 to 750 lbs., sold at $6 to $6.25; stockers, $5.50 to $5.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a good demand for milkers and springers and prices, while no higher, were very firm. Values ranged from $50 to $95, and one extra choice Holstein springer at $115.

Veal Calves.

Choice veal calves sold at $9 to $10; good at $8 to $9; medium at $5.50 to $7, and common at $4 to $5.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes of light weight, sold at $7 to $8.50; heavy ewes and rams, $6 to $7.50; lambs at $10.50 to $12; spring lambs sold at $8 to $12 for the bulk, but there were some very small lambs sold at $5.50 to $7.50 each.

Hogs.

Selects weighed off cars sold at $9.15 to $9.25.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, April 8.—Cattle—Receipts, 3000; market slow; beeves, $6 to $8.90; cows and heifers, $3 to $7.90; calves, $6 to $8.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 15,000; market firm; light, $6.70 to $7; mixed, $6.70 to $7.02½; heavy, $6.50 to $7; rough, $6.50 to $6.65; pigs, $5.50 to $6.50; bulk of sales, $6.90 to $6.97½.

Sheep—Receipts, 10,000; market steady; native, $7.10 to $8.50; lambs, native, $7.90 to $10.50.

NO INSULT GIVEN TO WORKERS.

Lloyd George Vigorously Denies Charges Made by Keir Hardie.

LONDON, April 9.—David Lloyd George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, replied yesterday to a charge made by James Keir Hardie at the meeting of the Independent Labor Party at Norwich, that the Chancellor had maligned and insulted workmen, and that as a result word had gone around the world that "the working classes were a set of drunken wasters."

The Chancellor declared that he particularly said it was a minority of the men against whom the charge of excessive drinking was made and repeats the statement that "the drinking habits of the minority have the effect of seriously diminishing the output of war materials at a time when the success of the allies depends entirely upon that material being largely increased."

Fine Old Gentleman Suffered 40 Years With His Kidneys

He even had Hemorrhages from the Kidneys, so you may know how bad he was. Yet today, at 67 years, Mr. Allen is able to do a good day's work or enjoy a long drive without the least pain. This is what Gin Pills did for him. They will do as much for you if you have any Kidney or Bladder Trouble.

Port Elgin, N.B. November 12th.

"I feel it my duty, for the sake of those afflicted with similar troubles, to send you these few lines about Gin Pills. I am about 67 years old and have been troubled with Kidney Trouble since I was 25 years old. This was brought on by my getting over-heated and then sitting on cold steps in a draught.

At last, I had Hemorrhages of the Kidneys. I went to three doctors and tried most everything on the market but got no relief. I got very weak, had pain and lameness in the Back; often, I had to lie down during the day and it hurt me to be on a waggon. I began to think there was no help for me. The bleeding continued for 16 months until I just happened to try Gin Pills which has now put an end to the trouble.

Now I can look back over 15 months at my relief from suffering and anxious care. I can do a lot of chores, drive all day, have no pain, although I am still taking 2 pills a week as they seem to make things easier."

JEREMIAH ALLEN

Gin Pills are sold by dealers everywhere at 50c. a box, 6 boxes for $2.50. Trial treatment sent free on request. These pills can be had in the United States under the name "GINO" Pills. 250

Mors Is Discharged.

WHITE PLAINS, N.Y., April 9.—After being locked up in the White Plains jail since Feb. 3 because of his confession that he killed eight aged inmates of the German Oddfellows' Home in Yonkers, Frederick Mors was discharged yesterday by Coroner James P. Dunn. Mors, who is believed to be of unsound mind, will probably be consigned to the Matteawan Asylum for the Criminal Insane. District Attorney Frederick E. Weeks, after a long investigation, concluded that he did not have evidence to convict Mors in court.

OPPOSE VOTE FOR SOLDIERS

Liberals Make Violent Objection to Measure

OTTAWA, April 9.—The bill to enfranchise Canadian soldiers at the front formed the chief subject for debate at yesterday's session of the House of Commons. Several speakers on both sides participated and at times the discussion grew warm. The bill will come up again to-day in committee.

Upon the orders of the day, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, rising to a question of privilege, read to the House an attack made upon him by The Federal Reporter, the official Conservative campaign sheet. The article charged him with having made no appeal to French-Canadians to enlist and accused him of unfriendliness to the Empire. The article he denounced as a "malignant libel and slander." He had spoken at several meetings in the Province of Quebec for the express purpose of stimulating recruiting among the French-Canadians and he was glad to say that the militia authorities reported that many more men had offered than could be accepted.

Sir Robert Borden said he had no personal knowledge of the article, but cited attacks made upon himself last fall by Liberal newspapers. When he was working twenty-four hours a day, they said "his lazy lips" had never been opened to make any patriotic speeches.

Judge Doherty, in moving the second reading of his bill to enfranchise the Canadian volunteers in Canada and at the front, explained at length its details. Every volunteer who was a British subject, 21 years of age, would be permitted to vote at the next Dominion election in the electoral district in which he had resided for thirty days before his enlistment. Each soldier would make an affidavit and mark his ballot in the presence of a commissioned officer but without disclosing to the officer how he voted. The ballot and affidavit would be sealed up and transmitted to the clerk of the crown in chancery at Ottawa. That official would transmit all the envelopes received by him to the proper returning officers, and each returning officer would count the ballots in the presence of their candidates or their represenatives.

Continuing, the Minister said that the principle involved in the bill was neither novel nor revolutionary. In the present war New Zealand has passed legislation permitting her volunteers oversea to take part in the general elections, and he read a cablegram from the Premier of New Zealand to the effect that under that legislation 10,000 votes had been recorded.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in opening, said that the bill if not revolutionary, certainly greatly extended existing legislation.

There seemed at first blush to be a hardship in depriving any citizen of his right to vote merely because he was not at the time in the electoral district of his residence. But at every election railway men, commercial travelers and others were unable to vote. Our railways had to be operated, trains had to be moved, even though many citizens were thereby disfranchised. Men in the lumber camps, fishermen on the high sea, sailors, men employed in construction of our great railways were often disfranchised, and yet the laborer digging a trench for a railway had the same legal right to cast his ballot as the bravest volunteer digging trenches in France or Belgium.

Sir Wilfrid said that the bill not only attempted to preserve the right of suffrage to electors who happened to be volunteers, but went further and created a new franchise, making a man a voter because he was a volunteer, no matter what the legislation of his particular province might be. He saw no reason why the soldier in Canada should not vote, but they could go home for that purpose. As to the soldiers in the field, they were beyond the jurisdiction of the Canadian Parliament, they were subject to the orders of the British army officers. He also objected to the form of the ballot which provided for the volunteer voting, not for the candidate, but for the party.

Sir Wilfrid said the bill, if passed, would be destructive of discipline in the army, would open the door to every kind of fraud and would be impossible of enforcement.

Sir Robert Borden said that the men who were risking their lives for British liberty and British institutions should not be penalized by disfranchising them. He thought the fathers, mothers, wives and sisters of the men at the front would not view with approval the cold-blooded way in which Sir Wilfrid Laurier referred to the Canadian volunteers. The [illegible] could not believe that the officers and men who were risking their lives for Canada would stoop to commit election frauds. He did not believe the country would think so, and he did not believe that their families and friends would fail to note the low estimate put upon the virtue of Canadian volunteers by the leader of the Opposition.

Sir Robert denounced as absurd the idea of there being any conflict between the civil authority of Canada and the British War Office. The men at the front would not let voting interfere with their fighting, but they should not be disfranchised because they were willing to fight.

Dr. Clark (Red Deer) said in England the army had always been kept free from political affairs. The civil power was always supreme and a soldier was regarded as a man apart. The Government should have consulted Lord Kitchener before bringing in legislation, but they probably had not done so because they knew only too well what his answer would be. When Lord Kitchener accepted his present position he distinctly stated

THE WAR TAX ON RAILWAY TICKETS

Will be Collected by Ticket Agents Acting for the Government

Passengers travelling on all Canadian railways and steamships will start paying a war tax to the Canadian Government on and after April 15th, and instructions covering the amount to be paid on each ticket and the manner in which the tax is to be collected by the railway agent, have just been issued to the passenger departments of the several railways by the government. The tax is not a tax upon the railway by any means, but will be paid by the travelling public. Stamps will not be used.

On All Tickets.

The tax applies not only on railway tickets, but also on steamships, chair, parlor and sleeping car tickets, also tickets sold in the United States, or by the Pullman Co., acting for the Canadian roads, from any point in Canada, are subject to the tax, which must be collected by the foreign agent selling same. For instance, if a man buys a sleeping car ticket in Detroit, from Toronto to Montreal, the Detroit agent collects the tax.

Passengers who refuse to pay the tax are subject to a fine not exceeding $50, and further, though the railway companies are obliged to refund the fare, or a part of it, the war tax is absolutely not refundable.

General passenger agent of the C. N. R. and R. L. Fairbairn, president of the Eastern Canadian Passenger Association, stated yesterday that the association had discussed the rates at a meeting held in Montreal a few days ago, and that all points were thrashed out and made clear, before the insrtuctions were issued. He also said that under the system that has been worked out the railways will have an absolute check on all their agents, and that the government could not be cheated.

General Instructions.

The general instructions issued are in part as follows:

On all tickets over $1 and not more than $5, five cents.

For each additional $5 or fractional part thereof, five cents.

The tax applies to all kinds of tickets for which cash is paid, providing the amount paid is over $1, and communication tickets are taxable on the whole amount paid for them at the time of purchase.

Tickets issued in exchange orders drawn at other points are not taxable, because no purchase money is collected when the exchange ticket is issued.

The tax applies to the total charge on a ticket, including meals and berths on steamers.

Where It Applies.

Passage tickets entitling the holder to transportation from any port in Canada to any port outside of Canada other than Newfoundland, the West Indies, Bermuda, British Guiana, British Honduras or the United States, must pay $1 tax if the transportation costs more than $10, $3 if it costs more than $40, and $5 if the cost is more than $65.

Sleeping and parlor car passengers are charged 10 cents for each berth or seat bought. Double berths pay double taxes, and drawing-room suites pay according to the number of seats or berths in the suite.

The act provides that agents shall positively refuse to sell tickets to persons declining to pay the tax, and there is a fine of $50 for each and every infraction of the law.

IS HOLLAND THREATENED

London Heurs That Germany Has Declared War

LONDON, April 9. — There were persistent rumors in London last evening that Germany had either declared war on Holland, or that her troops had occupied that strip of Dutch territory that extends from the Belgian frontier on the coast to the River Scheldt. The reports lack confirmation, and are not credited by those who should know if either action had been taken.

It is possible that the reports arose from the news received in the last few days from Dutch sources, that the Germans were strengthening their position around the Dutch frontier, and that much uneasiness prevailed at The Hague and other Dutch cities as a result of the seizure or sinking of Dutch steamers by German submarines.

The [illegible] intervention in the war, but their army is ready to repel any invasion of Dutch territory, complete preparations with that object having been made long ago.

Another diplomatic report which has created immense interest is that from Rome, to the effect that Austria is seeking a separate peace with Russia. This, likewise, lacks confirmation, and it is not credited, as it is not considered likely that Germany would be sending reinforcements to the Carpathians if there were any doubt of Austria's loyalty to her ally.

Italy takes the matter more seriously than the other nations, for should it prove to be true it would end her hopes of gaining territorial accessions from Austria. However, the stubborn way in which Austria is resisting the Russian advances in the Carpathians seems to contradict the suggestion that she is ready to seek peace at Russia's terms.

It is stated that the police at Hamilton will be provided with rifles and bayonets that will be stacked at the police station.

This German Charitable

LONDON, April 9. — A protest against German self-esteem and against the prevailing spirit of hatred for England is made by Stimmen Der Zeit, the organ of the German Jesuits, which asserts that each nation has a special mission to perform in the world. The wish is expressed that the rich talents and gifts of the cool, calculating English may become a blessing to mankind, and that for France there may arise her old and precious civilization.

SMALL CROWD AT CLOSING

Gymnastic Program at the Y.M.C.A. Was Well Executed

A gymnastic exhibition that was supposed to represent a portion of the gymnasium activities of the Y. M. C. A. was given last evening before a disappointingly small audience but it is confidently hoped that at the repeated performance this evening every seat will be taken. The merit of the exhibition and the skill and ability shown by those taking part warrants a good large attendance for besides being a revelation of what the gymnasium is doing, it affords continuous entertainment owing to the numerous special features which Physical Director Carson has spent many arduous hours preparing. Some Y.M.C.A. exhibitions consist of monotonous and stereotyped drills, marches and exercises that while good, form the standpoint of physical exercise alone, fail to provide a program that will hold the keen attention of an audience. Mr. Carson has overcome this by introducing novelty numbers such as the oxen trot, a side splitting performance; the Sailors' Hornpipe, dancing by eight small boys in costume; dance of the Dixie rubes, the Highland Fling with bagpipe accompaniment, and winding up with a very pretty illuminated maze run.

The marching calisthenics by the junior business boys showed the members to be smart and active. A number of tumbling acts were done by the "B" boys. The free hand drill by senior leaders also showed up well and were performed with dexterity and grace. The horse jumping by the "A" boys was also well done. The youngsters showed no fear in boldly doing the pike dive over the highest height to which the horse could be elevated.

Wrestling Bouts Good.

A wrestling bout between Messrs. Dunsford and Callander provided a few minutes good fun and both boys put up a neat little tussle, mainly to show the spectators the great variety of holds and throws of the game. Messrs. Lees and Hartikain also had a bout in which they gave the audience something worth watching, both of these wrestlers being able to hold their own in any lightweight wrestling competition in the province.

In the second part of the program a wand drill was introduced by the intermediate leaders, followed by parallel bar work by the senior leaders. These boys performed extremely well, performing daring and original feats that called for perfect body control as well as clear heads.

Dances Were Good.

The dance of the Dixie rubes was very pretty, modelled something along the lines of the old fashioned barn dance. Mr. Gordon Yeoman did the Highland Fling his father providing the accompaniment on the bagpipes. He was encored.

The best and most spectacular part of the program was reserved till the last, when the human pyramid building by the seniors, showed what can be done with practice. Fan shaped pyramids, towers and other difficult representations were shown on the parallel bars.

The illuminated maze run, in which the gymnasium was darkened and the boys entered carrying lanterns was a charming closing number; the boys performing all manner of fancy evolutions to the sprightly accompaniment of music.

Miss Grace Gumpricht contributed a piano solo and provided music for the different marches and drills.

Mr. Carson is to be congratulated on putting up such a worthy exhibition. A much larger audience should make sure they see the repeated performance tonight.

THE GREAT TRIP CONTEST

Candidates or prospective candidates who are imbued with this "runaway" feeling should have foremost in their minds the prize that is in store for them. Surely it is a chance of a life time, and "Off to the Pacific" should be your Slogan.

Young ladies are advised to enter the contest early. In former contests there have always been some who would say: "Well, if I had been nominated in the early stages I could have headed the list."

Remember the contest is free. A candidates does not even need to be a subscriber to The Review. The contest will open April 12th and close on June 5th, so it will be seen that the battle will be a short one.

Do not wait a minute ladies. See that your nomination is sent to the contest department at once. Be sure that your nomination calls for the district in which you reside. The subscription price and vote value will be supplied to each candidate and the subscription blanks are furnished in nice shape to handle. Special ballots for the votes will be issued, good until the end of the contest. Subscribers paying at the office will be given a ballot and can then hand it to their favorite candidate. Go in at once, and go in to WIN.

This is the most elaborate tour The Review has ever arranged for a contest. Nothing but the best will be provided from start to finish. The party will ride in style from the time it starts until the return, stopping at the best hotels en route and allowing for delightful side trips. The tour was made international to give an opportunity to see the world's fair in San Francisco and view the woneers of the Rockies in the Canadian West. A very enjoyable feature will be the ocean ride on the Pacific from San Francisco to Vancouver and Victoria. The schedule is being arranged to take in the principal cities in the Canadian Northwest. The trip will be both enjoyable and educational. Send in your name right now and go to California.

40,000 Albanians Concentrated.

ROME, April 9.—A telegram from Valona says: Forty thousand Albanians, led by German and Turkish officers, are collected between Elbasan and Tirana for an attack on Durazzo and subsequently on Serbia. This movement, together with the recent attack on the Serbians, is believed to form part of a concerted plan for distracting the Balkan states from united action against Austria and Turkey.

LIEUT. WILKINS WAS RECONNOITRING WHEN SHOT DOWN

(Norwood Register.)

Mr. F. W. Wilkins, D. T. S., of this village, has not received as yet very extensive particulars concerning the injuries received by his son, Lieut. Harold O. D. Wilkins, whom it will be remembered was reported as having been wounded while on active service in France. From the information that has come to hand, though, it seems that he was very seriously wounded.

A note from one of the officers states Lieut. Wilkins was in charge of a reconnoitring party on the night of March 10th, searching for information for the next day's operations, when they came in contact with a patrol of the enemy and he was shot. The ball went through the chest piercing the lung. He was carried to the rear by his companions where his wound was given attention and as soon as possible he was removed to the base hospital as Boulogne.

As Lieut. Wilkins was wounded on the eve of the famous Neuve Chapelle raid and he was in that part of France, it would appear that he might have been engaged in obtaining data relative to the raid.

Further information as to his condition is anxiously awaited at his home here. A strong factor in hoping for his recovery is that he possessed a splendid physique.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY.

Preparations are in progress for celebrating St. George's Day this year (April 23rd) on a national basis. It will be in the nature of a great intercessory service for the men at the front.

The service, with the kind permission of Canon Davidson, will be held at St. Johns' Church.

The Bishop of Toronto, Dr. Sweeny, will be the preacher. Further details will be announced in this column next week. Canon Allen of Millbrook will be the preacher at St. George's in the morning and evening of the following Sunday, April 25th, and at St. Allan's Mission in the afternoon.

Increase Strength of Mounted Rifles

Fifty Men for Machine Gun Sections

Ottawa, April 9.—Notice has been received by the 8th C. M. R. that the strength of the machine gun sections of the mounted regiments has been increased from 27 to 50 men, with four guns.

As a result of the increase in the establishment, the 8th C. M. R. are now open for a limited number of volunteers. They have been keeping just about up to the strength called for, 554 officers and men. It was announced at the barracks at Lansdowne Park that only the very best of men would be accepted, and there is no use in any other kind applying. Men are wanted who can shoot, ride and know all about horses. The corps has advanced so far in its training that it would be handicapped considerably by taking on green men.

There is a rumor in circulation that the Mounted Rifles will leave here within the next month and a half, although officers of the corps know nothing of it. Whether they will leave here for a training camp, for the front or for Egypt is not known.

CHARGE OF FORGERY.

Lindsay, April 9.—Chief Short is on the look out for a local man, who is charged with forging the name of Thos. Begg to a cheque on the Bank of Montreal for the sum of $30.00. The accused has made his get-away, and his whereabouts is unknown.

THE WAY OUT.

Change of Food Brought Success and Happiness.

An ambitious but delicate girl, after failing to go through school on account of nervousness and hysteria, found in Grape-Nuts the only thing that seemed to build her up and furnish her the peace of health.

"From infancy," she says, "I have not been strong. Being ambitious to learn at any cost I finally got to the High School but soon had to abandon my studies on account of nervous prostration and hysteria.

"My food did not agree with me, and I grew thin and despondent. I could not enjoy the simplest social affair for I suffered constantly from nervousness in spite of all sorts of medicines.

"This wretched condition continued until I became interested in the letters of those who had cases like mine and who were being helped by eating Grape-Nuts.

"I had little faith, but procured a pkg. and after the first dish I experienced a peculiar satisfied feeling that I had never gained from any ordinary food. I slept and rested better that night and in a few days began to grow stronger.

"I had a new feeling of peace and restfulness. In a few weeks, to my great joy, the headaches and nervousness left me and life became bright and hopeful. I resumed my studies and later taught ten months with ease—using Grape-Nuts every day. I am now the mistress of a happy home, and the old weakness has never returned."

Music Case for Mr. Cyril Devey

At the conclusion of choir practice in St. John's Church last night, Mr. Cyril Devey was presented with an address and a handsome leather music case from the members of the choir. The Rev. Canon Davidson, although unable to be present through illness, sent a letter of kindly appreciation of services rendered to the church during the last nine years. Mr. J. J. Howden, in making the presentation, said that Mr. Cyril Devey would be missed by the congregation as well as the choir, and conveyed the best wishes of all for his future welfare. The young organist, in thanking his friends for their kind wishes and beautiful present, said that St. John's would always be his mother church wherever duty might call him.

Mr. Cyril Devey began service in the choir of St. Mathias, Winchester, Ont., serving for two years. The last nines years have been spent with St. John's choir and organ, except for a year with All Saints'. He is nineteen years of age, and left for Port Hope this morning on the noon train.

Contest Closes Saturday, June 5th

The Trip of a Lifetime

COMMENCING MONDAY The Review will inaugurate one of the greatest circulation campaigns ever attempted by a newspaper in this section of Ontario. Four young ladies are going to have the trip of a lifetime next June. Twenty-one days of solid enjoyment and pleasure, without a detail lacking, not a thing overlooked, that can be done to insure them all the comforts the most modern methods of travel can supply. Three whole weeks of travel amid the most luxurious appointments and surroundings. And all this as a guest of The Review. It is easy to win a trip, so send in your nomination today and get full particulars.

THE CONTEST PLAN.

The selection of the party in this great contest is put squarely up to the readers of The Review. Votes will be allowed on all subscription payments to the paper, and the candidate in each district securing the highest total of votes will be declared the winner. The trip is well worth working hard for, and the readers of The Review are urged to assist their favorite ladies who want to go to the World's Fair. The return trip will be through the Canadian Northwest, and all of the principal cities will be visited.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition is a national undertaking. It will exhibit the resources and achievements of all the peoples of the earth, and will represent an outlay of over fifty million dollars.

The Panama-Pacific International Exposition will be the "last word" in expositions. It celebrates an event of world importance — the completion of the Panama Canal, the greatest physcal accomplishment in history — one that will affect the commerce of all the world and the relations of all peoples. No celebration of this event would be adequate unless it surpassed in dignity, grandeur and importance and previous affair of its kind.

It is with this fact in mind that this wonderful Panama-Pacific International Exposition has been planned and will be carried out.

Many circumstances and conditions combine to give this Panama-Pacific International Exposition fundamental differences and advantages — to increase its educational and its commercial importance — to make it more than ever before an exposition demanding the attention of manufacturer, consumer, student, art-lover, nature-lover, and sight-seer — in short, to make it above all others in history one that should be seen.

It is the first international exposition to be held on the shores of the Pacific. It is the first to be held in a seaport. It is the first that has celebrated a contemporaneous event. It is the first that has celebrated an event of world-wide importance. It is the first that has been held in a spot where the climate permits its being open for ten months and where flowers grow the year around. These factors, and many more, have been considered in the plans of this exposition and will be found reflected in the beauty, dignity, attraction and brilliancy of the finished result.

California Trips De Luxe in Every Respect

The Review's De Luxe Trips are just what the word De Luxe implies.

De Luxe means something better than the ordinary, something extremely fine and superior. The De Luxe trips mean that you will travel like a millionaire travels. Your berth will be in the most luxurious solid steel Pullman car; your meals will be the finest the best dining-car service on the earth can provide. You will have rooms at the best hotels; you will have free access to the expositions; you will have free auto trips, free sight-seeing excursions.

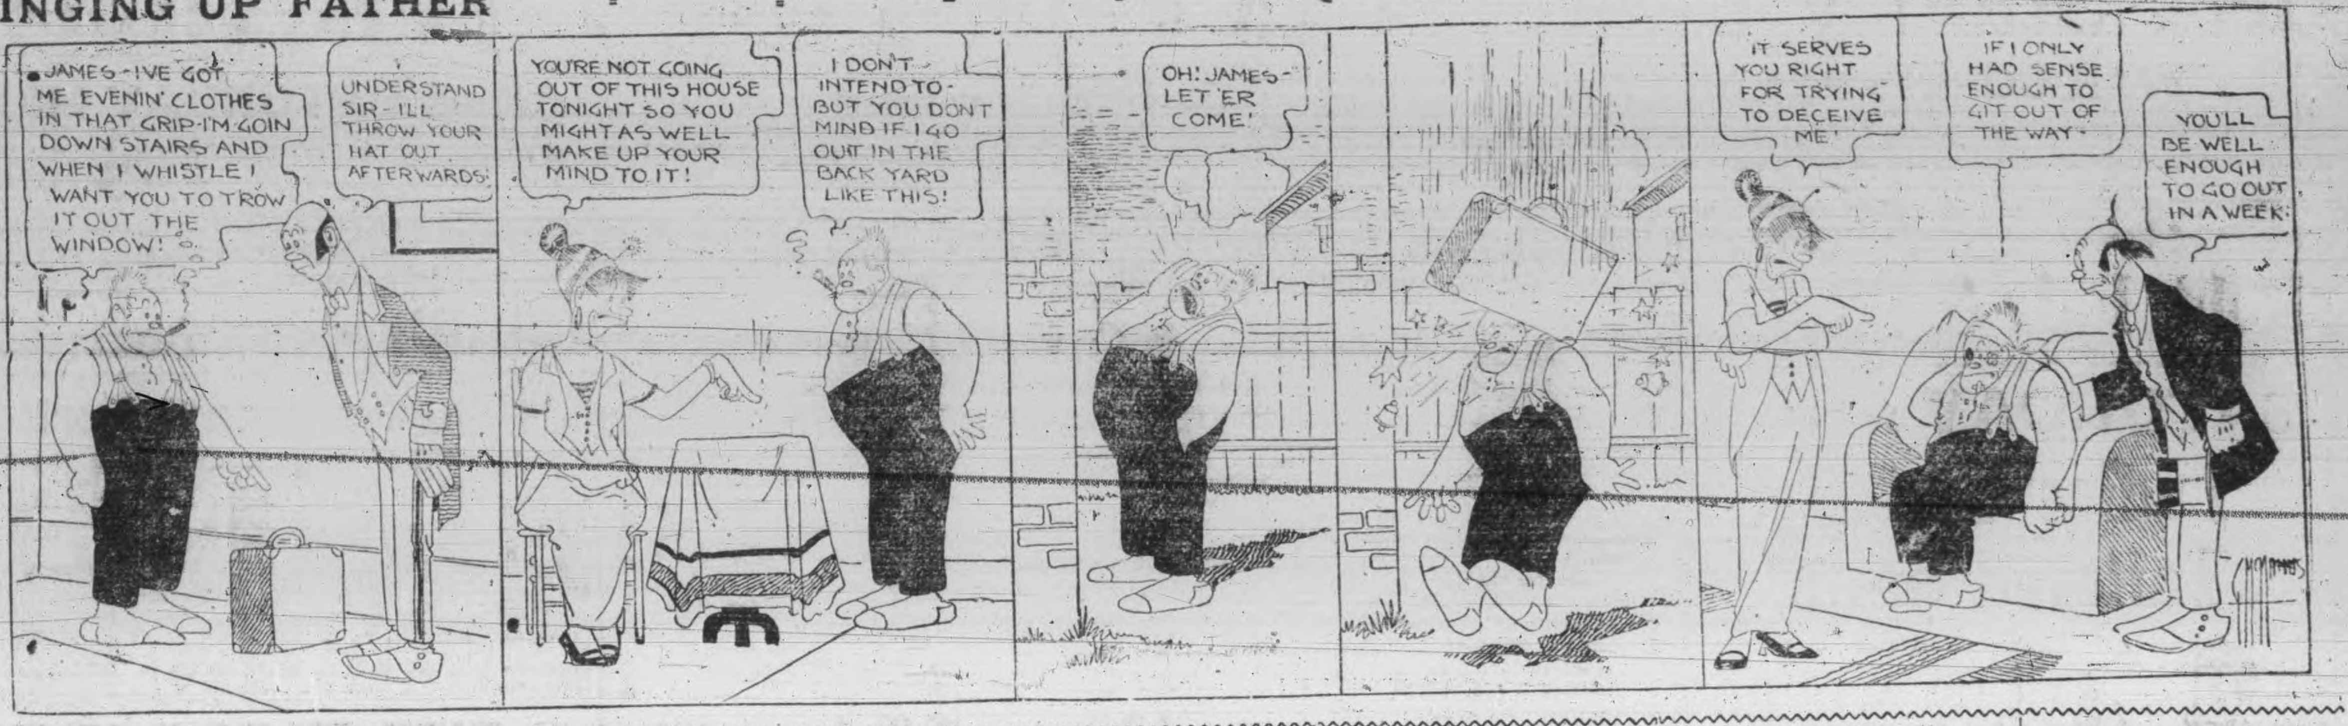
BRINGING UP FATHER

BY GEORGE McMANUS



SPORTING NEWS

THE PASSING OF JACK JOHNSON

Since the news came ticking over the wires that Jack Johnson was no longer champion, we have waited patiently to see a few lines, with a touch of sympathy in them for the vanquished. Hundreds could enlarge on the fast life he had led and point to his defeat as a result. Many could dope how strong he would be financially in the course of a few months but few offered any word of regret. In last night's Toronto Telegram the following appeared and from its strain we judge it to be from the pen of James Fitzgerald:—

The sporting spotlight will shine no more on one, Jack Johnson, the world's heavyweight champion for six years. During that time the property man of the World's Fistic Drama Company has been a busy man. The black champion loved the limelight, and the public demanded that the searchlight be kept on all the moves of the Ethiopian.

Not many tears were shed at any place on the globe, where civilized people live, when on Monday afternoon at Havana, Jack Johnson lost his pugilistic crown to Jess Willard.

Never in the history of the ring, did the same feeling towards a champion exist. In all the vast crowd at the Havana race track only a few could be found, who really wanted Johnson to retain his title. You could write their names on the fly leaf of your prayer book and still have room left to write the week's memos.

When honest John L. Sullivan lost to Corbett stout Irish hearts the world over cried for the grand old man of the ring. Gentleman Jim Corbett left a trail of tears behind him when he said good-bye to the championship.

And so on with many of the heroes of great ring battles. But not so with smiling Jack Johnson.

And why? In the first place the wearer of the famous golden smile represents another race of people. A race that will never hold a very high place in the Land of the Free.

And in the second place: Since the day that Jack Johnson took the title away from Tommy Burns no one in America has ever lost an opportunity of playing a trump card against him.

With the sporting fraternity, from New York to Frisco, playing on his reputation with 45-cent metre guns, the world at large was led to believe that Jack Johnson was a terrible man.

To get down to real facts. Many who know will tell you that Jack Johnson has never been guilty of some of the sins that can be laid at the doors of other heavyweight champions, who were immensely popular in their day.

The black man has never been guilty of molesting anyone in America, and his famous trial in Chicago was a farce. He was convicted on the evidence of a woman whom he had befriended, and who afterwards acknowledged she had been paid for her evidence.

The campaign against Johnson had been carried into the courts of justice and he was defeated.

There is some excuse to offer for the general feeling against a black man holding a title such as Johnson held for six years. We have been taught to think that the world's heavyweight champion represented all that was big and strong in a man. Maybe we are not glad that this honor can be claimed again by our own race.

As a fighting champion Jack Johnson deserved a world of credit. With the entire white race against him he carried his golden smile into the ring in the memorable contest with Jeffries and not only won the day but made thousands of friends.

After an exile of two years from his own land he was not afraid to come as near home as the law would allow and defend his title before a crowd that he could never expect to receive an atom of sympathy from.

The late champion may have had his faults. His predecessors have been guilty of many. And none in their day have had more temptation thrown at them than Jack Johnson.

Stratford Council will consider a by-law at its next meeting intended to compel owners of new subdivisions to pay the full cost of all local improvements, such as sewers and sidewalks.

JOE LALLY WILL VISIT THIS CITY IN INTEREST OF THE GAME

Will Address Local Fans in the Near Future — Lacrosse News

Joe Lally, the man who is putting forth such big efforts to bring back lacrosse as Canada's leading sport, will visit Peterborough in the near future and address a meeting of fans thus helping to create greater enthusiasm. Lally is "the" lacrosse man of Canada and aided by his first lieutenant, Frank Doyle, he has worked wonders. Peterborough is not taking to the game as quickly as a city of this size should. Lally is coming so watch for a big boost. In all probability a monster meeting will greet the Cornwall man on his first visit to Peterborough.

* * *

Stirling will have an Intermediate and a juvenile team in the O.A.L.A. this season.

* * *

The Campbellford Social and Athletic Club will have a lacrosse team in the O.A.L.A. under the management of R. H. Cole.

* * *

A meeting is to be held next week of the younger members of the T.A.S. Dope says a couple of lacrosse teams are to be formed and other athletic movements discussed.

* * *

Moose Jaw News:—This city seems to be in for a lacrosse boom. That it is under way was evident at the junior hockey league supper the other night when the boys decided to form a four-club league. That bunch of boys can set anything on its feet, and now that they have turned their attention to lacrosse one may be sure that it will boom.

* * *

The present looks like a good year for lacrosse at Hastings, as nearly all who took part last year are eager to get back into the game again. Officers have been elected, and plans are already laid for the placing of a strong team in the field.

INDOOR BASEBALL.

Indoor baseball games at the armouries tonight are:— E and F from 8 to 9 and G and H from 9 to 10. In Wednesday's games, A defeated Bugle Band by 12-4, and C defaulted to B.

The following players of "H" Co. are requested to be at the Armouries tonight at eight-thirty sharp for their game with "G" Co.: Hardill, Heaslip, Turner, Clancy, Jackson, McBride, Carr, Nichol, Pidgeon, J. Davis, Smith, Stewart, Darling.

"BILLIE" BELL, of Montreal, who was spare man for the champion Ottawa N. H. A. team, has enlisted for overseas service. A Toronto paper, commenting on his move, says: "When he was on the ice he was always looking for trouble." He's gone to the right place to find it this time.

COMMENT As You Like it

FOUR TEAMS should constitute the City Baseball League. During the past few years the amateur baseball in Peterborough consisted of a Mercantile League. It afforded baseball for a large number of players, but very little baseball for the fans. The poor calibre of ball was the result of one feature — there were too many teams in the league. Eight teams are far too many, six teams are unwieldy, five teams is very inconvenient, and four teams is just right. There is a rumor current that five teams will apply at the meeting tonight for berths. We don't wish to crush the hopes of anyone who is figuring on becoming a Charles Murphy, but we do feel that the meeting tonight should admit four and no more.

The question arises as to how one of the teams can be left out and yet give everyone a fair shake. Immediately, the thought of placing the five names in a hat and drawing four out, comes to mind, but consideration of that method prompts us to condemn it. It is just possible that the team left in the hat and thereby left out of the league would be one which had been organized for weeks. That would certainly not be in the interest of the league and would naturally affect the prospects for success. The right way, in our opinion, to decde which team should remain in, is to go thoroughly into the strength of each, figure what players the various teams have under cover, figure what the strength of the various teams will be, and then chop off the weakest. It may be true that the man representing the proposed team which is cut off will register a kick, but the league will gain sufficient strength by that one stroke of business to withstand the kick.

JOE LALLY is to come to Peterborough. So we are informed by Secretary Sutherland of the Peterborough Lacrosse Club. The old Cornwall boy will be welcomed, and here's hopng his visit will be a success. The grand old game needs more boosting—more than what it is getting—before it will be in strong in Peterborough. Lally is the man who can do that necessary boosting.

MATT HYNES, the former Canadian League pitcher, has been turned loose by the Los Angeles club because of the poor condition of his lunch hook.

GEORGE ORT, better known at Riverside Park last year as "Peaches" or "Crab," has signed to play with Lynn, Mass., in the New England League. Lynn is where Ort first played professional ball.

Oppose Vote For Soldiers

in the House of Lords that he would take no part in political affairs. His phrase was: "Being a soldier I have no politics."

Solicitor-General Meighen characterized as rubbish the arguments advanced by Liberal members that campaign literature sent to the soldiers in the trenches might cause ill-feeling among the men and have a tendency towards lowering their fighting efficiency.

Hon. Mr. Oliver did not fear the way the soldiers would vote, but he very much feared the way their votes would be counted. Officials that could not be trusted to buy bandages for wounded soldiers would not scruple to violate election laws. He regarded the bill as a piece of electoral villainy.

Mr. Speaker: "That statement must be withdrawn."

Mr. Oliver: "I withdraw it unreservedly, but it is quite within the facts."

RACE MEET HERE THIS SUMMER

Mr. J. M. Brook has returned from Orillia where he attended the Canadian circuit of horsemen held there on Monday last. Representatives from all over the district were present. The exact dates of the races in Peterborough have not yet been decided upon. Lindsay's dates will likely be July 1st and 2nd.

Further announcements will be given specifically dealing with the classes and other clauses which will govern the rules to be conformed to. It is the aim of the horsemen in Peterborough to make this one of the greatest racing events ever held here and some of the star performers of the turf will be on hand.

DON'T FORGET TONIGHT'S MEETING.

The stage is all set for a large and enthusiastic meeting tonight in the Oriental Hotel. At this meeting a City Baseball League will be formed. Everyone interested is urged to be on hand sharp at eight. You don't have to be representing a team. Drop around and see what's doing.

DR. GALLIVAN IS PRESIDENT

Local Medical Association Elect Officers

At a meeting of the Peterborough Medical association, in the public library, last night, some matters relative to the convention in this city of the Ontario Association were discussed.

Officers for the local association were elected as follows:—

President—Dr. J. V. Gallivan.
First Vice-Pres.—Dr. N. H. Sutton.
Second Vice-Pres.—Dr. F. C. Neal.
Secretary—Dr. D. C. King.
Treasurer—Dr. N. D. Buchanan.
Library Committee—Dr. Morgan, Dr. Malcolm McCulloch, Dr. Scott.
Executive Committee—Dr. Cameron, Dr. Mann, Dr. McPherson.
Auditors—Dr. Greer, Dr. McNulty.

PERSONALS

Mr. James Fitzgerald of Indian River entertained about twenty of his friends on Tuesday evening.

Mrs. G. F. Horsley, 409 Walton Street, left last evening for Halifax, N.S., from where she will sail for England on the Metagama.

The last of the series of twilight musicales under the auspices of the Women's Art Association will be held on Saturday, April 17th. It was formerly announced for tomorrow but has been postponed until that date.

At Thursday's meeting of the Morning Musicale Society Mrs. Allan read an extremely interesting paper on "Music and War." The musical numbers were contributed by Miss Lora Logan, Miss Ada Richardson and Miss O. Johnston. On April 22nd, a business meeting will be held when the officers will be elected for next season.

A very interesting meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. T. W. Whalley, Engleburn Ave., when the reports were heard from the delegates to the Dominion Alliance Convention. Quite a number of ladies were present. Mrs. Lane sang a beautiful solo which was much enjoyed.

The next regular meeting f the local union will be held at the Y. W. C. A. the last Friday of this month.

The residence of Mrs. Chiles, 92 Aylmer St., was the scene of a very interesting affair on Wednesday evening last, when Miss Jessie Havery, of Albert St., a popular local girl, was given a miscellaneous shower by about twenty of her friends. The affair was a complete surprise to Miss Havery. A pleasant evening was spent in music and games, and Miss Havery was the recipient of the heartiest good wishes and congratulations on her approaching wedding, which takes place this month.

BANKERS' DANCE.

The bankers of Peterborough gave one of the nicest dances of the year last evening, the proceeds of which have been donated to the King's Daughters. It was held in the Conservatory of Music hall.

Every one was unanimous in his praise of the music, which was supplied by Asa Huycke's orchestra. It would have been extremely difficult to improve it, and the liberal manner in which encores were dispensed added to its popularity.

Beautiful decorations, in the shape of flags, streamers and bunting were supplied by Messrs. J. J. Turners and Sons for which the committee are deeply thankful. They also desire to thank cordially the King's Daughters for the dainty refreshments, and the Peterborough Floral Company for flowers and palms, and the A. W. Cressman Company for furniture they so kindly loaned.

The patronesses for the dance were Mrs. P. Campbell, Mrs. J. Crane, Mrs. W. H. Dunsford, Mrs. V. Eastwood, Mrs. A. F. Knight, Mrs. C. H. Pennefather, Mrs. W. R. Travers and Mrs. A. Tomlins.

The committee whose efforts were so successful was composed of W. W. Dean, L. B. Jepson, W. B. Sloan, C. H. Paton, J. S. Watson, R. Cottrell, secretary, and A. F. Knight, chairman.

Local News in General

The intrinsic cost of a cup of tea is nothing compared with the value in satisfaction that you expect. Don't let the dealer make an undue profit by selling you a substitute when you want "SALADA."

Notice.

Mr. Albert Lewis who conducted a barber shop on Simcoe St. opposite Montgomery House is now in charge of the Tonsorial Parlors at the Empress Hotel where he will be pleased to meet his many friends and patrons.

Tonight.

Every music lover in the city should attend the Gladys Seward recital tonight in Conservatory of Music Hall. Miss Seward has been absent from the city for five years, and no doubt a large attendance will be present.

AT THE "MOVIES."

Mr. John Emerson, added to his popularity with patrons of the Empire Theatre, when the Bachelor's Romance, in which he takes the leading role, was presented yesterday afternoon and evening. There are also several splendid comedies.

Miss Flood and Erma are seen at the Royal Theatre in a novelty act that is pleasing throughout. The pictures are excellent.

House and Effects Are Destroyed

Early Morning Fire Left Little for Owner

While the family were at a party in a nearby house, the home of Mr. Thomes Blodgett, 617 Downie St., was completely wiped out by fire this morning about half-past two. With the exception of a few pieces of furniture and some wearing apparel, all the contents were destroyed while a new sewing machine is but a piece of twisted iron.

The house was of wood and plaster construction and was built many years ago, consequently it was dry and burned like matchwood. The first intimation that his home was in flames came to Mr. Blodgett when one of the people at the house party looked out of the window and saw the brilliant reflection of the flames. He gave the alarm, and while the department responded in as quick time as possible, the outbreak had gained too great headway. The neighbors collected and pulled out some of the contents.

Mr. Blodgett and family were forced to seek refuge in a daughter's house.

Mr. Blodgett carried some insurance, but he did not know how much. He also could not estimate his loss, but figured that nine hundred dollars would hardly cover it.

SPRINGTIME.

By F. A. Conners.

The glad Springtime has come again,
With its bright sunshine and showers,
To melt away the winter's snow,
And give us grass and flowers;
And fill the air with music sweet
From little birds that sing,
And everything in nature speaks,
To tell us it is Spring

The buds are bursting on the trees
As nature stoops to don
Her robes of green on every bush
And carpets on the lawn;
The new-born blossoms scent the air,
And everything is sweet,
The sun in glittering rays above
The grass beneath our feet.

We welcome the glad Springtime here,
In resurrection power,
Restoring life and beauty too,
In every tree and flower.
With each recurring season,
Comes whispers from above,
In Nature's many voices,
Declaring, "God is Love."

Louise Chipperone, charged at North Bay with the murder of her two children last winter, has been adjudged insane and will be kept in confinement until she can be deported to Italy.

WEDDING BELLS

MURPHY—RORABECK.

Norwood, April 9.—A pretty Easter wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Rorabeck, Alma Street, Norwood, Wednesday evening, when their second daughter, Miss Winnifred Pearl, was united in marriage to Mr. John Anson Murphy, of Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Murphy, also of that township. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. A. M. Irwin, B.A., B.D.

The ceremony, which took place at 6.30 o'clock p.m., was performed under an arch of evergreens, adorned with Easter lillies. The bride was given away by her father and looked beautiful attired in a dress of ivory satin, with pearl trimming, drop skirt of cream net, bridal veil with orange blossoms, and carried a large bouquet of white carnations. Miss Lillie Robson, of Lakefield, was bridesmaid, and wore a dress of pink silk with pearl trimmings and cream shadow lace, and carried a bouquet of pink carnations. The groomsman was Mr. H. E. Rorabeck, brother of the bride; while Miss Gertrude Rorabeck, of Asphodel, played the wedding march.

After congratulations had been showered upon the happy young couple, all repaired to the tastefully decorated dining room where a delightful wedding dinner was partaken of.

Guests were present from Lakefield, Halls Glen, Hastings, Havelock and Campbellford.

The handsome presents of cut glass, china and furniture bestowed, evinced the esteem in which the bride and groom are held by a large circle of friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls; to the bridesmaid a gold necklace set with pearls and amethysts; to the pianist a crescent brooch of pearls; and to the groomsman a set of gold cameo cuff links.

The bride's going-away suit was of sand shade serge with hat to match and white plume.

More Gifts for Rev. T. J. Robinson

Presentations by Sunday School and Ladies Aid

A watch fob and address was presented to Rev. T. J. Robinson on behalf of the Sunday School at Burns Church, Milverton. The Ladies' Aid also presented gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Robinson.

Rev. T. J. Robinson will move his family to Lakefield in the near future, to take up his new duties at the Presbyterian Church.

INDUCTION SERVICE.

The Presbytery of Peterborough will meet in the Presbyterian church at Lakefield on Wednesday evening, April 14, at 7:30 o'clock, for the purpose of inducting the Rev. T. J. Robinson to the pastoral charge of the Lakefield and North Smith congregations.

ANNIVERSARY AT ARMY TEMPLE

Thirtieth Year Will be Fittingly Celebrated

The thirtieth anniversary of the advent of the Salvation Army into Peterborough will be celebrated in fitting style on Saturday and Sunday.

Brigadier McMillan and his son, Band Sergt. McMillan, of Montreal, together with Major and Mrs. Walton, of Montreal, will arrive on Saturday afternoon at 4:23, and will be welcomed by the officers and locals of the corps, together with the band, and will be escorted to the Temple. Two rousing open-air services will be held on Saturday evening at 7 o'clock, and a great welcome demonstration at the Temple at 8 o'clock.

Special services all day on Sunday, and on Monday the choir of St. James Methodist Church will give a very special concert arranged for the occasion.

Further announcement will be made tomorrow about the Sunday and Monday meetings.

LAID TO REST.

Yesterday afternoon the late Mrs. George J. Moore, 154 Rubidge street, was laid to rest in Little Lake Cemetery. Adjutant McElhiney conducted the funeral service. The pallbearers were Mr. E. Roberts, of Toronto, Messrs. P. Kane, M. Succee, M. Hiscock, Bandmaster Beer and James Richardson. A large number of floral tributes showed the high esteem in which the late Mrs. Moore had been held.

FIRST CHURCH OF CHRIST SCIENTIST

Term of Mr. and Mrs. Todd Has Expired

First Church of Christ, Scientist, held their annual business meeting last night. The auditors' report shows the church in good financial condition. As this church looks for the signs of healing as, Jesus said would follow them that believe, as a proof of spirituality and progress it was shown that the best healing in the history of the church had been done during the past year.

According to the law of the Mother Church, Mr. and Mrs. Todd's terms of office expired and as there are none in the church to take their place, the church disorganized for the present. Consequently, after next Sunday the church will be closed until further notice. The matter is left in the hands of the Board of Trustees to adjust.

MOTION TO SET ASIDE WRIT IS DISMISSED

A motion was made yesterday before the Master in Chambers at Osgoode Hall on behalf of the defendant in the case of William Hamilton Company, Limited, vs. Kahil Farah, to set aside the writ on the ground that the defendant was in New York and outside the jurisdiction and that substitutional service of a writ for service within the jurisdicton had been made upon his secretary in Englehart. The motion was dismissed with costs in the cause. Wood and Wearing are the solicitors for William Hamilton Company.

GERMANS TORTURE BRITISH PRISONERS

GUNS WERE BROKEN OVER THEIR BACKS

British Prisoners so Ill Treated They Asked to be Shot

WERE KICKED AND STARVED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

LONDON, April 10. — Many "painful statements," says the Daily News, are published in the "white paper" containing correspondence which passed between the British and German foreign offices with respect to the treatment of British prisoners of war in Germany. A French priest, referring to the treatment of prisoners at Minden says: "German soldiers kicked British prisoners in the stomach and broke their guns over their backs. They forced them to sleep out in marshy places so that many are now consumptive. The British are almost starved, and such has been their torture that thirty of them asked to be shot."

A letter from an internment camp at Ruhleben says: "Officers treat prisoners with great brutality, even to the extent of personal violence. Men sometimes have not received a scrap of meat for a whole week, and the ingredients in soup seem to be condemned stores. The sick wailed all day, but no doctor came although he could be seen walking about the square for hours, smoking cigarettes."

FEMALE PRISONERS IN DETENTION CAMPS.

Sir Edward Grey wrote that a communication from the German Government revealed the fact that there were female prisoners in German detention camps, and that prisoners in Germany were being kept very short of food, if not actually starved. The German reply, long delayed, consisted of such denials and excuses as this: "It will certainly be admitted by every discriminating British inmate of the camp at Ruhleben that in the face of the attempt of his own government to starve the German people, the bill-of-fare offered is above all criticism."

"Allotted rations being adequate for Germans, they are adequate for prisoners, too."

FRENCH SHIP SUNK BY SUB.

Had Cargo of Chalk and Was Bound for New York

CREW WERE SAVED

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Le Treport, France, April 10. — The three-masted ship Chateau Briand of two thousand tons from London for New York with a cargo of chalk was sunk by a German submarine off the Isle of Wight, Thursday morning.

The crew were saved. They were given ten minutes by the German commander to launch the boats. The ship was then torpedoed.

Splendid Trips Offered by the Review Attracts Attention of Many Prominent Ladies

Great Contest Will Open Monday and Subscribers Are Urged to Save Their Votes for Favorites — Some of the Sights the Winners Will See — Trip Will Last 21 Days and Every Item of Expense Will be Paid by The Review — Nominate Yourself or a Friend To-day

Monday will be a red letter day in the lives of many young ladies in Peterborough and district.

Monday is the opening day of the Review's great World's Fair voting contest. Young ladies who want to visit the greatest of expositions should not fail to take advantage of the opportunity that is now before them. Travel across the continent as a guest of The Review. The invitation is open to all young women whose residence is within the circulation zone of the paper.

Four Young Ladies Will Go.

The Review has made provision to send four young ladies on this great international tour. To say that the trip is wonderful is but putting it mildly and you have an equal opportunity with the others to win one. You do not know the extent of your abilities until you have tried to see what you can do in such a splendid contest. It will be lots of fun also and you will enjoy every minute of it. Join the contest and enjoy both the contest and the trip. Do not wait until all your friends have pledged their support to some other lady. The contest starts Monday so make up your mind now to be one of the winners.

Up to the present time a number of nominations have been received and the campaign promises to meet with popular favor. The trips are indeed tempting and early next week a detailed itinerary will be published showing the many different features of the trip from day to day. The return through the Canadian West should appeal to everyone and The Review believes this part of the tour will be equally as interesting as the Exposition and California.

Some of the Sights You Will See.

At Denver—Set your watches back one hour. The Denver Chamber of Commerce Reception Committee will greet you at depot. After stepping off train through "Welcome Arch" touring cars will be waiting at the depot to take you for an atuomobile trip in and about the city. Some auto trip sights will be Welcome Arch, Public Library, Auditorium, the State Capitol, Pioneer Monument, D. & F. Tower (the third highest in the world), U. S. Mint, Woman's Club Building, New Marble Postoffice, Observatory Point in Cheesman Park (for the 200-mile mountain view). Fifteen miles along paved boulevards through Denver's most beautiful residential districts; sightseeing through all hotel, financial, skyscraper and shopping districts; Denver's famous zoological garden of native wild animals, pheasantries and aviaries.

Seeing the Foothills. — The most beautiful trip in all Colorado. It will be a half day tour into the Rocky Mountains in luxurious observation cars, showing lakes, gardens, sparkling streams, rugged canyons and the vast irrigation systems. Two miles along the summit of the Arapohoe Plateau; with an uninterrupted 200-miles range of the Rockies. At the entrance to "Golden" Canyon we pass through the "Clear Creek Placer Fields." The discovery of gold at this point caused the great gold excitement in 1859. This district is the Mecca for camera enthusiasts.

At Colorado Springs.

Here we have a unique and entirely different trip arranged for you, a tally-ho drive through the Pike's Peak region, taking you over the "Mesa Drive," beautiful "Glen Eyrie," "Manitou" and the world-renowned "Garden of the Gods."

Automobiles will be waiting at the depot to take you for a complete sight-seeing trip of the city.

As our tour comprises everything worth seeing, we take pride in announcing the following places of note we will visit: The Beehive House, Mormon Temple and Tabernacle,

WAREHOUSE WITH TOBACCO BURNS

Loss is Several Hundred Thousand Dollars

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Liverpool, April 10.—Fire in the Stanley Warehouse on Mersey Docks where an immense quantity of tobacco is stored, caused a loss of several hundred thousand dollars last night.

Harold F. Hill Going to the War

Harold F. Hill, son of Mr. W. H. Hill, the well-known local boy who has been attending Queen's University, left this morning for Montreal, where he will be connected with the infantry forces of the third contingent. He passed his examinations for lieutenant two weeks ago, and will in all probability serve in that capacity. The prominent place he held in athletics in Peterborough while a student at the P. C. I., and also while attending Queen's University at Kingston, won for him a host of admirers. He played halfback for Queen's University rugby team in the Intercollegiate last season and was also a member of Queen's basketball team.

SIGN PEACE IN BERLIN

At Dictation of the Allies Says War Correspondent

A LECTURER WHO IS WORTH HEARING

The lecture given in Victoria Hall last night by the war correspondent, Mr. Stanley Dancey, was an illuminating and interesting discourse. Col. Miller introduced him, and he opened his address by pointing out the popularity of the British war song, "Tipperary." He was in Boulogne on August 21st and saw the landing of the British expeditionary force, singing "Tipperary." He heard it sung in the famous battle of Mons and retreat therefrom; he heard it at the battle of the Marne, and said that even in the south of France the people, thinking it was a revised edition of the British national anthem, were chanting it in their churches.

Mr. Dancey thought the war would last until September, but did not think it possible for Germany to hold out longer. Peace will only be signed in Berlin, at the dictation of the Allies, and the United States will have nothing to say about it.

As to who started the war, he said that Germany had told her reservists in the United States to report as early as the month of May. He said we were fighting not only for King and country, but more so for liberty and honour. It was militarism against civilization, the outcome of which would be a revolution in Germany and a new order of things there.

The speaker gave vivid accounts of the big battles and fights around Liege, and said that in daring deeds no previous war had anything to equal them. At Liege, 137,000 Germans were killed in nine days, but that allowed the French time to complete their mobilization and the British to land. 120,000 British fought against a million Germans. They were three times surrounded, and three times cut their way through in the famous rearguard action from Mons. At one time General French called for one thousand volunteers to hold the trenches while the British retreated. The Black Watch volunteered, and of 1,000 men but 33 poor straggling examples of humanity rejoined the main forces. At Armentieres it was the Irish that saved the Scotch. Home Rule was buried fathoms deep, and the whole of the Irish people, regardless of class or creed, were standing by the King. At the Marne, the Royal Engineers bridged the river under a perfect storm of shot and shell, and the Allies were enabled to drive the Germans back to the Aisne. Some of the trenches are built of concrete. Britain has five million men under arms and two and a half million ready for fighting. These men, marching eight abreast day and night would take nine and a half days to pass a street in Peterborough. Of

FOUND DEAD BY HIS WIFE

W. T. Whitnell Retired Last Night in Good Health

W. T. Whitnell, who lived at 132 Hunter Street east was found dead in bed this morning by his wife who tried to waken him about six-fifteen. He had retired the night before in usual good health and had not complained of feeling unwell. He was about thirty-five years of age and a particularly sad feature of the death is that he had been out of employment all winter and only started to work on Wednesday. Heart trouble is given as the cause of death.

Besides his wife he leaves three children all young. The funeral will take place on Monday afternoon at two o'clock to Little Lake Cemetery.

MRS. GEORGE KERR.

Mrs. George Kerr, a former resident of Peterborough, died in Toronto yesterday at three o'clock after a lingering illness. Her husband resides in Toronto. The deceased was brought up in Peterborough but removed to Toronto about ten years ago. The body will arrive in Peterborough this evening on the C. P. R. local and the funeral will take place Monday morning at nine o'clock to the church of the Sacred Heart and St. Peter's cemetery.

Mrs. Kerr is survived by four daughters and three sons.

LAWRENCE E. CHURCH.

Lawrence E. Church, aged thirty-three, died in the Nicholls Hospital last night after a short illness. He was born in Montreal and came to Peterborough about one year ago. He was employed as salesman by the Campbell Flour Mills Company. He is survived by his widow and two daughters. The deceased was a member of All Saints' Church and the funeral took place at 11 o'clock this morning from Comstock's undertaking parlours to the C.P.R. station, the body being sent to Montreal for interment.

STOLE A RIDE—$5.

Arthur Besscrer, a young man, was put off a C. P. R. train last night while trying to ride without his fare. He got on at Windsor, and was making for Ottawa. He pleaded guilty today and was fined $5.

FARMERS ARE PLOUGHING.

According to reports the farmers have commenced ploughing in the vicinity of this city.

CASUALTIES

Ottawa, April 10. (Today's casualties—Princess Patricias—Wounded, Pte. T. Kavanagh, gunshot wound in head, New Waterford, N.S.

Sixteenth Batt. — Wounded, Pte. Robert Craig, Glasgow, Scotland.

Thirteenth Batt.—Wounded, Pte. Guy Ralph Lewis, Congleton, England.

Fifteenth Batt.—Wounded, Pte. Kenneth Miller, Edinburgh, Scotland.

LIQUOR STORES OBSERVE NEW LAW

Blinds Are Drawn at Seven O'clock

Although the official notice had not been received by License Inspector Stewart the liquor stores in Peterborough closed at seven o'clock last night. The notice arrived this morning and giving the proprietors notice was but a matter of form. The Royal assent given to the bills passed by the Legislature on Thursday brought them into operation at once, except such as were to come into force by proclamation.

PRESENTATION OF PONY TO ROD CAMERON

The formal presentation of the pony was made last night to Rod. Cameron at the Empire Theatre. Between the performances one of the merchants, on behalf of the others, made a few brief remarks, outlining the recent pony contest. The boys of today will soon be men of the city, and the fight put up by the successful boy and others in the contest is an excellent example in the training of their young years. He complimented the winner, and also spoke in excellent terms of the next boy, Percy Harrison.

Mr. W. H. Walkey, the auditor, outlined the work of checking over all votes, and announced that he had audited all the merchants' books and previously supervised all counting of ballots, and announced that the majority of votes were in favor of Rod. Cameron, and then called on Master Rod. and stated that the pony and outfit was at the door. He congratulated the winner on his success.

Dick McBride Goes the Way of all Flesh

The late Richard McBride who died in the House of Refuge, was a character of whom not a great deal is known. To those who knew him best "Dickie" was a jovial little fellow who was quite harmless, who would do a friend a good turn if it were possible. He hailed originally from around Harwood and Gores Landing and he was a familiar figure to the boat captains and crew of the steamers which ply up and down the river between here and Rice Lake.

While "Dickie's" great failing was an over fondness for alcohol, he was never noisy or objectionable. Unfortunately he was not a total stranger to His Worship Magistrate Dumble, nor the shelter of the police station which often was to Dickie a friend indeed when it came to giving him shelter in time of need. Though he died in the House of Refuge the memory of Richard McBride will linger among those who knew him as one of life's anomalies.

He is being laid to rest at Lakefield.

EARLY OPENING OF NAVIGATION

Though it is a little early to forecast the date for the opening of navigation this year, it is probable that it will be even earlier than last year. Navigation on the Trent Canal was opened last year on May 13th, and that was seven days before the year previous. The Trent Canal is a pretty accurate guide each year for the opening of navigation. It was stated this afternoon that they looked for an early year.

BOMBARDMENT AND LAND FORCES

Can Force the Dardanelles Says Italian Admiral

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Rome, April 10. — Admiral Bettolo, former minister of marine, expresses the opinion that the Dardanelles can be forced by proper combination of naval bombardment of the forts, followed up by operations of adequate land forces.

HAS ELECTION BILLED FOR JUNE

Monday June 14 Said to be the Date

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Ottawa, April 10.—The Free Press (Liberal) quotes a prominent Conservative member from Quebec, as stating that the government has decided on Monday, June 14, at the day of a general election. There is no confirmation.

Ice Trouble at Chemong Bridge

The ice is beginning to shake Chemong Bridge. Last night the frozen mass gave the structure a jam and again today at noon. When the ice opens a little more at the shores the bridge will likely be broken. When it is out of commission, those going to and from Ennismore will have to travel around the head of the lake which lengthens the journey some 18 miles.

TOOK POSITIONS AT POINT OF BAYONET

French Won Day After Desperate Fighting Before Les Esparges

RUSS. MAKE IMPORTANT CAPTURES

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

PARIS, April 10. — (This Afternoon's Statement.) — There is nothing to add today to the official communication last night except the receipt last night of supplementary reports relating that two attacks, which yesterday made us masters of the last German positions at Les Eparges, led to desperate bayonet fighting.

BERLIN, April 10. — (Official Statement.) — Violent attacks between the Meuse and the Moselle continued yesterday. Between the River Orne and the heights of the Meuse, French were severely defeated. All the French attacks from the heights of the Combres, north of St. Mihiel, and on the Ailly-Apremont front near Flirey, have been repulsed. Near Flirey, in consequence of former heavy French losses, the fighting yesterday was less violent.

Further attacks on the Remenauville front and in the forest of Le Pretre and an attempt to conquer Bezange-la-Grande, to the southwest of Chateau Salines, resulted in failure.

Five Belgian officers and 122 soldiers, two French officers and 11 soldiers were taken prisoners by us, together with seven machine guns.

In the Vosges there has been no change.

AUSTRIAN LOSSES OF 26,000 MEN.

GENEVA, April 10. — The Tribune says Austria will remain on the defensive against Serbia in order to send additional army corps to the Italian frontier. The Tribune also asserts that Vienna has decided to sound Russia on the subject of peace terms.

Russians have made important captures of guns during the recent fighting in the Carpathians.

Austrian losses in the battle on the Dukla-Esperies front are placed at 26,000 men.

PETERBOROUGH, SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1915

THE BELLEVILLE CAMP.

IN VIEW OF the fact that two soldiers have died at the Belleville camp, very probably from meningitis, some might think that the camp was not what it should be, in spite of a local newspaper's authoritative treatment of the subject. The quarters for the soldiers could hardly be otherwise than poor, because Canada was totally unprepared to accommodate the mobilization of an army. These camps had to be made ready as well as could be done under the circumstances, and naturally they are not as comfortable and well-arranged as if Canada had been prepared for raising so large an army in so short a time. It is one of the conditions of war that hardship, exposure and disease have to be encountered, and many a brave man falls before these foes as well as before the enemy. When a man enlists, he should not expect dress parades and feather beds—neither are part of real war. If a man went hunting and slept on a pile of straw with a blanket or two, and ate with one spoon, and possibly drank out of an unwashed cup, he would come back saying he had a fine time, yet the Belleville barracks have very much better accommodation than is provided for hunting trips. Then the trenches are many times worse than the Belleville camp. There are no shower-baths in the trenches. The rule for meals is hard tack and bully beef, and standing in cold water and mud has been the lot of many for days at a time. Besides, the men have been stationed longer at Belleville than was anticipated, but considering the whole number of concentration camps, none of which are conducive to the health of the soldier, it speaks well for the Canadian forces that deaths and sickness have been as few and as unimportant as they have. However, there will likely be a concentration of troops at Valcartier Camp very soon, and the movement of large bodies of troops to a new camp under canvas ought to raise very materially the health of the Canadian troops.

OUR FULL DUTY.

MR. DANCEY thinks Canada has not done its full duty in enlisting men for overseas service. He thinks so, by comparison with Australia and New Zealand. In the matter of naval aid, that is unfortunately true, but we do not think it is so in military preparations. Canada is enlisting men as fast as they can be equipped. Already the mobilization camps are much overcrowded, and factories are working night and day to complete their orders. Besides, Canada's factories have immense orders for British, French and Russian governments, to fulfil. Canada will raise men just as fast as she can equip them and despatch them to Lord Kitchener.

THE POUND-KEEPERS FOR CANADIAN POETS.

WE ARE much indebted to the Orillia Packet and Toronto News for going a-poet-mongering for our benefit. We appreciate their efforts "to discover" Canadian poets. The News says he knows where a poet by the name of Smith is kept in the Toronto World office, but he didn't reproduce (possibly out of a mistaken sense of kindness to ourselves) any of his illustrious and soul-stirring rhapsodies inspired by the Calliopeian Muse. On the other hand, the Packet boldly and honestly attempts to round up some poets who have probably been under a bushel and reproduces some of their most polished and artistic lines, from which we select this one—"But O'Leary is the name that makes them look mighty small." What could Horace write against this? It would almost move Melpomene to tears of jealous rage.

THE WORK OF THE AVIATORS.

THE WORK of the British and French aviators has been of much service lately to the allied armies. The attack on the naval bases has been successful in destroying or damaging several submarines nearing completion, besides Zeppelins and sheds for sheltering aerial craft. In addition, they have been of invaluable service to the artillery and general staff in locating German batteries and trenches and in reporting movements of the enemy forces. By means of the aviators' observations, the range of the enemy's trenches or batteries is given the British and French gunners, who then present the Germans with a few shells. They also ward off attacks of German air craft, and, while their offensive power has not been as great as some predicted, it has been established that aviators are a very valuable part of a modern army.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

THE SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN has photographs of bullets on the wing, that are taken in thirteen-millionths of a second. We are not in a position to dispute this authority, but we must confess an inability to imagine what thirteen-millyunths of a second look like.

WE HAVE DIRECTED that a marked copy of the Review be sent to the P.-K.'s (Pound-Keepers for Canadian Poets), so that they may observe what publicity we have given their efforts in our behalf.

PLENTY OF EGGS EIGHTEEN CENTS

Maple Syrup Bought up at Forty Cents

All the eggs one would want to buy could have been bought upon the market today at eighteen cents a dozen. Eggs were about the most plentiful offering.

"How much are these eggs today?" said one woman going up to a vendor.

"Eighteen cents."

"I'll take five dozen. I got some from you last Saturday and they were so good that I want some more." They really were a fine looking basketful.

Butter was bought up in large quantities at from thirty-three to thirty-five cents a pound. Good chickens were scarce but fetched 75 cents to $1.00 each. No ducks or turkeys were noticeable.

The aspect of the market was one of extreme business. Outside on the square a rushing business was carried on with vegetables and maple syrup most in demand.

Meat was not very plentiful. Some pretty good looking pork was brought on, with the exception of two or three vendors who had really first class meat. Best quality veal sold at 11c. for fronts and 14c. for hinds.

Maple syrup has dropped a little and was purchasable today at forty cents a quart. The supply was quite plentiful and was in considerable demand.

Peterboro' County Farmers Organize

Four Successful Meetings Held This Week

Four very successful meetings were held in Peterborough County on Thursday and Friday of this week by Mr. J. J. Morrison, Secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario, and of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co. Ltd. These meetings were held at Zion and Stewart's Hall on Thursday and at Selwyn and Central Smith on Friday. At all four points the farmers enthusiastically endorsed the new provincial movement among the farmers of Ontario and organized branches of the United Farmers of Ontario. It is expected that this movement will soon rival in importance the great grain growers' associations and companies of Western Canada. Mr. H. B. Cowan of Farm and Dairy accompanied Mr. Morrison to Zion, Selwyn and Central Smith, and Mr. F. E. Ellis to Stewart's Hall. Some indication of the interest taken in the meeting was shown last evening at Central Smith when the meeting lasted until after 12 o'clock. The organized farmers at Zion will be known as the Trewern branch of the United Farmers of Ontario. The other three organizations will be known as the Stewart's Hall, Selwyn and Central Smith branches. The following officers were elected at the different points:—

Trewern Branch: President, J. H. Garbutt, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Vice-President, Cecil Graham, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Secretary-Treasurer, Wilbert Rosborough, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Directors, A. Fitzgerald, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Geo. Cockburn, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Jas. Mann, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough; Alb. Garbutt, R. Rte. No. 4, Peterborough.

Stewart's Hall Branch: President, Melville Stewart, Stewart's Hall; Vice-President, O. Gibbs, Stewart's Hall; Secretary-Treasurer, R. C. Hanbridge, Stewart's Hall; Directors, W. Reid, Stewart's Hall; F. Driscoll, Stewart's Hall; F. Stewart, Stewart's Hall; Bruce Savigny, Stewart's Hall; M. Smithson, Stewart's Hall, W. Clifford, Stewart's Hall.

Selwyn Branch: President, J. C. McConkey, R. Rte. No. 3, Lakefield; VicePresident, R. Adams, R. Rte. No. 3, Lakefield; SecretaryTreasurer, G. B. Nicholls, R. Rte. No. 3, Lakefield. Directors, Wm. Elliott, Selwyn; Alb. McIlmoyle, Selwyn; John Jas. Northey, R. Rte. No. 3, Lakefield; Herb McIlmoyle, R. Rte. No. 3, Lakefield.

Central Smith Branch: President, Alex. McGregor, R. Rte. No. 2, Peterborough; Vice-President, T. H. Graham, R. Rte. No. 2, Peterborough; Secretary-Treasurer, Chas. Moore, R. Rte. No. 2, Peterborough; Directors, Clayton Telford, R. Rte. No. 1, Peterborough; W. G. Telford, R. Rte. No. 1, Peterborough; Melville Scott, R. Rte. No. 2, Peterborough; Edw. Mahood, R. Rte. No. 2, Peterborough; Robt. Deyell, Fowler's Corners.

ABOUT DEPUTATIONS.

Editor Review,

Sir,—One of the planks of Mr. G. N. Gordon's platform upon which he appealed to the electors of the city of Peterborough to be elected a member of the Board of Education read as follows:—

"If I am elected I will see that expensive deputations do not go out of town on the people's money with the suggested object of improving the knowledge of the deputation in educational matters when the benefit to these members is nil."

Mr. Gordon had a short history while he was a member of the City Council in carrying out this plank of his platform and the following cost of deputations of the City Council while he was a member of it will bear investigation:—

Expenses of Deputations of City Council.

During year 1912	$557.53
During year 1913	618.25
During 1914	446.85
Making a total expense for 3 years	$1622.63

Expenses of G. N. Gordon During the Time he Was a Member of City Council.

During 1912	$34.38
During 1913	40.55
During 1914	43.35
Making a total expense for 3 years	$118.28

The expenses of deputations paid by the Board of Education will stand favorable comparison and are as follows:—

During the Year 1912.

Jan. Deputation to Lindsay to inspect new school	$ 7.75
Apr. Deputation to Trustees Convention in Toronto	25.20
Dec. Deputation to Convention in Toronto re feeble minded children of province	9.00
Dec. Deputation to Toronto re establishment Penny Bank	12.00
Dec. Representative in Toronto to attend meeting Executive Council Ontario Educational Association	7.85
Total	$61.80

During the Year 1913.

March. Deputation to Toronto re feeble minded children of province	$ 9.00
Apr. Deputation to Trustees' Convention in Toronto	26.10
	$35.10

During the Year 1914.

Apr. Deputation to Trustees' Convention in Toronto	49.50
Representative to meeting Technical Association, Toronto re Industrial classes	6.00
	$55.50

Making in all the total expense of deputations for three years $152.40

It will be observed that Mr. Gordon's expenses alone in attending deputations while he was a member of the City Council amounted to nearly as much for these three years as the whole expenses that were incurred in deputations by the Board of Education.

Since Mr. Gordon has been a member of the Board of Education he has approved of a deputation attending the Provincial Convention of trustees and teachers held in the City of Toronto. It is quite evident that Mr. Gordon's deputation plank is a derelict and its quality will compare favorably with the ring-boned, spavined and knee-sprung horses or paper soled boots about which so much is written at the present time.

Yours, etc.,

W. H. HILL.

AN ACKNOWLEDGMENT.

To the Editor of the Review.

Dear Sir, — I wish to thank, through your paper, the Floral Co., Messrs. Heintzman & Co., the Cressman Co., R. Fair & Co., Mr. Wm. Madill, Richard Hall & Son, J. J. Turner & Son, and all who sold tickets and helped in any way to add to the success of the Gladys Seward recital.

Yours very truly,

ALICE ROGER COLLINS.

President Nearly Drowned.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, April 9.—Alfredo Gonzales, President of Costa Rica, had a narrow escape from drowning when the Presidential yacht was wrecked in the Carribbean three days ago. He and the members of his party had to swim ashore through a heavy surf to save their lives.

CHICAGO, April 9.—Predictions a decided shrinkage in the visible supply total on Monday tended today to lift the price of wheat. After an early decline, the market closed firm, 5-8c to 2c above last night. Other leading staples, too, all scored an advance, corn 3-4c to 1¼c, oats ¾c to 2 3-8c and provisions 7½c to 25c.

According to a leading authority the results of the deficiency of moisture in Ohio, Indiana, southern Illinois and Kentucky have become apparent in the lack of top growth.

Shorts were active buyers of the later months as well as of the May option, which tightened in a manner that suggested something of a squeeze.

Corn trade broadened out vigorously. The strength which developed had back of it a better cash demand and the fact that receipts had dwindled thruout the west.

Rumors of export sales put firmness into oats. On the bulge, however, much profit-taking was indulged in by the longs.

Expected resumption of shipments of hogs from Chicago next week gave strength to the provision market. Packers bought freely.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTH-WEST LAND REGULATIONS.

THE sole head of a family, or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter-section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. Applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agency for the District. Entry by proxy may be made at any Dominion Lands Agency (but not Sub-Agency), on certain conditions.

Duties—Six months residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within nine miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres, on certain conditions. A habitable house is required except where residence is performed in the vicinity.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter-section alongside his homestead. Price $3.00 per acre.

Duties—Six months residence in each of three years after earning homestead patent; also 50 acres extra cultivation. Pre-emption patent may be obtained as soon as homestead patent, on certain conditions.

A settler who has exhausted his homestead right may take a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate 50 acres and erect a house worth $300.

The area of cultivation is subject to reduction in case of rough, scrubby or stony land. Live stock may be substituted for cultivation under certain conditions.

ANXIOUS FOR STEFANSSON

He Should Have Been Heard of by Now

OTTAWA, April 10.—During the discussion of an additional vote for the naval service in committee of supply last night, Hon. Mr. Hazen told Hon. Mr. Oliver that no alarm was felt regarding the North Star and Mary Sachs, two of the vessels of the Stefansson Arctic expedition.

CAPTAIN BARTLETT.

Alarm was felt for Stefansson himself, because Captain Bartlett, a member of the party, who had succeeded in reaching Siberia and thence returning to Canada, felt that the chief of the expedition should have gained the mainland and have been heard of before the present. Mr. Hazen, said the Government vessels now in the Arctic had been instructed to search for Stefansson, and United States vessels and others going north were asked to keep a look out.

CAPTAIN HONORED

Master of Vosges Gets Decoration of D.C.

LONDON, April 10.—The Government's intention to encourage merchantmen to resist or dodge submarine attacks is emphasized by an official announcement yesterday that Captain John Richard Green of the steamer Vosges, which was sunk off the Cornish coast on March 27, by the shell-fire of a German submarine, has been granted a commission as lieutenant in the royal naval reserve, and awarded the distinguished service cross. The other officers of the steamer have been given gold watches and each member of the crew has received three pounds ($15).

The Vosges was under fire for more than two hours before she was sunk, her chief engineer being killed and two other officers and two members of the crew as well as a woman passenger being wounded. By skillful handling of his ship Captain Green prevented the torpedoeing of the steamer and the submarine opened fire on the ship with her guns. The steamer was getting away from the submarine when a shell hit her funnel and her speed was reduced. As the Vosges was making water the captain ordered his passengers and crew into the boats, which were subjected to heavy fire.

THE BLOOD IS THE STREAM OF LIFE

Pure Blood Is Absolutely Necessary To Health

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" PURIFIES

These Wonderful Tablets, Made of Fruit Juices, Are The Best Of All Tonics To Purify And Enrich The Blood.

Pure, rich blood can flow only in a clean body. Now, a clean body is one in which the waste matter is regularly and naturally eliminated from the system. The blood cannot be pure when the skin action is weak, when the stomach does not digest the food properly, when the bowels do not move regularly, when the kidneys are strained or overworked.

Pure blood is the result of perfect health and harmony of stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives", by their wonderful action on all these organs, keeps the whole system as clean as Nature intended our bodies to be clean.

"Fruit-a-tives" tones up, invigorates, strengthens, purifies, cleans and gives pure, rich, clean blood that is, in truth, the stream of life.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 trial size 25c. or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

DETECTIVE TO STAND TRIAL

SASKATOON, April 10. — Chief of Detectives W. H. Springer was sent up for trial yesterday on a charge of inciting to crime. Yesterday morning, at Springer's preliminary hearing Frank McMillan, alias Burton, and Charles Pierson, two men under conviction for a series of yegg jobs in Alberta and Saskatchewan, told circumstantially of making Saskatoon the haven from which they attacked safes at Sutherland, Prince Albert, Edmonton and other places. They were arrested at Edmonton, McMillan said Springer was really the operating head of the gang at work in Saskatchewan.

BABY'S OWN TABLETS USED ELEVEN YEARS

Mrs. McEachern, Glencoe, Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the past eleven years for my children and have every reason to praise them as they always do good." Once a mother uses the Tablets for her little ones she will use no other medicine. They are absolutely safe, pleasant to take and never fail to regulate the bowels and stomach. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

County Constable Was Assaulted

OTTAWA, April 10.—In the county police court yesterday afternoon Onesime Lefebvre, a 55-year-old resident of Eastview, a suburb of Ottawa, on being sentenced to two years less one day in prison, jumped from the prisoner's dock and struck County Constable Prior a terrific blow in the face, and followed this up by grappling with the officer and biting through his ear. The prisoner was subdued by other constables in the room. Lefebvre and his son Alexander had just been found guilty of burglarizing a butcher shop in Eastview, and had each received the same sentence. The constable was one of the witnesses against the prisoner. There are 60 previous convictions registered against the elder Lefebvre.

Nearly Rammed Submarine.

SOUTH SHIELDS, Eng., April 10.—The tug Homer, towing the French bark Colonel Fosnis, off St. Catharine's Point Thursday, was attacked by a German submarine, according to reports brought here yesterday. The tug attempted to ram the submarine in the heavy sea, but missed her by three feet. The German then sent a torpedo against the side of the bark, sinking her. The Homer escaped.

Relief For Galicians.

PETROGRAD, April 10—The Russian Government has appropriated $5,500,000 for the relief of war sufferers in Galicia. The money will be largely used to purchase wheat and horses for the farming population.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Lesson II.—Second Quarter, For April 11, 1915.

THE INTERNATIONAL SERIES.

Text of the Lesson, I Sam. xvi, 4-13. Memory Verses, 12, 13—Golden Text, I Sam. xvi, 7—Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

It is certainly restful to be in the hands of Him who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will (Eph. i, 11) and who says, "I will work, and who shall let it" (hinder, or turn back) (Isa. xliii, 13), provided we have no will of our own in the matter. Even Samuel seems not to have been fully one with the Lord concerning Saul, for he continued to mourn for him after the Lord had rejected him, so that the Lord had to say to him, "How long wilt thou mourn for Saul, seeing I have rejected him from reigning over Israel?" When we can say, "Even so, Father," "Just and true are thy ways," because we are certain that "As for God, His way is perfect" (Matt. xi, 26; Rev. xv, 3; Ps. viii, 30), we have entered upon a restful life. Then its continuance depends upon our living in the perfect will of God moment by moment. Note the messages to Samuel in verses 1-3: "I will send thee to Jesse. I have provided me a king. I will show thee what thou shalt do. Anoint unto Me him whom I name unto thee." This left nothing for Samuel but simple obedience to Him who was managing.

But Samuel had an objection, "If Saul hear it he will kill me." The Lord quieted him, and matters proceeded, and Samuel did that which the Lord spake and came to Bethlehem to meet Jesse and his sons (verses 4, 5). The elders of the town seemed to regard Samuel almost as God Himself or they must have had very guilty consciences, for they trembled at his coming until assured that he came peaceably. Those who are walking with God need have no fear of a visit from a man of God nor of the coming of the Lord Himself, for it is possible so to abide that we shall not be ashamed before Him at His coming (I John ii, 28). Having called Jesse and his sons, Samuel thought that he saw in Eliab a fit successor to Saul, but the Lord told him not to look on his outward appearance (verses 6, 7). When we consider Eliab's contemptuous and uncalled for treatment of David a little later (xvii, 28) we do not wonder that the Lord refused him, for He knew what was in man (John ii, 25). Seven of Jesse's sons passed before Samuel, all who had come to meet him, but the Lord's choice was not among them, so that Samuel had to ask, "Are here all thy children?" Then he learned that the youngest had been left at home to keep the sheep, and Samuel said, "Send and fetch him, for we will not sit down till he come hither" (verses 8-11).

I am interested to know how David felt that day when left at home and all the other brothers went to meet Samuel, for, knowing what we do of David, we can easily imagine that he would be more desirous to meet Samuel than any of his brothers would, even though there might be nothing especially for him in it. Some day in the kingdom we may talk with him about that particular day. I never read or write this story or think about it that I do not rejoice to see the Lord's way in it. The young man left at home because he was seemingly of no account on this great occasion, and then all the older brothers set aside and compelled to wait till he came, and then to see Samuel take the horn of oil and anoint him in the midst of his brethren.

I think I can hear Eliab say to some of his brothers as they went homeward, "The old prophet must be in his dotage." There is nothing to it, for they did not hear the Lord say to Samuel, "Arise, anoint him, for this is he" (verses 12, 13). The comfort I get from it is that the Lord looketh on the heart, not on the outward appearance, and when he wants you for any work He will find you and get you there in spite of all obstacles. It is ours to keep quietly on minding our sheep, like David or Moses; thrashing our wheat, like Gideon; plowing, like Elisha; doing housework, like Mary of Nazareth; mending nets, like Peter and John, or whatever else is our regular occupation. The Spirit of the Lord came upon David, but departed from Saul because of Saul's failure to obey (13, 14). God allows us to choose, and if we choose the evil and not the good we have no one to blame but ourselves.

By the advice of Saul's servants he sought some one to quiet him when the evil spirit was upon him, and they recommended David, the son of Jesse, as a cunning player on the harp, a valiant man of war, a prudent man, a comely man, and they also said that the Lord was with him (verses 15-23). Being sent for, Saul loved him greatly and made him his armor bearer. How strange it all seems! God moves in a mysterious way. What a wonderful chapter! How can we refrain from saying, "Lord, take control of me and all my affairs and work out in and through me all thy good pleasure." It would seem that Jesse was an old man at this time, and his family consisted of eight sons and two daughters (xvii, 12; I Chron. ii, 16), but David's mother's name is not given.

The whole story is an illustration of the truth of Eph. ii, 10, that God has the life and service of His redeemed all planned beforehand and will work it out if we will let Him. See Jer. i, 4-9.

WOMAN REFUSES OPERATION

Tells How She Was Saved by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Logansport, Ind.—"My baby was over a year old and I bloated till I was a burden to myself. I suffered from female trouble so I could not stand on my feet and I felt like millions of needles were pricking me all over. At last my doctor told me that all that would save me was an operation, but this I refused. I told my husband to get me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I would try it before I would submit to any operation. He did so and I improved right along. I am now doing all my work and feeling fine.

"I hope other suffering women will try your Compound. I will recommend it to all I know."—Mrs. DANIEL D. B. DAVIS, 110 Franklin St., Logansport, Ind.

Since we guarantee that all testimonials which we publish are genuine, is it not fair to suppose that if Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has the virtue to help these women it will help any other woman who is suffering in a like manner?

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Boarder Tried to Take His Own Life

KINGSTON, Ont., April 10.—Alfred Smith, aged 45, went suddenly insane late yesterday afternoon, at his rooming house, near the corner of Barrack and Rideau streets, and picking up a razor he made a slash at his throat. A fellow boarder grasped the razor out of his hand before he cut himself. Smith then ran from the house a distance of a dozen blocks to the ferry wharf, and jumped into the water, but was rescued by the police and taken to the cells.

Socialist Deputy Unmolested.

GENEVA, April 10. — A Swiss Socialist who has returned here from a trip to Germany, is authority for the statement that Karl Liebknecht, the Socialist deputy in the Reichstag, has not been sent to the front in a Landsturm regiment, as recently was reported. The Swiss says he saw Liebknecht in Berlin a few days ago, cheerful, apparently in good health and unmolested by the authorities.

SUMMARY APPEARANCE OF CULPRITS

When Misconduct Takes Place in Election Campaigns

When the bill to amend the Controverted Election Act, was under discussion in the House Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., was reported in Hansard as follows—

Mr. BURNHAM: Has the minister in any way taken into consideration what I ventured to urge before the members of the committee when they required me to appear before them? The misconduct of people during an election is like any other misconduct, and public opinion is the eventual arbiter in all these things. If a man gets drunk, you arrest him, and you give the evidence and the case is disposed of; and people come to the conclusion either that the man is a disorderly character or that an injustise has been done, because, being more or less familiar with the evidence, they are capable of forming an opinion. If misconduct in the conduct of an election takes place, the culprit should be brought up in court for conspiring with others against the public weal by giving or accepting a bribe, and on evidence being given, the magistrate should dispose of the case. That would not of itself void any election, but it would have a tremendous effect upon the election; and if, in the course of time, some of these people were brought into the police court, and it were found that this sort of thing was going on, by the finding of the magistrate, the effect on the public would be so tremendous — assuming that the public care about it at all — that the candidate whose agents were acting in that way would stop it all — or else the candidate would certainly be defeated at the polls. I am thoroughly convinced, from bitter experience, that the colossal undertaking of an election petition is so serious and expensive a business, and so likely to go off, that it is almost impossible to proceed with a contest. At the trial of the election petition your expenses are about $300 or possibly $500 a day, putting it mildly. You say So-and-so is to be called as a witness at two o'clock, and two o'clock comes and he is not there. You say, "Oh, he is ill," and a doctor gives a certificate to the effect that he cannot appear. What are you going to do? You stop the trial. The next day the same thing occurs — he cannot appear. There is an important witness gone, perhaps important witnesses gone. The bottom is knocked out of the whole case; whereas if you could arrest such men during the course of an election, if you could watch them and take them by the scuff of the neck to the police court and say: "Here is a man corrupting the people," and you prove it, you can have him fined a dollar or sent down for ten days, if you like. As long as the people know that corrupt practices are going on, they will hold the candidate more or less responsible. It is quite possible that the candidate is not the man really liable for the conduct of his agent; but the general tenor of the whole election contest is made quite plain. The people know the history of these men quite well, because men are not picked up at a moment's notice for the purpose of carrying out all sorts of wrong-doing at an election. They are well known; they are usually experienced; and if they are properly watched and the opportunity is given, you can break up any system of corruption in a very few days; but if such men can sail around and have their headquarters at hotels and live like prize-fighters and enjoy themselves thoroughly and be absolutely free while they are perpetrating all sorts of wrongs of this description, all they need to do is to clear out immediately after the election is over; and where they are no one knows: the deed is done, the public is defied. In the other case, that is not so. If they had the opportunity, policemen would simply say to these men: "You are wanted in here; give an account of yourself; what are you doing?" You do that with all sorts of fakirs; you do it with people who cannot give an account of themselves; you do it with drunkards and people who commit misdemeanours of various sorts; but in the conduct of an election which concerns the public weal more than anything else, you omit it; you do not allow it. Surely some simple device of this description might be added to the [illegible] ery which would enable people desirous of breaking corrupt practices to do it in time, and not have to spend thousands and tens of thousands of dollars on a trial which consists partly of a contest between lawyers to defeat the ends of justice and of witnesses who desire to escape giving testimony.

Mr. A. K. MACLEAN: There are no doubt many crudities, apparent or real, in the bill now before the committee. The truth is that no committee can within a limited period of time draft amendments to the Dominion Controverted Elections Act which will not be found imperfect. It should be the work of capable men for many months, perhaps a year or more, to revise this Act successfully. As a matter of fact, the committee engaged in revising the Dominion Controverted Elections Act practically gets no assistance whatever from the officers of the Crown or the Department of Justice. We have the assistance of parliamentary counsel, but their time is divided up on account of their being engaged in other duties, and the result is that any drafting is very liable to be imperfect. I am very much impressed with the objection made to this section by the hon. member for Welland (Mr. German). I do not think that any member of the committee ever expected that this section would not meet with some very substantial opposition from members of the House when placed before it for consideration and review.

Section 45 of the bill was intended to enable the examination of a witness upon notice, where it was abundantly clear that he intended to leave Canada, and that either the respondent or the petitioner were desirous of having the evidence taken. It may be remembered that in Section 3 of the bill, which defines the form of the petition, it is provided that the complaint shall be set out with some particularity. Just how far that should go, we are not at all clear, and we are agreed that that section of the bill should remain over for the present.

Section 10, which we are now considering, was inserted just because there was an amendment provided by section 3 in respect to the form of the petition. Some of the members of the committee thought that, inasmuch as the petitioner was compelled to set forth in his petition with some particularity the details of his complaint, he ought to have some opportunity in some way or other of examining the witnesses before the trial so as to circumvent the very usual practice of having witnesses leave the jurisdiction of the court. Inasmuch as we have passed over section 4 for consideration, I would suggest that we let this section stand, because if section 4 is changed we may find it quite easy to remove the objections which have been urged against this secton. I must admit the objections are fairly substantial, and I am not sure that they have been well answered so far.

Mr. J. J. HUGHES: The great difficulty in proceeding with an election trial is to get the material witnesses. They are spirited away by some means or other, and the ends of justice are thwarted. How to prevent that is a matter for the lawyers to decide, but there is worse than that. At election times there are brought in from other countries, for example, men from the United States, men who have been Canadian citizens, or who are perhaps still Canadian citizens, but who are employed in the United States and who can leave conveniently a day or two after the election is over. They come to Canada for the purpose of doing an illegal or highly improper act. How can such men be detained in the country and brought to trial? I cannot suggest any method; that will be for judicial minds to decide; but an application can be made under oath to a judge by some responsile, reputable citizen or by one of the candidates who is aware of conduct of that kind, whereby those men can be detained in the country or their evidence got in some way. That in my judgment would add very materially to having justice done.

Mr. DOHERTY: As regards what the hon. member for King's, P. E. I., says, this section possibly does not go very far to detain such a witness; but it would give some assistance in so far as it would at least make it possible for any person to make a petition at as early a date as he pleased, and thereupon to obtain an order to make such witness apepar on some day, so that if the witness did not do so, he could be punished for contempt of court. But unless the proposition itself will meet with the approval of the House, there would be no useful purpose in our pressing it.

With regard to the observation of my hon. friend from West Peterborough (Mr. Burnham), I would point out that he is under a false impression if he supposes that there is at present no method of punishing unlawful practices at elections other than by election petition. If he refers to the Dominion Elections Act, he will find quite a number of provisions providing penalties either by actions instituted to recover them, by indictment before the criminal court or by summary prosecution. I have not all these before me, but I might refer to some of them. For instance, power is conferred upon the deputy returning officer to constitute constables with authority to arrest people who are guilty of unlawful practices. I admit that in these matters our law is susceptible to improvement, but it is not correct to say that there is no provision for prosecution before the criminal courts for unlawful practices at elections. The committee dealing with these two items were strongly impressed with the view that what was lacking in the Dominion Elections Act was not so much the creation of offences and the imposing of penalties, but rather an effective instrument of enforcement. What we are trying now to deal with is a measure providing a method by which you can rectify the wrong done in the return of the wrong man. But in the Dominion Elections Act there are provisions for the punishment in the manner I have indicated of those guilty of unlawful acts at elections.

Mr. BURNHAM: Is there anything other than by indictment?

Mr. DOHERTY: There is provision for action for penalties and also for trial for summary conviction. It would take a long time to read all these provisions, but I might give my hon. friend some references. Under the heading, "Corrupt practices and other illegal acts," sections 265 and following define the corrupt practices and prescribe penalties; and under 284 and following are provisions for the enforcement of these penalties. These are in addition to the provisions respecting indictable offences and offences made punishable on summary conviction. The particular sections dealing with indictable offences, I have not under my hand, but I know that there are such provisions. As to the suggestion of the hon. junior member for Halifax (Mr. A. K. Maclean), there is no doubt that this section is affected very much by what is done with regard to sections 4 and 5. We of the committee regarded this bill as one whose sections completed each other and provided a more effective method of trying election petitions. No doubt [illegible] interdependent that one can hardly be considered apart from the rest. Yet there is more immediate connection between this section and sections 4 and 5 than between the others. Therefore, I have no objection to adopt the hon. member's suggestion and allow this section to stand until we come to deal finally with sections 4 and 5.

SPRING REMINDERS OF RHEUMATISM

Raw, Damp Weather Starts the Pain, But the Trouble Lies in the Blood

Spring weather is bad for rheumatic sufferers. The changes from mild to cold, the raw, damp winds start the aches and twinges, or in the more extreme cases the tortures of the trouble going. But it must be borne in mind that it is not the weather that causes rheumatism. The trouble is rooted in the blood—the changeable weather merely starts the pains. The only way to reach the trouble and to cure it is through the blood. The poisonous rheumatic acids must be driven out. Liniments and rubbing may give temporary relief, but cannot possibly cure the trouble. The sufferer is only wasting time and money with this kind of treatment and all the time the trouble is becoming more deeply rooted—harder to cure. There is just one speedy cure for rheumatism — Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They act directly on the impure, acid-tainted blood. They purify and strengthen it and thus root out the cause of the rheumatism. Here is strong proof of the above statements. Mr. J. Routley, Sydney, Man., says: "I was so badly crippled with rheumatism in my hips and knees that I could hardly go about. I began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which I took steadily for a couple of months, by which time all traces of the trouble had disappeared. I can most strongly recommend the Pills to all rheumatic sufferers."

Riots In Brussels.

AMSTERDAM, April 10. — Riots broke out in Brussels yesterday in connection with the compulsory registration order issued by Gen. von Bissing, the German military governor. The first day for registration of young Belgian men was set for March 23. Four hundred men marched through the streets yesterday shouting: "We won't sign!" The rioters were dispersed by troops. Similar riots occurred at Ternath, where two men were killed.

Alleged Spy Had Passport.

LONDON, April 10.—A man giving the name of Kuepferle arrested here on a charge of having sent military information to Germany, was found last night to have in his possession an American passport. This passport gives Kuepferle's address as 1,664 Dekalb avenue, Brooklyn.

ATTACK WAS RESUMED.

Allies Bombarded Dardanelles Forts on April 7th.

LONDON, April 10. — A despatch from Mitylene says:

"It is learned from Tenedos that heavy bombardment of the forts in the Dardanelles Straits was renewed by the allied fleets on April 4, when the large warships fired a number of shots. From Mount St. Elias dense clouds of smoke were seen to rise, apparently from the land fort. The hydroplanes were actively employed.

Owing to bad weather there was no more firing till April 7, when during part of the day the bombardment was heavy. Thursday all was quiet.

Several despatches from Athens carried a report that transports, convoyed by cruisers, had been sighted off Enos. The transports, according to Athens despatches, were reported to be disembarking part of the allied expeditionary force upon Turkish soil for the land attack upon the Dardanelles forts.

U. S. Officers at Berne.

Geneva, Switzerland, April 10.—The five American army officers who were attached to the German military force as observers until recalled by cable on April 3, arrived at Berne yesterday on their way home.

[illegible] Arrested.

DUBLIN, April 10.—John Hegarty, described as a clerk in the employ of James Boulger, a journalist, was arrested yesterday under the defence of the realm act, charged with sedition. It is stated that notices, alleged to be in Hegarty's handwriting, were found posted in conspicuous places, declaring that when the Germans landed in Ireland they would come as friends to abolish English rule, and appealing to the people to assist the Germans.

Berlin Boasts of 812,800 Prisoners.

AMSTERDAM, April 10. — A despatch received here from Berlin says that on April 1, 812,800 prisoners of war were being held in Germany—10,175 officers, and 802,633 men. The despatch gives the prisoners by nationality as follows: French, 2,868 officers and 238,496 men; Russian, 5,140 officers and 504,210 men; Belgians, 647 officers, and 39,620 men; British, 520 officers and 20,307 men.

Canadian In Disgrace.

LONDON, April 10.—Ernest S. B. Smart, formerly a Canadian officer, who said he came with the contingent in October, was getting along splendidly until drink overtook him. He received six months at Birmingham for false pretences. The prisoner is stated to have held splendid appointments in Canada.

Redpath SUGAR
Stand 60 Years of Experience and Progress

THIRTEEN years before Confederation John Redpath turned out "Ye Olde Sugar Loafe"—the first sugar refined in Canada.

In 1880, thirty-five years ago, the Redpath Refinery brought out Canada's first Granulated Sugar, known ever since as the best.

Again in 1913, the Redpath Refinery introduced the third great improvement in Canada's sugar supply—the Redpath 2 and 5-lb. Cartons.

DURING all these years of leadership, the Redpath aim has been QUALITY—the quality on which the national preference for Redpath Sugar now rests so solidly.

Such quality is the result, not of modern machinery alone, but of experience, modern methods, and a fixed determination to produce nothing unworthy of the name Redpath—to maintain in every pound of our product the reputation of "Canada's Standard Sugar". 120

PROBE WILL CONTINUE

Justice Department Will go on With Inquiry

OTTAWA, April 10.—It is the intention of the Government after the prorogation of Parliament to continue the inquiry into the war contracts and supplies. The Justice Department will continue the inquiry said Hon. Dr. Reid. The Minister of Customs, who has been in charge of the investigation which the Government has been carrying on in the public accounts committee, but pointed out that this course would delay the prorogation of Parliament for another month. However, it was thought that the Justice Department would be able to conduct the inquiry more conveniently and accordingly the committee will conclude its sitting to-day.

Prorogation of Parliament will take place next week after the reports of the public accounts and boots committees have been tabled and the debates have taken place.

Hon. Dr. Reid assured the committee last night that wherever wrongdoing was even suggested the Government would continue the work of investigating. He said that when war broke out there was a great rush, the officials were overworked and perhaps some things were not as right as they should be. A similar state of things had existed in nearly all the belligerent countries and he did not think Canada was any exception. Th Government had no desire whatever to stop inquiry and flung the door wide open. He was sure Mr. Carvell and Mr. Kyte who had been the most active members of the Opposition in the committee, would frankly admit that the Government had assisted in every way to bring out the facts before the committee.

The committee will meet to-day to hear Arthur Dewitt Foster, M.P., and Dr. Chipman regarding the purchase of horses in the county of Kings, N.S.

UPHEAVAL IS THREATENING

Italian War Party Taking Steps Toward Action

ROME, April 10. — Political parties favorable to Italy's immediate intervention in the war, comprising Democrats, Radicals, Reformists, Socialists and Nationalists have arranged a great meeting to be held Sunday throughout Italy in an endeavor to bring about the participation of the country in the conflict.

The Courrier de Italia commenting yesterday on the event, says that it has assumed the character of a warning, since the National League, which arranged the meeting, adopted a resolution containing this sentence:

"If, after a long waiting, there are disillusions, no matter of what nature, a profound political upheaval is inevitable."

Prof. Mussolini, a Socialist leader, explains this section of the resolution thus:

"In other words, if the monarchy is unable to make a national war the monarchy will cease to exist in Italy, as a profound political upheaval means a change of regime."

Dealing with the recent Austro-Italian negotiations, The Messagero says:

"The negotiations show that Austria, notwithstanding the pressure of Germany, refused to take into serious consideration the just wishes of Italy. Therefore the negotiations are destined to be interrupted the moment one side or the other believes that further delay would serve the enemy better than herself."

Despatches from Switzerland have heightened the excitement here. A Generva report, via Paris, yesterday, says:

The German Government to-day, besides prohibiting exports from Germany to Italy is stopping at the frontier stations all empty Italian freight cars bound homeward.

Passenger trains arriving in Switzerland yesterday from Italy, were crowded with German families.

A Basel despatch says: British and French cruisers, according to advices received here, have taken from Italian mail steamers 2,300 bags of German mail addressed abroad and containing letters, postcards, money, checks and small packages.

Bags coming from abroad intended for Germany will be treated in the same way and confiscated. This course on the part of the allied countries, it is understood, is being made in response to Germany's submarine war against non-combatant merchant and passenger ships.

British warships recently captured on a Norwegian vessel confidential letters forwarded by Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German Imperial Chancellor, to Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador to the United States.

That section of the Italian press favorable to making terms with Austria for the preservation of Italian neutrality lays stress on the statement that there has been a lack of negotiations on the part of London, Paris and Petrograd with a view of giving Italy concessions to which, according to this section, she is entitled by the service rendered the allies through her not joining the central empires.

Officials say that such negotiations were not initiated by the Italian Government because it was desirous that Italy should not be accused of having waited for an opportune moment to take advantage of her ally. They assert history must recognize that Italy did all possible to avoid war, which will be justified only when it is proved that it is inevitable.

Inspector's Careful Verdict.

LONDON, April 10.—A long report made by an attache of the U. S. Embassy at Berlin regarding an inspection of German concentration camps and ships in England, is printed by The Times. The report shows that conditions generally are "as good as could be expected."

TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL

Notes by Official Scribe

There was a good representation at the Trades and Labor Council meeting held this week at the labor hall, George Street. J. J. Hartley presided. Representations from the local molders, pattern makers, printers, bricklayers and masons, theatrical workers, electrical workers, hod carriers, bartenders, barbers, carpet weavers and brewery workers answered the roll call.

The Helen Brown Case.

The Local Council of Women asked for two representatives from the Trades and Labor Council to assist in deliberating on methods to be employed in an effort to have the Helen Brown case cleared up. The request was granted and two good men and true were nominated from the chair.

The Municipal Committee.

The Municipal Committee were on the job last Monday and reported on what they saw and heard at the city hall. No minutes of the previous meeting were read, which the committee seem to regard as unbusinesslike. The Salvation Army Band grant was viewed from different points, the committee did not have one decision on this. The question of non-resident officials was simply carrying the council's decision to the men higher up. If a day's labor is not given a man residing in the adjoining townships, then officials should be treated the same. Some of the teachers under the School Board reside outside the city, members of the police force, the sanitary inspector and probably others. The council asked the labor men's representatives to supply the names and addresses which shall be done. The city insuring its employes seemed good, as also the borrowing of money to run the city till the taxes came in.

The Short Weight Bag.

The recent letting off of a farmer because his bag of potatoes was full, yet did not contain the 90 lbs., was vigorously condemned. The secretary was instructed to supply the attorney-general with a newspaper report of the case, and the judgment given. According to this magisterial decision farmers can fill small sacks, sell them as containing 90 lbs., and get away with it. This is too much for the labor men.

Miscellaneous.

The passing of by-laws and business of a personal nature took up a large portion of the evening. President Hartley was given leave of absence till June, as an outside-of-city contract claims his attention.

come to some mutual agreement with regard to keeping them clean, otherwise the innocent will be liable to be fined with the guilty.

Garbage Cans.

While deploring the decoration (or desecration, if you prefer the term) of our streets with garbage receptacles, it is an evil that cannot be helped under the present system; yet can be minimized by removing the cans as soon as emptied. It spoils the look of the whole block when a garbage can and barrel are allowed to stay out on the sidewalk day after day, as is often done even in the best residential districts.

Attention to the foregoing observations will do much to preserve healthful conditions and prevent disease.

Prince Carries Despatches.

SPLENDID TRIPS OFFERED BY THE REVIEW

Homes of Brigham Young, Old City Wall, built in 1850; Pioneer Monument, Salt Lake Theatre, built in 1862; Mormon Tithing House, Fort Douglas, abode houses of early settlers, River Jordan from elevation of 800 feet, City and County Building, Mormon Church Offices, Z. C. M. I; grave of Brigham Young, and countless other interesting sights. The organ recital on the greatest and grandest organ in the world will be a feature.

At Saltair—Here you will find all kinds of amusements, and the largest dance hall in the world. Everyone will be presented with a complete bathing outfit. Then you will enjoy one of the world's most novel features — swimming in great Salt Lake, whose waters are 22 per cent. salt. Note, we say swimming—because here everyone can swim; on account of the buoyant waters no one can sink.

At San Francisco and the Panama Pacific International Exposition, the greatest grandest and most colossal Exposition the world has ever known. Autos will be waiting to take you and your baggage to your luxuriously appointed hotel, where everything is arranged for your comfort.

Some of the Most Important Sights.

Resident and business section, Golden Gate Park, Cliff House, Seal Rocks; Sutro Heights Park, Presidio Military Reservation, the largest U. S. mint; Egyptian Museum; Room in a Log; Old Dutch Wind Mill; Mirror Lake; Prayer Book Cross; Nob Hill, Birdseyeview of the City, etc., etc. Space does not permit us to go into detail. Some of the "never-to-be-forgotten" sights are: The world's largest land-locked and strongest fortified harbor. The entire water front and the many Government stations about the bay. Through the famed Golden Gate, and the sight of the Panama-Pacific Exposition. Goat Island, with its Naval Training Station. Alcatraz Island, commanding the entrance through the Golden Gate and where is located the military prison. Angel Island, with its Quarantine Station and many forts, all bristling with cannon.

Trip through Chinatown. San Francisco has a better Chinatown than before the great fire. Why? Before the fire the Chinese had to use such buildings as they could get. Now the new ones are built according to their Oriental ideas, many of the structures being typical of the ones found in China. An experienced guide and lecturer will conduct you into the joss house and temple of worship with shrine and tell you all about their religion, marriage and funeral ceremonies, beliefs and societies; into the houses of Chinese families, where the children will entertain you; to the Chinese musicians, who will play upon their crude instruments, but producing very fine music; to the dens, where for years opium has been smoked; into Chinese grocery stores; curio stores, drug stores, markets and restaurants, seeing Chinese cigar makers, tailors and barbers at work, and many other places.

The Return Home.

After a number of days spent in San Francisco the party will go by boat to Portland and Vancouver. Automobile trips through these cities will prove attractive. The trip through the Rockies to Banff and Calgary and on to Moose Jaw, Regina and Winnipeg will give you a splendid idea of the "Golden West." Receptions are being arranged for the party in each city and a right royal time is assured. And so on — but you can well imagine the glories and educational value of the trip. Mr. Subscriber, you have some friend who would enjoy this trip. Why not send in her name today and help her to win this summer vacation tour. Votes will be given on all paid-in-advance subscriptions and this great prize is well worth some effort.

The contest will open Monday. NOW is the time to get started.

SUMMARY APPFARANCE

Mr. GERMAN: Suppose he does not want to go on?

Mr. DOHERTY: All we have said is that the judge shall proceed with the trial until all the evidence relative to the particulars filed in the case has been heard. If everybody stopped bringing in evidence, the court would not be able to hear any more; we have said that they shall go on until all the evidence is heard.

Sir ROBERT BORDEN: I had a good deal of experience in the trial of election petitions a few years ago, and the course usually adopted was this: after the petitioner had put in his evidence and the judges had come to the conclusion upon that evidence and upon any that the respondent had adduced in regard to the several charges made, that enough evidence had been submitted to justify the voidance of the election, he usually asked the petitioner whether or not he desired to proceed with the personal charges. The petitioner had to answer yes or no, the judges usually intimating that if the petitioner proceeded with the personal charges against the respondent and did not succeed, he would be visited with the costs of his unsuccessful attempt.

GERMANY COMPLAINS.

Note Sent to U. S. Protesting Against Acquiescence In Embargo.

WASHINGTON, April 10. — Germany has sent to the U. S. Government a note complaining that the latter has accomplished nothing in its diplomatic correspondence with the allies to obtain for American exporters the right to ship foodstuffs to the civilian population of a belligerent country. The communication intimates also that the U. S. has virtually acquiesced in the British order in council prohibiting commerce with Germany.

The note calls attention to the fact that the allies are obtaining large shipments of arms and ammunition from the U. S. and declares that the American Government while insisting on its legal right to ship arms to belligerents does not pursue its right to ship foodstuffs and non-contraband articles to the civilian population of Germany. It is urged that irrespective of the formal aspects of the question of shipping arms to belligerents, the spirit of neutrality should be observed.

OFF TO THE PACIFIC!

The Review World's Fair Contest will Open MONDAY. Candidates should start securing votes at once. You can't afford to miss this opportunity. Send in your name to-day

A visit to San Francisco this year affords the traveller the finest trip ever presented. En route, over any of the transcontinental railway lines, the tourist will enjoy the world's most picturesque scenery: mountains, rivers, canyons, and forests, all in their manifold grandeur and beauty. Along the route to be travelled by The Review party are to be found points of world-wide interest — Pike's Peak, the Garden of the Gods, the Grand Canyon of Arizona, the Canyon of the Feather River, Great Salt Lake, Yellowstone Park, Yosemite, Mt. Shasta, Mt. Hood, and Mt. Lowe, the Royal Gorge, and scores of other points equally familiar to the average reader. In travelling to California, the tourist is also aoffrded the opportunity of visiting many leading cities of the North American continent—cities made familiar in school days or in a later life, through direct business contact — Salt Lake City, Denver, Vancouver, Portland, Omaha, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, and many others that have taken their places in this great continent's history of progress. Each will demand the tourist's attention for a time. And on arrival in San Francisco will be found the greatest exposition ever assembled: known throughout the world as the Panama-Pacific International Exposition — the $50,000,000 celebration, worthy in every particular the great engineering feat it celebrates — the building and completion of the Panama Canal. A trip to California is certainly an ideal trip—a privilege afforded but once in a lifetime to the average person, a trip which result in pleasure and education to their fullest extent, a trip, once made, never to be forgotten.

Contest Closes Saturday, June 5th

A great treat awaits the party of women elected from this vicinity who will journey across the American continent as guests of this newspaper to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition. Not only will they find in San Francisco the greatest universal exposition of all time, but they will enjoy on the way what is undoubtedly the most beautiful and interesting trip on the American continent.

Seated in luxurious Pullmans and enjoying all the comforts that the most fastidious could desire, our party of women will view the rugged crags and snow-capped peaks, the wondrous plateaux, the still lakes and foaming rivers, the savage canyons and illimitable vistas of two great mountain ranges.

These two ranges of Western America have remained through the centuries practically untouched by the hand of man. Though the mountain passes and slopes are traversed today by great railroads, they retain a savage grandeur which impresses even the most hardened "globe-trotter."

There remain few places in all the world which, while easily accessible, still exist as they were created. Our party of women will see many of the most wonderful of these. The lovers of Nature in her unconquered glory will come into their own in a trip across the Rockies and Sierras on the way to the Panama-Pacific International Exposition.

Besides the merely scenic beauties of the trip, there are also the historical and romantic associations which attach to almost every mile of the way. Many of the most famous incidents in the history of the growth of the continent are connected with the names of the mountains, canyons, rivers, and railroad stations that you pass. Read Bret Harte, and Mark Twain's "Roughing It" before you start.

On such a journey our party will follow the trail of the Argonauts, who blazed a way to California and the Golden Gate nearly three-quarters of a century ago. These sturdy pioneers travelled as they could, enduring hardships beyond description. But our party will travel in luxuriously appointed trains with every convenience and comfort of a first-class hotel, and while the scenes of the hardships and difficulties are still to be viewed from the car windows, they are now only to be marveled at.

After first riding through the rugged passes of the Rockies, across plateaux and sinister deserts, our party of women will reach the marvellous Sierras of California, studded with exquisite mountain meadows and mirror-like lakes.

SPORTING NEWS

SENIOR BASEBALL LEAGUE GETS AWAY TO GOOD START

Amateur Association is Endorsed by Big Meeting

The Peterborough City Baseball League is now a reality. An exceedingly large number of enthusiastic fans convened last evening in the Oriental Hotel and decided to have a city league but the number of teams which will go to make up the new organization will be determined at a meeting to be held in the Empress Hotel on Monday evening at seven-thirty. Five teams made application to the meeting last night. R. M. Glover applied on behalf of the Empire Athletic Club, W. V. Fowler applied on behalf of the Classics, S. Gibbs for the East City Club, R. Smythe for the Thistles and P. Gorman for the South End Club.

Considerable discussion arose on the question of the number of teams to be admitted. Some thought six teams could be secured in the city, others argued that four teams would provide the fans with a good class of baseball. The result of the oratory was that the matter of receiving application was left over till Monday night's meeting and in the meantime there is a possibility of two of the teams amalgamating.

The result of the election of officers was as follows:—

Hon. Presidents—J. H. Burnham, M.P.; Geo. A. Gillespie, M.L.A.

President—C. G. Graham.

Vice-Pres.—J. J. Howden.

Secretary—J. S. Milloy.

Treasurer—J. Donald Shook.

The executive committee will be composed of the above officers as well as one representative from each team.

Mr. C. Paton, last year president of the Mercantile Baseball League, acted as chairman. He briefly outlined the work of last season's organization and concluded by placing himself at the service of the officers on any occasion.

C. G. GRAHAM.

Elected President of the City Baseball League.

Entrance Fee $25.

It was decided that the entrance fee shall be $25 and it must be paid, by the teams admitted Monday night, to the secretary on or before Friday, April 23rd.

Endorsed New Idea.

On motion of Messrs. Glover and Shook the meeting endorsed the proposition being launched by Mr. Dan McCabe by which district champions would be decided.

It was decided to allow each team making application to have two representatives at the meeting Monday evening.

To Visit Luxemburg.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The American Minister, Dr. Henry Van Dyke, will leave to-day for Luxemburg, by way of Maestricht and Aachen. He will be accompanied by his son, who will act as his secretary.

Dr. Van Dyke's visit to Luxemburg, to which state, as well as the Netherlands, he is accredited as American Minister in connection with his official duties.

COMMENT As You Like it

PETERBOROUGH City Baseball League. Sounds like a real organization.

C. G. GRAHAM, the president, needs no introduction. His successful connection with amateur sport in former years assures success.

DONALD SHOOK is a new face in Peterborough's sporting circles but judging by his business ability and his enthusiasm he should be a big help to amateur sports.

EMPIRE ATHLETE CLUB is the name of the new organization of which fans knew very little. The club has a strong list of supporters and will likely be found with a real live ball team when the curtain goes up. The members have club rooms at 329 George St.

THE DOPE today says that the South End Club will amalgamate with the Classics but both will take the name of the latter with Vic Fowler as manager. This should solve the difficult problem confronted by the league. Five teams cannot be handlel conveniently but four teams will be just right. The meeting Monday night will in all probability receive applications from the Thistles, East City, Empire Athletic Club and Classics.

THE MEETING last evening endorsed the proposition being launched by Mr. Dan McCabe, by which the amateur championship of Ontario could be decided. The details of this movement were recently made known through the columns of The Review and it is a source of encouragement to the promoters to note the enthusiasm with which the idea is being received. Peterborough fans are unanimous in the belief that it is a step along the right line. Other centres such as Lindsay, Hamilton, Belleville and Kingston are already discussing it. The meeting of the Toronto Amateur Leagues in Toronto next week will receive a letter from Peterborough in which Mr. Dan McCabe's plans will be stated in full.

PETERBOROUGH will have but two amateur sports this summer. They are baseball and lacrosse. Practically all the baseball will be in the City League while the Peterborough Lacrosse Cub will look after both the O.A.L.A. team and also the city lacrosse league clubs. It is to the interest of both that they work together. Last evening the matter of arranging for an out of town baseball team to play a picked team from the City League on May 24th came up. Nothing definite was decided upon as it was stated that the lacrosse club intended holding a big day on the 24th. It would facilitate matters if the lacrosse club sends a representative to Monday night's meeting of the City League.

Y.M.C.A. Athletes Did Their Work Well

The repeated Y. M. C. A. gymnasium exhibition last night drew another fair-sized audience who were greatly impressed with the smart and well-trained manner in which the boys who participated took their parts. Second night performances are usually superior to the first, and this was true last night, the boys displaying greater familiarity and freedom in executing their work. The program was run off with no delays and was over by ten o'clock.

GUN CLUB SCORES

The first practice shoot of the Peterborough Gun Club was held last evening and following are the scores at 25 birds:

J. Loucks	20
H. Routley	20
S. Coon	18
C. Graham	17
W. Belleghem	15
H. Cook	15
E. Hartley	15
C. Moncur	13

MADE GAIN OF TWENTY MILES

Russians Control 73 Miles of Carpathian Chain

LONDON, April 10.—With the capture of the whole of the principal chain of the Carpathian mountains for a length of 73 miles, with the exception of a hill south of Voliamekova, announced last night, the Russian front now extends from Reghetov to Volossate. This is a gain of about twenty miles in a few days. In order to delay the Russian advance Austrian and German forces delivered a number of counter-attacks, but these were repulsed and the Russians were able to occupy more territory. They took 1,200 prisoners in one day.

Actions of secondary importance have taken place on the front west of the Niemen river. The rest of the operations were marked by no important events, the Russian War Office said in a communique last night.

The Russian success in the Carpathian mountains, where the Muscovites now control virtually all the important passes and are preparing for a descent of the southern slopes upon the plains of Hungary, have revived unofficial talk of separate peace for Austria-Hungary and seemingly increasing activity on the part of the interventionists in Italy for their country to take up arms on the side of the allies and secure territory which they have failed to get in the negotiations through Germany with Austria.

The Russian newspapers seem convinced that Hungary, if not the whole of the dual monarchy, is ready to seek peace, and it is said that Emperor Francis Joseph has requested Pope Benedict to intervene in his behalf. Except in Italy, the neutral country most directly interested in this question, little credence is given this report, although the opinion is expressed in military circles here that if Russia succeeds in overcoming the joint resistance of the Austro-German troops in the Carpathians, as she apparently has that of the Austro-Hungarian armies. Hungary at least will be ready to bring the war to an end as far as she is concerned.

However, the Russians have some way to go as yet before they reach the plains of Hungary, and the Austro-German forces are placing every obstacle in their way. The whole southern slopes of the mountains have been strongly fortified, and troops are being poured into the region in dispute. It is said there are now twenty-four Austrian and six German army corps facing the Russians and that more are on the way. On the other hand, the Russians are still bringing up reserves.

C.G.E. FORCES AT PT. MARTINIERE

Newsy Note Received To-day "Bob" Carson

R. M. Carson, better known to a host of local ball fans as "Bob" who is with the C.G.E. forces at Quebec states in a letter to a Review scribe that their quota has been moved to Point Martiniere, Que., a sport some eight miles from Quebec City. "We expect to be here for the whole summer but I would be better satisfied if they pulled out any time as it is very lonesome. We have lots of snow here and expect it will last for some time. Navigation opened Thursday but we have not seen any of the liners pass as yet. Carmel Legrendre arrived here all O.K. and I guess he thought he was coming to a place of rest but he has found out different. I did all my own washing today, not that I am getting close with coin but we have no laundry here so we have to make the best of it ourselves. I see you are getting the baseball dope on the go again and also lacrosse. Good luck to it and regards to the boys from

"BOB."

Dutch Puzzle Continues.

THE HAGUE, April 10.—The closest inquiries made yesterday in diplomatic, ministerial and military circles failed to discover the reason for the alarming rumors printed Thursday in London newspapers relatively to the possibility of hostilities between Holland and Germany or for the charging of high insurance premiums. Nothing appears to have arisen recently at any point along the frontier which would cause Holland to cease to maintain her position of strictest neutrality.

Submarine Sank Portuguese Barque.

LONDON, April 10.—The Portuguese barque Douro was torpedoed by a German submarine on March 1 and sunk, according to a despatch last night from Swansea, where the captain and crew were landed. The crew took refuge in a lighthouse off Swansea, and were taken off by a steamer yesterday.

The Druro was a small barque of only 18 tons, built in 1913. Her port was Oporto. Swansea is on the south coast of Wales on the Bristol Channel.

In a civic bye-election at Galt, Dr. W. S. Dakin was elected First Deputy Reeve, over Mr. George Burgess by a majority of 220.

GLADYS SEWARD'S TRIUMPH

Four years ago a fifteen year old girl attracted widespread attention among local followers of music by her remarkable ability as a pianist. Her instructors prophesied great things for her. They predicted that with study and practice she would one day win honors and renown in the musical field. But it was seen that not in Canada could this training be received nor even in America. Naturally they felt that study under foreign teachers was essential if the wonderful musical possiblities wrapped up in her were ever to be developed to the most. Germany, the home of great musicians—alas now held in such ill repute—was the only place where the best tuition could be obtained and to Germany she eventually went. Bue she has come back to the city she calls home and before a large and fashionable audience of friends and musical critics who assembled last evening in the Conservatory of Music hall, a winsome young lady of nineteen fulfilled every promise of early days, and more than redeemed the confidence and trust that has always been extended to her. The name of the young lady is Gladys Seward.

To introduce Gladys Seward to the public of Peterborough is absolutely unnecessary. Newspaper readers have been kept in touch with her through articles that have appeared frequently in the local press. Harry Field, formerly of Peterborough, who went to Germany, was one of her tutors and assisted the young artist to fulfil her own ambitions and the hopes of her hosts of local friends. Now at the age of nineteen Miss Seward can take her place in the front rank of pianists of international reputation and reap the rewards which come from diligent and faithful study.

Her program last evening was what could have been anticipated from such an artist. It was calculated; nay it did display the varied skill, the rare qualities, the wonderful technique and sincere musical expression with which this gifted young artist is endowed. There were numbers that were not beyond the realm of appreciation by the average musical lover, while to those with an ear so well developed that the compositions of the famous old masters are easily understood, it brought many numbers which must have filled their hearts with joy. Miss Seward seemed to realize what her friends were longing for and she played accordingly. Easily the most popular and enjoyable as well as most fitting portion of the program was her interpretation of several works by her first instructor, Alice Roger Collin, who is so well known to the public through her many charming compositions.

Miss Jeannette Killmaster assisted Miss Seward in several of Alice Roger Collins' songs, giving to them the necessary expression and winning heartiest of encores. Miss Killmaster is always welcomed on the concert platform of Peterborough and through her association with the teaching staff of the Conservatory of Music she is frequently heard.

Miss Seward was in Germany studying when the war broke out but was given twelve days in which to leave the country, during which she went to England and thence home. She is now busy renewing acquaintances among her host of friends, and receiving their well deserved congratulations.

Her program was:

Bach—Torcato G major, Allegro, Adagio, Allegro e presto.

(a) Arensky—Three Caprices.

(b) Debussy—Claire de Lune.

(c) Campbell-Tipton—Two Bagatelles.

Beethoven—Sonate op. 90. Allegro, Allegretto.

Alice Roger—(a) When the Sun is Low; (b) You and I; (c) Requital; (d) Hepaticas.

Chopin—(a) Etude in F. op. 25 No. 3; (b) Berceuse; (c) Prelude Eb major; (d) Scherzo B minor.

Tschaikowsky—Valse Caprice.

DR. W. T. HOLLOWAY.

To the Electors of No. 4 Ward:

Ladies and Gentlemen, — Having been nominated for alderman for No. 4 Ward, I respectfully solicit your votes and influence in my behalf. If elected, I will adopt a policy to exercise care in the expenditure of the city's money. I have lived in the city for a considerable number of years, and my entire interests are here. Consequently I have a deep interest in the city's affairs.

Yours very truly,
W. T. HOLLOWAY.

Keep Peterboro' in Good Health

Sanitary Inspector's Annual Appeal to the Citzens

With the sprng like onditions prevailing at the present time, it should be no difficult task to have one's premises in a clean and sanitary condition by the first of May this year, and it behooves the citizens to start right away to attain this end and not wait for a note from the sanitary inspector.

The year 1915 must see more marked progress in sanitary conditions than past years, and the Board of Healht notices must be treatd with greater respect than heretofore or unpleasant results may accrue. A notice is never sent unless it is necessary, and if not complied with will be followed by legal proceedngs, much as this course is distasteful to the sanitary inspector. Sanitary work has passed its kindergarten stage in Peterborough, and citizens should accept the administration of affairs in the interests of the public health with a broadminded and progressive spirit. It indicates a poor kind of principle when a man refuses to fulfil certain obligations to his neighbors for which he knows he is morally responsible, unless the LAW compels him to do so, and nowhere is this more strikingly illustrated than in the health department of a city. Of the making of laws there is no end. and, while we growl and groan at the yoke of numberless legislative rules that are laid upon us, we should not lose sight of the fact that it is our own cussedness that is responsible for the burden.

There would be less need of man-made laws if the community at large would live up to the God-made law to love thy neighbor as thyself, or the Golden Rule, to do unto others as you would they should do unto you. Just because there is no LAW forbidding your dog to run at large are you justified in not preventing him destroying your neighbor's lawn and flower beds?

Just because there is no LAW against you keeping hens, are you justified in allowing them a free range over your neighbor's garden, or in allowing a crowing rooster to destroy your neighbor's rest and impair his health?

Just because there is no LAW to prevent you keeping a horse, are you justified in allowing stable odors and flies to invade your neighbor's house? And so on, ad infinitum.

Scavenging Work.

The licensed scavengers of the city have been supplied with receipt books and when a householder engages a man to do night work, he should see that he receives from the scavenger one of these statements to show the inspector when he calls. Inability to procure this will be considered evidence that the work has not been done, or that it has been done by unqualified persons. It has been admitted that in some cases, to save expense, the work has been done by householders themselves. This cannot be allowed — the risk of polluting wells and disseminating typhoid is too great, and the value of a human life cannot be computed in dollars and cents. Pit closets must be abolished for the same reason.

Garbage.

Where there is no garbage collection, remember this summer to keep all your garbage in a covered receptacle where the flies canot gain access to it, and have it removed at regular intervals to the incinerator, or, better still, burn it at home in the kitchen stove. On no account throw it out at the back door to ferment and breed harmful organisms.

Stables.

Manure must be kept according to the Provincial Board of Health regulations, a copy of which has been or will be delivered during this month to horse owners. These regulations will be strictly adhered to.

Slaughterhouses.

All slaughterhouses not in accordance with the Provincial Board of Health regulations, or as near as possible in accordance with them, by May 1st, will be closed without further notice. Owners have had ample time to comply since the regulations were issued to them last fall.

Outbuildings.

Stables, fowl-houses, pig-sties, and outbuildings should be thoroughly whitewashed with slacked lime to which has been added some disinfecting agent such as carbolic acid, zenoleum or formaldehyde.

Vacant Lots.

Owners of vacant lots should see that these are cleared of accumulations of rubbish, tins, papers and weeds. While not perhaps directly injurious to health, weeds are a menace, as they are convenient hiding places for obnoxious and offensive things, such as dead cats, hens, etc.

Yards and Lanes.

Owners or persons having common rights in yards and lanes must be collectively responsible for the sanitary condition of same, and must
